ROBINSON'S CELEBRATED

MAGIC SOAP POWDERS.

Prepared ready for washing, in 6, 12 and 24 lb boxes.

COSTS LESS THAN COMMON SOAP.

WHICH REMOVES PAINT, TAR, Pitch and dirt of every description; and which has given such general satisfaction, by proving that your wasing can be done with one-half the time and labor of the old mode. Thus labor saved is money made; at washi-boards, machines and hard rubbing, to wear out clothes, is entirely dispensed with, and the washing for a dozen persons can be done in two hours. Thus the costs your washing being three-fourths less than any other process, as you use no other soap.

These Prepared Powders or Soap have not only proved themselves superior for washing any and all kinds of goods, but proved after one year's use, not to injure, in the slightest degree, any fabric of the finest texture; and also the finest article for the hands, as it makes them soft and white, as well as your clothes. It also keeps your hands from chapping when exposed to the air.

We defy the world to produce its superior for washing any and all kinds of goods. Our object is to save your time, expense, hard labor and especially the woman who has to wash.

We take pleasure in announcing below a few of the many ladies' names (by their consent) who have used the Prepared Magic Soap Powders from six months to one year:

SPEECH OF HON. S. GARFIELDE.

The following is substantially the speech of the Hon. S. Garfielde at Metropolis Hall, Vancouver, April 24, 1869, at the inauguration of the campaign for the Delegateship of W. T:

FELLOW CITIZENS OF CLARKE COUNTY:—Having been nominated by the unanimous voice of the Republican Convention of this Territory, as a candidate for Delegate to represent you in the halls of Congress, I am here for the purpose of entering at once upon that duty which custom has rendered imperative—to canvass the Territory and support, to the best of my ability, the principles of the Union Republican party of the country.

The Convention which nominated me adopted a platform of principles, upon which I shall stand and which I intend to maintain. This platform, so far as its political principles are concerned, is the same as that adopted at the last National Union Republican Convention, and upon which the last Presidential canvass was made. That platform and the Republican candidate received the endorsement of an overwhelming majority of the nation. The issues then made and the political doctrines then promulgated are familiar to you all and need not be repeated. They embodied three essential ideas—Universal Human Liberty, Perpetual Unity and National Good Faith. [Cheers.]

The Democratic party of the Territory has also met in convention, nominated a candidate and adopted a platform. Those parts of that platform to which we take exceptions will be reviewed. The central idea embodied in that declaration of principles is found in the fifth resolution, and is as follows:

"That the exclusion of any state from representation in Congress in time of peace is a dangerous assault upon the liberties of the people, in violation of the principles of our Union and subversive of the rights of the Constitution."

This resolution, so far as its bad English and worse sense are intelligible, at once raises one of the main questions involved in this controversy. The question raised is this: Could and should Congress assume the control and government of the rebellious states after the cessation of hostilities? If they could and should, then the Republican party stands justified, and its policy, in reference to the seceding states, fully vindicated. If not, then the Democrats have the best of it.

By what process did the rebellious states seek to terminate their connection with the Federal Union and reorganize themselves into constituent elements of the new Confederate Government? In discussing this question we must discriminate between clearly recognized rights and powers, and those held in dispute or universally ignored. Conventions, claiming to have been elected by the people, assembled and proceeded to the work before them. They abolished and repealed the constitutions of their states, passed ordinances of secession and then commenced the process of of reorganization under the so-called Confederate Government. There can be no doubt that a convention of the people of a state, regularly called and duly organized, may alter, amend, modify, repeal or abolish the constitution of such state. The power which creates can also modify or destroy. The genius of our government recognizes the people as the fountain of all political power, and the several constitutions, state and federal, as the measure of the power surrendered by the people and deposited in governments, state and national, for the general good. This surrendered power may be resumed by the people at will, through the forms and under the conditions which they themselves have prescribed, namely, by means of conventions duly called and properly organized.

It now becomes a matter of prime importance to determine the status or condition of those states, after they had abolished their state constitutions. Were they states, in the constitutional sense of that term after they had voluntarily destroyed their state organizations? This will depend upon what constitutes a state under our system of government. All will concede that four elements enter into the composition of a state, each of which is essential to its existence. These are, 1st, territory or area, 2d, population, 3d, civil government, and 4th, recognition by the federal government. The first is controlled by physical law, the second by natural capacity for human subsistence, the third by the population of the area to be organized, and the fourth by the federal government. Can you have a state without territory or area, without population, without civil government, or without federal recognition? [Applause.] But civil government in a state is the result of power conceded by the people and deposited in a state constitution, giving existence, vitality and power to the executive, legislative and judicial departments. Where no power has been delegated by the people, or where once delegated and afterwards resumed, there exists no law-making power except public assemblies of the masses, and consequently no civil government.

It will thus be apparent to all, that when a state calls a convention under the forms and sanctions of law, and solemnly abolishes its constitution, it thereafter ceases to possess one of the essential elements of a state, and necessarily assumes the condition of other unorganized portions of the territory of the United States, and falls at once within or under the civil or military control and jurisdiction of the general government according to the exigencies of the case. [Applause.]

It may be urged that this view may tend to consolidation, or the destruction of the Union by the voluntary surrender, by the people, of their local governments. This may be true, and if so, it constitutes but one of the hundred methods by which the people may change their form of government, should they so determine. Our revolutionary fathers firmly asserted, in the Declaration of Independence, and forever established, by the construction and adoption of the federal constitution, the right of the people to alter, modify or abolish their form of government, whenever and however they pleased. The objection is therefore from me transferred to the Fathers of the Republic, and from my positions and arguments to the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States. [Applause.]

A state, by the voluntary surrender of its civil government and organization, having thus become a part and parcel of the unorganized territory of the United States, it fell within the power and became the federal government to adopt efficient measures for the protection of life and property within its limits. If, by reason of armed rebellion or the existence of numerous and powerful bands of desperadoes and outlaws, civil government was set at defiance, and life and person and property were continually threatened, violated and destroyed, it became the duty of the government to provide such further protection as would prove effectual, even to the military organization and government of the country.

I now proceed to the consideration of what are popularly known as the Reconstruction Acts of Congress, so far at least as the power of Congress to enact and enforce them is concerned. The right of Congress to legislate for the territories has never been denied by any political party since the organization of the government, except for a short time by a portion of the Douglas Democracy. The views of that portion of the Democracy with which I concurred in 1860, having been rejected by the great majority of both parties, have never even tinged the legislation of the country, and the question may be considered settled, as both parties have constantly concurred in such action. If Congress can legislate for our territory, then it can for all; and as states which have ceased to exist as such are in a territorial condition, it follows that Congress can legislate for such disorganized states. [Applause.]

