The October crop report for Tennessee says this has been a prosperous year for the farmers of Tennessee. Every character of crops in the State have yielded abundantly. The farmers went into debt less this season than usual, and the consequence is a greater proportion of the crop raised is their own.

Henri Rochefort has gone to Monteceau les-Mines for the purpose of relieving the persons awaiting trial in connection with the recent riots. Rochefort regards the existence of a permanent garrison at Monteceau-les-Mines as dangerous provocation to further rioting.

The London Times opposes the plan of placing a statue of Longfellow in Westminster Abbey, and says: "There are many places in the city of London where a statue of Longfellow might be placed without arousing discordant feelings. The Abbey should remain a place of national, not cosmopolitan, memorial."

Commissioner McFarland says, relative to location of soldiers' homesteads, that the Land Office does not construe the law so as to require the tracts entered into to be contiguous. In regard to homesteads, he holds that it is a fundamental principle of law that entries shall be made only for the use of the occupier's benefit.

An agreement has been entered into between the pugilists John L. Sullivan and James Elliot to fight with small, soft gloves, four rounds, Marquis of Queensberry rules, in a twenty-four-foot ring, December 9th. The fight will take place either in Chicago, Milwaukee or Fittsbbrg. Sullivan agrees to give Elliot $500 and the gate receipts if he does not knock Elliot out of time before the expiration of four rounds.

A few days since placards were posted in the Faubourg St. Antoine, Paris, giving minute details as to how houses could be burned down and blown up, with a view to bringing justice to the people to bear upon their landlords. The placards bore intrinsic evidence of being the work of comparatively educated Socialists. The police tore them down as soon as discovered. Since then the cabinet-makers have gone on a strike, and, fears being entertained by the authorities of riots in that quarter, the troops have been confined to their barracks.

Four important California land cases are now pending before the Secretary of the Interior, namely: The pueblo of San Francisco, the Corte Madera del Presidio, El Sobrante and the pueblo of San Jose. The first three cases have been repeatedly passed upon by different Secretaries, and are now before the Department upon motions for a rehearing. A stay of proceedings have been granted in the case of the pueblo of San Francisco, in order to allow counsel from San Francisco to reach this city and make argument upon their motion. A new survey had been ordered in El Sobrante case, in accordance with Secretary Kirkwood's decision, but this has been delayed until the motion for a rehearing has been disposed of. The motion has been practically decided, but the announcement will not be promulgated till Secretary Teller returns from Colorado. At the Interior Department there seems no doubt whatever that Secretary Kirkwood's decision will be affirmed. It is also expected that the motion in the Corte Madera del Presido case will be disposed of very soon after the Secretary's return. The case of the pueblo of San Jose is before the Secretary for the first time upon appeal from the decision of the Commissioner of General Land office. In the latter office there are about twenty-five cases pending, and the number has been steadily decreasing during the past year. None of them are now the subject of contest, and it is likely that they will be rapidly disposed of by the issue of patents.

THE TWO BURDENS.

Over the deep sea love came flying:
Over the salt sea love flew sighing—
Alas! O love, for thy journeying wings!
Through turbid light and sound of thunder,
When one wave lifts and one falls under,
Love flew as a bird flies straight for warm springs.

Love reached the Northland, and found his own;
With budding roses and roses blown,
And wonderful lilies, he wove her wreath:
His voice was sweet as the tare that wells,
Gathers and thunders, and throbs and swells,
And falls and lapses in rapturous death.

His hands divided the tangled boughs,
They sat and loved in a moist green house,
With bird-songs and sunbeams faltering through;
One note of wind to each least light leaf;
O love, those days were sweet but brief;
Sweet as the rose is, and fleet as the dew.

Over the deep sea death came flying:
Over the salt sea death flew sighing,
Love heard from afar the rush of his wings,
Felt the blast of them over the sea,
And turned his face where the shadows be,
And wept for a sound of disastrous things.

Death reached the Northland and claimed his own;
With pale sweet flowers with pale winds blown
He wove for the forehead of one a wreath.
His voice was sad as the wind that sighs
Through cypress trees under rainy skies,
When the dead leaves drift on the paths beneath.

His hands divided the tangled boughs,
One love he bore to a dark, deep house
Where never a bridegroom may claim his bride—
A place of silence, o' dust, and sleep
What vigil there shall the loved one keep,
Or what cry of longing the lips divide?

HOW WE GOT MARRIED.

It is curious to reflect how the majority of married couples may be said to have drifted into the wedding state. Some chance meeting, some trifling circumstance, is in many cases the commencement of an acquaintance that ripens into a life-long union.

"That not impossible she Who shall command my heart and me."

is rarely (save in France) introduced to us in orthodox form as our future wife. We stumble on our fate unexpectedly in nine cases out of ten; a visit to a country house; a shower of rain, which induces us to lend our umbrella to a stranger; a journey by a public conveyance—all these may be the first step on the road that leads us into the proverbial "lane which has no turning."

We sheltered a young lady from a shower of hail, at a flower-show, and little thought then that she was the future Mrs. Brown. When we assisted that old gentleman and his daughter at the railway station, nothing was further from our thoughts than matrimony; yet in another twelve months that young lady was standing besides us in the full glory of white satin and orange-blossoms. As for accidents, if I met with one by road or rail, and was conveyed to a private house for recovery (people always are in novels), I should, if a single man, fully expect that a beautiful daughter of the house would undertake the post of sick-nurse, and eventually become my wife.

After all, it was through an accident that I did get married. Not the orthodox fall from a horse, or injury in a train, but an accident of another kind. Twenty years ago I went to my first curacy. I was young, then, and, except for my school and university career, had never left home before. I found myself terribly lonely at first, at Martin-on-Sands. It was a dull, respectable little watering-place, on the east coast, with the usual row of white houses with green blinds, facing the sea, the usual 'esplanada," the usual little shops where shell ornaments were sold.

It was an intensely quiet place; its inhabitants proudly boasted that "no excursionists ever came there;" indeed, there was nothing to attract them. There are two types of English seaside resorts; the gay and noisy, where donkeys, bands and negroes flourish, and the quiet spots, like Martin on-Sands, where existence is peaceful, not to say stagnant.

People with large families came to us during the summer and autumn, lodgings and provisions being reasonable, and the sands affording capital play-grounds for the children; but the town was not a lively residence at the best of times. The vicar was an old man, greatly afflicted with gout, and the chief work of the parish devolved on his curate; but there was not very arduous toil for either of us. Most of the townspeople had realized the Wise Man's wish, and possessed "neither poverty nor riches."

Except season visitors, we had few gentry among us, small lodging house keepers, shop-keepers and fisher-folk making up the bulk of our population. At the same time we had hardly any actual poor. The fishers were, as a class, quiet, hard-working people, and seemed able to earn enough to keep themselves and families in fair comfort. Of course there was the usual routine of parish work, church services and school, sick and aged people to visit, but I found my time certainly not too well filled. Mr. Gray, the incumbent, disliked anything new, and would not have permitted any additions to the usual round of my parochial labors; so I found plenty of leisure in which to be dull.

We were a large, merry family at home, and sometimes, sitting by myself in my lodgings, evening after evening, time went slowly enough. A few months after my instalment in my new post, I succeeded in persuading a married sister to come to Martin on-sands with her children. This was, indeed, a pleasant change for me, and nearly every evening I used to go round to her lodging to enjoy a chat with her and a romp with the children, with whom I was a great favorite.

