" Perhaps he is poor."

"That can hardly be said of him. No it is a part of the sordid system of economy which he has always followed. The memory of those who have known him longest does not recall the expenditure of a sixpence for any object not absolutely necessary. He is the very soul and embodiment of penurious and calculating meanness. His coat is threadbare, and hardly presentable—hat, oots, everything are of the oldest fashion and of antediluvian appearance. I wonder that in one so young, avarice, which is the vice of the old and worldly, should be so

Such were the strictures made by two young men upon an absent acquaintance. aed not so much anger as disappointment and disgust which animated them; and poor Williams was unanimously voted a miser by all present-some half dozen, including ladies. Just in the midst of this discussion, or rather as the case had been disposed of,-the subject of their remarks have been their opinions of him in the abde his appearance. "Come," said he, "we want you very much. Indeed we can't do without you .-The party will be incomplete, and I have your reasons, or remove your objections."

Williams smiled, but attempted no reply. The smile was, however, forced, and the subject evidently unexpected and disagreeable. The young man paused, sorry that he had commenced, but feeling that it was necessary, since he had begun, to finish, he went on to say :

"I am aware that you have politely but very firmly declined; but if your objections are not insuperable, I must beg that, as a

There are thousands of modes of relaxation - too many, indeed, for one whose time is as precious as mine is to me-quite too many for a young man who would be respectably prosperous in these days of competition .-Distinction I never have thought of."

"When a man gives no reason for unusual conduct," replied the other, " he must expect that his friends will-imagine them for him. You will not be offended, I know at what I am about to propose. Go with us as my guest-let me bear your expenses, and the secret shall be sofe between us .-Come, now, don't color to the temples an shake your head. Distinguished strangers who are wealthier than their entertainers are often free guests. Be our, go with us.

" If what you offer were a necessary to me," said Williams, " I would accept it and thank you heartily. If I were in want, or in difficulty, suffering for assistance, or at an inconvenience for a small sum, I would make free use of your generosity. Take that as an evidence that I am not offended at an offer which, however well meant, it is not possible for me to accept. I cannot incur an unnecessary obligation, I cannot break through the plan of life I have commenced, and I am not obliged to give a reason for what affects none but myself. I am well aware that my singularity and apparent avarice is the subject of remark; and have often been tempted to withdraw entirely from social intercourse; and would have done so, only that it would only expose me to still farther remark. One cannot be in the world and out of it at the same time .-I know and feel the awkwardness of my position-but cannot help it."

That is to say, though he had the command of more ready money, as his professional income, than most of those who expended more, he preferred a quiet conscience to a new coat; and the pleasure of doing his duty to that of spending his money foolishly. He had been educated by the self-denying aid of a widowed mother: and he repaid the sacrifices she had made by devoting his first professional profits to the education of his younger brothers and sisters. He knew that nothing but systematic economy would enable him to do this; and that course, once commenced, he steadily pursued. #### Labor Saving.

We have often been puzzled to know why it is, that people in other nations can carn their subsistence with half of their minds, whilst we seem obliged to throw our whole souls into the business. We should also like to understand, why, in these days, when steam does most of the hardest work, we should have to toil as many hours every day as our forefathers did, whose acquaintance with steam was derived chiefly from a slumberous observation of the tea-kettle. For a with success, and his methodical habits, century, ingenious men have been contriving adopted with a view to save expense and to improve the time which, to him, was money, laid the foundation of reputation and fortune for him. But everybody does advertise in a greater preparation was making for the ceremony, that hundreds were already anticipating the delights of the marriage? But you will say that this is incredible; no human being could be so foolish, so base, as thus to trifle with the feelings and happiness of another; no one could be so inconsistent and so indifferent to truth and his own reputation, as to utter such falschood and improbability.—Stop a moment. I agree with you in part. Perhaps if such an occurrence as the above should happen, no individual or person should be entitled to the monon of being its sole author. If such a thing should take place, I tell you how it might be brought about; and it is not possible but that a similar process may have been carried on. Suplements of the daily newspaper. You wish to tell the polici of your project, and at once the cdistor of the daily newspaper. You wish to tell the patch of your project, and at once the daily newspaper. It is not always paid for, but it is a short cut to the accomplishment of the object in view.