It has been the custom of all parties, when in power in Congress, to pass enabling acts, authorizing such territories as had the requisite population, to frame constitutions and submit them to Congress for approval, as initiatory steps to their admission into the Union as states. The power to pass such enabling acts has never been questioned.—Further, Whigs, Democrats and Republicans, in enacting such laws, have prescribed the qualifications of electors entitled to vote upon the adoption or rejection of such constitutions. And yet, when Congress, following in the path of universal precedent, prescribed the qualifications of electors to vote upon the new constitutions to be framed and submitted in the disorganized states of the South, an indignant howl was raised over the whole country, and the Republican party was charged with tyranny and oppression unheard of even in the monarchies of the Old World. [Continued applause.]

It is difficult for the candid and intelligent mind to perceive any difference between the Territory of Washington and the Territory of Texas or Louisiana, so far as the rights of the people are concerned. The people of Louisiana, by their voluntary act in abolishing their constitution, surrendered their sovereignty and assumed a territorial condition. The people of this Territory, by emigration from an organized state to the wilds of the far northwest, surrendered the same sovereignty and accepted the same condition. The acts, in both cases were voluntary and the result palpable to the actors. Why then, this tirade of invective and abuse? Why this effort to create and perpetuate prejudice in the minds of the people? Why prostitute the rostrum, which should be devoted to patriotic effort, to the purposes of trickery, fraud and deception? Manifestly, to promote the temporary and personal ends of designing men; personal and party success rising superior to patriotic self sacrifice and national well being. [Applause.]

It is conceded that Congress, in passing enabling or reconstruction acts for the readmission of states which had destroyed their own organized existence, did prescribe terms and conditions more specific and perhaps more onerous than had ever before been imposed upon a territory seeking admission into the Union, and the reason is obvious. The people of these disorganized states had not only destroyed their state governments, but they had sought to dissolve their connection with the federal government and take from our country one-third of its area, wealth and population. To this end, they had raised armies, seized the government property, forced unwilling men into arms and perpetrated every conceivable act of rebellion.—When they laid down their arms to superior force, no evidence was yet before the country that the spirit of rebellion had been crushed, or that the restless and unscrupulous men who had inaugurated the secession had accepted the result of their appeal to arms as a finality. Indeed, subsequent events fully justified the apprehensions of our greatest statesmen, and led to the careful and stringent measures finally adopted in providing for the re-admission of the disorganized states. [Cheers.]

Another plank in the recently adopted Democratic platform reads as follows:

"That we are opposed to the proposed 15th amendment of the Constitution of the United States."

The 14th and 15th amendments to the Constitution of the United States are but parts of the same system of policy. During the Presidential election of last year, the Democrats opposed and denounced the 14th amendment as bitterly as they now do the 15th. An examination of these amendments will enable us to form a better conclusion in regard to their merits.

The lawyers tell us, that in order to understand the meaning and purpose of an amendment to existing law, we should first ascertain what the old law is, then the evil existing under that law, and last, the remedy sought to be applied. The Constitution of the United States, as it existed prior to the rebellion, in establishing the basis of representation in Congress, provided that all free persons should be counted and three fifths of the slaves. As there were about four million slaves in the country, these, with the large free negro population of the South gave that section a representation equal to twenty eight members of Congress based upon free negroes and slaves alone. This power, given to the whites of the South by virtue of their negro population, balanced three millions of whites at the North.

The practical effect of this provision will now be more readily understood by illustration. The present ratio of representation is about one hundred and twenty seven thousand. In other words, it takes that amount of population to entitle a Congressional district to a member of Congress. In a Southern district which contained a hundred thousand slaves, how many whites would be entitled to a member of Congress? Three fifths of the hundred thousand slaves would be counted, which would make sixty thousand and sixty seven thousand whites added to these would make up the full ratio. Now, as the negroes were not allowed to vote, the sixty seven thousand whites elected the member of Congress, while it required one hundred and twenty seven thousand whites in the North to accomplish the same object. Thus it will be seen that the vote of a white man in a large slave district was as potent as the votes of two white men in a free state.—The inequality was not as great as this in all parts of the South, but was everywhere in the proportion which the negro population bore to the whites. The inequality, which was increased in proportion to the amount of money invested in human beings in any given district, was held to be unjust by the freemen of the North.

But when emancipation followed as a necessary result of the rebellion, the evil was very much increased. Slavery having ceased to exist, and the negroes having become free, every five negroes counted five instead of three in the basis of representation, and the representation to which the South would be entitled in Congress, based upon its negro population alone, rose from twenty eight to forty. Thus we were compelled to pay the South, for its act of rebellion, for its attempted disruption of the Union, for the sacrifice of human life and for the immense outlay, creating a national debt under which the Nation is now staggering, and which must be felt by posterity, a premium of twelve members in Congress. [Cheers]

This monstrous wrong, aggravated and increased by the acts of the states to be benefitted, could not be tolerated by the freemen of the country, and they set about providing a remedy. That remedy, when it assumed form and proportion, became the 14th Amendment to the Constitution. The effect of that amendment is to compel all the states to give the ballot to their colored population, or exclude them entirely from the basis of representation, at the option of each particular state. Even this provision, fair and just as it seems to the white man, upon trial, proved to operate irregularly among the states. Then, for the first time, Congress came up to the full dignity and responsibility of the question involved, and proposed unqualified suffrage to all citizens of the United States. [Applause] Whether that proposition will be accepted by the people of the Nation and incorporated into the Constitution, remains to be seen. That the discussions and investigations now in progress will ultimate in some provision meting out equal and exact justice to all portions of the Union and all classes of citizens, I have no doubt. [Applause.]

The only remaining resolution of the Democratic Convention, to which the time allotted will permit me to refer, reads as follows:

"That we are opposed to the present system of Government taxation and are in favor of raising the necessary revenue for government purposes by an ad valorem tax on the entire imports and property of the country."

The contest in regard to ad valorem and specific taxation is not a new one. For many years, the field has been hotly contested upon both sides. It is probable that the highest ends and least suffering will be attained by a judicious combination of the two systems.—This view has controlled the action of our best statesmen, during the past six years.—The subject of internal taxation is a new one to our people and Government, never having been introduced to any extent until the expenses of a great civil war, inaugurated and maintained by Southern Democrats, and now vindicated or excused by Northern Democrats, had created an immense national debt, and rendered the ordinary sources of revenue wholly insufficient to meet the expenses of the Government and pay the interest upon the national debt. That defects exist in the present laws is probable, and that fact is recognized and admitted by those who have assisted in framing them, as the constant efforts at improvement by repeated amendments abundantly prove. [Applause.]

But the Democratic resolution, above cited, if adopted as the basis of our revenue system, would increase existing evils instead of diminishing them. It has been the policy of all wise and prudent governments to throw the burden of taxation, as much as possible, upon the capital of the country, leaving its labor, which is the source and foundation of its wealth, untrammeled and free. Now, if the ad valorem system of Washington Territory Democracy is to be adopted, it taxes everything produced or consumed in the country according to its value. The necessaries of the poor and the luxuries of the rich share alike. The widow's cup of weak tea and her children's homespun must and will be taxed as rigorously as the rich man's furs, and broadcloths and champagne. If, on the other hand, articles of necessity, which enter into general consumption pay but a light ad valorem tax, and articles of luxury, enjoyed only by the affluent, pay the same tax with a specific tax super-added, it makes the burden of government fall lightly upon the poor who depend upon their labor, while the wealthy, who live upon the accumulations of capital, contribute a large proportional share to the National Government and credit. This class of specific taxes is illustrated by the special charges made upon gold watches, carriages, pianos, incomes, and a thousand other things which are more commonly owned and enjoyed by the rich than the poor. The pure ad valorem system has been advocated by the Democratic party for years, and the hard working, honest thousands who vote that ticket have failed to realize the pitfall dug for them by the nabobs who seek to shift the burden of taxation from their untold millions and impose it upon the daily earnings of the common laborer. [Continued Applause.]

