Building on the Sand.

BY ELIZA COOK.

'Tis well to woo, 'tis well to wed,
For so the world has done
Since myrtles grew and roses blew,
And morning brought the sun.

But have a care, so young and fair,
Be sure you pledge with truth;
Be certain that your love will wear
Beyond the days of youth.

For if ye give not heart for heart,
As well as hand for hand,
You'll find you've played the unwise part,
And "built upon the sand."

'Tis well to save, 'tis well to have
A goodly store of gold,
And hold enough of shining stuff;
For charity is cold.

But place not all your hopes and trust
In what the deep mine brings:
We cannot live on yellow dust
Unmixed with purer things.

And he who piles up wealth alone,
Will often have to stand
Beside his coffer chest and own
'Tis "built upon the sand."

'Tis good to speak in kindly guise,
And soothe wher'er we can;
Fair speech would bind the human mind,
And love link man to man.

But stay not the gentle words,
Let deeds with language dwell;
The one who pities starving birds
Should scatter crumbs as well.

The mercy that is warm and true
Must lend a helping hand;
For those who talk, yet fail to do,
But "build upon the sand."

Faded Flowers.

The flowers that I saw in the wild wood
Have since dropped their beautiful leaves,
And the many dear friends of my childhood
Have slumbered for years in their graves;
But the bloom of the flowers I remember,
Though their smiles I shall never more see,
For the cold chilly winds of December
Stole my flowers, my companions, from me.

The roses may bloom on the morrow,
And many dear friends I have won,
But my heart can paint with but sorrow,
When I think of the ones that are gone.
'Tis no wonder that I'm broken-hearted,
And stricken with sorrow should be,
For we have met, we have loved, we have parted,
My flowers, my companions, and me.

How dark looks this world, and how dreary,
When we part from the ones that we love;
But there's rest for the faint and the weary,
And friends meet with lost ones above.
But in heaven I can but remember,
When from earth my proud soul shall be free,
That no chilly winds of December
Shall steal my companions from me.

A Prayer.

BY THOMAS ELWOOD—A QUAKER OF 1660.

Oh, that mine eyes might closed be
To what concerns me not to see;
That deafness might possess my ear
To what concerns me not to hear;
That truth my tongue may always tie
From ever speaking foolishly;
That no vain thought would ever rest,
Or be conceived within my breast;
That by each word and deed and thought,
Glory may to my God be brought.
But what are wishes? Lord, mine eye
On Thee is fixed, to Thee I cry;
Wash, Lord, and purify my heart,
And make it clean in every part;
And when 'tis clean, Lord, keep it so,
For that is more than I can do.

Grave Subjects.

In the way of sepulchral literature, we remember nothing better than the following, copied from an old Scottish tombstone:

"Here lies the body of Alexander Macpherson,
Who was a very extraordinary person.
He was six feet high in his stocking feet,
And kept his accoutrements clean an' neat.
He was slew
At the battle of Waterloo.
He was shot by a bullet,
Plump through the gullet.
It went in at his throat,
And came out at the back of his coat."

Being "slewed" in this way is a worse death than that of the Pennsylvania legislator, who came to his end, in the language of a colleague, by being "threw" from a horse.

The above is good, very good indeed, but nothing to compare with the beautiful epitaph written by John Ollipod, of Pennsylvania, on the death of his two infant children:

"Here lies my babes, so dead as nits,
Vot Got has killed mit ague fits;
He vould not let 'em stay mit me,
So he took 'em home to stay mit he."

The same gentleman wrote his own epitaph, which ran thus:

"Here lies the body of Shaun Ollipod,
Have mercy on his soul, O Got;
As he would do if he was Got,
And Got vas old Shaun Ollipod."

"You are the very person I wanted," said a lady at a ball to an officer of the Guards; "you must dance with Miss ——. Come, I'll introduce you to her."

"Excuse me, I am no dancer."

"Oh, but you can't refuse now. She is a very pretty girl, and has thirty thousand pounds."

"Why, really, I am not a marrying man myself—but, if your ladyship pleases, I'll mention her to our mess."

A party of bon-vivants who dined at a celebrated tavern, after having drank an immense quantity of wine, rang for the bill. The bill was accordingly brought, but the amount appeared so enormous to one of the company, (not quite so far gone as the rest) that he stammered out it was quite impossible so many bottles could have been drank by seven persons.

"True, sir," said Boniface, "but your honor forgets the three gentlemen under the table."

A cabin boy on board a ship, the Captain of which was a religious man, was called up to be whipped for some misdemeanor. Little Jack went trembling and crying, and said to the Captain, "Pray, sir, will you wait till I say my prayers before you whip me?"

"Yes," was the stern reply. "Well then," replied Jack, looking up and smiling triumphantly, "I'll never say 'em!"

"I see," said a young lady yesterday, "that some booksellers advertise blank declarations for sale. I wish I could get one."

"Why?" asked her mother.

"Because, Ma, Mr. G—— is too modest to ask me to marry him, and perhaps if I could fill a blank declaration with the 'question,' he would sign it."

"If women do snarl up a fellow's heart strings, they keep him out of other scrapes, anybody will tell you that. A man that is in love a leetle is not always a runnin' into rum holes, and other such places. He don't go gamblin' and sneakin' round nights."

A miserly old fellow has hit upon an experiment to save candles. He uses the "light of other days."

LOVE IN THE CLOUDS.

"And this is the fellow that wants to marry my daughter! A pretty fool I should be, to give Annie to a coward like him!" So shouted honest Master Joss, the sacristan of the cathedral of Vienna, as he stood in the public room of the "Adam and Eve" inn, and looked after the angry retreating figure of Master Ottkar, the head mason.

As he spoke, an honest young gardener, named Gabriel, entered, and for a moment the youth's handsome face flushed high, as he thought the sacristan's words were directed at him; for it was the old, old story. Gabriel and Annie had played together and loved each other before they knew the meaning of the word love; and when, a few months before, they had found it out, and Gabriel proposed to make Annie his wife, her father rejected him with scorn. The young gardener had little to offer besides an honest heart and a pair of industrious hands, while Master Ottkar, the mason, had both houses and money. To him, then, sorely against her will, was the pretty Annie promised; and poor Gabriel kept away from the sacristan's pleasant cottage, manfully endeavoring to root out his love, while exterminating the weeds in his garden. But somehow it happened, that although the docks and thistles withered and died, that other pertinacious plant, clinging and twining like the wild convolvulus, grew and flourished, nurtured, perchance, by an occasional distant glimpse of sweet Annie's pale cheek and drooping form.

So matters stood, when one day, as Gabriel was passing through a crowded street, a neighbor hailed him.

"Great news, my boy! glorious news! Our Leopold has been chosen Emperor at Frankfort. Long live the House of Austria! He is to make his triumphal entry here in a day or two. Come with me to the 'Adam and Eve,' and we will drink his health and hear all about it."

In spite of his dejection, Gabriel would have been no true son of Vienna if he had refused this invitation; and waving his cap in sympathy with his comrade's enthusiasm, he hastened with him to the inn.

We have already seen how the unexpected appearance and more unexpected words of Master Joss met him on this occasion. In the height of his indignation, the sacristan did not observe Gabriel, and continued in the same tone:

"I declare, I'd give this moment full and free permission to woo and win my daughter to any honest young fellow who would wave the banner in my stead—ay, and think her well rid of that cowardly mason."

From time immemorial, it had been the custom in Vienna, whenever the Emperor made a triumphal entry, for the sacristan of the cathedral to stand on the very pinnacle of the highest tower, and wave a banner while the procession passed. But Master Joss was old, stiff, and rheumatic, and such an exploit would have been quite as much out of his line as dancing on a tight rope. It was therefore needful for him to provide a substitute; and it never occurred to him that his intended son-in-law, who professed such devotion to his interests, and whose daily occupation obliged him to climb dizzy heights, and stand on slender scaffolding, could possibly object to take his place.

What, then, was his chagrin and indignation, when, on broaching the matter that afternoon to Master Ottkar, he was met by a flat and not over courteous refusal! The old man made a hasty retort: words ran high, and the parting volley, levelled at the retreating mason, we have already reported.

"Would you, dear Master Joss, would you indeed do so? Then, with the help of Providence, I'll wave the banner for you as long as you please from the top of St. Stephen's tower."

"You, Gabriel!" said the old man, looking at him as kindly as he was wont to do in former days. "My poor boy! you never could do it; you, a gardener, who never had any practice in climbing."

"Ah, now you want to draw back from your word!" exclaimed the youth, reddening. "My head is steady enough; and if my heart is heavy, why, it was you who made it so. Never mind, Master Joss. Only promise me, on the word of an honest man, that you'll not interfere any more with Annie's free choice, and you may depend on seeing the banner of our Emperor, whom may Heaven long preserve, wave gloriously on the old pinnacle."

"I will, my brave lad; I do promise, in the presence of all these honest folks, that Annie shall be yours!"

"One thing I have to ask you," said the young man, "that you will keep this matter a secret from Annie. She'd never consent; she'd say I was tempting Providence; and who knows whether the thought of her displeasure might not make my head turn giddy, just when I want to be the most firm and collected."

"No fear of her knowing it, for I have sent her on a visit to her aunt, two or three miles in the country."

"And why did you send her from home, Master Joss?"

"Because the sight of her pale face and weeping eyes troubled me; because I was vexed with her; because, to tell the truth, I was vexed with myself. Gabriel, I was a hard-hearted old fool; I see it now. And I was very near destroying the happiness of my only remaining child; for my poor boy Arnold, your friend and school-fellow, Gabriel, has been for many years in foreign parts, and we don't know what has become of him. But now, please God, Annie at least will be happy, and you shall marry her as soon after the day of the procession as you and she may please. There's my hand on it."

There was not a happier man that evening within the precincts of Vienna than Gabriel, the gardener, although he well knew that he was attempting a most perilous enterprise, and one as likely as not to result in his death. He made all necessary arrangements in case of that event, especially in reference to the comfort of an only sister, who lived with him, and whom he was careful to keep in ignorance of his intended venture. This done, he resigned himself to dream all night of tumbling from terrific heights, and all day of his approaching happiness. Meanwhile, Ottkar swallowed his chagrin as best he might, and kept aloof from Master Joss; but he might have been seen holding frequent and sacred communication with Lawrence, a man who assisted the sacristan in the care of the church.