Very well; from all this, the conclusion lar process may have been carried on. Suppose I should see a gentleman speak to a lady—this is perfectly natural—and suppose I tell my friend that I saw Mr. A., speak to Miss B., and suppose, with a sort of intendo, I add that Mr. A. and Miss B. would not be a my collect match—now this is nother than the control of the match—now this is nother than the control of the match—now this is nother than the control of the match—now this is nother than the control of the match—now this is nother than the control of the match—now this is nother than the control of the match in the make an excellent match-now this is nothing very wicked if it is stopped here. But my friend thinks that I cannot tell a story half so well as he can, therefore in repeathalf so well as he can, therefore in repeating he embellishes a little to make it more pleasing to himself, and more marvellous to the listener. My friend tells his friend that Mr. A. and Miss B. talk, walk, and ride together very frequently; and, if he is not very much mistaken, they will ultimately be a match. To make things go on better, the last mentioned person dashes away to Mrs. Busybody, and cries out "great news." Mr. A. is engaged to Miss B. One of Mrs. Busybody's domestics hearing this exclamation, and thinking that a secret is not worth hearing, unless it may be told to about a dozen of her particular friends, therefore, tells a dozen of her fellow crafts, that Mr. A. is going to be married to Miss B. on the first Sabbath in next month! Reader, you will say this is but a "fancy sketch." Be it so; but if I have only fancied what may come to pass—or if my sketch should prevent what might otherwise come to pass, my fancy will have been busy to some good purpose, and I shall be at least entitled to the thanks of those who may be saved from the commission of a very fashionable sin. ing he embellishes a little to make it more ly retailers who deal out marvellous stories, conjectures, and surmises, in small quantities—like the pedlars who, too poor to pay rent for a shop, travel around the town, and bring their sixpenny commodities to your own doors. I mean those people who seem to have a mint in their own imagination, where they can coin such small change as best suits their purpose; and manufacture such tales as they think may create a little wonder in the hearer and entitle them to the praise of being their first propagator.

they often wound the character and feelings of those persons in whose welfare they are so busily engaged. Reader! what would you say were you told that from the single circumstance of a gentleman changing his place in a private circle of friends, in order to converse a few moments with a lady, whom he saw, perhaps for the first time, it should be reported in four days that he was positively engaged to marry, that every preparation was making for the ceremony, that hundreds were already anticipating the last time of the converse and do everything and anything to increase the number of their customers, but the very way which is easiest, most direct, most effectual, and altogether the cheapest, viz. By telling object in view.

Very well; from all this, the conclusion is inevitable that publicity is the only means by which one who has goods to sell can find customers for them. If it is good to tell a hundred persons that you can give them good bargains, it is much better to tell a thousand, and so on to the end of the chapter. The newspaper is the means to be used for this purpose. It goes everywhere, and tells your story to thousands at the same moment. It is to the business man better than capital, for it brings him customers, which capital will not do. It is in reality the poor man's capital, and when coupled with enterprise and activity, honesty and determination, is better than gold for a foundation. When all are combined, there is no such result as fail.

We know very well that it is the habit of some to undervalue advertising. Articles like this are too often set down as the arguments of an interested party, and are passed over without thought. This is not, however, always the case. There are those who study every way, and use every means to moment. It is to the business man better ever, always the case. There are those who study every way, and use every means to give publicity to their business; and, mark the statement—they will always be found among the most enterprising and successful of business men. One word of advice in conclusion: if you have goods to sell, tell of it.

Valedictory.

Whilst our successor bows himself into the columns of the Columbian, we, with perhaps less grace, but equal interest in the welfare of the land for which we have toiled, how ourself out. After the extreme closeness with which we have applied ourself to our laborious task of uncemitting toil during the past year, denied even the pleasure of a cruise on the Sound and a ramble in the coun-try, it will be admitted on all hands that we are as last entitled to our liberty, which is something that but few printers know aught about except from hearsay. We require relaxation,—poor human nature pleads hard for it, and with a shower of thanks to our patrons and friends for their past support and kindness, with hat in hand, and heart erflowing, we pause ere bidding them adieu. Concerning the service we have rendered, it is ratifying to hear the general verdict : the people know that we have been a faithful sentinel ever at our post, and those to whom we have mentioned our intention to withdraw, have almost overcome concluded to retire, and would tender assurance of our hearty appreciation of the disposition they hope if it should ever be our lot t return to the tripod and case again, that it may be in this community, with which we feel so fully identified. We leave the Columbian with many regrets. The pioneer press in Washington Ter ritory, our prayers shall always be for its success. With double its present petronage it would soon emerge from those straitened circumstances, the terrors of which are sufficiently well known to all men who have had the temerity to start new papers When it shall be upon the loftiest pinnacle of pros perity, then will be our season of rejoicing, and in our own future days it will be no little source of satisfaction to remember that we set the first type in the Territory, and that we stood faithfully by the Columbian during its trying moments, not permitting even our thoughts to stray from it to any other object until its first year had expired, and the most adverse waves with which it had to end had been successfully encountered. shall keep these facts bright in our recollection, and regard them as veterans do their victories.— We are disposed to prolong our social chat with our friends, from whom we are loth to part, but space is wanting, and hence we must pronounce "Farewell !—a word that hath been, and must be. A sound that makes us linger—yet, farewell !"

