Canadian Fisheries.

The report of the Commissioner of fisheries for the year ending Dec. 31st, 1876, has been published. The progress of this important branch of industry is satisfactory, the value of produce of the fisheries for 1876 being $11,147,500, or $361,917 in excess of that of 1875. During the same period Manitoba produced $30,500, and British Columbia $104,597 worth. We may remark, however, that in the case of this Province the figures given constitute merely the amount exported, no statistics being furnished of local consumption. In 1875 Canada exported $5,380,539 worth of fish and fish oils and in 1876 $5,501,221, showing an increase of $120,684 for the year. During the same period Canada imported $144,439 worth less of fish and fish oils than in 1875. The Commissioner regards these figures as showing the yearly increasing productiveness of the fisheries; their unflinching contribution to the support of the population and food; their influence as an incentive to industrial enterprise; their great value as a staple of trade; the gradually increasing independence of our fishing interests of United States markets. The total expenditures for the year by the fishery branch of the department on outside service was $108,183.73. The collections being $13,016.12. The staff of fishery officers in 1876 numbered 543, to which were added 40 in the course of the year, making the total staff 582. There are now seven Government fish breeding establishments in the Dominion, situated as follows:—In Ontario, Newcastle and Sandwich; in Quebec, Tadoussac, Gaspé Basin, and Westigoche; in Nova Scotia, Bedford; and in New Brunswick, Miramichi.

How to Get Along.

The most reliable rule of action we have yet learned, is for men to select the trade or profession which they wish or expect to pursue thro' life, and then thoroughly qualify themselves for it, and the more thoroughly, the more certain will be their success. The most dangerous of all methods is, to idly wait for a golden opportunity to present itself, for "something to turn up." Young men must search for opportunities, make them where they do not exist, seize hold and turn something up. The world is full of opportunities, of fortunes yet to be made, of glories yet to be won. All that is wanted, is the requisite qualification, sagacity, energy and industry.

Qualifications and merit are as sure to have their reward as the sun is to rise and set. Education pays an annual income for life, without expense for repairs, insurance, or taxes. Young men, qualify yourselves for business, and then you may seek it, and engage in it with reasonable hopes of success. Otherwise, unable to cope successfully with others better qualified, failure and disappointment certainly await you.

The annexation of Florida, which took the war ship, Havana, left which for the port of Cuba. Men of war vessels have been sent out to take it; and all over the country a revolution is expected. It is supposed the ship has gone to Europe to take Florida himself on his way to send them to America to take the country there to be ruled by our laws.

The Missouri river banks are doing great damage in the vicinity of Kansas City.

Boasting.

The swagger and braggar never work. He talks loudly of what he can do and has done, and tries to impose upon his neighbors by a boastful manner. But he amounts to nothing after all. How much of his silly swagger and swash is seen on all sides! Nature, somehow, has made a special provision, however, for keeping her favorites quiet and concealed. The great thought is the one that comes to his birth silently. The large man knows too well that the moment he stops to brag, he is losing his real advantage. "Never mind about these trifles," says nature to him; "I will do far better by you if you will come to me." And in thus doing, he sees how lofty is humility, how modesty helps to put all obstruction out of the way, and how tranquil that reserve which goes with genuine power, recruits his strength continually. On the other hand, pretension and humbug go but so far as the farthest. They are sure to be found out. Let a wind bag alone long enough, and it will collapse at last; none care how.

"Thos. B. Merry has given up the editorial chair of the Seattle 'Dispatch' to Beriah Brown. In his 'editorial' Mr. Merry went out of his way to give a vicious dig at the Union by gravely publishing to the world that it is edited by a Receiver of a Federal Land Office, and that it is one of seven papers in this Territory, 'under pensions arising from political causes.' Mr. Merry has been noted for his memory and fairness. In this instance he exhibited a lack of both. When Mr. Merry was here he learned that the Union was edited by the Register of the Land Office, who received for his services from the publishers of the paper, a stated salary. The Union, now as in the past, is a Republican paper, entirely independent of party or official dictation."—W. W. Union.

In the House of Peers, during the examination of the magistrates of Edinburgh, touching the particulars of the Porteous Mob, in 1736, the Duke of Newcastle having asked the Provost what kind of shot the town-guard, commanded by Porteous had loaded their muskets, received the unexpected reply, "Oh, just six or seven shillings and a few witts." The answer was considered as a contempt of the House of Lords, and the poor Provost would have suffered from misapprehension of his patriotism had not the Duke of Argyll (who must have been exceedingly amused) explained that the worthy chief magistrate's expression, when rendered into English, meant to describe the shot used for "shot and water-fowl."