Having discussed as fully as time will permit the leading issues thus far involved in this canvass, I crave your attention to some matters of paramount importance to our own Territory. The removal of military headquarters from Vancouver to Portland, Oregon, has resulted in injury to our people and additional expense to the General Government to the extent of seventy five or eighty thousand dollars per annum. In these times when the treasury is overtaxed and retrenchment should be the order of the day, expenses in the military department should be curtailed, as well as in the civil, particularly in cases where the public service will not be injured thereby. Subsistence, supplies and rapid communication are as much at command in Vancouver as in Portland, while the impulse given to trade, the mechanic arts and agricultural labor and production by the return of headquarters to Vancouver would be at once manifest. Any Delegate, attentive to the interests of his constituents, could hardly overlook this subject.—[Applause.]

My observations and experience in the Surveyor General's office have satisfied me that a discrimination in the prices paid for public surveys, in the different sections of the Territory, should be authorized by law. Our Territory, east of the Cascade Range, is almost an unbroken prairie, while the country west of those mountains is heavily timbered and difficult to penetrate. The price allowed by law will not pay for surveys in the timbered regions, and settlers, in such localities, are compelled to contribute considerable amounts in order to secure the survey of their lands, previous to their entry. This is not as it should be, and I feel assured that, were the proper representations made at Washington, legislation could be obtained which would obviate the difficulty and enable the public surveys to keep pace with, if not precede, settlement. Such legislation would be a boon to many within my knowledge, and efforts for securing it should not be omitted. [Long continued Applause.]

Here Mr. Garfielde gave way, under the arrangements made, to Judge Lancaster, who appeared by the authority and as the representative of the Democratic nominee.—The Judge spoke for an hour and a half, occupying the most of his time in retailing stale slanders against Mr. G., and misrepresenting his arguments throughout. A little faint applause and a good deal of hissing indicated the dissatisfaction of the audience. He talked and stopped, and began and stopped again, and so continued until he had exhausted all his ideas, all his calumnies and all the patience of the audience, and then sat down amid an ominous silence, more dreadful than the loudest demonstrations of dissatisfaction. Mr. Garfielde then came forward, amid the wildest and most enthusiastic cheering, and said:

MY FRIENDS AND COUNTRYMEN:—If poverty be a crime, then I plead guilty. I was born in poverty, raised in the same condition, and have held my own remarkably well ever since. I obtained my early education by the light of a pine knot fire, in a home too lowly even to afford candles, my days being devoted to labor in making that home in the primeval forests of the west. [Applause.] From that time to the present, want little of mental culture I have acquired, has been the result of my own labors, unaided by friends, relatives, or sympathizing strangers. [Applause.] Reference to myself in public discussion is always unpleasant, but the calumnies of the speaker who has just taken his seat, render what I have said and may say justifiable by way of personal vindication. The asperities of this canvass manifested themselves in the Democratic Convention, where my character was assailed and my life criticised by various speakers, among whom was the venerable fossil who has just addressed you. [Laughter.] Not content with his efforts in defamatory eloquence in Convention, he must needs come to my own meeting, and here, before this vast audience, discharge the bitterness of his malevolent nature upon my unoffending head. Well, [turning to the Judge] if such be your purpose and programme, I say,

"Lay on, McDuff,
And damned be he who first cries hold, enough."

[Loud Applause.]

He charges me with dishonesty, in not paying back the hundred dollars borrowed from him in the canvass of 1861. At the date of that canvass I was thousands of dollars in debt from the dissipations of a partner who had swamped me in 1858. My defeat in 1861, left me still more deeply involved. I did not return the Judge's money to him as soon as I could have wished, but have paid him upon that one hundred dollar note, the sum of one hundred and sixty three dollars in coin, and stand ready to pay off the balance at any time upon presentation of the note. [Applause.] He was one of my good Democratic friends during that canvass, and let me have the money to help me along. His generosity will be appreciated by all, when it is known that he took my note bearing only two per cent. per month interest. [Laughter] If payment was not made upon the day when the note fell due, but few will sympathize with the Judge in his loss, as he gets his principal back and two per cent. interest per month for the whole time. I owed the debt and have never repudiated any part of it, but have paid that and other debts, pro rata, as fast as I have been able to earn the money, until but little of an original indebtedness of six thousand dollars remains unpaid.

If I have not paid my debts the moment they fell due, I have not re-branded my neighbors' cattle, whose mournful bellowings fall upon the ear of my imagination, in prolonged cadences, like the sighs of the last spirit of the sage of *Cattle*poodle or any other poodle. [Immense Cheering.]

Finding the practice of the law, in the sparsely populated districts of Puget Sound, a slow method of earning money to support my family and pay off my debts, I went to Cariboo in the summers of 1863–4, in the hope of obtaining a portion of the lucrative practice of that region. This effort to earn money to pay my debts, the Judge's among the rest, is now construed, by his bitterness of soul, into an effort to escape the draft. Thus he censures me for failing to pay, and censures me also, for my efforts to pay. Take whatever course I would, the vials of his indignation must be poured out upon me.—But if I fled the draft, why did I return and spend seven months out of each twelve at home in the Territory? The charge is mean, and low, and contemptible, and is unworthy even of the source from which it emanates, bad as that may be. Cheers.]

Again, this good and pious Judge charges me with frauds in the Receiver's office years ago. This heartless and malicious slander has been refuted times without number. My accounts are square with the Government, and not a dollar was ever deposited with me, by the settler for the entry of land, but what was applied to that purpose or returned to the depositor before the conditions of the receipt had expired. To this statement there is but one exception, and in that case, the money has been on hand for years with which to pay off the receipt whenever presented. But slanders like the foregoing are hatched in little, jealous and revengeful minds, and peddled out to the public in the place of open, frank and manly argument upon the issues of the day, in the hope that the public mind may be diverted from the living, breathing political issues, and concentrated upon personal detraction and abuse. I had hoped that this canvass would be conducted upon fair and honorable principles, without malice and without personal detraction. But if I am to be rejected for the reason that I have not paid all my debts when due, then the Democratic party must choose another candidate for their nominee does not pay all his debts as they fall due, as papers now in my hands, as an attorney, abundantly prove.—Judge Lancaster may be above the reach of poverty, as he is said to possess great wealth. But this fact only tends to make his hypocritical whinings all the more contemptible. But why should he not be rich when every dollar that comes into his possession, falls into the bottomless pit of his avarice, there to remain forever, and his public and private charities have been confined to a sack of flour and two and a half pounds of butter, annually contributed for the support and maintenance of a poor and superannuated parent! [Cheers.]