One dark autumn evening I had started out later than usual—a visit to a sick man had detained me—but I was anxious not to omit my usual call, as Helen was to return to London the next day. I hurried along the neat row of houses which formed the aristocratic quarter of our town, and rapped at the well-known door.

"You need not announce me," I said, passing the neat maid-servant; "I am expected;" and I hurried up stairs.

Just outside the drawing-room door lay a large black fur rug, which I had never observed before. As I looked at it the idea struck me that I might make a brilliant entrance into the room on this farewell visit. It was past seven o'clock; all the children would be assembled in thr drawing-room after their tea. I would enter in the character of a bear. Wrapping myself in the rug, I opened the door and crawled in on all-fours, emitting sundry growling sounds. A scream greeted me—that was to be expected; but in place of the laughter that ought to have succeeded it, I was terrified to hear a shrill female voice, certainly not Helen's, exclaiming—

"Thieves! Murder! Rose, Maria! help, help!"

Stunned for a moment, I hastily began to disengage the bear dress; and when I got the length of my hand free, I, to my dismay, found myself in a strange room, with two strange ladies standing opposite; one young and very pretty, the other a much older one, who stood entrenched behind a chair, in which she had doubtless been peacefully dozing until disturbed by my abrupt entry. It must have been a shock to her to be awoke from tranquil repose by the sight of a strange animal crawling in at the door, nor was the discovery that the animal was a strange man likely to reassure her. As for myself—a German author has noted in his diary that at a certain date he "behaved as a fool"—I certainly passed a similar mental verdict on myself.

I had evidently entered a wrong house by mistake, and played what looked like a practical joke on an entire stranger. It was a dignified and pleasant position for the curate of the parish to find himself in! If the story spread to the rector's ears! Mr. Grey was a starched specimen of the old school of frigid politeness, who abominated levity of demeanor, and I am sure would not have crawled on all-fours had his life depended on it. I was young and shy, and my absurd position was really no joke to me.

As soon as I could find breath, I essayed to explain matters to the frightened and irate old lady. I apologized most humbly for my intrusion, explaining my mistake; but my efforts were ill received. I found an ally, however, in the shape of the sweet-looking girl, who endeavored to mollify the old lady's wrath, accepted my apologies smilingly, and joined me in every possible way in trying to soothe her angry relative.

"It's all a mistake, dear auntie," she whispered. "Don't you see it's Mr. Morley, our curate?"

"And more shame for him to play such a vulgar, ungentlemanly trick!" retorted the old dame, not to be so easily mollified.

"Madam, you cannot think I intended to alarm you thus," I stammered, wishing I could sink into the floor. "I unfortunately mistook the house; I was intending to make a little diversion for my nephews and nieces."

"Is there not a number on my door, sir?" Could you not have ascertained that you had entered the right house before commencing this buffoonery? Very becoming for a clergyman in any case, in my judgment."

"Oh, auntie!" whispered the young lady, her face flushing. Then, turning to me, she said, gently, "My aunt is not strong, and this has startled her; but I am sure the mistake was quite accidental on your part."

I blundered through a few more apologies, and went out terribly crest-fallen, though the young lady bowed and smiled as we parted. Evidently she was not offended.

Just a year after my abrupt entrance into Mrs. Piggot's drawing-room, I married my Rose. The old lady agreed at last—I think she had her doubts about my steadiness of conduct; but, although only a curate, I had a comfortable private income to offer Rose, who had hitherto been a pensioner on her aunt, and this circumstance may have weighed in my favor.

It is a long time since my wedding day; but as I look back I feel grateful to the accident which was instrumental in bestowing on me the sweetest and dearest wife that ever blessed a man's home.

At the same time I would not advise my readers to enter strange houses wrapped in rugs on the chance of finding another Rose.

Fox and the Pick-Pocket.—Charles Jas. Fox, being once at Ascot races with his intimate companion, General Conway, missed his snuffbox. The General was lucky enough to discover the thief, and seize him before he could get away. Upon this the man fell upon his knees, and, with many tears, besought Fox to pardon him, and not expose him to ruin, for he was a poor weaver in great destitution, and this was the first offense against the laws that he had ever committed. Fox was greatly affected, and not only let the offender go, but gave him a guinea. Shortly after this, having occasion to use his snuff, he found no sign of it in his pocket where he had replaced it, and turning to General Conway, he said, "My snuff-box is gone again!" "Yes," replied the latter; "I saw the scamp take it a second time when you gave him the money, but I thought I wouldn't interfere"

HE QUIT THE CATTLE BUSINESS.

"I shall never handle cattle any more," said Patrick Healy the other day while talking with a Wyoming stock man. "I got discouraged a many years ago. I heard that cattle would yield all the way from 75 to 90 per cent. profit, so I got 500 and let nature take her course. The following spring I started to brand my calves and count up my profits. My style of branding was laborious and unsatisfactory. I would catch a calf, throw him down, build a sage-brush fire, heat my branding iron, brand him and start after another. This consumed half an hour to the animal, the best I could do, and it looked as though it would take till about Christmas to brand my calves. However, the number didn't hold out by one half, and as I was just closing the branding, meanwhile cussing my luck in the stock business, I one day noticed, with my field-glass, several miles away on the plains, a cowboy, who acted so strangely that I resolved to get behind a little knoll and watch him. As he got nearer I discovered that he had a little charcoal stove attached to his saddle behind, and also that he had a branding iron secured to a 200-foot lariat, which he threw with wonderful accuracy. The cowboy was an employe of Mr. Tinnin, a neighbor of mine who had a very large herd of cattle and made the raising of cattle a very prosperous business.

"Instead of building a sage brush fire and going through the tedious process of throwing down an animal to brand him, he just heated the branding iron in the little tinner's stove as he rode along and when within 100 feet or so of a calf, just threw it with that deadly aim of his and Mr. Tinnin was ahead a $15 animal.

"I decided right there that I would not raise any more cattle. Science had the bulge on nature. Natural increase is all right where it does not compete with science.

"I just went to Mr. Tinnin and said: Look here, Mr. Tinnin, I want to sell you my little bunch of cattle at a fair figure; I want to see you have them because you deserve them. A man who can bring science to his aid as you can ought to have this herd, and I believe you will ultimately have the outfit anyhow. Things seem to point that way now and I want to facilitate matters by selling you the bunch before it is everlastingly too late.

"My cows feel just the same as I do about it. They are willing to do everything they can that is honorable in order to forward the cattle interests of the country, but they can't compete with your statesmanship. They feel hurt and very much depressed by it, and so do I. I just want to hasten the result by letting you have the cattle before they get too much reduced.

"He saw that I was feeling very unhappy over my cattle deal, and he kindly took them off my hands. I have never owned any cattle since that. I have seen many of my neighbors accumulate large herds and big fortunes, but it had no temptation for me. I know that with nothing to start with but the wreck of a bull team and one of those self-registering branding irons, men who don't know the difference between a maverick and the Venus of Milo have become millionaires, but that don't affect me any. I just squeeze along the best I can and raise sheep at a profit of thirty-five or forty per cent. It is not so rapid, of course, as the cattle business under careful management, but a man feels better when he meets the vigilance committee.