We shall remain in the office of the Columbia during the next three or four months for the purpose of collecting all outstanding debts, and will thank all persons in arrears for subscription and advertising to make prompt settlement with either surself or any of our authorized agents.

We want to know why it is that we only have a semi-occasional mail, instead of the regular weekly one contracted for, and for the transportation of which, some one is reg. ularly paid? Does the blame lay at the door of any, each or all of the postmasters from the Cowlitz river to the city of Portland; or, with anybody or nobody? Who is it ? Let us know, if you please, messires, so that we may not be compelled to "condemn the whole flock on account of one black sheep."

The mail from Portland, with dates to August 20th, reached this place Sept. 9th, being, as we are informed, the only one for three weeks, (quite an age in time of war.) When we were at Monticello, on our way over to this place, the general inquiry was "What has become of the mail?"-at the Cowlitz Landing, the same query was in the mouths of every one; so with every one we met on the road, and so with every one in Olympia. Now, on the principle that "in what everybody says there must be some truth," we concluded there was a wrong somewhere, and that we would bring it to the notice of those whose duty is to correct it-and we'll keep it there till they do.

The noise of the saw, bammer and plane is heard from one end of Olympia to the other. Carpenters are busy, and under their hands, several very handsome buildings are rapidly approaching completion. We're bound to have a city here-no mistake about that.

Salutatory.

We had designed making our debut be-neutral in politics and religion; meddlingdirectly or indirectly with neither the one nor the other, as they are matters entirely irrelevant to our present purposes. Politicians can discuss the one, and ministers of the gospel exemplify the other, and in their hands entirely, we are truly content to leave those subjects. Our sole aim will be to promote the interests of the territory at large, and to that end, will devote all our energies and ability. As we expect to make this country our future and permanent home, our efforts will be sincere and our motives beyond question. Whatever is right and proper that will conduce to the prosperity of the territory, and consequently to the interests and good of her citizens, will receive our hearty co-operation and support. We our purpose with their dissuasion, but we have hope to find the people harmonious and united upon all matters of public utility, each striving for the good of the whole; thus a mutual benefit will result; factions and cabals be kept down; the wealth and prosperity of the territory enhanced; we will command respect and attention abroad and possess those social attractions and comforts here in the new abode, without which "home is no longer home."

We may, and no doubt will, commit some errors in the course of our labors, but our readers will bear in mind that "to err is human," and we by no means claim to be perfect. Our faults will be those of judgnent, not design, and the public must deal leniently with them.

We have arranged for a regular corresondence from Portland, Oregon, which will embrace all the items of interest that may be stirring in that section. We also expect to secure the services of a compeent correspondent in San Francisco, Cal., to keep us well "posted up," in the business movements, markets, &c., of that city .-And besides these, we should like to hear something from the different sections of our own Washington Territory.

The constantly increasing subscription list, and the advertising patronage bestowed upon the Columnan, induce the belief that its efforts thus far, have been acceptable to, and appreciated by the public, and it will be our constant effort to make it at least equally acceptable, and as deserving of support under our management. No pains will be spared, on our part, to make the paper interesting, valuable, and a welcome risitor to every one.

In conclusion, allow us to express hope that the citizens, of our favored land will join us, one and all, in "a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull all together," for WASHINGTON TERRITORY-PUGET SOUND -and the Columbian. .