The day of the young Emperor's triumphal entry arrived. He was not expected to reach Vienna before evening; and at the appointed hour the sacristan embraced Gabriel, and, giving him the banner of the House of Austria, gorgeously embroidered, said: "Now, my boy, up in God's name! Follow Lawrence; he'll guide you safely to the top of the spire, and afterwards assist you in coming down."

Five hundred and fifty steps to the top of the tower! Mere child's play; the gardener flew up them with a joyous step. Then came two hundred wooden steps over the clock tower and belfry; then five steep ladders up the narrow pinnacle. Courage! A few more bold steps—half an hour of peril—then triumph, reward, the priest's blessing, and the joyful "Yes!" before the altar. Ah, how weary was the banner to drag upwards! how dark the straight, stony shaft! Hold! there is the trap-door. Lawrence, and the assistant who accompanied him, pushed Gabriel through.

"That's it!" cried Lawrence; "you'll see the iron steps and the clamps to hold on by outside; only keep your head steady. When 'tis your time to come down, hail us, and we'll throw you a rope ladder, with hooks. Farewell!" And as he said these words, Gabriel had passed through the trap-door, and, with feet and hands clinging to the slender iron projections, felt himself hanging over a tremendous precipice, while the cold evening breeze ruffled his hair. He had still, burdened as he was with the banner, to steady himself on a part of the spire sculptured in the similitude of a rose, and then, after two or three steps still higher, to bestride the very pinnacle, and wave his gay, gold flag.

"May God be merciful to me!" sighed the poor lad, as glancing downward to the busy street, lying so far beneath, the whole extent of his danger flashed upon him. He felt so lonely, so utterly forsaken, in that desert of the upper air, and the cruel wind strove with him, and struggled to wrest the heavy banner from his hand. "Annie, Annie, 'tis for thee!" he murmured; and the sound of that sweet name nerved him to endurance. He wound his left arm firmly round the iron bar which supported the golden star, surmounted by a crescent, that served as a weathercock, and with the right waved the flag, which flapped and rustled like the wing of some mighty bird of prey. The sky—how near it seemed!—grew dark above his head, and the lights and bonfires glanced upwards from the great city below. But the cries of rejoicing came faintly on his ear, until one long-continued shout, mingled with sounds of drums and trumpets, announced the approach of Leopold.

"Huzza! huzza! long live the Emperor!" shouted Gabriel, and waved his banner proudly. But the deepening twilight and the dizzy height rendered him unseen and unheard by the busy crowd below.

The deep voice of the cathedral clock tolled the hour.

"Now my task is ended," said Gabriel, drawing a sigh of relief, and shivering in the chilly breeze. "Now, I have only to get down and give the signal."

More heedfully and slowly than he had ascended, he began his descent. Only once he looked upward to the golden star and crescent, now beginning to look colorless against the dark sky.

"Ha!" said he, "doesn't it look now as if that heathenish Turk of a crescent were nodding, and wishing me an evil good night? Be quiet, Mohammed!"

A few courageous steps landed him once more amid the petals of the gigantic sculptured rose, which offered the best, indeed the only, coigne of vantage for his feet to rest on.

He furled his banner tightly together, and shouted: "Hallo! Lawrence! Albert! here! throw me up the ladder and hooks."

No answer.

More loudly and shrilly did Gabriel reiterate the call.

Not a word, not a stir below.

"Holy Virgin! Can they have forgotten me? or have they fallen asleep?" cried the poor fellow aloud; and the sighing wind seemed to answer like a mocking demon.

"What shall I do! What will become of me?"

Now, enveloped in darkness, he dared not stir one hair's breadth to the right or the left. A painful sensation of tightness came across his chest, and his soul grew bitter within him.

"They have left me here of set purpose," he muttered through his clenched teeth. "The torches below will shine on my crushed body."

Then, after a moment:

"No, no; the sacristan could not find it in his heart; men born of women could not do it. They will come, they must come!"

But when they did not come, and the pitiless darkness thickened around him, so that he could not see his hand, his death anguish grew to the pitch of insanity.

"God!" he cried, "the Emperor will not suffer such barbarity. Noble Leopold, help! One word from you would save me."

But the cold night wind, blowing ominously around the tower, seemed to answer;

"Here I alone am Emperor, and this is my domain."

While this was passing, two men stood conversing together at the corner of a dark street, aloof from the rejoicing crowd.

"Haven't I managed it well?" asked one.

"Yes; he'll never reach the ground alive, unless the sacristan"——

"Oh, no; the old man is too busy with his son, who came home unexpectedly an hour ago. He'll never think of that fool, Gabriel, until"——

"Until it is too late. How did you get rid of Albert?"

"By telling him that Master Joss had undertaken to go himself, and fetch the gardener down. The trap-door is fast, and no one within call. But I think, Master Ottkar, you and I may as well keep out of the way till the fellow has dropped down, like a ripe apple from the stem."

And so the two villains took their way down a narrow street, and appeared no more that night.

Meantime, a dark shadowy fiend sat on one of the leaves of the sculptured rose, and hissed in Gabriel's ear: "Renounce thy salvation, and I will bring thee down in safety."

"May God preserve me from such sin," cried the poor lad, shuddering.

"Or only promise to give me your Annie, and I'll save you."

"Will you hold your tongue, you wicked spirit?"

"Or, just say that you'll make me a present of your first-born child, and I'll bear you away as softly as if you were floating on down."

"Avaunt, Satan! I'll have nothing to do with gentlemen who wear horns and a tail!" cried Gabriel, manfully.

The clock tolled again, and the gardener, aroused by the sound and vibration, perceived that he had been asleep. Yes, he had actually slumbered, standing on that dizzy point, suspended over that fearful abyss.

"Am I really here?" he asked himself, as he awoke; "or is it a frightful dream, that I have had while lying in my bed?"

A cold shudder passed through his frame, followed by a burning heat, and he grasped the pinnacle with a convulsive tightness. A voice seemed to whisper in his ear:

"Fool! this is death; that unknown anguish which no man shall escape. Anticipate the moment, and throw thyself down."

"Must I then die?" murmured Gabriel, while the cold sweat started from his brow. "Must I die while life is so pleasant? O, Annie, Annie! pray for me; the world is so beautiful, and life is so sweet."

Then it seemed as if soft white wings floated above and around him, while a gentle voice whispered:

"Awake, awake! The night is far spent, the day is at hand. Look up, and be comforted."

Wrapped in the banner, whose weight helped to preserve his equilibrium, Gabriel still held on with his numbed arm, and with a sensation almost of joy watched the first dawn lightning up the roof of the city.

Far below, in the sacristan's dwelling, the old man sat fondly clasping the hand of a handsome sunburnt youth, his long lost son Arnold, who had sat by his side the live-long night, recounting the adventures which had befallen him in foreign lands, without either father or son feeling the want of sleep. At length Arnold said:

"I am longing to see Annie, father. I dare say she has grown a fine girl. How is my friend Gabriel, who used to be so fond of her when we were all children together?"

The sacristan sprang from his seat.

"Gabriel! Holy Virgin! I had forgotten him."

A rapid explanation followed. Master Joss and his son hastened towards the cathedral, and met Albert on their way.

"Where is Gabriel?" cried the sacristan.

"I don't know; I have not seen him since he climbed through the trap-door."

"But who helped him down?"

"Why, you yourself, of course," replied Albert, with a look of astonishment, "Lawrence told me, when we came down, that you had undertaken to do it."

"Oh, the villains! the double-dyed scoundrels! Now I understand it all," groaned the old man. "Quick! Arnold! Albert! Come, for the love of God; look up to the spire."

Arnold rushed to the square, and his keen eye, accustomed to look out at great distances at sea, discerned through the gray, uncertain morning twilight something fluttering on the spire.

"'Tis he! It must be he, still living."

"O, God!" cried Master Joss, "where are my keys? O, that we may not be too late!"

The keys were found in the old man's pocket; and all three, rushing through the cathedral gate, darted up the stairs, the sacristan, in the dread excitement of the moment, moving as swiftly as his young companions.

Albert, knowing the trick of the trap-door, went through it first.

"Call out to him, lad!" exclaimed Master Joss. A breathless pause.

"I hear nothing stirring," said Albert, "nor can I see anything from this. I'll climb over the rose."

Bravely did he surmount the perilous projection; and, after a few moments of intense anxiety, he reappeared at the trap-door.

"There certainly is a figure standing on the rose, but 'tisn't Gabriel; 'tis a ghost."

"A ghost! you dreaming dunderhead!" shouted Arnold. "Let me up."

And he began to climb with the agility of a cat. Presently he called out.

"Come on, come on, as far as you can. I have him, thank God! But quick! time is precious."

Speedily and deftly they gave him aid; and at length a half-unconscious figure, still wrapped in the banner, was brought down in safety.

They bore him into the "Adam and Eve," laid him in a warm bed, and poured by degrees a little wine down his throat. Under this treatment, he soon recovered his consciousness, and began to thank his deliverers. Suddenly his eye fell on a mirror hanging on the wall opposite the bed, and he exclaimed:

"Wipe the hoar frost off my hair, and that yellow dust off my cheeks."

In truth, his curled locks were white, his rosy cheeks yellow and wrinkled, and his bright eyes dim and sunken; but neither dust nor hoar frost was there to wipe away; that one night of horror had added forty years to his age.

In the course of that day, numbers who had heard of Gabriel's adventure crowded to the inn and sought to see him, but none were admitted save the three who sat continually by his bedside, his weeping young sister, the brave Arnold, and Master Joss, the most unhappy of all; for his conscience ceased not to say, in a voice that would be heard:

"You alone are the cause of all this."

By way of a little self-comfort, the sacristan used to exclaim, at intervals:

"If I only had hold of that Lawrence! If I once had that Ottkar by the throat!"

But both worthies kept carefully out of sight; nor were they ever again seen in the fair city of Vienna.

"Ah!" said Gabriel, towards evening, "'tis all over between me and Annie. She would shudder at the sight of an old, wrinkled, gray-haired fellow like me."

No one answered. His sister hid her face on the pillow, while her bright ringlets mingled with his poor gray locks; and Arnold's handsome face grew very sad as he thought:

"The poor fellow is right; there are few things that young girls dislike more than gray hairs and yellow wrinkles."

"I have one request to make of you all, dear friends," said Gabriel, painfully, raising himself on his couch; "do not let Annie know a word of this. Write to her that I am dead, and she'll mind it less, I think; then I'll go into the forest, and let the wolves eat me, if they will. I want to save her from pain."