A good specimen of the proper method of rebuking impertinence was furnished by the Reverend John Carter, incumbent of Bramford, in Suffolk, a man at once learned and modest. He was dining at the house of a worthy alderman of Ipswich, when one of the company boasted of his own acquirements, and, growing bold with impunity, proceeded to such lengths that he defied any one present to start a question in theology or philosophy to which he could not give a ready and satisfactory answer. An awful silence fell on the guests at this proposal, and for a few seconds no sound was heard but the clatter of knives and forks, when Mr. Carter looked up and said, "My plate furnishes me with a question to pose you. Here is a fish that has always lived in salt water; pray tell me why he should come out a fresh fish, and not a salt one?" This simple query utterly discomfited the bully of conversation, who for the remainder of the feast ate much and spoke little.

Paper Lace.—A writer of society items mentions having seen in Paris a magnificent stage costume enriched with the loveliest lace he ever beheld. In his own words, "The dress was displayed on account of that lace; and that lace was worth, perhaps, twenty-five francs; for it was paper, wonderfully stamped, and representing trains of fuchsias, and looked just as much a piece of real lace as a Paris diamond by night looks an old mine gem. Parisian actresses wear that paper lace a great deal; it is tough, soft, and very effective. To wear a costly lot of lace, which may be ruined in a night, when very cheap lace paper looks as well, is considered the height of folly by intelligent foreigners.

Of the 11,000 grain mills in Holland, 10,000 are driven by wind.

A POLYGAMOUS INCIDENT.

A political convention in which a portion of the delegates are females would be a very odd affair to our Eastern friends, but here in Utah it is considered the proper thing on the part of the dominant church party. In the convention of the Mormon party, which has held sessions at various times last week, there were two female delegates to represent in part one precinct in this city. Both came under the clause in the Edmund's bill, and are debarred from any right to vote because of their polygamous relations. One is a very aged woman, and she told in a speech made to the Convention last Thursday night that she had been with her brethren driven in the early days of Mormonism from place to place, until she came to Utah with the pioneers, where she had sincere-sided and labored in the interes of the church. We are told that she has for years been a leader among the woman of Utah in the advocacy and perpetuation of polygamy, and that she practiced it by having her husband enter the "celestial" beastiliness. While she upholds her husband in this crime, and tramps the country over advocating the doctrine of the chief tenet of the Mormon Church, she has shown a brutal disposition towards the victims of her husband's lust in a way we would not look for from so earnest an advocate of polygamy. We are told by reliable authority that upon a recent occasion, when one of the young wives of the husband of this apostle of polygamy gave birth to a child, she was left in a helpless condition, with no one to wait upon her, and shown that tender care and provide sucd comforts as she required, except that some Gentile neighbors went and kindly did for the woman what was denied her by those who had persuaded her into this unholy marriage relation. This modern exponent of Mormon polygamy, and political manipulator in Mormon conventions, would not go near the young wife of her own husband, and more than that issued orders to her own daughters that they must not do anything for that young mother to make her comfortable in her hour of sickness. We speak of this incident as another evidence that in every case of polygamous marriage there is a deep seated jealousy among the women, which they in their nature cannot subdue. This jealousy often prompts them to convince young girls to become victims in polygamy that the "green-eyed monster" in their bosoms may be appeased. This spirit prompts them to become pro[illegible] tution so long fostered in the Mormon Church, and nerves them to to bear up under their own sorrow, that they may enjoy the gratification of a demon in seeing the torture of members of their own sex whom they may wish to afflict.—[Salt Lake Tribune.

THE CAT.

The cat is frankly, undisguisedly selfish; there is no denying that. It lives for self, and compasses its end without scruple, patient to wait, skillful to feign and scheme, and utterly pitiless and unrelenting. But should sportsmen be very severe on the creature that evidently enjoys with a gusto keen as their own pursuits of the hapless prey which it hunts and toys with, often as much for diversion as for hunger? One hopes, for the sake of the sportive birds and heedless mice, which it fascinates with its basilisk eyes and captures with its cruel paws, that there may be some occult provision of nature to disarm their fate of its terrors. Perhaps the theory propounded by Dr. Livingston when he records his feelings while in the lion's clutch—that the sensations of the prey are rather pleasing than otherwise—may be true. We hope so, but it must be confessed that appearances are not in its favor. In early youth cat nature appears at its best. Once having emerged from the purring, sightless stage of its first nine days, the kitten becomes a winsome and attractive creature. 'Cat-like' is a reproachable epithet aptly applied to women of the Becky Sharp type; but it is not considered derogatory to the most fascinating girl to be credited with kitten-like ways—for the kitten is the embodiment of playfulness and grace. The cruel instincts of its tribe are not, however, slow to assert themselves, and it is comical to hear the mimic growl of puny thunder with which the tiny creature gloats over its first mouse. In the pages of fable, Puss has ever figured largely, but rarely after a flattering matter. His guile and subtility form form the salient points in the representations, and his character is painted akin to that of Master Reynard, the master of craft. He is depicted as a demure hypocrite, a false hermit, a deceitful counselor, the ensnarer of the unwary, and the ally of witches and wizards. Rats in council debate how to baffle him. It is hopeless, they find, to dream of "belling the cat." Noiseless himself on his gloved feet, his keen ear is not to be caught napping.

Only twelve of the southern departments of France seem satisfied with their vintage. The yield in general is expected to be even below the average of late years. Burgundy and Champagne report a yield extremely deficient both in quantity and quality; while Macon counts on a better crop than had been predicted, though of somewhat poor quality. In Charente the quality is also poor.

THE SPOOPENDYKES.

"This," said Mr. Spoopendyke, as he gazed around on his new acquisition of six acres, "this my dear, is what I have always wanted. A farmer and a farmer's life are the highways to happiness, Mrs. Spoopendyke; don't you think so?"

"It's perfectly lovely," rejoined Mrs. Spoopendyke, "I was born on a farm, and I was always healthy, though I had to go a good ways for water."

"I'll fix that, my dear," returned Mr. Spoopendyke. "I'll bring the water. Now where are my agricultural reports? I must plant right off if we are going to have crops, and when they're ripe we'll take them to market."

"I see the reports say you must give your hen chopped turnip once in a while," said Mrs. Spoopendyke, putting her thumb on the paragraph. "Either that or cabbages," returned her husband. "I don't know whether we'll have cabbages enough," he continued musingly.

"You must have less buckwheat," suggested Mrs. Spoopendyke. "I would think, though, that two acres would be enough for one hen, and if it isn't you can buy a load now and then from the neighbors.

"I'll think that over," replied Mr. Spoopendyke. "Here's one thing I don't understand. It says we should test a few seeds before planting, to make sure to germinate, but it don't say how to do it."

"May be it means to boil them," suggested Mrs. Spoopendyke, "or perhaps you—"

"Or, perhaps you think it means to crack 'em with an axe to see if they are hard! I s'pose you've got an idea you stick straws into 'em to see if they are all right. I think we ought to have some weevil for the pig."

"I don't know where you're going to plant it," said Mrs. Spoopendyke, "unless it will grow with buckwheat or onions. You can't put it in with the cabbage because the pig and hen would fight?"