A NEW GOVERNMENT.—The London "Liberator" says: "There is now no doubt that I and millions will permanently leave Canada as soon as we can get to return from Haiti."

Brown Eyes and Blue.

Under the shade of the sheltering vines, They met at the close of day. She fresh from the dairy, clean and sweet, And he from the field of hay. She had brown eyes and a gentle smile, Brown eyes that were tender and true; And he a manly and graceful form, And eyes that were bold and blue.

They spoke of the dairy, fresh and sweet, They talked of the field of hay; But the maiden's heart beat quick and fast, For she knew what he came to say. The moon shone out with a clear, soft light, Star eyes looked into the brown, And the youth could read a world of bliss In the maiden's eyes, east down.

Colonel Tourtelotte.

THE HERO OF "HOLD THE FORT."

A Washington letter to the Cincinnati Commercial says: On General Sherman's staff there is a tall, stately man, with eyes so calm and cold and blue that one can never fancy their flashing, for they look as if they would quench any sparks that might light into them from his breast; with a manner so quiet and a voice so passionless and even that he suggests his own native mountains, with their caps of snow, that rear proudly above the hills and valleys nestling below them in the warmth and sunshine. But he is the hero of one of the most magnificent fights that took place during the march to the sea—a fight that put a brilliant record to the one hundred and thirteen days' continuous fire under which Sherman's army had struggled eastward, and finally opened to them the door that led through a region of peace and plenty to the desired goal. He was in the advance guard, and with a few hundred men had reached Allatoona Pass, the key to the situation, when he received news that the enemy were advancing in force. Throwing up earthworks and constructing a solid fort as circumstances would permit, he waited the shock. And it came before long, for over the mountains, trailing their gray ranks, along came the Confederate army, flags flying, drums beating, and every heart strung up to the highest chord of bravery and desperation, for they knew it was more than just a battle to win—they knew it meant the sustaining or knocking away of one of the few remaining props that sustained the fabric reared a few years before with such pomp, and now tottering towards its fall. On their heels came like a tide, rising nearer and nearer to the men waiting so anxiously behind the earthworks, for they, too, felt the importance of the stakes for which they were about to play so grim a game, knowing that, should Allatoona Pass be closed, Sherman might knock in vain at its portals, and that thousands of lives would be lost before it could be forced. Presently the advancing ranks stood still, received their orders, and with a cheer that made the mountains ring, charged up the pass; the gray sea rolled furiously against the walls of the fort; but what, at its flow, had been fierce fighting men, at its ebb were shattered beings, whose uniforms were stained with that which changes blue and gray alike into the livid of death. Still the fight continued, and the ranks that in the shock had fallen back reformed and fought again, and so it went on until the little force that held the pass were stained and grimed with smoke and powder and blood, burnt with the flames that leaped from guns and muskets, reduced to less than half their number, and almost dead with thirst and exhaustion. High among them stood the "cold colonel," his face aflame with the same spirit that made his Huguenot ancestors do such brave battle with Guise and "Madame League" in the days when Balzac and the Spaniard had it all their own way in France, encouraging his men to hold out a little longer, animating them alike by word and example, until into their midst rode a courier, who tumbled from his saddle, and saluting him, said: "General says, sir, 'Well Col. Tourtelotte, he holds the fort. It's my coming, and that I'll be there in about an hour.'" Then the men stood and cheered, turning their hot blood-stained eyes up, and seeing that the sun still shined as brightly as it had ever hoped for. Once more "it was rattle and roar and powder-stench," and then came the blessed sounds of drum and fife, telling in their strong and shrill voices that help was at hand, and that Sherman marched up and through the Pass, entering on what turned out to be a delightful jaunt through Georgia. Last year Colonel Tourtelotte was in New place every day in succession. In five weeks the huge earth wall was carried forward nearly one mile, until it rose to and above the highest ramparts and the earth was piled up to their level. The Turkish General Gordon, who had caused the Turkish Governor to hang out the white flag, and give in. Had he not done so, General Gordon would have buried the fort.

Health and Temper.