Not satisfied with the foregoing charges, another is added, to the effect that I was not true to the Union, in Cariboo. Fortunately, I happen to have a letter from one of the most widely known and best men in British Columbia, William E. Boone, from which I read as follows:

"I was present during your conversation with Mr. Roeder in regard to the war, but do not now call to mind the particular expressions made use of by you at that time. But I have heard you say that any calamity, even to the burning of Washington, would be a fortunate occurrence, if it only succeeded in arousing the North from their apathy, and that from that moment, you should consider the rebellion crushed. I can only say that during your whole stay in Cariboo, I had the pleasure of being your constant companion—that we occupied the same cabin and even the same bunk—that we had frequent conversations about the war, often prolonged until two and three o'clock in the morning, during all of which, I am proud to say, I never heard you make use of a single expression other than the most loyal to the North and to the Union. To this statement I would willingly place my affidavit, if necessary. Upon this subject I can speak most emphatically, as it was the one of all absorbing interest at the time. And furthermore, the high appreciation I had of your opinions, should you have uttered anything disloyal, would have made an impression on my mind, not to be forgotten. It would have rendered you at once a distasteful companion, whereas I now look back to that time as having been the most pleasant of my life."

Thus writes one of nature's noblemen, a native of Pennsylvania, and long a resident of Minnesota, and one of the best of men and patriots.

The charge of my having become a British subject is as ungenerous as it is unjust. I went to Cariboo to make money with which to pay my debts, and failed in that object because I would not take the oath of allegiance to Her Majesty. Had I done so, a lucrative practice was before me—but refusing, I was excluded from the bar and compelled to resort to other means of making a living. Badly as I needed money, I was unwilling to make it at the sacrifice of my nationality, and particularly so, when my country was in the agonies of civil war, and the clouds of secession were obscuring the sun of its future existence and prosperity.

The Democrats are whining about the removal of Gov. Moore from office, and allege that he was removed on account of his Democracy. No man in this Territory can tell whether he is a Democrat or not. Unless greatly misrepresented, he has expressed opinions favorable to both sides, and certainly voted for President Lincoln. Taken all in all, the party must be satisfied with a very small amount of Democracy in its nominee, or they never would have nominated Gov. Moore. Besides this, he is not the only military man who has been removed by President Grant. Democrats and Republicans alike are removed when, in the judgment of the executive, there is reason for making a change.

Judge Lancaster either wholly misunderstands, or wilfully misrepresents my position. I do not admit that a state can withdraw from the Union, but hold the reverse to be true. A state, by its voluntary act, may terminate its existence as such, but its territory and its people remain, as before, component parts of the great American Nation. There are but three methods by which the allegiance of the citizen may be terminated. These are expatriation coupled with foreign naturalization, successful rebellion and death. Long pronunciamentos and boastful manifestos produce no change in the legal status of the citizen. Nor does it matter whether the person is resident of a locality controlled by state or territorial organization. In either case, he is a citizen of the Republic, entitled to the rights and subject to the restraints and responsibilities which that relation carries with it, and from which he can relieve himself only by one of the methods before enumerated. It thus becomes clear that the Southern rebels wrought no change in their nationality but simply deprived themselves of state organizations, and that by their own voluntary acts in abolishing their state constitutions. If the Judge's mind is too obtuse to understand my position, I cannot help it. I cannot afford to furnish mouth, ears and brains for his exclusive benefit. [Cheers.] But he says that a state cannot terminate its existence, as such, by any voluntary act. Suppose Oregon, in strict conformity with all the forms and conditions of law, should call a convention and abolish her state constitution, and fail to make a new one. What would be her condition and position in the Union, and what power on earth could lawfully compel her to frame a new organic act and once more set her machinery of state in operation? The question admits of but one answer. Her condition would be that of a territory, and no power, save the voice of her own people, could call another convention and reconstruct her state government. And when so reconstructed, she would require re-admission by Congressional act before she could resume her rights and privileges as a state in the Union. This is the whole question in a nut shell, and is certainly intelligible to every honest mind.

The Judge claims to favor the plan of having Congressional representation based exclusively upon white population. If so, then he is no Democrat, for this is the doctrine of the 14th amendment to the Constitution, and the Democracy of the whole Nation fought against it in the canvass of last year. No, he desires to count the negro in the basis but exclude him from the ballot, thereby adding about forty to the Democratic representation in Congress.

He tells us of Agassiz, the learned chemist and geologist, traveling to the Amazon River to search for old fossils and to study the skulls of negroes. Agassiz had better stayed at home. Our own Territory furnishes the most wonderful specimen of fossil existence. It is known to naturalists as the fossil Lancasterius, and belongs to the "basaltic formation." The only deposit known to scientific men is found in the neighborhood of Pekin, on Lewis River, where it seriously effects the public roads, and was long since voted a nuisance by the whole neighborhood. [Vociferous Cheering, Laughter and Applause.]

But now the Judge is himself again. He has reached, in his argument, the great corner-stone of Democracy—the everlasting "nigger." Those who believe in the Democratic party should feel very grateful to the negro—for without negroes there can be no Democracy. A member of the great Democratic party has most beautifully expressed the feelings and opinions of his party in that sublime strain, commencing:

"Nigger, nigger, nigger,
Nigger, nigger, nig.
Chorus.—Nigger, nig."

You can't send the negro to Liberia, for if you do, you send the Democratic party with him. [Laughter and Applause.]

The learned gentleman from Pekin next takes up the Chinese question. Considering the locality from which he comes, he ought to understand this question thoroughly, but he does not. No Republican desires to bestow the ballot upon the Chinaman. That climax of political absurdity was left for Andy Johnson and his copperhead cabinet to endorse—and they did it. When the Chinese embassy reached Washington last year, a treaty was cooked up in Cabinet council which permitted Chinese naturalization. But when that treaty came before the Republican Senate for ratification, that odious feature was stricken out. [Great Applause.] Again, when that same Chinese embassy visited San Francisco, they were feted and feasted by Gov. Haight, Mayor McCoppin, and others of the copperocracy, in the splendid dining room of the Lick House. At the head of the table sat Governor Haight. On his right sat Pig Tail, No. 1. On his left, sat Pig Tail, No. 2. Below them sat Mayor McCoppin, beyond him Pig Tail, No. 3, and so on all around the room—all these Democratic nabobs hobnobbing with Chinamen, and eating rice with chop sticks. [Tremendous Cheering.]