"Do you know what weevil is?" demanded Mr. Spoopendyke, glaring at his wife. "Got a notion it's some kind of weed for the pig to smoke, haven't you? Imagine it's gilt-edged note paper for him to write on, don't you? Well, it isn't a swallow tail coat or a plug hat for him to go to church in, neither. You don't plant weevil, Mrs. Spoopendyke, any more than you do soap or clothes-pins, or stair rods. You buy it in barrels, and I'll order some."

"I think we ought to buy some lace curtains for the front windows," said Mrs. Spoopendyke, anxious to change the conversation.

"Yes, and we want a folding bedstead for the cow, and we've got to have a new arm-chair for the pig, and I'm afraid those cabbages won't do without a wet nurse!" squealed Mr. Spoopendyke. "I suppose I've got to hire a man to see that the meadow don't go fishing on Sunday and upset your religious notions. Oh! you're a farmer's wife, you are! If I had time to write an index to you and get some dod gasted binder to fix you up with a fly leaf, you'd make a whole agricultural report!"

And Mr. Spoopendyke shot into the house and to bed while his wife, having put all the oil lamps into buckets of water so they couldn't explode during the night, fell asleep dreaming that the cabbage patch had eloped with the onions, while the cow and pig died of weevil, and the wind-mill had abandoned agricultural pursuits and started off through Ohio preaching the gospel.

How People Die.—Miss Nightingale has pointed out how constantly the mental state of the dying depends on their physical condition. As a rule, she tells us, in acute cases interest in their own danger is rarely felt. "Indifference, excepting with regard to bodily suffering, or to duty the dying man desires to perform, is the far more usual state. But patients who die of consumption very frequently die in a state of seraphic joy and peace; the countenance almost expresses rapture. Patients who die of cholera, peritonitis, etc., on the contrary, often die in a state approaching despair. In dysentry, diarrahœa, or fever, the patient often dies in a state of indifference." Those who have carefully examined the dead on a battle field, or in the streets after an emeute, are struck with the fact that while the expression on the faces of those who have died by gunshot wounds is one of agony and distress, the dead by sword have a calmer expression, though their wounds often seem more painful to the eye. A very careful observer, who was through the Indian mutiny, entirely confirms this. After giving several instances, he says: "A rapid death by steel is almost painless. Saber edge or point divides the nerves so quickly as to give liitle pain. A bullet lacerates."—London Spectator.

At Victoria, B. C., a man had accumulated through a small business a fortune of a few thousand dollars. His wife concealed the money in a place known only to herself. Last week she died suddenly, and the strictest search has failed to reveal the place of deposit. A local paper says: "The husband is distracted in consequence of his double loss."

Like most garments, everything in life has a right and a wrong side. You can take any joy, and by turning it around, find troubles on the other side; you can take the greatest trouble, and by turning it around, find joys on the other side. The gloomiest mountain never casts a shadow on both sides at once.

THE PUGET SOUND MAIL.
La Conner, W. T.

JAMES POWER, PROPRIETOR.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1882.

IT is proposed by some of our contemporaries that we send a special commission of select men to Washington to assist Delegate Brents to lobby through Congress the admission of this Territory into the Union and that funds be raised by county, towns and cities to pay their expenses. The proposition, in our opinion, is somewhat impracticable—at least the matter of raising funds. It is easy enough to organize your commission of "able statesmen," but the funds to defray their expenses is quite another thing. Couny and municipal corporations would be debarred by law from appropriating any funds for the purpose, and we apprehend that a public subscription would be a tedious process—particularly if the contribution box should be passed around throughout the Territory. There is not much time for the contribution business, for Congress will meet on next Monday and adjourn sine die on the 4th of March; so we see no way of securing our admission with any certainty except our able statesmen pack their "carpet-bags," start for Washington immediately and pay their own expenses. If, however, they not do this we do not consider that all is lost, for we will doubtless be admitted on the merits of our case as presented by Delegate Brents.

A PLEA FOR WOMAN SUFFRAGE.—At the laying of the corner-stone of a new courthouse in Madison County, Indiana, at which ceremony certain tax-paying women were invited to participate in the proceedings, one of them read an elaborate address in which we find the following plea for the cause: "Gentlemen, the tax-paying women of Indiana are not aliens; they are not children; they are not ignorant; they are not felons, fools, nor lunatics; but they are your own sisters, wives, mothers and daughters, members of your churches, inmates of families and citizens of your county. They were educated in the same schools; they read the same newspapers; they speak the same language; they have borne the same burdens; they have assisted in the development of your country, they pay the same taxes. You cannot represent them. They look upon the whole world from a different point of view. They represent domestic and moral interests of our country, and are vitally concerned in the questions of education, economy, temperance, purity and peace, and they are demanding suffrage—not only as a human but as a divine right."

A YOUNG EDITOR of Buffalo, who is modest, as all editors are, and who would blush to see his name in print, is the man whom New York and the country is to thank for substituting new life for the effete Democracy of Tammany and Tilden. He first brought Mr. Cleveland into municipal politics, and subsequently at Albany he undertook, unassisted, to give prominence to the successful Mayor as a gubernatorial candidate. The "bosses" and wire-pullers laughed at their enthusiastic young friend, and ignored his candidate. But Mr. Cleveland's pictures were placarded everywhere; his praises were sung—the song was a solo; his virtues were eulogized; there was but eulogist at first.

PIUS BEN BUTLER.—At a grand banquet given by the Bostonians to Ben Butler, in honor of his election as Governor of Massachusetts, he made use of the following pius language at the close of his address, which shows that he is not the hardened sinner that he is usually regarded: "For myself, returning to you and each of you, again and again, thanks for your kindness, for your support and your confidence, I earnestly pray Almighty God to give me that discernment and wisdom and sagacity which shall lead me in any sphere of duty to which I am called to do all that any man may do to justify the confidence, kindness, love and affection shown to me by the people of Massachusetts in the late demonstration which we have met here to celebrate."

NORTH IDAHO voted almost unanimously in favor of annexation to Washington Territory, and in every way manifests a determined purpose to secure such a result. In the event of her success in this movement, Washington's area would be increased to about 100,000 square miles, and the addition to her population would be nearly 20,000.

A DAKOTA settler says that pumpkins could be raised there, but the vines grow so fast that they wear the pumpkins out dragging them over the prairie. Farmers in the spring plant beet seed close to their house and in the fall pull up the beet and brick up the hole for a cistern.

GENERAL SHERMAN was asked recently by a citizen of Los Angelos, California, whether the story that General Stoneman failed to sustain the honor of the Union army at Macon was a fact. The reply ran as follows: "Of course it is not the fact. But if I undertook to correct errors made purposely to deceive, I would have to leave this world by the first train."

OLD CHIEF POCOTELLO, now at the Fort Hall Agency, in answer to an inquiry relative to the true Christian character of a former Indian Agent at that place, gave in very terse language the most accurate description of a hypocrite that was ever given to the public: "Ugh! too much God and no flour."

THE MAIL AND CHRONICLE.

☞THE MAIL has entered into arrangements with the San Francisco CHRONICLE whereby subscribers may obtain both papers for one year for $3.50

A DAILY MAIL.—Our Coupeville correspondent is nothing if not practical, and though he sometimes writes in a facetious strain there is always pith and point to what he says. In his letter this week he refers to the necessity of a daily mail on this route. It is a fact that the freight and passenger business on this route is much greater than on the Seattle and Port Townsend route, and yet they have for some years back been enjoying a daily mail service while we with more business and resources have had to plod along with a semi-weekly mail service. It should at least be increased to a tri-weekly service. As we have often remarked about these increased mail facilities, the Government never moves in the matter without petition. So let us ask that we may receive, and knock and knock incessantly until our "prayers" are granted.