The Saturday Review says: Bad health and good health have obviously a strong influence on the formation of character, and yet it is always impossible to say in which they will act on any given individual. Thus it seems easy for a large, corpulent, and jolly-looking man to have a good temper. The wind that beats the mountain blows more gently about the hills. It visits with a sharper inquisition the meagre angles of a lean and physically ill-conditioned person, and it is not surprising if the former is comfortable and happy while the latter is exasperated and peevish. A large man can endure more fatigue before his energy droops to that languid state in which all the wheels of life are slow, and the body and mind resent every sort of contrivance that forces exertion on them. But the favored of nature in health are apt to degenerate in character by reason of a physical pride like the "intellectual pride" which preachers speak of, and which according to some famous liberal theologian, is a purely mythical and imaginary sin. Physical pride is only too real a failing, and causes only too much unhappiness in families. The healthy member, who is a great eater of beef, has merged his imagination and his sympathies in a tyrannical robustness. Though he would be the first to blame the moral Pharisee who should declare that he had never slipped from righteousness, the physical Pharisee is eternally bragging that he never was wearied. He may think that the hero talked too largely who declared that he did not know what fear was like, but for a time he insists that he does not know what fatigue is like. Thus the result of his natural gifts is a certain hardness and cruelty. He opines that boys should "rough it," and is an advocate of flogging and bullying. The healthy tyrant is all for hardening everyone, and he revives the cold-water torture of the theological past for the benefit of his more delicate children. The expression which he uses most frequently is "Nerves, all nonsense; look at me," and then he bores his audience with the recital of some cruelty that he practiced or endured in his youth. It is a question whether it is better for a family to fall into the hands of the healthy or the nervous and debilitated tyrant. For the latter, bad as has been the influence of his health on his character, some excuse may be made. He does deserve pity for having drifted into that state which the Scotch idiom describes as "all egg-shells." A sudden noise, an inopportune interruption, a painful story affects some people with a physical shock which the robust world knows nothing of. There are moments of languor, apart from actual suffering, in which every sensation is modified anguish. A family which walked in list slippers, which never played games which possessed no piano, and lived far remote from street cries and railway whistles would yet be too noisy company for the man or woman who has yielded in the struggle and left character at the mercy of nerves. When there are such people in a house it is impossible for anyone to do anything rightly. The game begins in the morning, when it is discovered that the neighbor's dog or a distant neighbor's fowl kept the dear sufferer awake. He comes down late to breakfast and finds breakfast cold, and some one else has read the newspaper before him, and there is talk of a party of pleasure, against which he rages peevishly. Every one, he prophesies, will get well, will catch cold and die, and really some of the audience may come to think such a fate a fortunate release. The vanquished character, the member of a family or a society who has given up fighting for cheerfulness, and who lets his physical depression have its own way, is not only wretched himself, but a cause of wretchedness to others. Feigning grows up in his baleful shade, as it were under a moral upstree, and through all their lives retain a trace of his keen sensitiveness to annoyance, and his angry resentment of the pin pricks of daily existence.

BENTON A FORT.—Quite an original method of taking a fort is described in Blackwood's Magazine. In 1696, a large Russian army besieged the Turkish fort of Azof, which was situated on a plain, and surrounded by a small, but highly disciplined garrison. No common approaches could be made to it, and the Turkish cannon swept the level with iron hail. In this case the engineering skill consisted in the Russians digging, by General Patrick Gordon, the right-hand man of Peter the Great, and the only one for whose death it is said he ever shed a tear, being determined to take the place at any cost, proposed to take it with earth by gradual approaches. He had a large army; the soil of the plain was light and deep, and he set twelve thousand men to work with spades, throwing up a high circumference of earth wall before them in advance. The men were kept in gangs, working day and night, the earth being thrown from one to another like the steps of a stair, the top gang taking the lowest place every day in succession. In five weeks the huge earth wall was carried forward nearly one mile, until it rose to and above the highest ramparts and the earth was piled up to their level. The Turkish General Gordon, who had caused the Turkish Governor to hang out the white flag, and give in. Had he not done so, General Gordon would have buried the fort.

Getting Square With the Captain.

A good story has been told of a lipping officer having been victimized by a brother officer—who was noted for his coolness and self-possession—and of his getting square with him in the following manner: The cool jockey, Captain Blackney, was always quizzing the lipping officer, a lieutenant, for his nervousness. "Why, nervousness is all nonsense; I tell you no brave man is ever nervous." "Well, captain," inquired his lipping friend, "how would you act thopping a shaft in an inch or thereabout drop it itself in a wall'd angle in which you had taken shelter from a company of tharp-tooths, and where it wath thertain if you put out your nothe you'll get peppered?" "How would the captain, with a look at his brother officers. "Why, take it coolly, and spit on the fuse." The party broke up and all retired. Next morning a number of soldiers were assembled on parade, and the lipping officer, Tom Blackney, was in the line. "I want to try an ekthepiment thith morning and the how thextending cool Tom Blackney can be thence, and his usual performance, his form being just distinguishable in the darkness. In the middle of one of his most interesting acts the concealed persons crept softly on all straggling with the police. His name is Martin Higgins. He bought, on the 21st, an interest in a small Yankee notion concern on Chatham street, betraying no striking traits during the several days of negotiation. Saturday evening, he came with several at his new shop, he suddenly exhibited a large number of bills, varying in value from $10 to $500. He then began to press, offering his auditors $10, $20, $50, and $100,000 each to bear him for an hour. They were silent. He was their savior. One of them tried to leave the room, but he had locked the door. "Two others attempted to go, and the maniac raved. He could save one, but that one must be damned, and he sprang across the counter for some knives. They grappled with him and calmed him. It was late and the light was out. He hastily collected the waste paper and lighted it, and forth his pocket-book and began throwing the bills into the flames, burning several hundred dollars. His associates then bound him and gave him over to the police. Over $3,000 were on his person, and his companions say that they took bank books from him representing from $50,000 to $100,000. He is said to have made a vast amount of money at sugar raising in the South, but he has recently lived in Brooklyn. There is something mysterious about last night's actions, and the police hold the theory that he was robbed of a much larger amount than was found on him.