But who is the friend of the foreigner? I will tell you. We pledge to all, national good faith. In the darkest day of the rebellion, when victory was perching upon the banners of the South, when the national treasury was empty, and our army was unclad, unfed and unpaid—in this gloomiest hour of peril and incertitude, the nation stretched out its arms to the friends of freedom in Europe, and asked for aid. We said to our friends across the water, "lend us your money. We are in sorest need. Our country, our institutions and human liberty the world over are in peril. If we fail, you will lose all. But if we succeed, we will pay you back with interest, and extend the hand of friendship to your posterity, and bid them come and enjoy, in common with ourselves, the rich heritage of liberty, secured and perpetuated by your father's generosity and our father's valor." The freedom loving Germans saw our danger, trembled for the fate of the last home of liberty, and decided. They sold their British securities for British gold, and poured four hundred million dollars into our treasury. With that money we clothed and fed and paid our men. The battle was fought and the victory won, and I say God bless the honest Germans! [Great Applause.]

Again. But a few days since Mr. Chandler, a Republican and patriot, made a great speech upon the British treaty upon the Alabama question, in which he vindicated Ireland against her British calumniators. One of the leading "Head Centers" telegraphed him at once, "twenty thousand Irishmen thank you for that speech!" [Cheers.] For many long years, the Democratic party had undisturbed possession of the Government, and yet they never sought to protect the naturalized foreigner upon his return to his native land. They took his vote, but neglected his interest. When the Republican party took office, they began at once to correct this evil. They said to the European States that when a man swore allegiance to the American Constitution, he became an American citizen, and was entitled to full protection as such. This firm stand for the right is resulting in treaties upon this subject, fully recognising the justice of our position, and foreigners can go abroad feeling sure of protection wherever the Stars and Stripes float to the breeze.

In regard to Gov. Moore, personally, I have but little to say. I do not desire, like some of my Democratic opponents, to promote party success by traducing individuals. The Democratic nominee is a comparative stranger in our midst. He came to our Territory with a high commission in his pocket. Who her he would have come or whether he will stay without it, is not for me to say.—Upon this point, I can speak more fully in regard to myself. I have been a resident of this Territory for more than twelve years. I have staid with you in prosperity and adversity. I have been all over the Territory five or six times. I have studied its locality, its resources, its necessities and the wants of its people, and I claim to know more of these matters than Gov. Moore possibly can in the short time he has spent here, and I also claim to be able to do more for the country than any man who stands arrayed in political hostility to the President and both Houses of Congress. For these and kindred reasons I ask your suffrages upon the first Monday in June next. I canvassed Oregon and California last fall, and did not take a cent for my services. I then received warm assurances of co-operation and assistance from the whole Pacific coast, should I go to Washington and ask favors for our Territory. Those promises will be redeemed; and I call upon you to place me in position where I can ask for favors in your name.

Our Territory is remote from the great sources and centers of population, and is severed in twain by a lofty range of mountains, cutting off two thirds of its area from the sea. We must have railroads across our country and extending to the Mississippi in order to bring us population and prosperity. The building of these roads must be encouraged by the Government in grants of land and other material aid. The hope of being able to promote the railroads and other material interests of our Territory, based upon the facts and reasons already assigned, constitutes my only desire to represent you in Congress; and could I see that any other person, through his long residence in our midst, his knowledge of our country and people, his services to this coast, his harmony with the Government, and his ability to present, explain and enforce our claims, our wants and necessities, was better able to serve the Territory and start us forward in a career of prosperity, I would willingly stand aside myself and give him a hearty Godspeed.

The next two or three years must fix the future of Washington Territory. The eyes of the American people are upon us, and their ears are open to our arguments and explanations. If we prove ourselves equal to the occasion, and inaugurate a system of intercommunication we shall become foremost among the states of the Pacific. The commerce of two worlds is within our reach.—Let us stretch forth our hands and grasp it. Already I see the dawn of a better day upon us. The twilight rays of the early morn are now purpling our mountains and dispelling the shadows in our valleys. The pioneers of civilization who have waited—and struggled—and hoped—until hope was merging into despair, may now take courage and look forward to the early sunburst of a brighter day. The Nation is awaking to the coming greatness of the far Northwest, and beginning to realize the importance of our position in the pathway of universal commerce. Already, in the early future, may be heard upon our plains the machinery—the neighing of the iron horse—the rattle of wheels upon paved streets, and the heavy breathings of the great steamship, as it leaves the wharf and begins its voyage of five thousand miles.

Then shall the wealth of our mountains, the fruits of our plains and the fatness of our valleys drop into the lap of honest industry. Then shall our forests, the noblest on earth, which now promote the growth and prosperity of remote localities, bow down to the purposes of domestic utility and contribute to the wealth and adornment of our own Territory. Our spindles and shuttles shall whirl and leap to the dash of our waterfalls, and fabrics of every hue and texture spring forth from ten thousand looms. The fiery rod of iron shall issue from the jaws of massive rollers, and the ponderous hammer ring upon the anvils of our manufactories. Populous cities and towns shall adorn our shores, thriving villages and peaceful hamlets nestle in our valleys and among the mountains.—Schools and seminaries of learning shall abound, and the "Sound of the church-going bell"

shall find an echo in the hearts of an intelligent and God-fearing people. [Tremendous Applause, Cheering and Uproar.]

GARFIELDE IN 1849.

The following extracts, from a speech of the Hon. S. Garfielde, before the Convention for the Revision of the Constitution of the State of Kentucky, in the year 1849, shows that that gentleman stood in politics then where he stands now, and that duplicity and tergiversation are not attributes of his character. In the midst of an assembly of proud, pro slavery Kentuckians, he is not ashamed to say, "The first lesson I learned upon the bleak and frost bound hills of New England was, equal rights to all, exclusive privileges to none. Such a sentiment expressed in such a place, shows the greatest nobility of character:

"I rise to express the opinion that the resolution, of the gentleman from Madison, should not be laid on the table as suggested by some here. There are a couple of literary gems, in embryo here, twin brothers, that I would like to see developed to this house. The first is the political, philosophical axioms that slavery is a moral blessing to both the slave and his master, and a political blessing to the commonwealth. The second is, the divine axiom that the Being who descended from Heaven to free mankind from the shackles of sin, came also to assist in riveting the hackles of human despotism. I hope a full and fair opportunity will be granted for the development of both these principles, so entirely new and strange as they are. And although we all may have come here to carry out the wishes and principles of our constituents, yet if members of this Convention will be benefitted by the discussion of principles of this character, I hope that the committee will grant them an opportunity."

Again he says,

"I was pleased to hear the resolution and remarks of the gentleman from Christian. I have, with many others on this floor, felt that this question involves a great and fundamental principle, and that it was my duty as a freeman to enter my solemn protest, with others, against sectional restriction of the elective franchise, or in other words, limiting the representation of certain districts.

I am from the country, and the local interests of my constituents might be advanced by restricting the cities. But the question involves a great principle, one which lies at the very base of self government, and upon which the fair temple of human liberty rests. But the doctrine here advocated, if once engrafted upon the fundamental law of the state, is without limit. I ask gentlemen, where is the limit to this course of procedure? If the Convention assembled here have a right to restrict a city population in its representation, have they not, at the same time, and for the same reason, a right to limit the representation of any other section of the State?