THE THANKSGIVING BALL given by Mr. John McGlinu, the deservedly popular hotel keeper of La Conner, was a grand success both socially and financially, the hall being crowded with the youth, beauty and loveliness of the country for miles around; the supper was superb; and the music by Joe Goodwin and the Graham Bros., assisted by the accomplished violinist, Mr. R. S. Clark, was artistic and inspiring in the highest degree. As a caterer and ball-giver Mr. McGlinn takes the cake in these parts.

THE DISTRICT COURT for Whatcom County will meet at La Conner on Dec. 20th next. The following are the grand and petit jurors now being summoned for the term:

Grand Jurors—A. H. Wampler, T. B. Mangan, C. W. Beale, James Graham, Chas. Moore, O. C. Currier, John Ball, J. S. Church, Chas. Tollbar, J. L. Maddox, J. H. Moores, S. C. Washburn, Daniel Kilcup, J. Y. Collins, P. C. Eubanks and James Elder—16.

PRECINCT ELECTIONS.—The following precinct officers were elected:

Semiahmoo—J. Freese Justice and Byron Kingsley Constable. Ferndale—Reuben Bizer Justice and J. Plaster Constable. Lynden—E. Hawley Justice and Wm. T. Miller Constable. Nooksack—D. Wight Justice and D. Kilcup Constable. Whatcom—Rufus Stearns J. P. and W. A. Utter Constable. Samish—G. Sias J. P. and W. J. Brown Constble. Guemes—T. B. Mangan J. P. and J. Murrow Constable. Ship Harbor—F. A. Graham J. P. and P. C. Bell Constable. Fidalgo—G. N. Crandall and H. W. Poore a tie for Justice and H. L. Seebert Constable. La Conner—J. F. Dwelley Justice and John Potter Constable. Skagit—Olof Sandstrom Justice and Andrew Williams Constable. Mt. Vernon—Thomas S. Newland Justice and Jasper Gates Constable. Upper Skagit—R. E. Cockrehan Justice and W. A. Kelly Constable. Baker—Chas. Von Pressentin Justice and Jesse Cary Constable.

"A CRYSTAL WEDDING PARTY" in honor of Sheriff James O'Loughlin and wife, at the residence of Judge Dwelley, was the chief social event of the week at La Conner. The "happy couple" looked as fair and sparkling as the numerous articles of beautiful glass-ware presented by their friends who called to tender their congratulations. Music and song, together with a "social hop" at the hall in the course of the evening, as also a bountiful supply of refreshments rendered the affair a most joyous one. This little celebration of the 15th anniversary of the marriage of our "High Sheriff" was peculiarly felicitious from the fact that only a few weeks ago he was re-elected to the office which he so acceptably fills by probably the largest majority ever accorded a candidate for office in this County.

AND NOW COMES the elder of the Milne Bros., who claims that the oat-meal mill property belongs to him, and that the recent transfer by his brothers was unauthorized and illegal. Lawyer Bradshaw is here looking after the matter for Mr. Milne, and there will probably be considerable litigation.

THE Legislative Council elect is composed of eight Republicans and and four Democrats, as follows: N. T. Caton, D; C. H. Hale, R; J. H. Houghton, R; R. C. Kerr, R; J. Collins, D; J. Power, R; J. E. Edmiston, D; Whitehouse, R; P. A. Harper, D; J. A. Burke, R; S. Truax, R; T. J. Smith, R.

MR. J. S. CONNER left us again this week to return to Oakland, Cal. "J. S." as he is familiarly known around town, raked in a big pile of gold-twenties during his few months stay with us. He is noted for his happy faculty of turning everything he touches into gold, and always getting on the best side of a trade.

THE steamer Gazelle passed through to Seattle Monday morning with a load of cattle and produce from the Noosack and returned on Friday with a cargo of mercantile supplies for the river.

Coupeville Correspondence.

COUPEVILLE, Nov. 26, 1882.

EDITOR MAIL: The very busy season with us is now drawing to a close. The bulk of our grain is gone, though unlike the Whatcom County farmers we are keeping enough and to spare. There are yet 140 tons of choice oats (surplus) here awaiting market developments. Live hogs have been bought here at 4¼ and 4½ cents per pound, which, I am told, realized the purchaser 12½ cents in Victoria. They are selling here now at 6 cents. Wheat commands $1, the Jenni Bros. having sold 500 busels for that last week. Potatoes are moving slowly, holders being reluctant to take the going price of 50 cents per bushel.

The long-talked of "Thrasher's Ball" came off Friday night and was enjoyed by the young people. Mr. John Gillespie having finished his season's work of 47,000 bushels gave a kind of Kentucky treat in the shape of a ball, so that anyone by paying his $2.50 could dance to his heart's content and have his supper thrown in gratis.

You will see by the election returns that there was only a partial turn out in this county, while at the Skagit Head precinct no polls were held. I am told that there were forty voters there, and had they been cast some of the majorities would have been reversed. Some of the residents are highly indignant about it and would like to see justice dealt out to those in fault.

I see that you, Mr. Editor, are elected. I wish it had been for Post Master General instead of Councilman, then there would be a chance to get a daily mail on this side of the Sound. It appears to me that if the matter was properly placed before the Department our prayer would be granted. There must be as much or more mail on this side to La Conner as there is on the west to Port Townsend.

TILLICUM.

Evils of the Indian Whisky Selling Business.

FIDALGO, Nov. 28, 1882.

EDITOR MAIL: With your permission I will lay before the readers of the MAIL a few remarks on the beauties and blessings of the Indian whisky traffic now in full blast in this part of the country. There seems to be a perfect deluge of the maddening beverage in circulation here lately. The Indians have one and all let go their hold on every industry they had heretofore been engaged in. The steamers find wood exceedingly scarce and other parties are disappointed in Indian help. The Indian Agent, a salaried officer, does not appear to make any effort to save his wards from sure and speedy destruction. The merchants too, I presume, must suffer from the loss of the Indian trade, and the Indians themselves will suffer incalculable mischief morally and physically. The efforts of the Government to place them in an independent and self-supporting position is frustrated, as is also the efforts of the missionary to teach and establish the moral code. It is a sad sight to see the whole native population, who but a few years ago were found a crude and savage people, brought up to a state of comparative civlization by the wise and humane efforts of the Goverment and the clergy to be thus again thrown back toward their aboriginal condition. To see the old grandfather and grand-mother, the children of tender age from the infant up reeling about in stupifying intoxication, killing each other with guns and knives. Oh ye white race of the nineteenth century, ye civilizer and christianizer, will ye look stolidly and with composure on the wholesale slaughter of the little remnant of a once numerous aboriginal race doomed to speedy extinction unless you put forth your hand to save them from the impending destruction?

The parties engaged in this nefarious traffic are well known and as usually found they are of the lowest order, having no standing or respectability. Much of the mischief is being done at La Conner. I could name every one engaged in this disreputable practice but I forbear this time, but they had better look out in future that they are not called for. I hope the good people of La Conner will discountenance and stamp out without ceremony whatever of this accursed traffic they find carried on in their midst.