"A fine way, indeed, to save Annie from pain!" cried a well-known voice, while a light figure rushed towards the bed, and clasped the poor sufferer in a close and long embrace. "My own true love! You were never more beautiful in my eyes than now. And pretend that you were dead! A likely story, while every child in Vienna is talking of nothing but my poor boy's adventure. And let yourself be eaten by wolves! No, no, Gabriel; you wouldn't treat your poor Annie so cruelly as that!"

A regular hail-storm of kisses followed; and it is said—how truly I know not—that somehow, in the general melee, Arnold's lips came into wonderfully close contact with the rosy ones of Gabriel's little sister. Certainly he was heard the next day to whisper into his friend's ear:

"A fair exchange is no robbery, my boy; I think, if you take my sister, the least you can do is to give me yours."

It does not seem that any objection was made in any quarter. Love and hope proved wonderful physicians; for, though his hair to the end of his life remained as white as snow, his cheeks and eyes, ere the wedding-day arrived, had resumed their former brightness. A happy man was Master Joss on the day he gave his blessing to the two young couples—the day when Gabriel's sore-tried love found its reward in the hand of his Annie.

Keep a Sharp Lookout.

It is always an important point in navigating a vessel to keep a good lookout.

So it is with all our domestic affairs, lest we make shipwreck of ourselves. We must not sleep on our watch, but keep a vigilant eye to windward. Always be on the lookout. Don't be caught napping. Don't omit the opportunity of turning an honest penny if you can.

When your horse has been stolen, you should lock the stable door, and lookout.

When you hear the bells ring for fire in the night, and the wall begins to feel hot at your side, get up and lookout.

When you find that your pocket-book, which contained a large sum of money, (never our case) has suddenly become an abstraction, then lookout.

When you see a beautiful lady pass by your window, then lookout.

When a pretty lady is looking out for you, then lookout.

When you have the promise of a sum of money and the promissor does not make his appearance at the time appointed, then lookout.

When you are taking a ride in a railroad car, and are told to "lookout!" lookout of course, but keep your head in!

When a stranger offers to sell you an article for half its value, lookout.

When a note becomes due, and you don't happen to have the necessary funds to meet it, then lookout.

When somebody comes along by your room whom you don't want particularly to see, it is very natural that you should see something in the street to attract your attention, and that you should lookout.

When a young lady has "turned the first corner," and sees no connubial prospect ahead, it is natural that she should lookout.

When you find a man doing more business than you are, and you are puzzled to know the reason, just look at the numerous advertisements he has in the newspapers, and lookout.

Lookout for rain when the almanac tells you to, and if it don't come, why, you can keep looking out.

Lookout for fun at the coming Christmas and New Year holidays, and if you don't find it, why, still keep on the lookout.

Lookout for number one, most especially, upon all occasions, and when convenient, lookout for your neighbor, for a man sometimes saves his own neck by being upon the lookout for another.

Laconics.

You may as well sit down by a corpse, and ask it to chat with you, as solicit a kindness from a niggardly man.

The grace of independence, like that of beauty, is much enhanced by occasion.

Instruction without plain-dealing is like a world without a sun.

A man may wear a sound constitution under a soiled coat, and be truly independent in low fortune.

Many people keep a stock of compliments, like a pack of harriers, to catch the unsuspecting.

A wolf strongly resembles a dog, and a flatterer a friend, but their designs are very dissimilar.

Flattery is like armor of needle-work—pleasant to wear, but of no avail for defence.

The wealth of a miser, like the sun when it has sunk below the horizon, cheers no living creature.

Fortune in a miser's possession is like a banquet furnished for the dead—nothing is wanting but a guest to enjoy it.

Ineffectual plain-dealing is no more worth wearing than a pointless sword.

When Alcibiades, on occasion of some festival at Athens, sent rather ostentatiously a multitude of presents to Socrates, and Xantippe, dazzled by the display, was urgent with her husband to accept them, "No," said he; "we will meet Alcibiades on equal ground, and show as much spirit in refusing his gifts as he in offering them."

Michael Angelo, it is well known, in his picture of the Last Judgment, located in the infernal regions a cardinal against whom he had a pique, to the infinite horror of his eminence, who complained of the outrage to the Pope.

"Is it in purgatory or hell that you are put?" asked the latter

"In hell," replied the other.

"I'm sorry for it," said the pontiff, laughing, "for I can do nothing for you there, and I am afraid you will have to remain,"—and remain he did, for his countenance is still visible in the lurid glare in which it is painted.

Palma Vecchio, also, in a picture upon the same subject, in the doge's palace, at Venice, took a similar method of revenging himself upon a fickle lady by whom he was jilted. He painted her, in the first place, among the elect, but before he finished the picture she proved faithless, on which he placed her also among the wretches who are plunging into perdition; but as he somehow or other gave her a prettier face in the last than in the first situation, the flirt was probably not at all chagrined or put out of countenance at the proceeding of her quondam lover.

Al Hejaj, who governed Irac more than twenty years, was equally remarkable for his cruelty and love of wit. He one day met a strange Arab, and asked him,

"What sort of a man is this Al Hejaj, of whom people talk so much?"

"He is a great scoundrel," replied the Arab.

"Do you know me?" asked the irritated governor.

"No," said the stranger.

"I am," he said, "that Al Hejaj of whom you give so bad a character."

"Well, do you know me?" asked the Arab in turn.

"No," was the reply.

"I am," said he, "a member of the family of Zoheir, whose posterity all become mad three days in the year, and this is one of them."

Al Hejaj freely pardoned the insult.

A negro tumbled out of a window in New Orleans, upon the pavement, thereby upsetting a gentleman who was passing by. Cuffe got up unhurt, and, turning to the gentleman, said, "I hope you'll excuse dis child dis time; I's not in de habit of it, I 'sure you I isn't. De fack is, I was fass asleep dreamin' dat a big 'skeeter was bitin' me. I went to fotch him a wipe, and loss de balance, and down I'se cum; and dat's de way my fall rose."

A Yorkshire lad who had lately gone to service, having had salad served up for dinner every day for a week, ran away, and when asked why he left his place, he replied:—"They made me yeat grass i'th summer, and I wur afraid they'd make me yeat hay i'th winter—and I could n't stand that, so I wur off."

Envy is like a sore eye, inflamed by everything brilliant or dazzling.

STEILACOOM, W. T., FRIDAY, OCT. 14, 1859.

THE ADMINISTRATION IN UTAH.

The peace established in Utah by Mr. Buchanan discloses more of its interesting features as time wears on. Every day something transpires to increase our admiration of the skill and dexterity by which the Mormons have been reduced to subjection. We recur thus often to the subject because we are daily more and more convinced that it is on the Utah pacification that the greater portion of Mr. Buchanan's fame as a President will hereafter rest. Already have the journals in his interest given him the credit of settling the Mormon question, and filed it away to bring out on convenient occasions in future. Not long since we saw it paraded in his party prints as one of the crowning measures consummated by his administration, with how much honesty is well known. We observe that these same journals are careful to avoid giving publicity to events transpiring in Utah.

James Buchanan has done many other things sufficiently remarkable, but there is nothing which brings out the strong points in his capacity so clearly as his Mormon policy. In the outset, the Mormons are charged with high treason, and anon with all the crimes in the calendar; all of which are removed with a single application of whitewash. None of the achievements of this administration can be compared, for variety of incident, fertility of resources, dexterity in diplomacy, valor in war, and general "cuteness," to the reduction of Utah to submission. In the first place, a Peace Commission and an expeditionary army were set to work at one and the same time. No great general or statesman has until now succeeded in fighting and negotiating both together, without damaging his efforts either in the one direction or the other. All the great heroes celebrated in history were barely able to achieve celebrity by devoting their whole minds to one thing at a time—by dropping the pen when they grasped the sword, or flinging away the sword when they took up the pen. Mr. Buchanan has furnished the first exception to the rule. He demolished Brigham Young by plying him with rhetoric and bayonets simultaneously. He fought him, reasoned with him, and pardoned him at the same moment.

Since the arrival of the United States functionaries in Utah, the President has added fresh lustre to his exploit by setting all the authorities by the ears, without doing any apparent damage to anybody. The judges have denounced the Executive, and the Executive the judges, and the General in command of the troops has gotten foul of the civil power, without the Territory suffering any apparent inconvenience therefrom what ever, and apparently to everybody's edification. In short, in the space of two years our venerable President has subjected our system of Government to every conceivable kind of test, and with the greatest success. Nothing has given way, and we jog on as smoothly and comfortably as if there were no such persons as James Buchanan and Brigham Young in the world.

To make the whole performance complete, but one thing was wanting, and that was, that the President should enable some of his friends to "make a good thing" out of it. Without this, it would seem grand, no doubt; but so grand, so far removed from the range of ordinary abilities, as hardly to command our full sympathy. The work wanted, in short, a human side to it—if we may so speak, a "touch of nature." Even this, we are glad to say, has at last been duly supplied. The great war and great peace, the march, the submission, the amnesty, have very appropriately ended in a gigantic swindling job.

The Government officers in Utah cannot, of course, live on mere glory. Flour is also necessary; and this the firm of Gilbert, Gerrish & Martin, of Salt Lake City, offered to furnish on the spot for the moderate sum of $10 per hundred. To have accepted this might possibly have been simple honesty, simple justice to the patient public; but it would have savored too much of huckstering economy for lofty minds like those of the Buchanite Cabinet to entertain it for a moment. To come down to the lowest bid of the subjugated Brigham Young, the Prophet, would have been a very lame and impotent conclusion. So they coolly gave the contract, afterwards, at $28.60 per hundred, to somebody named Holliday, as may be readily imagined, one of their mortal enemies. It is thus that the most bitter enemies of our government and our people are rewarded for the highest crimes known to our laws, and a powerful community of robbers and cutthroats fostered on the highway to murder emigrants. There never was a time when economists and calculators were of less account than at this moment in the government of the United States.

SWORN IN.—Mr. John Duane, late of San Francisco, and brother of Charles P. Duane, exiled by the Vigilance Committee in 1856, was sworn as Deputy Sheriff of this county, on Wednesday last. John Duane is a mason by trade, and for some months past has been employed at his trade in Steilacoom. He enjoys, and, for his conduct, well merits, the respect and esteem of all who have made his acquaintance here. We are pleased to learn that, so great is the demand for his services, his business engagements extend through the whole of the coming winter; and, when spring again arrives, he will find that he has no idle time on his hands. He may therefore be considered permanently located amongst us.