The schooner "L. P. Foster," Captain Keller, arrived at port Gamble, Hood's Canal, on the 4th inst., in 158 days from Boston, bringing an assorted cargo, and the machinery for the two steam saw mills of the "Puget Mill Company." She cleared for Port Gamble, and came direct, touching at no port on the way.

This arrival affords another convincing proof of the increasing trade and importance of PUGET SOUND, and of the fact that we are becoming known and attracting attention abroad. There is no mistaking the destiny of this magnificent territory, or the position which its unrivalled harbor will hold in the estimation of the commercial world. There is no such thing as a 'north channel' which can only be entered semi-sometimes, or a south channel whose eccentric vagaries are such as to require watching over-night to know where to find it in the morning, or a 'middle sand bare at low tide' upon which vessels can rest their weary 'ribs,' or 'barpilots and branch-pilots' or steam-towage to pay. Our channel is broad and deep, and a vessel, walking the waters like a thing of life,' comes right in, 'draps her mud-hook,' they'll do what they promise. Travelers clews up topsails, and lays perfectly secure will please bear in mind that we now have until ready for sea again.

There is another pleasing thought connected with this arrival. Capt. Keller brings his family with him, and will probably re-Our enterprising friend Capt. Gove, main permanently in the country. Reader, the above is the substance of a dialogue which actually took place in our streets no longer ago than September 5th, A. D. 1853, and we publish it partly from a benevolent wish to please the Squire by putting his ideas in print, (very likely for the first time,) -- but principally, because we like to give our readers sense, good common sense, like Farmer R.'s. And while on the subject, we may as well intimate to the puny few" who seek to disparage our paper, that there are too many just such honest, high-minded men as Farmer R., in Washington Territory, for the COLUMBIAN to be at all injured or even annoyed by such rguments as advanced by the Squire .-And now, Mr. Squire-requiescat in pace.

Forgery .- A young man calling himself R. N. Noah, son of the late and celebrated Major M. M. Noan, came to Olympia some two weeks ago, and represented that he was sent in by Capt. McClellan of the surveying party, for supplies, to obtain which, he was furnished with two drafts upon Corcoran & Riggs, bankers, Washington City, signed "G. B. McClellan." Upon one he succeeded in raising $400., but the other for $1500., he could not dispose of. Suspicion being excited after he had left, the draft being excited after he had left, the draft was carefully examined and found to be a forgery. The man was pursued, overtaken could not be dislodged without the loss of a at Portland, and the money recovered .-We have not heard whether he succeeded in "selling" any of the Portlanders, but we would not be surprised to hear that he had. About Fruit Trees.

OLYMPIA, Sept. 14th, 1853 EDITOR OF THE COLUMBIAN : -- One of the greatest alimentive deprivations that has to endured in a new country, is the want of uit. The present approach of autumn calls fruit. up a vivid remembrance in one's mind, of mellow apples, sweet cider, "paring bees," going home with the girls, and all. When will such times come in Washington Ter-It is for the farmers to answer this Experiment has proved that fruit trees will come to perfection sooner in this ountry, and produce finer fruit, than any sortion of the states east of the Rocky Mountains. A visit at this season of the year to the orchard and nursery of Lewel-ling & Meek, at Milwaukie, Oregon, must satisfy any one of this fact. They have apples, pears, peaches, and nectarines, sur-pussing in size, beauty and flavor, any that l ever saw in the states, and hanging upon trees that would not be large enough to bear in the state by four or five years' growth. Lewelling and others have proved by trial that fruit trees will bear at about half the age here, that they will in the states. We eed not then, be many years without fruit if we only use the means to raise it. Noth-ing contributes more to the beauty of a coun-try than orchards in blossom. To my mind, a peach tree in full bloom, is the most beautiful sight in nature. Nothing contributes more to the healthfulness of a country than an abundance of good fruits, and it is very important that fruit-growers should cultivate the best varieties. It costs but little more, and is much more profitable. Oregon Ter-ritory is getting an earlier start with numer-ous and good orchards than any new country I ever saw. Many hundred bushels of excellent fruit has been raised the present year, and in a few years there will abundant supply throughout the Willamette valley. Our Territory is unquestionably as valley. Our Territory is unquestionably as well adapted to raising fruit as Oregon, and in this, as in other things, let us not be be-hind our southern sister. R. S. [Our correspondent broaches a subject to which every farmer in Washington Territory should give early attention. Will they do it ?- Ep. Col.]