AN OLD TIMER.

LA CONNER is quite noted as a peaceably disposed and orderly community, and so we rarely if ever have a row to record. The MAIL never took much stock in rows anyhow, and would rather any time talk about the weather, crops, mail matters or something tending to the good and welfare of the country than to record that Tom, Dick and and Harry had a row at the card table and that one or all of them got hurt. But there was a row the other night—or rather morning—over a game of poker that came near resulting seriously; but as it was, one of the bellegerents only received a black eye and the other a slight stab with a knife. It was, however, what might have been expected at a gambling table at 5 o'clock in the morning, when flushed with wine and the excitement of the game, together with a ruffled temper from loss of sleep. It is true, some people can play poker all night by being civil and disposed to respect each others rights, but experience has shown that such harmony and happy results cannot always be depended upon. The best time to play poker is early in the evening while people are suppose to be sober and in good humor, and quit at seasonable bedtime. No wise man should play poker all night, lest he get "stuck," lose his temper and get into a row.

☞J. & G. Gaches have to arrive in about ten days a large lot of Schuttler Wagons and Moline Plows, all sizes, at prices to suit purchasers.

THE proprietors of the La Conner Drug Store invite the people to call and examine their fine assortment of Holiday Goods. The stock will be complete by Dec. 4th and ready for inspection. You will also find here the largest and best supply of candies.

MR. WM. HEWITT has arranged to purchase the Marietta Hotel property in this town of Mr. J. S. Conner for $4,000. The price is to be paid in installments in the course of five years, a bond for a deed being only given.

SUMMONS.

235.

VICTOR CHARROIN, Plaintiff,
VS.
ALMIRA CHARROIN, Defendant.

Action brought in the District Court of Washington Territory, holding terms at La Conner in and for the County of Whatcom, and complaint filed in the County of Whatcom in the office of the Clerk of said District Court

To ALMIRA CHARROIN, Defendant:

The United States of America send greeting: You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above named plaintiff in the District Court of Washington Territory, holding terms at La Conner in and for the County of Whatcom in said Territory, and to answer the complaint filed therein within sixty days after the date of first publication of this summons, or judgment by default will be taken against you according to the prayer of said complaint.

The said action is brought to obtain a decree dissolving the bonds of matrimony heretofore and now existing between the plaintiff and defendant, and also an award of the real and personal property possessed by plaintiff and mentioned particularly in said Complaint, and for such other and further relief as to the Court may seem meet in the premises, on the grounds of willful abandonment for more than one year; and that all of said property was acquired by plaintiff's sole exertions and without any assistance whatever from defendant.

And you are hereby notified that unless you appear and answer said plaintiff's complaint, as above required, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the above complaint.

Witness the HON. R. S. GREENE, Judge of said District Court, and the seal of said Court, this 11th day of November, A. D. 1882.

JAMES A. GILLILAND,
[SEAL.] Clerk.

GOLDEN RULE BAZAAR,

ODD FELLOWS' HALL, Reinig's Block, Front Street,

SEATTLE, W. T.

Having received and added to our already immense stock large invoices of new goods, we are now ready to supply our customers with a full line of the latest goods in the market, consisting of

SHIRTS, UNDERWEAR, HATS. TRUNKS, VALISES, ETC.,

Ladies' and Misses,' Gents' and Boys' Gossamer Coats,
Ties, Hosiery, Purses, Satchels,
Albums, Accordeons, Turnaphones,
Organiun Harmonettas, Cutlery,
Fluted Ware, Crockery, Glassware,
Magnolia Ware, Stationery, and Fancy Goods,
Notions, Soap, Perfumery, and Cologne.
Bay Rum, Brushes, Brackets,
Baskets and Willowware,
Toys in immense quantities,
Blankets, Quilts, Towels, Crash,
Playing Cards, Household Tools,
Baby Carriages, etc.

Agency of the celebrated Home and Sigwalt Sewing Machine; agents for California Surf Co., 327 Sansome Street.

The advantage of a one price system, and why the Golden Rule Bazar succeeds, are as follows:

We don't keep trash; we don't do claptrap advertising in order to catch customers and then skin them, but we advertise to let people know we are a live house, and where we are to be found. We keep the best goods to be found in the city, and when you trade with us you get a full dollar's worth for 100 cents. If we can sell an article for 10 cents, we don't ask 25 cents for it; but we mark all our goods with an average profit, so that the poorest judge is placed on the same footing with the shrewdest buyer.

We have the best facilities for getting goods direct from the manufacturers, and have enormous shipments of goods on the way, and will give our customers the benefit of it.

Country orders, whether large or small, receive prompt attention, and, if the goods are not satisfactory, can be returned.

All goods marked in plain figures and shown with pleasure. Intending purchasers should call and examine our stock.

We rely on our extremely low prices from the beginning, and we also rely on the principle on which we are doing business.

We rely on the good judgement of a fair minded bublic.

Fred MacCrellish, proprietor of the Alta, is dead. The expression of sorrow at his demise is general with all who knew him. His kind-heartedness was proverbial, and on this point the Examiner says: "If all the people to whom Frederick MacCrellish has at some time or other done a service or a kindness should bring a flower to lay upon his grave, he would have a floral monument of imposing dimensions."

J. W. Simonton, one of the proprietors of the Call and Bulletin, died at Napa on the 2d. The dead journalist firrst came to this coast in 1849, and after a short newspaper career he returned to New York, where, with Henry J. Raymond, he founded the Times in the latter city. In 1856 Mr. Simonton returned to California and became interested in the Call and Bulletin; and in 1857 was made general manager of the New York Associated Press, which positon he held until three years ago, when he removed permanently to the Pacific.

The Bella Union Theater was never noted for its moral performances, but during the past two years it has become a veritable sink of filth. Its indecency has finally become so notorious that the authorities have been called up to surpress it. On a late date raid a was made on the house by the police, and the proprietors and all his employees were arrested and taken to jail. On their appearance in court next morning, McAtee, the proprietor, and his stage manager were held for trial on the 27th inst., while the performers were allowed to go free. It is hoped this move will have the effect to suppress the dives now disgracing the city.

THE STORY OF A STEAMER.

"Speaking about fast-running steam boats," said Thomas Hartshorn, recently, rolling his quid into his larboard jaw, and giving his Tuckapaw trowsers a hitch (Mr. H. served as a cook on the ram Queen of the West), "I suppose you never heard of the old Elephant, that used to run between Cincinnati and New Orleans. She was a beauty. I suppose that when she was tied to the bank with a stern-line and bow-line she was one of the fastest boats on the rivers. She made one celebrated trip from New Orleans, I think in '47. Her time was made a matter of record. It was seven days, six hours and three weeks. Coming up from New Orleans once the Captain was sitting at a table, and he noticed several big hulks of fellows serving as cabin boys. He called the steward to him, and says he: 'Don't you think it would look better to have boys waiting on the table? I don't like to see men filling the place of cabin boys. Let 'em go and get some young chaps.' 'Why, blast it, Captain,' said the steward, 'them fellows were boys when we left New Orleans.'"