Again we have been taught in this Convention that one great object of human government was to protect the minority against the encroachments of the majority. Learned politicians on this floor, whose heads are sprinkled over with the frosts of many winters, and who have grown old in their country's service, have taught us that the minority have rights which the majority ought to protect. For this purpose government was instituted. Yet, upon this floor, in the face of these noble and magnanimous sentiments, we hear gentlemen say it is our right and privilege to restrict and trample upon the rights of the minority. Being a young politician and unacquainted with the subtleties of political abstractions, I hoped to see these two antagonistic principles harmonized. But my teaching has been very different. Numerous gentlemen in this body have manifested their sympathy for the inhabitants of the New England States, who are suffering so much misery from tyranny and degradation, But, sir, the first lesson I learned upon the bleak and frost bound hills of New England was, equal rights to all, exclusive privileges to none. I was there taught that representation and taxation go hand in hand, that no man should be called upon to support a government which he had no hand in making. I was there taught that the proud privilege of bearing the name of American citizen, gave him the right to be heard, by himself or representative, in the legislative hall.

But a thought or two in regard to the sentiments that have been advanced upon this floor. Why are we called upon to restrict the cities in their representation? Why are we called upon to do violence to the first principle of a popular government? To what shrine must we bow, and upon what altar must we burn incense to entitle us to orthodoxy? We are told by one gentleman certain sentiments are being instilled into the minds of the people on the northern border of Kentucky which are exceedingly deleterious to the State, and unless those people are restricted in their votes upon a question of great importance, the interests of the slaveholder will be jeopardized. Reduce that principle to its original essence, trace it out in its various bearings, and in what will it result? Simply this: that the elective franchise, in this state, is based upon, a set of opinions entertained by the majority, the opposite of which being entertained by an individual amounts to disqualification.

Thus would you stifle the free voice of Kentucky's noble sons by the tyranny of opinionism. Thus would you base the rights and liberties of the people upon the caprice of a vascillating majority.

Again: what is the other idea which has been represented here? it is that locality shall determine a man's right to representation. That this shall be inviolate so long as he resides in one section of the state, but removal to the interdicted locality shall operate as a disability.

Sir, I ask who delegated the power to this convention to restrict me or any one else as to my place of habitation? Who has the right to say that persons congregating at a given point shall be restricted in their representation? I trust that this question will be answered to the satisfaction of this house.

The secret springs of action on this question were developed on Saturday last. It is the morbid sensibility of members on the slave question which has driven them to this issue. Sir, what is the history of this convention since it assembled here? We ask for the incorporation of the principle of the law of 1833 into the constitution. We are told that it conflicts with the interest of the slaveholder—that is the first step towards the emancipation, that therefore it must be sacrificed. The ballot system of voting is called for. Again, we are informed that it will prove injurious to the slave interest. The specific mode of amending the constitution, which the spirit of the nineteenth century evidently calls for, is suggested. Still the cry is that slave property is endangered by it. Driven in at all points, we ask that representation shall be equal and uniform throughout the commonwealth. Even at this point they meet us and say that we must yield.—They tell us that the dearest right of a Kentucky freeman must yield to the slave, that the time has arrived when one section of the state must be deprived of representation must be disfranchised, to protect the interests of another. Where is this matter to stop?—How far shall the ideal interests of one section of the state control the absolute rights of the other? Are 110,000 non-slave-holding voters to be disfranchised for fear they will emancipate the slaves.

I stand here the warm advocate of the rights of the people. The property of individuals, of whatever kind, should be inviolate, and I will go as far as any other man for the rights of the property. No man or set of men have the right to take from me the property which I hold by a law of nature, anterior to the organization of society. But there is a right to preserve, for which I would sacrifice my property. That right is involved in the question before us. Rather than see this inalienable right trampled upon, I am willing for those rights based upon municipal laws, to be abolished. In a word, if the slavery of the black is to be based upon the degredation and slavery of the white, then sir, I am prepared to see the institution abolished. No institution is consistent with the genius of our form of government, which requires the best rights and dearest interests of the people to be trampled upon in order to its protection, and the doctrine advocated here is that we must disfranchise a portion of the people of the state for the purpose of protecting the interests of the slaveholder. Sir, such principles are antagonistic to human liberty,

But I conceive gentlemen have taken an incorrect view of this subject. The people of northern Kentucky are as conservative upon the question of slavery as any other section of the state. Look at the northern counties and cities and tell me what indications and of radicalism the late elections have shown. How many immediate or gradual emancipationists are returned here. Not one so far as my knowledge extends. I come not from the region of the shuttle and spindle on the one hand, nor do I represent the blue glass country on the other, but I come as the representative of the free constituency to maintain the rights of the people at large.—In the discharge of that duty I am satisfied that I shall receive the countenance and support of those who sent me here. I stand then, sir, in framing this constitution, not as the advocate of local interests, but of great and fundamental principles.

THE KNOB!

The real question at issue, is not whether a Democratic or a Republican Delegate is elected, but whether a tool of the enemies of Washington Territory or a friend finds his way to Congress. Whether she wear the proud crown of an independent Territory or a collar inscribed L. & T., Portland, Oregon.

Ben Holladay represents millions of capital. He sees that at the same time that he benefits himself, he can benefit Washington He comprehends all the natural advantages she possesses; and is willing to assist in making for her a glorious future, but some dogs in the manger capitalists at Portland have lorded it so long and so tyrannically it sorely grieves their narrow souls to see a capitalist step into the arena that can overtop their little piles. It galls them to the quick to see any other region attract attention except their own little kingdom, where they reign supreme and alone, without a rival, so they make tools of the Democrats of Washington Territory through played out politicians, and are going to attempt to put into power an agent of theirs.

Are the inhabitants of this Territory such fools, as to allow themselves to be hoodwinked by their enemies and to lie in a state of serfdom at the feet of a few selfish souls, instead of soaring to the proud heights for which God and Nature intended them? An unsubdued soul will overcome poverty, spurn at submission, and the late slave of circumstances becomes their master. Washingtonians! be worthy of the name of the founder of our nation. He spurned the gilded chain of slavery, and you are free. But on this chain destined for you there is not even gilding. You have no reward but ignominy, and the consciousness of riveting your fetters. They raise the bugaboo of a Chinaman or a negro, and attempt to scare you into submission. Are you cowards, that you should so easily submit? They talk about the negro's wool, when it is your own they are pulling over your eyes. Will you be the caudal extremity of a State that nullified acts of Congress, and at the same breath, asked the largest franchise of land and subsidies?—Will you entail penury, hardship, and hope deferred on your children, or wealth, ease and hope realized? Will you be in hostility or accord with the General Government?—Will you turn back from the Canaan that smiles before you, and feast upon the fleshpots that stagnate in eternal stench behind you? Will you take your place in the sisterhood of States, not picked and molted, but full-fledged, full-winged, and flying like our mountain eagle to the highest pinnacle of fame? Shall we have as our motto Democratic principles, our crest a cor-moore-ant that would tear out our vitals, to feed the envy of Portland Capitalists, or shall we choose the nobler sentiment, uttered to Kentuckians by Salucius Garfielde, "Equal rights to all, exclusive privileges to none."