SEYBEC.—A friend wrote to us as follows, a few days since, respecting this place:—"Seybec is now exhibiting unmistakable signs of growing greatness. The mill is in course of enlargement to nearly double its former capacity, in order to meet the demands for foreign trade. We know of no company, on Puget Sound or elsewhere, more deserving of success than the Seybec company. While all the elements of business prosperity are combined in Capt. Blum's sagacity and gentlemanly courtesy, Mr. Williamson has no superior in the practical management of the mill. Messrs. Sinclair and Hammond, the junior partners, are practical loggers. Thus every department of the business is attended to by interested parties; hence the success which they so richly deserve."

THE HOG NUISANCE.—Hogs are rapidly on the increase in town, tearing gates off their hinges, breeding fleas, and otherwise annoying people. We notice that the owners don't harbor them on their own premises, but drive them out to destroy the property of their neighbors. Is there no protection in our local laws from this nuisance? Can't we have a pound and pound master to look after them? In the absence of legal protection, people are justified in killing them as often as they can catch them on their premises; for we think one class of people have no right to afflict another class with an evil like this without a remedy.

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF KNIGHTHOOD—An effort is being made in Steilacoom, with a promise of much success, to establish a lodge or branch of the above order here. Mr. Rice, a gentleman from Oregon, called a meeting on Wednesday evening for that purpose, at which several signified their willingness to become members. Owing to the inclemency of the weather, the attendance was very small, and a second meeting was called for Thursday evening. Next week we hope to announce its organization.

THE WEATHER.—The rainy season has set in, in earnest. During the past week we have had a succession of heavy showers, accompanied with high winds. In no single week during the last winter, perhaps, did so much rain fall as in the last week. Yesterday morning, however, after an unusually heavy rain on the previous night, we were gladdened by the sight of three beautiful rainbows, following each other in quick succession. There is at present no indication of a cessation of the rain.

ARREST OF A GUARD.—On Friday evening, 14th inst., says the Portland Advertiser, Marshal Lappeus succeeded, after a lengthy chase, in arresting a man named Shean, a deserter from Lt. Shaaff's company, (C) 4th Infantry, U. S. A. Shean has been about three years "absent from duty," during a portion of which time he has been acting as guard over the convicts, for Messrs. Coffin & Pentland, and was engaged in this duty when first arrested.

CAPT. A. B. GOVE, late master of the steamer Constitution, returned to this place last week in command of the barque Glimpse, in which vessel he purchased the interest lately held by Capt. Dayton. The Glimpse is a large first-class barque, and a vessel to be proud of. Under Capt. Gove, she cannot fail to become a universal favorite. Our best wishes are with the gallant Captain and his fine craft.

THE TIGHT-ROPE MANIA.—M. Blondin's success, in making his tight-rope exhibitions at Niagara pay, has brought out a number of imitators, whom we find stretching ropes over other rivers. One unfortunate imitator, in his first attempt, tumbled into the river over which he was walking, several have been maimed, and two spectators at Niagara were instantly killed by a fall while witnessing the performance.

THANK YOU, Mr. Gallagher, for that beautiful cauliflower; the largest, we believe, we have ever seen. Also you, Mr. Philip Keach, for that load of vegetables from your garden. You are determined we shall not starve.

A letter from Brescia speaks of the large number of Hungarians deserting from Verona and Mantua, and says "they have decided to emigrate to America rather than trust to any amnesty which Austria can grant."

It is charged that Brigham Young knew all the while that the recently detected counterfeiting of United States checks was going on inside of his premises, and of this there seems to be but little doubt.

Daniel E. Sickles has been expelled from the Sons of Malta on the charge of killing Key, who was an officer of the Washington Lodge.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

On Thursday night, says a telegraphic dispatch dated Louisville, Aug. 24th, Jesse Williams, an old and wealthy citizen of Caldwell County, under guard at Princeton, charged with murder, and stealing, and cruelty to his slaves, was taken from the jail, carried 7 miles and hung. His two sons, John and James, guilty of numerous crimes, escaped death by absconding. About the same time, Dr. Singleton and Messrs. Mansfield, Morse and Strawmat, supposed to have been connected with Williams and his villanies, were severely punished and ordered to leave the county.

The captain of the night watch, on a New York railroad, happening to be at the railroad depot, was applied to by a man named Harper, to rescue his children from the custody of a man who had kidnapped them under the pretence that Harper owed him money, for which reason he had seized the children. Capt. Keiser went into the cars, asked the children if they wished to accompany Harper, to which they replied that they did, and that he was their father. Thereupon the officer delivered them to their father, in spite of the boisterous threats of the abductor.

A few nights ago, after J. Harper and family, of the Temperance Hotel, Orton, had retired to rest, they were much startled by something rustling among the bed-clothes, and which after a while bit Mrs. Harper's elbow. Mr. Harper, alarmed by his wife's cry of pain, got up and procured a light to see what the strange visitor could be, when to his surprise, it turned out to be a large hedge-hog, which jumped off the bed and took refuge under a chest of drawers. How the animal got up stairs and into the room is a mystery.

The Treasurer of the New York State Colonization Society acknowledges the receipt of $25,000, being a donation from a friend, towards a College endowment in Africa.

A bull recently undertood to dispute the passage of a train of cars on a Pennsylvania railroad, and succeeded in butting off the track, and over an embankment, a locomotive, tender, and four freight cars. He used up the locomotive, and annihilated himself by the shock.

Within the limits of New York and King's counties, there are 402 churches, seating comfortably 335,000 persons. The aggregate salaries of the pastors of these churches amount to $620,000, or an average of about $1,759 per annum each.

An extensive fire recently occurred at New Bedford, destroying many thousand barrels of oil, and illuminating the country hundreds of miles.

John Sibley, of Cedar Hill, N. Y., accidentally killed himself in a very singular manner on the 26th Aug. While in the act of peeling some fruit with a knife, he passed through a gate, which, in closing, struck his elbow with such force as to drive the knife to the hilt into his heart.

Hailstones measuring six inches in length and four in breadth fell in Pennsylvania on the 27th August, killing poultry and severely wounding large animals.

A number of Mormons have arrived in Missouri, who declare themselves surfeited with the good things of Salt Lake. They report that four or five thousand apostate "Saints" will leave Mormondom this fall.

The State of South Carolina is now taking a census, and in seventeen parishes there is a decrease of over 5,000 whites since 1855, while the blacks have largely increased.

Capt. John Doughty was washed from the deck of his sloop five miles at sea, and only escaped drowning after being eight hours in the water and swimming fifteen miles.

Steam is used in Maryland to thresh wheat. With the machinery in use, it is said that thirty men will thresh and fan from six to eight hundred bushels a day.

The United States has commenced a suit for $150,000, against R. M. Corwine, J. M. Corwine, and Wm. Wiswell, of Cincinnati, for failing to fulfil contract for opening a ship-channel from the Mississippi to the Gulf of Mexico.

At a popular eating house in New York, during the year ending July 1st, 1859, the following, among other articles, were consumed; beef, 148,504 pounds; butter, 16,915 pounds; bread, 29,963 loaves; milk, 55,085 quarts; potatoes, 2,132 bushels.

Hood says that the phrase "republic of letters" was hit upon to signify that, taking the whole lot of authors together, they had not a sovereign amongst them.

A Philadelphia paper publishes an account of a dog saving his master's life by violently waking him just in time to escape a rapidly spreading conflagration.

The surviving children of the Mountain Meadows massacre, to the number of fifteen, reached Leavenworth on the 25th of August.

The people of the frontier towns of Kansas have been thrown into a state of great alarm by the sudden appearance of 5000 Kaw, Osage and Camanche Indians, who threaten to kill off the whites. At last accounts, they were daily expecting to be attacked.

A Yankee schoolmaster, named Comstock, turned a drove of cattle into the corn field of a farmer in Dubuque, Iowa, and, during the confusion which this act created in the family, ran away with the farmer's daughter and married her.

A young man in Ohio was afflicted with a "roaring noise in the head," which, on examination, was found to proceed from worms in the ear. Ninety-two of the troublesome tenants were removed with a surgical instrument, which gave entire relief.

The upper Mississippi was visited by a terrible tornado last month, which blew down and injured houses, twisted up large trees, and destroyed all the standing crops in portions of Minnesota. In one town it lifted a large frame house from the ground, and moved it bodily several yards; and on the prairies it was so strong as to raise from the ground horses, men and vehicles, and carry them considerable distances in the air.

It was rumored in Philadelphia, on the 30th August, that the United States frigate Congress was lost, with all on board.

The widow of the tale Gen. Quitman died on the 22d Aug.

An editor of a Virginia paper was shot by a candidate for Congress in that State, owing to a political misunderstanding.

Major A. J. Donelson died recently in Louisiana, of erysipelas. Mr. Donelson was formerly the private Secretary of President Jackson, and editor of the Washington Globe. In 1856 he was candidate of the American party for Vice President. He removed from Tennessee to Louisiana a few years since.

Rev. W. W. Allen, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Keokuk, Iowa, was excommunicated on the 11th September, by a council of Baptist clergymen from different parts of the country. The charge against him was that he was an advocate of "open communion," and had acted on his views by partaking of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper in another church, with persons who had not been immersed.

The Newark Daily Advertiser lately received a visit from Mr. Jonathan Shotwell, senior, to pay his subscription to the Daily Advertiser. Mr. S. is over 80 years old, and in the possession of all his faculties, and enjoying more than ordinary health at that age. Mr. S.'s father was born 140 years since, (1719) 13 years before the birth of Washington, and Mr. S. was born when his father was nearly 60 years old. Such instances of only two generations comprising so long a period are extremely rare.

A hop yard near Cooperstown, covering 3½ acres, was struck by lightning in July last, and totally destroyed. The hop vines were suspended on wires, which attracted the lightning.

Among the unpublished manuscripts of the late and much lamented Dr. Wm. A. Alcott, was one bearing the following unique and suggestive title: "Forty Years in the Wilderness of Pills and Powders, or the Cogitations and Confessions of an Aged Physician." It is now in press and will soon be issued.

The city of Buffalo has been invaded by an army of grasshoppers, which quartered themselves upon the inhabitants, destroying their sustenance; invading, unbidden, both stores and dwellings, and forcing their unwelcome presence into the most private recesses of families.