"The Elephant," continued Mr. Hartshorn, clinging to his nautical reminiscences, "was pulling out from Memphis one day, on a down trip, and somehow she got mixed up with a raft of saw-logs. She broke one of the logs loose and it floated out into the stream. The Elephant headed down the river and finally got alongside of the log. Then commenced one of the nicest races you ever saw. There was a good stage of water, and the log boomed along right lively. For about a week they held together purty well, but the Elephant had to land at the mouth of the White river, and the log beat her into New Orleans about 20 minutes. There was something wrong about the Elephant's boilers, and she couldn't make steam properly. That's what the captain said. She was a nice boat to ship green fruit on.—[Memphis Avalanche.

ADULTERATION OF FRENCH WINES.

Of more than 3000 samples of wine analyzed at the Paris Municipal Labratory during the last ten months, only between 300 and 400, or about one-tenth of the whole, were found to be of good quality. The rest were pronounced either passable or bad, without, however, for the most part, containing any poisonous ingredient; but some 300 or 400 revealed on analysis the presence of deleterious and noxious substances, such as sugar of lead, alum and sulphuric acid. Beer seems a safer beverage; for though glucose obtained from the potato entered largely into the composition of many of the specimens examined, this in itself is not injurious to health; while hops, absent in most cases, were innoculously replaced by quassia and similar barks.

The result of the analysis of the samples of cognac recalls the famous dictum of the Italian innkeeper, that wine can be made from anything—even from grapes; for, owing to the ravages of the phylloxera in recent years in the Charente district, and the high price which wine commands, all the so-called cognac since 1878 has been made from spirit distilled from grain, beet root or molasses. One-half the brandy tested at the labratory was declared bad, not in the sense of being spurious—that is of course—but of being made from insufficiently rectified spirit produced from some substitute for grapes.—[St. James Gazette.

HOW TO GET RID OF A NON-PAYING BOARDER.

The London papers abound in curious information about New York. We learn that Miss Wanda Brown, residing at a fashionable boarding-house in Thirty-ninth street, New York City, recently gave her landlady, Mrs. Beebe, in charge for assault and battery. Being requested by the sitting magistrate to state the particulars of the assault, she deposed that upon three several occasions Mrs. Beebe had put a huge bull-frog in her bed.

"Is that so?" inquired his Honor of the prisoner.

"Well, Judge, I admit the frogs," replied Mrs. Beebe; "but what is one who is poor, though honest, to do with a boarder who will neither pay nor dust? This is how 't was: I had lost enough money by her, and wasn't going to waste any more on getting her out of my house by the strong arm of the law. But my husband supplied cold-blooded animals to the medical students for their experiments, and so it struck me one day, looking over his stock, that a likely way to persuade Miss Brown to pay up, or better still, to get rid of her, would be to administer a frog or two in her bed."

"You bet," answered Mrs. Beebe.

"Did she pay up, then?"

"Not much, Judge; but after the third frog she vamosed the ranch.

"That was a good notion of yours, Mrs. Beebe," observed his Honor, vainly striving to keep his countenance, "but duty compels me to fine you three dollars."

If there is any such thing as unconscious heroism, Fannie Coman, the fourteen-year-old girl of New York, possesses it in a high degree. While playing near a boat house on the Harlem river, she dived headlong from the end of a pier to rescue from drowning little Jessie Renton, her playmate. Little Jessie came to the surface unconscious and was sinking for the third time, when she was grasped by her brave young friend and bore to a boat twenty feet away. After seeing the half drowned girl safe in the arms of her older brother, Miss Fannie swam after her slipper, which had dropped from her foot as she dived from the wharf and which was bobbing up and down on the water some distance out in the stream. The practical minded swimmer said afterward that it was a new slipper and she didn't want it lost, and at the same time expressing chidish surprise that anyone should praise her for saving little Jessie.—[Hackensack Republican.

KISSES ON INTEREST.

A father, talking to his careless daughter, said: "I want to speak to you of your mother. It may be that you have noticed a careworn look upon her face lately. Of course, it has not been brought there by any act of yours, still it is your duty to chase it away. I want you to get up to-morrow morning and get breakfast, and when your mother comes and begins to express her surprise, go right up to her and kiss her on the mouth. You can't imagine how it will brighten her dear face. Besides, you owe her a kiss or two. Away back, when you were a little girl, she kissed you when no one else was tempted by your fever-tainted breath and swollen face. You were not as attractive then as you are now. And through those years of childish sunshine and shadows she was always ready to cure, by the magic of a mother's kiss, the little, dirty, chubby hands whenever they were injured in those first skirmishes with the rough old world. And then the midnight kiss with which she routed so many bad dreams, as she leaned over your restless pillow, have all been on interest these long, long years. Of course, she is not so pretty and kissable as you are; but if you had done your share of work during the last ten years the contrast would not be so marked. Her face has more wrinkles than yours, far more; and yet if you were sick that face would appear more beautiful than an angel's as it hovered over you, watching every opportunity to minister to your comfort, and every one of those wrinkles would seem to be bright wavelets of sunshine chasing each other over the dear face. She will leave you one of these days. These burdens, if not lifted from her shoulders, will break her down. Those rough, hard hands, that have done so many necessary things for you, will be crossed upon her lifeless breast. Those neglected lips that gave you your first baby kiss will be forever closed, and those sad, tired eyes will have opened in eternity, and then you will appreciate your mother; but it will be too late.

FROM A BILL TO A LAW.

As a rule a bill does not become a law without the approval of the President. As soon as it has passed both houses of Congress, the house last acting on it notifies the other house and delivers it to the joint Committee of Enrollment, to be actually enrolled on parchment. In this enrollment the bill must be written solidly, without paragraphs, to leave no room for interpolations. It is then delivered to the Clerk of the House of Representatives, to be signed by the Speaker. The Clerk then brings it, by way of message, from the House to the Senate, to be signed by the President of the Senate. The Secretary of the Senate returns it to the Committee of Enrollment, who presents it to the President of the United States. If he approves it he signs it and deposits it among the rolls in the office of the Secretary of State, and notifies the House in which it originated of this fact; and that house notifies the other. If the President disapproves the bill, he returns it, with his objections, to the house in which it originated, which enters the objections at large on its journal, and proceeds to reconsider it. If, after such reconsideration, that house passes it again, by a two-thirds vote, it is sent to the other house, together with the President's objections, and if approved by two-thirds of this house, it becomes a law. If any bill sent to the President is not returned by him within ten days, Sundays excepted, after he received it, the same becomes a law, in like manner as if he had signed it, unless Congress, by its adjournment, prevents its return, in which case it is not a law.—[Inter-Ocean.

THE ABSENT-MINDED MAN AND HIS BOX.

"I was going to Kinzua when a young man got on at Warren and sits down side of me, and byin' by says he 'I've a little box here I call my bean box.' With that he pulls out a little round box an' shakes it, an' I hears somethin' rattle. 'Now,' says he, 's'pose we jest bet the cigars on there being odd or even beans in that box.' 'All right,' says I, 'it's odd.' 'You've lost,' says he. 'Yes,' says I; 'we'll get the cigars at Kinzua.' And then we falls ro talkin' about somethin' else a long time, until all at once says he, 'I just want to show you a little bean box I've got here;' an' he pulls out that box again. Says he, 'Let's bet the cigars or something on odd or even beans in this box.' Thinks I to myself, you poor absent-minded critter, can't you remember that you showed that to me a minute ago. And I says, 'All right; s'pose we make the bet five dollars.' I thought I'd just teach him to remember things. 'I'll do it,' says he; 'now what is it?' 'Even,' says I. He opened the box and—" "Well, what then?" asked the reporter, as the colonel paused.