Mr. Garfielde's Course in British Columbia.

VANCOUVER, April 29, 1869.

ED. REGISTER:—As some of the opponents of Mr. Garfielde have sought to do him injury by false accusations regarding his conduct in British Columbia, I think it becomes the duty of one who knows the utter groundlessness of these charges to publicly contradict them.

The charges and specifications are, 1st—Levanting from the Territory to avoid the draft. 2d—Swearing allegiance to the British Government. 3d—Avowed sympathy for the South. 4th—Dissolute habits;

Happening to be in Cariboo, B. C., during the whole of Mr. Garfielde's sojourn there, and having as good opportunities of knowing his sentiments as any one else, I shall give you my reasons for disbelieving the whole of these charges.

1st—As no one ever anticipated a draft in Washington Territory we shall not stop to consider the ridiculousness of the 1st charge. 2d.—The best evidence that Mr. Garfielde is a conscientious patriot, was his refusal to take the oath administered to native barristers and in which a prodigious amount of loyalty, and fealty and all that sort of thing is promised to Her Majesty's Government, but which is seldom construed as a renunciation of nationality (except by persons particularly conscientious) any more than we construe the law admitting Oregon lawyers to practise in our Territorial courts as an abnegation of their rights as citizens of Oregon. His opponents are certainly hard up for material from which to manufacture capital when they have recourse to so poor, far fetched and shadowy an expedient as this.

3d.—Mr. Garfielde is accused of having uttered treasonable sentiments while in British Columbia. The only speech I ever heard Mr. Garfielde make in British Columbia, and the only one, I believe, he ever delivered there, was on the occasion of the banquet given in honor of Governor Seymour's visit to the mines, in which I had the honor of participating. The second toast proposed was "The President of the United States," to which sentiment Mr. Garfielde was called upon by the Americans present to respond. I shall not attempt to recall the glowing words of the speaker on that memorable occasion, suffice it to say that they were brimful of patriotism and love of country, concluding by predicting an early triumph for the Federal arms. The high dignitary they were entertaining was greviously offended at Mr. Garfielde's remarks, he being an avowed sympathizer with the secessionists. A short time after the assassination of Mr. Lincoln Mr. Garfielde happened to be in Victoria, and from his known admiration of that good man he was called upon by the Americans there resident to pay a tribute to his memory. He pronounced such a eulogy as none but a man who speaks from the heart can do. Lincoln's character was never more fittingly embalmed than in the golden words of his eulogist.

4th—The charge of intemperance has not the least foundation. In a mining community where immorality was the rule, he formed one of the few exceptions.

Having flatly contradicted every charge, I shall leave it with his accusers to prove the truth of their allegations, or acknowledge that they were mere fabrications circulated to injure a man they have no hope of beating by fair means alone.

THE GREAT METROPOLIS

A MIRROR OF

NEW YORK.

BY

JUNIUS HENRI BROWNE.

The Author of this work needs no endorsement. His well known signature, as a leading and popular correspondent of the press, is welcomed at thousands of firesides in the land. His talents of close observation, his long experience as a journalist, and his acknowledged talents as a writer have all been drawn upon and concentrated for months upon this work.

Reflecting every phase of Metropolitan life and society, giving life-like pictures of the interesting localities and peculiar institutions of New York, the manners and customs of every class of its people; their modes and habits of life; how and where they live; the great contest for wealth raising among them, and how it is gained and how lost; revealing scenes of wickedness and of misery; exposing the tricks of the dishonest, and the traps for the unwary; in fact, showing up the inner life of the great heart of our country, in a manner and with a fulness never equaled, this volume is respectfully offered by the publishers, with implicit faith in its great value as a book of profit and amusement.

IT TREATS

Of New York, its People, and of every grade of Society, gives

SPICY LIFE SKETCHES

Of every distinguished character in New York, and contains over

WEBFOOT CHIEF.

WILL STAND FOR A LIMITED NUMber of mares the ensuing season, at the stable of his owner, on the Lackamas Plain, in Clarke county, W. T., at the following prices: $25 to ensure a mare with foal, to be paid as soon as the mare is known to be in that condition. Parting with the mare, however, before she is known to be with foal forfeits the insurance. Good pasture will be furnished mares from a distance free of charge, and great care taken to avoid accident, but no liability will be assumed should any occur.

N. B.—No Indian half breed or Spanish mares will be taken. This fine, well bred young stallion is a beautiful bay, fifteen and a half hands high, and for size, form, figure and action is not surpassed on this coast, and for disposition has no superior, being ambitious and spirited, yet docile and tractable. He recommends himself to all good judges of horses, and to such and those who are anxious to improve their stock, we say "come and see him and his progeny and convince yourselves that blood will tell." It is deemed unnecessary to say anything about his pedigree further than he was sired by Humboldt o Oregon out of Lucy Eden, or better known in her younger days, as the Eden Filly. J. G.

Many years ago, the writer of these lines and an invalid physician, while visiting the Island of St. Croix for their health, experienced and witnessed many surprising and beneficial effects of the Rum there produced upon many of the invalids who were (like ourselves) seeking health; and, upon inquiry and investigation, obtained a full history of its medicinal virtues. He was delighted and surprised, and after his own recovery, which soon occurred, determined, if possible, to procure the sole right to manufacture and sell it in the United States.

The result of his labors was a glorious success for himself and suffering humanity, for the celebrated PLANTATION BITTERS was thus made known to the world. PLANTATION BITTERS being an article of real merit, founded upon new principles, and relying wholly upon the vegetable world for its medicinal effects, worked a rapid revolution in the history of medicine, and became as a household word all over the civilized world. The cabalistic S. T.—1860—X. was a talisman of health, and the demand for the PLANTATION BITTERS soon far exceeded the abilities of the proprietors to supply.

Notwithstanding the large importation of St. Croix Rum, made expressly for the compounding of these Bitters, the quantity was inadequate. It therefore became necessary that arrangements upon an extensive scale abroad should at once be made, and an agent was dispatched to St. Thomas for that purpose. He was fortunate in securing and leasing several plantations on some of the largest and most productive estates on the island. Houses, stills and presses were erected as if by magic, which utterly "astonished the natives." The services of experienced men and natives of the island were procured, and very soon the proprietors of the PLANTATION BITTERS were in a position to supply their laboratory with all the perfectly pure St. Croix Rum needed in manufacturing the GREAT DYSPEPTIC TONIC AND INVIGORATOR. The above cut represents the natives crushing the sugar-cane and otherwise preparing it for the stills and presses.

As an antidote to Fever and Ague, Intermittent and Malarious Fevers, Dyspepsia, and other kindred diseases, the use of the PLANTATION BITTERS is unsurpassed in the history of the world. Over five million bottles are disposed of annually. They are adapted to old and young, male and female. They are agreeable in taste, and always produce an immediate beneficial result.

AWARDED TO

WHEELER & WILSON FAMILY SEWING MACHINE!

Over 32 Competitors,

—AT THE—

Great Paris Exposition,

Being the highest honors and all the Gold Medals awarded any Sewing Machine Company at this Exposition.