It is estimated that Canada will have, at present prices, a surplus of ten millions of dollars worth of wheat, oats, rye, barley, Indian corn, peas and flour for export, this season. In addition to this there will be fifteen millions of dollars worth of lumber, and fish worth a million and a quarter.

Pleasant Burnet, of Mecklenburg county, Va., recently manumitted twenty-one slaves, who have been removed to lands selected for them in Ohio.

A rattlesnake measuring 7 feet 2 inches in length, 5 inches in thickness, and 15 inches in circumference at the largest part, had 11 rattles and a button, and probably nearly 12 years of age, was killed with a shot gun by Mr. Samuel Rowell, in Brunswick county, N. C., a few weeks since.

A boy, seventeen years of age, committed suicide in Norwalk, Conn., by shooting himself with a pistol. The reason assigned was anger at the rebukes of his parents, for improprieties of conduct.

A man named Archibald Campbell, in Canada West, while engaged in finishing a new dwelling on his premises, was precipitated head foremost to the ground, and dislocated his neck; but which did not kill him. When his head was brought to its proper position, the vertebræ of the neck returned to their place with a dull but distinct snap. The whole body is paralyzed and dead from the neck downwards: thus exhibiting the remarkable fact of a living head on a dead body.

Mrs. Betsey Danforth, of Franklin, N. H., disappeared on the 24th July, and was found again, alive, in a slough hole, on the 19th Aug., an interval of twenty-six days, during which she subsisted on water alone. She is seventy-four years old, and partially insane.

A second visitation of frost in summer has been inflicted on the Atlantic States.

A Newcastle (Eng.) paper says that a well-known banker lately observed that several of his clerks had adorned themselves with moustaches. He called into his private room all the moustached, and said, "Gentlemen, I have no wish to interfere with your private amusements or hobbies, but I must insist upon the moustaches being off in business hours. After 5 P. M. indulge your hobbies, if you choose."

There is a remarkable spring 280 miles East of El Paso, on the road leading to San Antonio. It is fully 150 feet in diameter, and has been sounded to the depth of 8000 feet without finding bottom. It is slightly impregnated with alkali, and contains five varieties of fish. It is called the Leon Hole.

Gov. Wise has granted a pardon to Robt. Brestow, the young man who killed a schoolmaster named Gogerty, in Centreville, King and Queen county, about a year ago. Governor Wise maintains, it is reported, that shooting Whigs and schoolmasters is a pardonable offence.

SAN JUAN GAINED.

Dialogue between Gen. Harney and Jemmy Douglas; or how they settled the Bellevue question by a slight passage at arms.

BY OUR SPECIAL REPORTER, CORPORAL FINNIGAN, ESQ.

"Ah, General Harney, you're na the man to fight,
On me you stole a march and took San Juan at night;
But you dinna ken, my nann, how soon the Highland clan
Will land their Scottish kilts, and thrash you to a man."
"Jemmy, my boy, by Jove you make me laugh;
I'm too old a bird to cool me now with chaff.
If you want a muss, just say the word, my boy,
And in a crack I'll black your British eye."
Both of these heroes, standing six-feet-two or more,
Eyed each other with angry looks, and swore
They'd settle the question about that spot, Bellevue:
They stripped, and at it both these worthies flew.
In peeling off, Jemmy Douglas look'd fat and round.
He gave three hops, and in the ring did bound;
With colors flying, he bravely took his stand,
Advanced, then stood to shake his foeman's hand.
The General, now, who all the while stood still,
Was cock'd and primed, just waiting for the 'mill,'
With brawny arms and well develop'd chest,
Shook Jemmy's paw and told him do his best.
Now they look'd at each other with a thousand eyes,
Each muscle set, contending for the prize;
With heads well cropp'd, they sparr'd with ease and skill,
Each doing his best, and fighting with a will.
The General's dangerous left he tried to put in snug,
But Jemmy countered handsomely upon the General's mug.
The General got his dander up and mashed in Jemmy's crown,
Who staggered and fell against the ropes, and lost the first knock down.
As time was call'd, each man was tired, for both did blow and put,
And Jemmy look'd as badly whipp'd as though he'd had enough.
He quickly napp'd a sun-lier right upon the snout,
Drew the first blood upon the ground and made the claret spout.
Both came up to the scratch, as time again was called;
They closed, and 'fibbed' and 'fibbed' away till Jemmy loudly bawled;
You could hear him at a distance, a mile, I think, or two,
With every punch, "Alas!" he'd shout, "let up; I're lost Bellevue.
Ah, Laird," quoth Jemmy Douglas, "I canna fight na mair,
Ah, do let up upon my ribs, and my poor body spare;
My head is like a pumpkin squash, and all my teeth are out;
If you strike another lick again, oh! murder, how I'll shout!"
So here the matter ended: Harney has won the fight;
He has whipp'd poor Jemmy Douglas, and took San Juan at night.
If again the British should trouble him, won't he make 'em hollow,
With Scranton and the Julia, Vancouver he will swallow.

CHOPPED FEED—Nourse & Mason's Patent Hay Cutters on hand and for sale by S. McCAW & CO.

Special Notices.

Dr. Guysott's Improved Extract of Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla, put up in quart bottles, contains more of the pure Honduras Sarsaparilla than any other preparation extant, which is chemically combined with the Extract of Yellow Dock and the Extract of Wild Cherry, thus making the remedy more thoroughly efficient than any other Sarsaparilla before the public. At the same time it is perfectly free from all mineral poisons, which cannot be said of any other of the Sarsaparilla compounds. The invalid should beware of mineral and metallic poisons, which enter into and form the active basis of most of the Sarsaparillas and Panaceas of the day. Guysott's Compound Extract of Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla does not contain a particle of these sub-tances, as any one can ascertain by applying the necessary tests.

Let all poisonous Sarsaparilla preparations alone, and use Guysott's Improved Extract of Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla, which is thoroughly efficacious, perfectly harmless, and purely vegetable. All kinds of disease yield to its genial influence.

As a purifier of the blood, and the various skin diseases, it has no equal.

Be sure and get the QUART BOTTLES, sold by druggists generally.

For the Lungs, Coughs, Colds, &c., use Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry.

We regard the Wild Cherry tree as one of Nature's own physicians—a sort of Good Samaritan of the Forest—for its "medical gum" has relieved the sufferings and saved the lives of thousands. The Balsam prepared by Dr. Wistar is a pure and perfectly reliable preparation of the real Cherry essence, and it is a remedy by no means "bad to take." We speak confidently and strongly in its praise, from having witnessed its renovating influence in consumptive cases, when all other prescriptions had proved of no effect.

Sold by all respectable druggists.

Be cautious, as there are many counterfeits. Look well at the signature before purchasing. Take none unless it has the name of "Henry Wistar, M.D., Philadelphia," and "Sanford & Park," engraved on the outside wrapper. All others are base imitations.

Every nervous, debilitated, weak and emaciated person, male or female, should try it at once. One wine-glassful, taken three times each day, before meals; or, if the patient should be a lady or child in a debilitated condition, half the quantity will do until sufficient strength is restored, which will be realized in a very short time, and convince the patient of the truth of the above named happy results, which have gained for these Bitters such an enviable reputation everywhere.

PUGET SOUND HERALD.

STEILACOOM, W. T., FRIDAY, OCT. 14, 1859.

FROM COLVILLE.

The Portland Daily Advertiser learns from a gentleman recently from the upper country that Capt. Palizer, commandant of the British corps of Engineers, detailed for the duty of exploring the regions of Prince Rupert's Land, and the boundary line in connection, had arrived at Colville Valley sometime last month. Dr. Hector, with a party from the same corps, was detailed to make an exploration above the forty-ninth parallel, and to pursue their labors in New Caledonia till further orders were received. Mountain Fort (better known as Tobacco Plains) is found to be two miles south of the forty-ninth parallel.

Fears are entertained that great suffering will be experienced in Colville Valley the coming winter, owing to the failure of the crops and the improvident habits of a portion of its inhabitants.

The mines are on a stand point—but few are making it pay. We learn that a Pen-d'Oreille Indian had found a small box containing a considerable amount of specie, supposed to belong to some one of the emigrants that had come through recently by the Saskatchewan route from Minnesota. The Indians are reported to be peaceable. About 150 immigrants had arrived at Colville Valley recently from the Northwestern States; they had wintered at Red River; they are stated to be destitute; the Quartermaster at Harney's post had kindly given employment to quite a number of them.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

A Vermont paper says that on the Rutland and Washington Railroad, while a train was going at the rate of thirty miles an hour, the engine ran into a flock of grasshoppers which stopped the train. Nobody was killed or wounded, but some five million grasshoppers lay dead on the track. After half an hour's shoveling of the dead and dying hoppers off the track, the train proceeded on to Rutland without any further difficulty.

Iowa, which had 100,000 population in 1846, has now 700,000—an unparalleled increase.

A foot-race took place recently at Rochester, New York, between two men, called respectively "the American Deer," and "North Star." They ran five miles for a wager of three hundred dollars. The Deer was not fleet enough for the Star, who made the five miles in thirty-seven minutes.

The Great Eastern Steamship is larger than Noah's Ark, and is of greater tonnage. It is therefore the largest ship ever built, and the only one which has two sets of engines and two propellers.

The grape crop around Cincinnati is said to be the largest ever grown there, and its value is computed at one million of dollars.

The most singular lynching operation on record recently took place at South Bend, Indiana. The ladies of that place assembled to the number of two hundred, and lynched a woman of ill fame, tarring and feathering her. The proceeding does not seem to have had the unqualified approval of the entire male population. Two young men, however, rushed in and helped the ladies smear with tar and feathers well the erring one. The embodied male population, of course, did not make an attack upon the female lynchers, but they took in hand the volunteer young men, and lynched them in the most approved style.

Judge John Watson was recently arrested at Kaytesville, Charlton county, Mo., on the charge of having been one of the party who broke open the county safe about a year and a half ago, and robbed it of some $5,000. The grand jury of that county indicted him for grand larceny and burglary, and he was required to give bail to the amount of $2,000. This case attracts a great deal of attention, partly from the fact that the accused is a man of considerable wealth, and at the time the crime was committed, was one of the Judges of the County Court.

First Lieutenant Stanford, whose death on board the U. S. Revenue Cutter Harriet Lane, to which he was attached, was mentioned a few days ago, is now believed by some of his friends to have fallen a victim to the culpability of a dentist, through filling his teeth with an arsenic preparation for the purpose of killing the nerve. A rigid investigation, it is said, will be had.

