Presidential Candidates.

The list of candidates for the Presidency is large and, moreover, is not likely to be much reduced until the different conventions start to close. These at present appear to have a respectable chance in the race may be enumerated as follows: On the Democratic side, Tilden, Thurman, Hendricks and Hayden; on the Republican, Grant, Morton, Blaine, Bryan, McKinley, Cook, King and Hayes; and on still another side, perhaps, Charles Francis Adams.

A postal convention has been called at between the United States and Queensland, Australia. The mails are to be transported in a direct line of colonial packets, plying between San Francisco and Australian colonies. It is a postal convention, and full letter postage either way is twelve cents. Newspapers to be sent at special rates. Merchandise, four cents for two inches; from Queensland, four cents for two inches; from Queensland, four cents for two inches; from Queensland, four cents for two inches.

A list of steamers to be started by the society called the "Society of Christopher Columbus," between Canada and Philadelphia to carry goods of intending Italian exhibitors to the Centennial, and all four cents for two inches; from Queensland, four cents for two inches; from Queensland, four cents for two inches; from Queensland, four cents for two inches.

Of the Republican candidates notwithstanding the declarations of party conventions, resolutions of the House of Representatives and propositions to amend the third term of Grant's chances for a renomination are not wholly unlikely, though they may be rated low. Mr. Sherman, Indiana, is an active seeker for the candidacy, but he is putting against the current in seeking to reanimate sectional antipathies and to win the favor of his party by prophesying disasters yet to come from the rebellious spirit of the South. Mr. Washburne, who it will be remembered, was appointed Minister to France as a token of General's personal friendship, has been talked of, but at no time in his public career has he given evidence of greatness, either as a statesman or a popular leader; and the fact that the President might favor him next year would not do him little good. Considering a man of better abilities with pretensions far beyond his abilities, and the club that has been formed in Utica to promote his nomination has a difficult task on its hands. Gov. Hayes, of Ohio, gained accidental prestige by being the successful candidate for Governor in his State when William Allen and the rag party were considered a common grave. Still his record is far so far as it goes, and he appears to be an able representative of his party. Mr. Blaine has the qualities for a popular leader in times when party spirit runs high, and if there was a spontaneous feeling such as that he has recently tried to excite, no man would be more likely to command the support of the party. Mr. Bristow would undoubtedly make a strong candidate if nominated. He is not a politician, and has shown himself a statesman above the average, both in point of comprehension of public questions and executive ability. But what he might command the support of moderate Republicans and Independents he is not likely to carry favor with political managers.

A third party movement depends, to great extent, on a bad nomination being made by both of the great political parties in the case of Charles Francis Adams might be put up with a prospect at least of defeating the other candidates and throwing the election into the House of Representatives. However, with two such candidates as Tilden and Bristow, or Bayard and Hayes there would be a severe contest and no chance for a third man.

Blaine has been making extensive preparations for a full representation of her products at the Centennial exhibition. Her most interesting contribution will be Don Pedro II, her noble and enlightened Emperor, who is to leave Rio Janeiro for this country about the end of March, with three of the finest vessels of his navy. It is doubtful if any nation on earth could send a sovereign with a greater name for culture and enlightened statesmanship than Don Pedro of Brazil.

OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Synopsis of discourse by Rev. J. Bea of the First Baptist Church.

When the school is first started, it is a small affair, with a few children and a few teachers. It grows, however, and in a few years it is a large school, with many children and many teachers. It is a school that is growing, and it is a school that is improving.

There are two things that are necessary for the success of a school. The first is a good teacher, and the second is a good school. A good teacher is one who is interested in his work, and who is willing to do it to the best of his ability. A good school is one that is well equipped, and that is well managed.

It is the duty of the community to support the school, and to see that it is well managed. It is the duty of the parents to send their children to school, and to see that they are well educated. It is the duty of the teachers to teach their pupils, and to see that they are well educated.

The school is a place where the children learn, and where they are prepared for the future. It is a place where they learn to read, to write, and to think. It is a place where they learn to be good, and to be useful to their fellow men.

The school is a place where the children learn, and where they are prepared for the future. It is a place where they learn to read, to write, and to think. It is a place where they learn to be good, and to be useful to their fellow men.

They asked the prayers of those present, believed they would go to heaven, and thanked God for giving them fortitude to bear the execution.

General Phil. Sheridan was put on the stand at Washington before the military committee to give his views in regard to a change of the Indian Bureau to the war department.

He began by saying that if the changes were made, the Indian Bureau would be cut out of the appropriation for the army; that by placing the Indian Bureau under the control of the war department, the Indians would be directly under the control of officers of the army, a wholesome influence would be exerted and favor of those fights on the frontier would occur.

Sherman and Hancock are to send their views in writing. There is a pressure from Oregon and the Western Territories, upon the House committing the matter to a committee for the purpose of relieving the relief of persons who have suffered from Indian depredations. The amount involved in some cases is millions of dollars. The committee is powerless to reconsider the vote by which it agreed to report adversely on all bills of this nature.