As a HOLIDAY Present, Nothing will be more appreciated THAN ONE OF these MACHINES.

America, England and France, now unite in this grand Proclamation:

Good news! good news the cable brings,
O'er all the wires it flies,
Wheeler & Wilson's sewing machine
Brings back the golden prize.

Our "Uncle Sam" first struck the note,
"John Bull" then caught the sound;
Now comes from France the echo back,
Wheeler & Wilson's crowned.

And now, no more the people doubt,
So long its stand the test—
The thing is fairly noised about;
And they will buy the best.

We can now supply those who wish to purchase 'STODDARD'S PATENT TUCK-MARKER,' one of the most useful attachments to the Machine yet invented; which, while sewing on tuck, makes the line of marks for the next.

AND AT THE NEW YORK STATE FAIR, BUFFALO.

THE FLORENCE WAS AWARDED

A Silver Medal at the Paris Exposition,

Silver Medals being the highest on Family Sewing Machines. The Gold Medals were awarded thus: one for Button-hole Machine, and the other to the original inventor of Sewing Machines.

The Committees on Family Sewing Machines

At the numerous Fairs held on the Pacific coast in the last four years, have unanimously decided in favor of the Florence, this machine having taken every First Premium since the Agency has been established in California. Among the gentlemen who acted as judges we mention Messrs. Thomas Hanshrow, George Schweizer, Samuel Blair, J. N. Andrew, Thomas C. McMahon, A. F. Hitchcock, and S. C. Bugbee—men well known as being among the first and best mechanics in the State—establishing beyond question the superiority of the

UNION, 1868.—n4-1y

MANHOOD.—IN THE YOUNG and rising generation, the vegetative powers of life are strong, but in a few years how often the palid hue, the lack-lustre eye, and emaciated form, and the impossibility of application to mental effort, show its baneful influence. It soon becomes evident to the observer that some depressing influences is checking the development of the body. Consumption is talked of, and perhaps the youth is removed from school and sent into the country. This is one of the worst movements. Removed from ordinary diversions of the ever-changing scenes of the city, is too much enfeebled to give zest to the healthful and rural exercise, thoughts are turned inwards upon themselves.

If the patient be a female, the approach of the menses is looked for with anxiety, as the first symptom in which Nature is to show her saving power in diffusing the circulation and visiting the cheek with the bloom of health. Alas! increase of appetite has grown by what it feeds on; the energies of the system are prostrated, and the whole economy is deranged. The beautiful and wonderful period in which body and mind undergoes so fascinating a change from child to woman, is looked for in vain; the parent's heart bleeds with anxiety, and fancies the grave but waiting for its victim.

HEMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU, for Weakness arising from excesses or early indiscretion, attended with the following symptoms: Indisposition to Exertion, Loss of Power, Loss of Memory, Difficulty of Breathing, General Weakness, Horror of Disease, Weak Nerves, Trembling, Dreadful Horror of Death, Night Sweats, Cold Feet, Wakefulness, Dimness of Vision, Languor, Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System, Often Enormous Appetite with Dyspeptic Symptoms, Hot Hands, Flushing of the Body, Dryness of the Skin, Pallid Countenance and eruptions on the Face, Pain in the Back, Heaviness of the Eyelids, Frequently Black Spots Flying before the Eyes, with Temporary Suffusion, and Loss of Sight, Want of Attention, Great Mobility, Restlessness, with Horror of Society. Nothing is more desirable to such patients than Solitude, and nothing they more dread, for Fear of Themselves; no Repose of Manner, no Earnestnesss, no Speculation, but a hurried Transition from one question to another.

These symptoms if allowed to go on—which this medicine invariably removes—soon follow Loss of Power, Fatuity, and Epileptic Fits, in one of which the patient may expire.

During the superintendence of Dr. Wilson at the Bloomingdale Asylum, this sad result occurred to two patients; reason had for a time left them, and both died of epilepsy. They were both sexes, and about twenty years of

Who can say that these excesses are not frequently followed by those direful diseases, Insanity and Consumption? The records of the Insane Asylums, and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of these assertions. In Lunatic Asylums the most melancholy exhibition appears. The countenance is actually sodden and quite destitute—neither Mirth or Grief ever visits it. Should a sound of the voice occur, it is rarely articulate.

"With woeful measures wan Despair
Low sullen sounds their grief beguiled."

Whilst we regret the existence of the above diseases and symptoms, we are prepared to offer an invaluable gift of chemistry for the removal of the consequences: HEMBOLD'S HIGHLY CONCENTRATED FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU. There is no tonic like it. It is an anchor of hope to the surgeon and patient, and this is the testimony of all who have used or prescribed it.

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere. Prepared at

H. T. HEMBOLD'S
Drug and Chemical Warehouse,

RECOMMENDATIONS.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH,
Jan. 28th, 1868.

Mr. H. T. HEMBOLD,
Dear Sir:

Your communication requesting our terms of advertising was duly received, but from a prejudice I had formed against advertising "cures for secret diseases," it was left unanswered. During an accidental conversation in a Drug Store the other evening, my mind was changed on the character of your Buchu. It was then highly commended for other diseases by two physicians present. Inclosed please find our rates of advertising.

Yours, &c.,
T. B. H. STENHOUSE,
Editor and Proprietor of Daily and Semi Weekly TELEGRAPH.

WOODWARD INSTITUTE,
Corner of 5th Avenue & 70th St.
(A Home and School for the Sons of Deceased Soldiers.)

Dr. H. T. HEMBOLD:

Two bottles only of the package of your valuable Buchu presented to the Institute have been used by the children, and with perfect success. In the case of our little Lieutenant, A. J., his pride is no longer mortified, and he is free from the daily anathemas of the chambermaid who has charge of his bedding. I feel that a knowledge of the result of our use of your Buchu with the children under our charge may save many a Superintendent and Matron of Boarding Schools and Asylums a great amount of annoyance; and many a poor child suffering more from weakness than from habit, may be spared punishment, that is (not knowing it as a weakness instead of a bad habit) most unjustly inflicted upon them. Thanking you on behalf of the children, and hoping others may be alike benefitted,

I am respectfully yours,
COL. YOUNG,
General Sup't and Director.

PROVIDENCE SCHOOL

For Young Ladies,

CONDUCTED BY

THE SISTERS OF CHARITY,

VANCOUVER, W. T.

THIS INSTITUTION, which was commenced in the year 1866, is delightfully situated at Vancouver, on the left bank of the Columbia river. The beauty of the surrounding scenery, and the salubrity of the place cannot be surpassed.

The course of studies embraces the various branches of a solid and special education, and a particular attention is given to form the pupils to household duties and plain and fancy needle-work.

Parents may rest satisfied that every care will be paid to the comfort of the young ladies placed at this Institution, whilst no pains will be spared to nourish in them those principles of virtue which alone can render education profitable.

No undue influence will be exercised over the religious opinions of the pupils; however, for the uninterrupted exercise of devotion, all are required to conform to the external discipline of the house.