Latest News from the War in Oregon.

From the Oregon Statesman, Sept. 6. A messenger, dispatched by Capt. Nes-mith, arrived here Friday night, bringing important news from Rogue River. Two severe engagements have taken place be-tween the Indians and the whites, in which nine of the latter were killed, and nine wounded -some of them dangerously.-Among the wounded are General Lane and Col. Alden, U. S. A. Among the killed, we notice the name of Capt. Armstrong, of Yamhill county. A full account of the battles, and the subsequent action of parties will be found in the letters which we publish below: lish below :

MOUNTAIN CAMP, Aug. 25, 1853.

Gen. Palmer, Superintendent Indian Affairs : Six—Yesterday myself and the men un-der my command had a fight of four hours with the Rogue River Indians, in the most dense forest in this part of the country.— Our loss was three killed and four wounded Those dead are Capt. Armstrong of your county, a Mr. — and Francis Bradley, county, a Mr. Those wounded are Col. Alden, dangerously, Charles Abbe, do., and Win. To-day we have arranged terms with them, and have agreed to meet them at Table Rock, in seven days from to-day, to make a general treaty, and your presence is imperatively required as soon as possible. You must not delay one moment in coming, as it is perfectly safe in traveling now, and I wish you to bring a sub-agent to remain here, as the presence of an agent is absolutely necessary for the maintainance of friendly relations with the Indians. I will remain here until you arrive.

MOUNTAIN CASE, togs 25, 250.

EDITOR STATESMAN—I have to inform out of the melancholy news which at this ime pervades the entire settlements of Rogue River; that is war with all its horrors, batween the whites and the combined Indian tribes of Southern Oregon, and Northern California. You have, no doubt, ere this been informed of the Indian depredations up to the murder of Dr. Rose and John R. Hardin. Since that time many of the first men of our country have fallen either by assassination or in open battle. Time and opportunity will not permit me to enter in-to detail of the many smaller depredations committed by those savages—suffice it to say that for craftiness and bravery, they are equal to the Florida Indians, and their mode of war very similar: using the beauty of war very similar; using the kanyons in the mountains instead of the Florida Ham-

Sam, the great war chief, with Joe, the civil chief, and Jim, a chief of smaller grade, Weed Hurd, bakers and butchers, (or butchers and bakers—just which you please) have moved into their new and elegant building, where "Spiritual Charley," will always be on hand to "dispense sapalit to the hungry multitude."

The Columbian Hotel, in this place, is well spoken of by those who have "cross ed their legs" under its table.

On the 25th, I am informed that the Indians attacked Wm. Dunn's house, in th where to be found, having moved their camp several days before. Ist Lieut Ely, of Capt. Goodall's company, from Yreka was sent in search of the Indian camp, an vas sent in search of the Indian camp, and he main force returned to head quarters on Stewart's creek, for the purpose of obtaining supplies to pursue the Indians into the mountains. On the morning of the 17th Licut. Ely, with 22 men, discovered the Indian camp, some 10 miles north of the ormer camp, upon the right hand creek back some two or three miles to an open prairie interspersed with small washed gul-lies and branches of without men as an express to head quarters, re-maining with 20 men to await the arrival of a sufficient force to attack the Indians the Indians in the mean time, availing ther selves of the advantages of the gullies and brush, crawled up and commenced an attack at a distance of a few yards, say 20 or 30 killing two men at their first fire and causing the small force to make a precipitate retreat to a ridge covered with pine trees, distance of 250 yards, when they took a pe distance of 250 yards, when they took a po-sition covered in the rear by elevated ground and prairie in front. The Indians flanked and very near if not quite surround-ed them. The men were brave and most valiantly sustained their position for three hours and fiften minutes, when J. D. Car-ley, of Yreka, arrived with five other men, in advance of the main force. The Indians in advance of the main force. The Indians seeing this new arrival, immediately took to flight, carrying off 18 horses and mules their caparisons together with blankets and camp equipage. The loss on our side was killed, J. Shane, P. Keath, Frank Perry A Douglass, A. C. Colburn, and L. Lok-tirg. Wounded,-1st Lieutenant Ely, shot through the wrist, John Albin, James Car-rol, and Zebulon Shutz, all slightly. The entire forces in the field again returned to head quarters on Stewart's creek to com-plete their supplies.