"He wasn't so absent-minded after all," said the colonel. "There were seven beans in that box."

"I found out afterwards that the box had no bottom, or rather had covers at both ends. On one of the covers was fastened three beans, and there were four loose beans in the box. When the man who bet said odd, the cover to which the beans were fastened was taken off, and when he said even, the other end was lifted."—[Oil City Derrick.

It is now announced that a new explosive more powerful than dynamite has been discovered by the Russian Nihilists. The longer the uncrowned Czar postpones his coronation, the greater the peril becomes. A less cautious man would be tempted to hurry up the ceremony while yet there is a chance of surviving it.

Yale and Harvard may be taken as the most expensive Colleges in the United States, and Brown University as more moderate. A Yaleman's or Harvardite's expenses average about $900 each year, while the average at Brown University ranks as low as $450 per annum.

A CURIOUS CASE FOR A BARBER.

A barber, relating strange calls made upon him, gave the following instance: "On the day that I was twenty-five years of age I did something that no other barber ever did before. I was called upon to shave a dying woman. Yes, sir. She was the wife of a gentleman living in the old district of Spring Garden, and she had as stiff a beard as any man I ever shaved. It had been growing since girlhood, and her husband was the only person aware of it. Daily use of the razor, aided by the after application of rouge and cosmetics, concealed it effectually even from her children. She never kissed her lady friends for fear of discovery. When she became ill it was impossible for the unfortunate woman to use the razor herself, and her husband did not possess the skill, although he made several well-meant attempts. She had been in bed a week, and her case had been pronounced hopeless by her physicians. It was to gratify a dying wish that a barber was summoned. I was taken from my shop in West Philadelphia to the rear entrance of the house in a close carriage and to this day I do not know the exact location, although I feel sure it was somewhere between Buttonwood and Green and Fifth and Tenth streets. Her husband explained the case to me while driving to the house and gave me twenty-five dollars in advance. To make a long story short, I shaved the woman so cleanly that she thanked me over and over again, and then begged, with tears in her eyes, that I should keep her secret. I have keep it for a dozen years, but don't think it can hurt any one's feelings now. When the woman died, or when the funeral took place, or whether the beard was visible after death, I do not know."

STORY OF STANLEY HUNTLEY.

Sam Steele told me a story of Stanley Huntley, author of the Spoopendyke sketches in the Brooklyn Ealge, which has never been in print and which ought to be. Some years ago Huntley was on the staff of the St. Louis Times, at that period a morning paper controlled by Stillson Hutchins, who was also proprietor of the St. Louis Dispatch, an evening paper. Hutchins was very particular to impress upon the public that the Times and Dispatch were separate and distinct institutions. "They have no connection whatever," said Hutchins, "they are separate and distinct although owned by the same man." This he would frequently reiterate to his employes. One spring Huntley was reporting the Missouri legislature at Jefferson City. It had been a long session and at its close the Missourians, senators representatives, reporters, officers and all went in for a "grand circus." They tore up the seats, unhinged the doors, mashed each other's hats, and in fact got very, very drunk to the great scandal of the State. This was before Huntley had signed the dodgasted pledge and become a measly temperance man and he was as bad, yea worse, than the rest. He went home, but was in no condition to show himself at the office which good-naturedly allowed him a couple of days to get over it. The editor finally sent a boy to Huntley with a message to the effect that "if he had got over that drunk the management would like to have him get at work." Spoopendyke sent back word that he was sick. The boy returned with a message from Hutchins, saying that if he had not got drunk he would not have been ill. Huntley rolled ovor in bed, raised himself on his elbow and fixing cold, steel-grey, glittering eye upon the boy in withering contempt, said: "You go back to Mr. Hutchins and tell him that that drunk and this sickness are like the Times and Dispatch—they are separate and distinct—they have no connection although owned by the same man."—[Detroit Chaff.

ENGAGED FOLKS.

The girl in the flush of her first engagement is apt to look with pity on her disengaged friends. "How little do they know," she soliloquizes, "of real happiness, real comfort; how little do they know of the men!" She thinks it so nice to be owned by somebody in return. Every morning her lover calls upon his way to the office, kisses her, and presents her with a fresh rose, so emblematic of herself; and every evening he calls again, kisses her, and bestows upon her a novel and dainty bouquet. He takes tea with her people, and admires the way in which she presides over the table, and whispers to her softly—how delightful it will be when she pours out the tea and butters the toast for him alone! And then the pleasant evenings in the dimly lighted parlor, when lover's vows are exchanged again and again! Oh! Araminta's cup of joy is too full. She is a new being, full of good humor, meekly bearing mother's whims and sister's petulance and never retorting to brother's teasing; but these are but slight vexations compared with the great love that is in her heart. She has her hours of gloom when her lover is prevented from paying his daily visit; but the troubles of the day are naught—she lives in a world of her own. Have patience with the engaged couple, then; sympathize with them in the enjoyment of their fool's paradise. Courting may be their sole happy experience.—[Brookfield Argus.

A man may work twelve hours a day for 15 years on a morning newspaper without taking a vacation for the benefit of his health; but should the same man get a position in one of the Government departments at Washington, where they commence work at 9 o'clock A. M. and quit at 3 P. M., in less than a year he would be so "overworked" and worn out that he would want a six weeks' holiday to recuperate. It must be in the drinking water.

In every tobacco factory at Key West, Florida, there is a "reader." Cubans cannot talk without gesticulation, and in order to keep them from talking a person is hired to read aloud to the hands during working hours.

SOMETHING TO BE PROUD OF.

The history of the Pacific Bank ought to be printed in large type and placed where it could be read by all and cherished as one of the brightest chapters in the story of San Francisco. Starting nearly a score of years ago, the management laid down and announced as their cardinal principle the maxim, "a prudent and conservative course is one of the first principles of successful banking." In the speculative fever of the mining era they adhered resolutely to it. Mines and mining stocks never formed any part of their assets or collateral. Its loans were placed on indubitable security, and its doors were never darkened by the forms of panic stricken depositors. The public were not slow to recognize these traits, and the consequence has been that the Bank has gone on from year to year gathering to its counters the best banking constituency on the coast, dispensing its regular dividends and adding to its resources.

Gray's Galvanic Girdle.

This Belt has stood trial, and been found SUPERIOR to any offered. This is not idle assertion, but is a fact easily proven. It is the only girdle constructed on purely scientific principles, and the only one through which the electric current can be conducted so as to affect the body in a manner which will give relief, and in most cases completely cure. The following testimonial should speak for itself. It is from a member of one of the largest mill contracting firms in San Francisco, and therefore its genuineness cannot be questioned. Mr. Patten is of the firm of J. B. White & Co., Mill Contractors, 330 Pine street.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 19, 1882.

DR. GRAY—Dear Sir: Having used your Galvanic Girdle for siatica in my hip, I can heartily recommend it for that class of diseases, as it gave me immediate relief; and have known very good effects from its use in rheumatism, where I have advised its use.

Yours, THOS. J. PATTEN.