The latest accounts from Fort Mojave represent affairs there as peaceable. Lieut. Bootes will be in command from the close of the present month, when he will turn over the duties of Quartermaster to his successor.

The Icarian community at Nauvoo, Ill., sold all their property a few days ago, it having been previously assigned for a debt of $10,000. They realized about $10,000 more than necessary to meet the debt. The old Mormon temple lot, and what remains of the temple, sold for $1,350.

Dr. Galiardet, of New York Hotel notoriety, having performed several surgical operations successfully, has succeeded in obtaining a lucrative practice in Havana and a wide spread reputation on the island.

The coal miners, to the number of 2000, turned out in procession in Pittsburgh on a strike, contending for the payment of wages according to weight instead of measurement.

After a thrrough examination by Lord Lyons of the coast trade question, the issue made by the British Government with the United States, as mentioned in Parliament, has been withdrawn.

The annual session of the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows of Southern New York has just closed its labors. Among the business transacted was the adoption of a new financial system, which will provide for the expenses of the Grand Lodge by a per capita assessment on the members of the subordinate lodges. The ratio of representation was also changed so that each lodge is entitled to one vote for its charter and one additional vote for each thirty members. The newly elected officers for the year were installed. The institution is prosperous in all respects.

The Tampa (Fla.) Peninsular states that on the 24th ult., a man named Geo. M. Buckley, living about six miles from Tampa, murdered his father-in-law, G. W. Goodwin, by shooting him with a gun, taking aim through a crack in the house, the old man being inside at the time.

COPARTNERSHIP NOTICE.—The undersigned, having formed a partnership, and purchased the interest of Albert Balch in the Saloon recently opened in his new building, will continue the business as formerly conducted by Mr. Parkinson. The friends of both are invited to give them a call.

GLASS AND CROCKERYWARE.

A FINE ASSORTMENT OF GLASS AND Crockeryware for sale by 19:tf BALCH & WEBBER.

AN AWFUL DENUNCIATION.

The following is an advertisement of the eccentric "Lord Timothy Dexter," of Newburyport, and it may be considered a literary curiosity. The collection of adjectives and the document as a whole cannot but amuse the reader:

"Whereas I, Lord Timothy Dexter, having been truly informed that several audacious, atrocious, nefarious, infamous, intrepid, night walking, garden violating, immature, phackstealing rascals, all the spawns, and rogues and cubs of Satan, do frequently, villainously, and burglariously assemble themselves together in my garden, therein fighting, swearing, roguing, duck egg hunting, with many other shameful and illicit acts which the modesty of my pen cannot express. This is to give you all notice, Delicarians, Capinicarians, Salamunarians, base-born scoundrels, and old Rascals of whatever Nation you may be, return me my fruit, or by the Gods, the Heathen Gods, I swear, I will send my son Sam to Babylon, for Bloodhounds fiercer than Tigers, and fleeter than the winds; and mounted on my noted horse Lily, with my cutting sabre in my hand, I will hunt you through Europe, Asia, Africa and America, until I can enter you in a great cavern under a great tree in Newfoundland, where Belzebub himself can never find you.

"Hear! ye tatterdemallions, vagabonds, lankjawed herring-gutted plebeans, that if ye, or any of ye, dare set your feet in my house or garden, I will deliver ye to Charon, who will ferry you across the Styx, and deliver you to the Royal arch Fiend Lucifer, at the place of his infernal cauldron, there to be drugged with the Sulphur of Caucassus, and roasted forever before the ever-burning crater of Ætna."

LAGER BEER.

Speaking of this national German drink, the Norwich Bulletin says:

"'King Lager' was the appellation bestowed upon Gambrinus, Duke of Povent, who lived in the eleventh century. The Germans had been addicted to the use of wines of their own manufacture, but at this time the vineyards failed, and wine was too scarce and high for the peasantry to use. For twenty years the wine presses were dry, and various drinks, calculated to be nutritious, but not intoxicating, were concocted. None met with such popular favor as the drink invented by the Duke Gambrinus, and it was then accepted, and has since been held as the national beverage. The subjects of King Lager are not confined just now to the German class of citizens in this country, many of the 'native born' being found among its most admiring devotees."

A blind man being called upon to judge of the qualities of a horse that a jockey was disposing of, after hearing him move, pronounced him to be blind. Upon examination, this was found to be a fact, although it had till then escaped the notice of the men of vision. Inquiry was then made of the sightless man how he knew the horse to be blind; to which he replied, "from the sound of his foot upon the earth, which denoted a cautious step."

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 7th, 1859.

To the Editors of the Pacific Medical and Surgical Journal:

GENTLEMEN—My attention has been called to an article in the December number of your journal, in regard to the ad eundem degree granted by the Philadelphia College of Medicine to Dr. L. J. Czapkay. When the application for the degree was made to the Faculty, it was accompanied by affidavits and testimonials to the effect that Dr. Czapkay was a regular graduate M.D. of the University of Pesth, had served as Surgeon in the Hungarian army, and was a regular practitioner of medicine. On the strength of these the degree was granted. The ad eundem degree, as its name implies, is conferred on graduates only, and gives us new privileges. Had there been the slightest suspicion of irregularity, the application would have been refused. By inserting this in your journal, you will do an act of justice to the College, and confer a favor on

Yours, very respectfully,
H. RAND,
Dean of the Faculty of the Philadelphia College of Medicine.

Dr. L. J. Czapkay's private Medical and Surgical Institute is on Sacramento street, below Montgomery, opposite the Pacific Mail Steamship Co.'s office, San Francisco. The Doctor offers free consultations, and asks no remuneration unless he effects a cure. Office hours, from 9 A.M. to 9 P.M.

CERTIFICATE.

I, the undersigned, Governor of Hungary, do testify hereby, that Dr. L. J. Czapkay has served, during the contest for Hungarian liberty, as Chief Surgeon in the Hungarian army, with faithful perseverance—whereof I have given him this certificate, and do recommend him to the sympathy, attention and protection of all those who are capable of appreciating patriotic self sacrifice and undeserved misfortune. FARMS FOR SALE.

SIXTEEN CLAIMS IN THURSTON AND Pierce counties for sale—The undersigned, as the agent of others, has for sale sixteen land claims in this and the adjoining counties, all of which are more or less improved, and some under a high state of cultivation. Among these claims are several that are admirably adapted for cattle ranges, and others that are not excelled for fertility on the Pacific coast. Some of them are donation claims of 320 acres, and others pre emption claims of 160 acres. Payment will be taken in cattle or money, at prices ranging from $400 to $3000.

Parties having Farms for sale will find it to their interest to intrust them to the undersigned; he being probably better acquainted with the country than anybody now living in this county, the knowledge of which fact has induced many in pursuit of claims to apply to him. Terms moderate.

WASHINGTON HOTEL,

OLYMPIA, W. T.
SILAS GALLIHER, Proprietor.

THE PROPRIETOR HAS RECENTLY ERECTED, IN CONnection with and as a part of the "Washington Hotel," a large two-story building, 20 by 60 feet, by which he is enabled to provide the travelling public with a larger number of capacious, comfortable and excellently ventilated apartments than can be afforded by any other public house in Washington Territory. An idea of his ability to accommodate the public may be judged from the fact that the hotel contains twenty-five private rooms, (exclusive of family apartments) six of which are large drawing rooms or parlors.

Thankful to the public for the liberal patronage heretofore extended to the proprietor, and having thus enlarged upon his former business, he feels confident he can render the sojourn of strangers with him comfortable and pleasant, and no pains shall be spared to set his table as well as any in like business. Beds and bedrooms furnished to such as may desire them.

Board by the day and week.

A good stable is attached to this establishment, which will be amply supplied with forage for the accommodation of animals of the traveling public.

A share of public patronage is respectfully solicited.

TOWN LOTS!
BILLS'S ADDITION TO STEILACOOM.

GOOD CHANCE FOR INVESTMENT!

THE SUBSCRIBER, HAVING LAID OUT his land claim, adjoining Capt. Balch's claim, into Town Lots of one acre each, is now prepared to sell Lots to suit parties desiring either to locate and improve or seeking investment. This claim, for advantageous location is not excelled by any on Puget Sound. The site has been laid out with a view to beauty and convenience; the streets being four rods wide, and the whole plot well watered by springs. Sites for three churches have already been donated and set apart. The prices of Lots range from $50 to $150 each, according to locality.

The proprietor contemplates building a wharf from the claim during the coming summer, which cannot fail to greatly enhance the value of the entire property.

Parties wishing to purchase can do so by applying to FRANK CLARK, Esq., of Steilacoom, who, by power of attorney, is authorized to sell and convey lots.

MANUFACTURERS, MECHANICS AND INVENTORS.

THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN TO BE ENLARGED!

A NEW VOLUME—NEW SERIES,
To commence on July 2d, 1859.

Instead of 416 pages, the Yearly Volume, Enlarged Series, will contain 832 pages of valuable Reading Matter, useful and instructive to all classes.

THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN IS PUBLISHed weekly in quarto form, suitable for binding, and the numbers for a single year contain information in regard to new inventions, machinery, all branches of manufacturing processes, agricultural implements, engineering, millwrighting, iron manufacture, chemistry; in fact, almost every industrial pursuit receives more or less attention in its columns.

All Patent Claims officially published every week, as issued from the Patent Office; and for Inventers and Patentees it contains information not to be obtained elsewhere, and which no mechanic, inventor or patentee can well do without.

As a family journal it has no superior for real practical utility, since in its columns will be found useful practical recipes. Careful attention will be given, from time to time, to reports of the metal, lumber, and other markets.

Each number will contain sixteen pages and forty-eight columns of matter, with illustrations of patented machines and other engravings, comprising in a single year about 600 original engravings.

With the enlarged series is presented an opportunity to subscribe not likely to occur again for many years. It will be like commencing a new work—Vol. I, No. I, New Series.

Send in your subscriptions without delay, so as to begin the new volume—July 24.

Terms $2 a-year—$1 for six months.

Southern, Western and Canadian money or post-office stamps taken at par for subscriptions. Canadian subscribers will please to remit 25 cents extra on each year's subscription, to pre-pay postage.

A liberal discount to clubs. A prospectus, giving full particulars of the inducements for clubs, with specimen copies of the paper, and a pamphlet of information concerning the procuring of patents may be had gratis, by addressing Preservation of Forests.