On the morning of the 21st inst., Gen. Lane arrived at head quarters, and joined the army under the command of brevet Col. Alden and Col. Rose, and on Mondy morn ing by sun-rise, the whole force was encoute, the battallion under Col. Rose, consisting of Caps. Miller and Lamrick's con panies, going down Rogue river and ther up Evans creek, till they found the trail of Sam and Jo, or until they met with the battalion of Col. Alden, which marched in the direction of the battle ground of Lieut. Ely. The orders were that which evel detachment found the main Indian trail, was pursue it, and the other follow on when they came up, if they did not meet before finding the trail. Gen. Lane and myself joined Col. Alden's command, and late in the evening we found that the trail had taken to the mountains, in a north direction from Evans' creek. Tuesday night we tied our animals to brush with grass, and on Wednesday morning was in early march on the Indian trail, ascending a high mountain, passing along the summit four or five miles, we heard the Indians in a ravine at a dis-we heard the Indians in a ravine at a dis-tance of six hundred yards ahead.

The order was instantly given to dismount, and Col. Alden, with Capt. Goodall and about thirty of his company, proceeded down the Indian trail to attack them in front. Capt. Rhodes, with some fifteen or twenty men, was sent down the ridge to the left to prevent an escape down the kanyon. In a few minutes the Indians fired on Col. Al-den, when within some 30 yards of the den, when within some 30 yards of the camp, and the battle ttle commenced, raging Col. Alden was badly with much fury. Col. Alden was badly wounded the first fire, also Pleasant Arm strong, of Yambill, was shot through the breast, exclaiming as he fell, "a dead centre shot." The battle continued raging with great fury, the yells of the Indians, the howling of dogs, and the sharp continuous crack of the rifles lasted about an hour, when our pack train arrived and furnishing ten more men, Gen. Lane, at the head of those ten, followed down the trail to the battle ground, and with brave determination ordered a charge, leading himself. When he arrived near the camp he received a wound through the right arm. The battle continued for about four hours, and the Incontinued for about four hours, and the la-dians called for quarters, or a parley. When finding that Gen. Lane was there, they in-sisted on his coming into their camp. The old hero, although pretty badly wounded, and suffering much, immediately went into the Indian camp, (or fortification, for it was represented to be a stronger place to charge than 'Chepultepeo,') and had a talk with Sam, Joe, and Jim. An armistice was agreed upon for a short time. We buried our dead, and in a short time Col. Rose with his command arrived, and a general treaty was talked of, and an armistice with Joe and Sam was agreed upon for seven days, at which time they were to meet Gen. Lane and give up their rifles.

Our loss in battle were three killed on the ground—Pleasant Armstrong, F. Brad-ley, one name unknown. Wounded, Col. Alden, Gen. Lane, —— Hays, and two names not known.

The Indians say 12 killed and 20 wounmost all mortally. Much talk of a continuous war, and many are anxious for poace. If there is not peace, Rogue river will be the grave and resting place of many a brave and good man. The best men generally are the first to fall, and the most clamorous for extermination are not the most interested, yet many good men go for a war of extermination.

[For the Columbian. ]

Messrs. Editors:—At the urgent solicitations of many personal and political friends to become a Candidate for Delegate to Congress at the coming election. I have consented to submit my the coming election. I have consented to submit my name in connection with said office, subject however, to the decision of the Democratic Convention. I do so with the more freedom from the fact that Thurston county having a greater population than any other county in the Territory, and Olympia being the principal commercial town on Puget Sound, will in point of locality, justly entitle said county to the Candidate.

THE FOUNTAIN HEAD

Was first established on Jackson street, and decreoyed by fire in September 1850, respessed on Clay street, the same month, then again consumed by the same devestating element on the memorable the May, 1851, and was again opened where it now stands, in July following, and was the first poblic refreshment salcons ever started upon the coast of the Pacific, without intoxicating figures, not even a glass of beer has ever been sold upon the premises, neither shall be.

My friends advise me to introduce the sale of liquors into my business, as they thought it would add much to my profits; my reply was, I have been the premises, neither produce what sustains life, but not to deal out that which will destroy it. The POUNTAIN HEAD, as usual, is open from a colock in the morning, till twelve o'clock at night; as the state guitemen who are unable to olain said at regular meal hours, may get refreshments between times, when the crowd is not so great.
