Mrs. Spoopenäyke gradually got round to those offices, and laid out the abiliment in readiness for her lord,
"Did you take those stitches in my loves?" inquired Mr. Spoopendyke,
"Oh, yes, certainly," replied Mrs, poopendyke, coing right to work at it.
"Well, then, you can brush my vest and pantaloons, and by that time TII be eady to have you tie my cravat."
A few moments more found Mr. ippoopendyke arrayed completely.
"Come—you ready?" he demanded, aving assured himself that his wife had ot accomplished a single step toward er toilet.

"What's the matter with you?" he asked. "Didn't you say you could get ready in an hour? Didn't you hear me tell you whon I came in that we only had an hour to dress in? What have you been doing? Why can't you go as you are? Nou look well enough."

"I was busy fixing your things," faitered Mrs. Spoopendyke, "and I couldn't do not. Why didn't you have my things fixed this morning? Why don't you keep house somehow? That dress you've got is good enough. Why can't you go in that dress? If you've got to put on all the frills you won't be ready nill next fall. Ain't you most ready now? Think I'm going to stand around here like a jug of mineral water?

Mrs. Spoopendyke twisted up her hair and jammed in the pins. Then she put on her hat and twitched it first to one said and then the other; put one hajad up behind and shoved it forward, and then caught hold of it in front and pulled it dowell, if you're ready, let's start," "would Mrs. Spoopendyke." "I don't want any measly book," retorted Mr. Spoopendyke. "I want the morning paper. Find that paper the first thing you do, and then you get ready in four seconds.

"I think you'lt find the paper behind—behind the bookcase," said Mrs. Spoopendyke, as red as a brick, and she hustled into her skirt, and began clawing at it behind in an effort to loop it up siraight. "I'm almost rendy," she giggled hysterically, as she drew on the waist and buttoned it up nervously.

"I'll be ready before you could turn the paper inside ont," and she snatched a ribbon from the drawer, tied it into a how, pinned it at her throat and backed away from the glass to see how it looked. ### Honey Orders.

"Over $51,000,000 in hard cash passed through our hands last year," said Mr. William Ptimley, the General Superintendent of the Money Order Department in the New York Poxt-Office, yesterday. "By our hands I mean the whole department. New York does about one-capital of the entire business of America. I can safely say that the eystem now in vogue is as perfect as we can reasonably expect it to be, no matter how much polishing we give it.

"It seems incredible that this vast affair is so young in years. It was only sixteen years ago that Cr. McDonald conceived and started that this vast only sixteen years ago that Cr. McDonald evene that it was only by the most claborate care and lynx-eved procaution that even small amounts of money could be sent from one point to another with any eventainty of safe carriage, but now its safety has become such an assured fact that people never consider the idea of losing their money at all, but samply make out an order and send it on its way. Whoever hears of a loss nowalays? Mr. McDonald, the originator of the scheme, is now at his head. He is the chief of the money-order system in Washington. A recent recommendation of his in relation to the fees charged for sending money through the money-order departs ment is a realaction from ten cents to eight cents an anount of a not over $10, architection from ten cents to eight cents and an extension of the limit of the amount that may be sent in any one case from $50 to $100. I am in favor of Chief McDonald's recommendation, and think, though I'm by no means our that Post master James, now that he is in the Cab isot as Postmaster General, will view it favorably also."

"What is the smallest amount you ever made out an order for?"

Mr. Plimley considered a moment, and then touched a little electric button on the side of his desk. The desk is a survive of bettons, and at each end are more, eight and nine being grouped to getter on one plate in some inslances. Sleep under such conditions was impossible. Sleeplessness might arise from the injudicious use of stimulants, such as tea and coffee. Neither of those stimulants should be taken by nervous persons in the evening. As sleeplessness simply meant insanity, sooner or later, the speaker said that nervous persons who could not sleep should use something to diminish the nerve power. He believes that chloral, or some of the broundes, could be used without any pernicious results therefrom.

Bridal Tours.

An eminent physician of New York, upon the occasion of his daughter's maringe, prohibited her from going on the usual bridal tour. He did this from the considerations of health and delicacy which are not generally borne in mind, the first experiences of a bride are such as she would naturally want retirement and rest rather than ostentations, publicity. A young couple in public cars and at hotel tables, cannot keep the prescious and happy secret all to themselves. Their newly-formed relation tells itself in a thousand ways. Of this the bride is conscious, and the ordeal to a sensitive young woman is most trying. Then the suddon change in the life of the ready of the present of the suddon change in the life of the rangements which may last infetime, for the shock to an evaluation of her feelings react on her body, often injuriously. So the New York doctor we have been speaking of ordered his daughter with her young husband, to enter at once upon the duties of a new home, and to postpone the tour until at least a month had passed away. Of course, there is another side of this question. It may be that even the fond-strike the work of the continue if two people were forced to spend all their time together without the distraction hecessitated by travel, and the reserve mocessary to be kept up in public places. This is an interesting topic, and one which might form a profitable subject to debate in women's societies. It is a subject, also, upon which women physicians might be heard to advantage.—[Demo-rest's Magazine. The Secretary of the Se