From the manner in which the Germans preserve and improve their forests, our countrymen might take a valuable lesson. At Hohenheim this forms one of the most important departments of study. The pupils are instructed in the best method of preserving, propagating and improving their forest trees, while at the same time a proper estimation of the pecuniary and moral value of those noble productions of nature is instilled into their minds, which must eventually become the common sentiment. Our people must give attention to this subject, sooner or later; and every day's neglect of this practical science will entail evils upon us for which years of labor will hardly make amends. We do not, as a people, appreciate the value of our forests. Negligently, carelessly and wantonly we are destroying them on every side, not considering that in them lies a mine of untold wealth; for the time comes with every people when they can turn their own natural productions to the most advantageous use for themselves; and this law applies as firmly to trees as to the coals and various mineral ores. Yet what destruction of the best and most valuable timber have you and I witnessed during the past forty years in Indiana! A statistical statement of the pecuniary loss would astonish the reader, to say nothing of the loss of health and domestic comfort. The connection of family health, enjoyment and comfort, with a grove of primeval forest trees about the homestead, never entered the practical heads of our fathers; and their sons, true to the example before them, pursue the same suicidal course. Down come the lofty oaks and the beautiful maple, leaving the homestead to parch, and the spring to dry up in the scorching rays of the sun.

If there are exceptions here and there, you will find the value of the farm increased a thousand fold, simply because the trees have been let alone; and what if they were cultivated with the proper care? All along the line of the railway in southern Germany I saw acres and acres of forest trees, from ten to fifteen and perhaps twenty years old, planted in rows as regular as corn is with us, and all cultivated in the most scientific manner.

When will our people learn wisdom in this matter? Will they heed the warning of the Old World, listen to the admonitions and counsels of science, and be prudent in good time—or will they wait to learn it too late from their own experience? We, certainly, who boast so freely, and with good reason, of our practical foresight, should take shame to ourselves to be surpassed in this important matter by the Germans.

Rye—Its Value.

Rye is not sufficiently appreciated by farmers generally. For winter and spring pasture it has no equal in any variety of grass, affording a full bite for cattle, sheep, and hogs, at a time when there is nothing else green: and while it affords the cheapest food that can be grown for these animals for several months, it also contributes largely to their health, giving them an early start in the spring, and increases largely their value. Besides the importance of having a cheap, rich and healthy food for stock, it is of a still greater value to the land upon which it is grown. It interferes with no other crop, and besides being a good fertiliser, it renders the soil light and friable for the succeeding crop.

Corn land that would otherwise remain naked after harvest, should always be sown in rye in the fall. Land that was the previous summer in corn often suffers much from being exposed to the beating and washing rains of winter. The soil is washed into the valleys and streams, and from the beating effects of the rain, and drying wind and sun of spring, it breaks up in heavy clods that hardly become fine during the ensuing summer.

If the land is to be sown in wheat, rye may be sown at the time of the last working of the corn in summer, or, what is better, it may be deferred until the corn-blades begin to dry up and let the sun into the ground, when the seed may be sown and covered with the cultivator.

This will afford good pasturage during winter and spring, protect the soil through the winter, and the roots and blades furnish manure to the succeeding crop equal in value to twenty tons to the acre from the yards and stables for any spring crop that may occupy the land. Besides this the decaying roots and blades tend greatly to improve the mechanical texture of the soil, rendering the subsequent cultivation more easy and thorough.

Rye is also an excellent crop to succeed hemp, and whether following hemp or corn after affording good pasturage, a good crop of grain may be secured, if the land is not wanted for spring planting.

If our farmers would make the experiment of always sowing rye after their corn, when other winter grain is not to be sown, and mark the benefits upon the succeeding spring crops, to say nothing of the value of the pasturage, we think they would never be willing to let their fields lie naked another winter.

Warm Soils.

The following hint to those who have a collection of coal dust which they have doubted the efficacy of, in an application upon garden soil, will not be lost. Recollect it next Spring:—

It is usually stated that black or dark colored soils are sooner warmed by the sun's rays, than those of lighter color, and remain constantly of a higher temperature, so long as the sun acts on them. An elevation of several degrees in the temperature of a light colored soil, may be caused by strewing its surface with peat, charcoal powder, or vegetable mould. To this influence may be partly abscribed the following facts. Lampadius was able to ripen melons, even in the coolest Summers, in Friberg, Saxony, by strewing a coating of coal dust an inch deep over the surface of the soil. In Belgium, and on the Rhine, it is found that the grape matures best when the soil is covered with fragments of black clay slate.

Remedy for Cracked Hoofs.

Take a piece of copper four inches long and two inches wide, and drill eight holes, four in each end, so as not to interfere with the crack, and screw it fast to the hoof, crossways of the crack; then take a hot iron with a sharp edge and burn the crack at the edge of the hair till it goes through to the quick. After this, let the horse run on pasture, and it will begin to heal up in a few weeks. This remedy I have tried, and it did the work comdlete, and I worked the horse all the time. Care should be taken to close the crack tight before the plate is fastened on.

RATS.—A correspondent of the Gardener's Monthly says, "I tried the effect of introducing into the entrance of their numerous holes, runs, or hiding places, small portions of chloride of lime, or bleaching powder, wrapped in calico and stuffed into the entrance holes, and thrown loose by spoonsful into the drain from the house. This drove the rats away for a twelvemonth, when they returned to it. They were again treated in the same manner with like effect. The cure was most complete. I presume it was the chlorine gas, which did not agree with their olfactories."

RENOVATION OF THE PEACH TREE.—The editor of the New England Farmer says that a gentleman residing in Cambridge informs him that charcoal placed around the roots of the deceased peach stock was serviceable. He immediately removed the soil from around the trunk of a sickly tree in his garden, supplied its place with charcoal, and was surprised at its sudden renovation and subsequent rapidity of growth, and the tenacity with which the fruit held on to the branches, and the unusual richness of its flavor when matured.

The largest and oldest apple tree in Essex County, Mass., was lately blown down in a gale of wind. It stood on the land of Moses Packard, in Rowley. It measured over sixteen feet around its trunk some thirteen feet from the ground, and was sixty feet from one extreme of its branches to the other. It was supposed to be from two to three hundred years old.

Potatoes that are frozen ever so hard, if taken in that state and immersed in water heated to the boiling point, (provided they have not previously undergone the operation of freezing and thawing) are as good and palatesble as if untouched by frost.

15,000 sold in the last four years!

No single establishment in the world can truthfully claim to have manufactured and sold anything like so large a number of Reaping and Mowing Machines during the same time, while my experience dates back to the origin of my machine, in 1834, having been actively and exclusively engaged in their manufacture for the last fifteen years. I am now more largely engaged in the manufacture of these machines than ever before, and, with my improvements for 1859, do not hesitate to warrant my machine as a Reaper, Mower, and Reaper and Mower, superior to any other for simplicity, durability and perfect working; and further to say, that farmers who may desire it are at liberty to work my machine through the harvest with any other, and keep and pay for the one preferred. The position of the Raker in my machine, (as patented) upon the main frame, where there is great strength, and where the weight adds to the power of the machine, is the only right one. Other makers have to haul their raker on the platform, where he must submit to having the dust thrown in his eyes by the opera ion of the reel, and to being jolted over the clods by the little platform wheel over which he rides, necessarily racking their machine to pieces. This accounts, in part, for the great durability of my machines as compared with others.

Great Council Medal awarded my machine in London, in 1851.

Grand Gold Medal of Honor at Paris, in 1855.

Highest Prize at the French Universal Exhibition, in 1855.

Highest Prize of Royal Agricultural Society of England, in 1857.

Highest Prize of the United States Agricultural Society, in 1857.

As the Best Reaper.

Publications made by the manufacturers of the Manny machine, claiming the highest honors, etc., at the French Universal Exposition, in 1855, are known by them to be FALSE. The success of my machine, as indicated by figures above, is its highest praise, while the awards of premiums, generally, are worthy of no confidence, although reaper makers make a business of laboring and scheming to secure the little annual one horse premiums of the country. Although it may not be generally understood, it is nevertheless true, that these machines have always been sold at comparatively low prices, and but for the reaping machines of my prominence in the country are mere modifications of my machine, all other manufacturers having necessarily limited experience in comparison with my own.

A single year's severe service will satisfy the farmer, that in point or durability my machine is far superior to all others; besides several most important advantages, referred to in the late annual circular in pamphlet form, which will be furnished those who desire further information, by addressing me or any one of my agents.

BROOKLYN HOTEL,
Corner of Broadway and Sansome streets,
SAN FRANCISCO.

THE PROPRIETOR OF THIS WELL known and old established house is still at his old tricks—of feeding the public at the low price of Six Dollars per week, and still they come to partake of his good and well furnished table; and as Mr. Kelly is one of the pioneer hotel keepers of this city, he pledges himself that there will be nothing wanting at his house to make the public comfortable.

The house is centrally located, in the vicinity of the Custom House, Post Office, and also of the up river and ocean steamers, and contains a number of single and family rooms, well ventilated, suitable for ladies and single gentlemen.

There is also attached to the house a READING ROOM, and a LIBRARY which contains a large number of selected standard works. There is also, at the arrival of each steamer, which belongs to the house, to convey passengers and baggage, free of charge. The public are respectfully requested to give the house a trial.

A WAGON,

Board, per week, $6; per day, $1; Meals, 50 cents; Lodging, per night, 50 to 75 cents; Lodging, per week, $2 to $4. JOHN KELLY, Jr., Proprietor.

Udolpho Wolfe's Schnapps.

A Medicinal Diet Drink, of eminently salutary qualities, manufactured by him-self exclusively, at his factory at Scheidam, in Holland, and well known during the last twelve years throughout the Atlantic and Western States.

It is made from the best Barley that can be selected in Europe, with the essence of an aromatic Italian herry of acknowledged and extraordinary medicinal qualities. It has long since acquired a higher reputation, both in Europe and America, than any other diuretic beverage.

Analyzed, it is a PERFECTLY PURE LIQUOR, in its effects a mild and wholesome tonic. It is extensively used and approved by the medical faculty, the temperance people, heads of families, &c.

In Gravel, Gout and Rheumatism, in Obstructions of the Bladder and Kidneys, and in general Debility, its effects are prompt, decided, and invariably reliable. And it is not only a remedy for these painful ills, but in all cases in which they are produced by drinking bad water, which is almost universally the cause of them, it operates as a SURE PREVENTIVE.

For Fever and Ague it is one of the most efficacious preventives that can be resorted to.

The Aromatic Scheidam Schnapps

Is consequently in great demand by persons traveling, or about to settle in those parts of the country especially, as well as by many in every community where it has become known on account of its other remedial properties.

In all cases of Dropsical tendency, it is generally the only remedy required, when adopted in the early stages of the disease. In Dyspepsia maladies, when taken in proper quantities, as a diet drink, and especially at dinner, it is found, by uniform experience, to be eminently efficacious in the most obstinate cases, when even the best of the usual remedies have failed to afford more than temporary relief. In both cases of Flatulency it is an immediate, invariable specific; and it may be administered in diluted and proportionate quantities even to young infants, in all those paroxysms of griping pain in the stomach and bowels to which they are especially subject, as well as in the cholic suffered by grown persons.

Its judicious adoption in connection with the principal meals, or when a sense of exhaustion dictates its use, never fails to relieve the debility attendant upon protracted chronic maladies, low temperament and exhausted vital energy, by whatever cause induced. These are facts to which many of the most eminent medical men, both in Europe and the United States, have borne testimony, and which are corroborated by the highest written authorities.

Put up in quart or pint bottles, in cases of one dozen, each; with the name on bottle, cork, and fac simile of my signature on the label.

For sale by all the respectable druggists and Liquor dealers in California and Oregon.

Useful Publications.

Leonard Scott & Co.'s
REPRINT OF THE BRITISH PERIODICALS.
—AND THE—
"Farmer's Guide."

Great Reduction in the price of the latter Publication.

LEONARD SCOTT & CO., New York, continue to re-publish the following BRITISH PERIODICALS, viz:

1. The London Quarterly, (Conservative)
2. The Edinburgh Review, (Whig.)
3. The North British Review, (Free Church.)
4. The Westminster Review, (Liberal.)
5. Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine, (Tory.)

These Periodicals ably represent the great political parties of Great Britain—Whig, Tory, and Radical, but politics form only one feature of their character. As organs of the most profound writers on Science, Literature, Morality, and Religion, they stand as they have ever stood unrivalled in the world of letters, being considered indispensable to the scholar and the professional man, while to the intelligent reader of every class, they furnish a more correct and satisfactory record of the current literature of the day, throughout the world than can possibly be obtained from any other source.

The receipt of Advance Sheets from the British publishers gives additional value to these reprints, especially during the present exciting state of European affairs, inasmuch as they can now be placed in the hands of subscribers about as soon as the original editions.

Terms:

For any one of the Four Reviews, per annum	$5 00
For any two of the four Reviews, " "	5 00
For any three of the four Reviews, " "	7 00
For Blackwood's Magazine, " "	3 00
For Blackwood and the three Reviews, "	9 00
For Blackwood and four Reviews, "	10 00

☞ Payments to be made in all cases in advance. Money current in the state where issued will be received at par.

Clubbing.

A discount of twenty-five per cent from the above price will be allowed to clubs ordering direct from Scott & Co., for four or more copies of any of the above. Thus four copies of Blackwood, or of one Review, will be sent to one address for $9; for copies of the four Reviews and Blackwood for $30; and so on.

Postage.

☞ In all the principal cities and towns, these works will be delivered FREE OF POSTAGE. When sent by mail, the POSTAGE to any part of the United States will be but 24 cents a year for "Blackwood," and but 14 cents a year for each of the Reviews.

Splendid offers for 1858 and 1859 together.

Unlike the more ephemeral Magazines of the day, these Periodicals lose little by age. Hence a full year of the Nos. (with no omissions) for 1858, may be regarded nearly as valuable as for 1859. We propose to furnish the two years at the following extremely low rates, viz:

For Blackwood's Magazine, -	4 50
For any one Review, - -	4 00
For any two Reviews, - -	6 00
For Blackwood and one Review, -	7 00
For Blackwood and two Reviews,	9 00
For three Reviews, - - -	8 00
For Blackwood and three Reviews,	12 00
For the four Reviews, - -	11 00
For Blackwood and the four Reviews,	14 00

*To avoid fractions, $5 may be remitted for Blackwood, of which we will forward that work for both years, post paid.

N. B. The price in Great Britain of the five Periodicals above-named is about $31 per annum.

As we shall never again be likely to offers such inducements as those here presented,

NOW IS THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE!!

☞ Remittances must, in all cases, be made direct to the Publishers, for at these no commission can be allowed to Agents.

Specimen copies sent free of postage, on receipt of a stamp; but stamps will not be received for subscriptions. Subscribers and agents must inclose the money—Cash; and write names, post office, county and State, plain and distinct.

☞ Canvassing agents (particularly females) wanted everywhere. Agents are allowed to retain 20 cents out of each 50 cent subscription they obtain, and some are now clearing as high as $25 a week profit for themselves. Postmasters and Teachers make good agents on the above terms.

Persons receiving specimen copies of the Literary Gazette are requested to act as agents, or to show it to those who will, and they shall be sent a copy of the paper one year gratis, as compensation for their trouble. This is an easy way to pay for a year's subscription, and the effort will put money in the pockets of those who need it, and extend our circulation. Instead of earning 50 to 75 cents a day with her needle, or by teaching school, a smart woman can obtain from 10 to 20 subscriptions every fair day in the week, and clear for herself $2 to $4, while she would have made only 75 cents at her old occupation.

☞ All persons extending the circulation of the paper continually get a copy gratis.

Applicants for agencies are requested to send us the names and post-office address of all the leading people they know of, who would be likely to subscribe, and a specimen copy for inspection will be mailed to each of them free of postage. Agents find this plan very profitable to them, as they obtain subscriptions much easier.

Inclose an extra three or ten cent stamp when a written answer is wanted. Address

MUSIC.

PRICES GREATLY REDUCED!

HORACE WATERS,
No. 333 Broadway, New York,
Agent for the sale of the best Boston and New York
PIANOS AND MELODEONS.

THE LARGEST ASSORTMENT OF MUSIC merchandise in the United States!—Pianos from five different manufacturers, of every variety of style: from those in plain rosewood cases, for $200, to those of the most elegant finish, for $1000. No house in the Union can come in competition for the number, variety and celebrity of its instruments, nor the extremely low prices at which they are sold.

Horace Waters' Modern Improved Pianos,

With or without iron frames, have, in their new SCALE AND IMPROVED ACTION, a power and compass of tone equalling the grand, with the beauty and durability of the square piano. The press and first music masters have justly pronounced them equal if not superior, to any other make. They are guaranteed to stand the action of any climate.

HORACE WATERS' MELODEONS, (tuned the equal temperament) superior in each desirable quality. Also furnish Prince's, Carhart's and Smith's Melodeons. Prices from $45 to $125; for two sets of reeds, $150; two banks of keys, $200; organ pedal bass melodeons, $250, $275 and $300—less a liberal discount.

ALEXANDRE ORGANS:

Five stops, in rosewood cases, $160; 8 stops, do. do., $180; 8 stops, with percussion, $225; 12 stops, do. do., $250; 12 stops do., size larger $300; 15 stops, do. do., $375. Each instrument warranted to give satisfaction or purchase money refunded.

SECOND HAND PIANOS

At great bargains always in store: prices from $30 to $140.

MUSIC.

One of the largest and best catalogues of Music now published. All the music and music books published in the United States for sale at this establishment. Martin's celebrated Guitars and all kinds of Musical Instruments and music merchandize at the lowest prices. Music sent, whenever ordered, post paid. Catalogues sent by mail. A liberal discount to dealers, teachers, seminaries and clergymen.

Testimonials of the Horace Waters Pianos and Melodeons.

The Piano came to hand, and in first rate order. It is a beautiful instrument.—LEE & WALKER, Philadelphia.

John Hewitt, of Carthage, New York, who has had one of the Horace Waters Pianos, writes as follows:—"A friend of mine wishes me to purchase a piano for her. She likes the one you sold me in December, 1858. My piano is becoming popular in this place, and I think I can introduce one or two more—they will be more popular than any other make."

We have two of Waters' Pianos in use in our seminary one of which has been severely tested for three years—and we can testify to their good quality and durability.—WOOD & GREGORY, Mount Carroll, Ill.

H. WATERS, Esq.—Dear Sir: Having used one of your pianofortes for two years past, I have found it a very superior instrument.—ALONZO GRAY, Principal Brooklyn Heights Seminary.

Rev. Mr. Haynes writes as follows:—Preston Hollow, N. Y., July 28th, 1858. MR. WATERS—Dear Sir: I received the Melodeon, safe and in good order; am well pleased with the external appearance and the tone also. I hope I shall have occasion to order one or two more the present season.

Tioga, N. Y., July 28th 1858. HORACE WATERS, Esq.—Sir: The Melodeon you sent me was duly received in good order. I am now fully prepared to say that the instrument is highly satisfactory, and I beg you will accept my thanks for the very liberal terms on which you furnished it, and for the very honorable manner in which you have fulfilled, and me to that fulfilled, that you promised. Very respectfully yours, &c., J. L. SMITH.

The Piano I received from you continues to give satisfaction. I regard it as one of the best instruments in the place.—JAMES L. CLARKE, Charleston, Va.

The Melodeon has safely arrived. I feel obliged to you for your liberal discount—will do all I can for you in these parts.—Rev J. M. MCCORMICK, Yarquesville, S. C.

The Piano was duly received. It came in excellent condition, and is very much admired by my numerous family. Accept my thanks for your promptness.—ROBERT COOPER, Warranham, Bradford co., Pa.

Your Piano pleases us well. It is the best one in our county.—THOMAS A. LATHAM, Campbleton, Ga.

We are very much obliged to you for having sent such a fine instrument for $250, and we shall take pains to recommend it.—BLAKE, HALL & CO., Buffalo Democrat.

The Horace Waters Pianos are known as among the very best; we are enabled to speak of these instruments with confidence, from personal knowledge of their excellent tone and durable quality.—New York Evangelist.

We can speak of the merits of the Horace Waters Pianos from personal knowledge, as being of the very best quality.—Christian Intelligencer.

Nothing at the State Fair displayed greater excellence in any department than the Horace Waters Piano.—Churchman.

Waters' Pianos and Melodeons challenge comparison with the finest made anywhere in the country.—Home Journal.

Horace Waters' Pianofortes are of full, rich, and even tone, and powerful.—New York Musical Review.

Our friends will find at Mr. Waters' store the very best assortment of Music and of Pianos to be found in the United States, and we urge our southern and western friends to give them a call whenever they go to New York.—Graham's Magazine.