GOOD MANAGEMENT.

If a man has a capable and industrious wife, it is astonishing how well he can live on a small income. Some men live better on fifteen dollars a week than their neighbors do on twenty-five. The man does his part well and enjoys it. In the latter case his wife does good for nothing. She will even upbraid her husband for not living in as good style as her neighbor, while the fault is entirely her own. His neighbor has a fine, capable and industrious wife, who makes the difference. So look out, young men, before you go into matrimony. It is a lottery in which most men can only buy one ticket, and if that turns out a blank, their whole life had better be a blank, too. Luckily, no one need go into the wadded state with his eyes closed, as in the case of lotteries, and we judge all who are sensible enough to use their optics may blame themselves if they do not draw prizes.

CONVERSATION.

French people regard conversation as an art, and a well-learned one. A well known professor in Paris advertises to "give lessons in the art of conversation," and if professors teach ladies, in youth, how to walk gracefully, why not now to talk in the same manner? For, although everybody walks and talks, not more than one is a hundred do either, without instruction, in a manner calculated to earn an honest compliment. The art of conversation is as realized as such in a moment by a person unaccustomed to society, if suddenly introduced to a gathering of intellect. However fluent in speech and self-complacent in manner upon ordinary occasions, even the boldest fell dismayed upon entering a sphere prevailed by an atmosphere of mental culture. They cannot rise to the level of their surroundings. They may be assured, and they may have assurance, but they lack the buoyancy inspired by a familiarity with the art of conversation. Just as the untalented flounders in deep water, like the fish, who, when he is like his neighbor, he lacks a knowledge of the art of swimming.

BEAN WALL is reaching the perfection of high art. It is a game he has been playing in the Harvards and Manchesters, last week, there were twenty-four innings without either side gaining a run. At this rate the game must soon become extinct. It will reach the perfection of the game which might be attained by the fashionable music of his time—it will become so difficult as to be impossible.

This kicking and pounding of wires is getting too common in New England and New York. If you don't like your wife there are plenty of steamers running to Europe.

How a Ghost was Captured.

About a mile from the center of Babylon Village, Long Island, stands a house which has for some time been unoccupied. It was some time ago fitted up for the occupancy of a newly-married couple, but shortly after they moved into it the young bride died, and the building was left vacant. Within a few weeks past, strange sounds and fitting lights have been seen in the house; occasionally a pale, wan face would appear at one of the windows in the dead of night, and piteous wails would issue apparently from between the livid lips, when the "per turbed spirit" would wander from room to room throughout the house, as if looking for something that could never be found. Babylon enjoyed the sensation of having a "haunted house." Some of the young fellows in the neighborhood, however, were not superstitious to the extent of being afraid to make an investigation, and one night last week two or three young men went to investigate in the building to await the "ghost's" appearance. About the hour when churchyards yawn "one of the windows opened, and his ghostly presence entered in a very unusual way for nearly forty years. His usual performance, his form being just distinguishable in the darkness. In the middle of one of his most interesting acts the concealed persons crept softly on all straggling with the police. His name is Martin Higgins. He bought, on the 21st, an interest in a small Yankee notion concern on Chatham street, betraying no striking traits during the several days of negotiation. Strange Case of Insanity.

The New York Times of the 23d has the following in regard to a maniac who was dragged to the Tombs, after a hard struggle with the police. His name is Martin Higgins. He bought, on the 21st, an interest in a small Yankee notion concern on Chatham street, betraying no striking traits during the several days of negotiation. Saturday evening, he came with several at his new shop, he suddenly exhibited a large number of bills, varying in value from $10 to $500. He then began to press, offering his auditors $10, $20, $50, and $100,000 each to bear him for an hour. They were silent. He was their savior. One of them tried to leave the room, but he had locked the door. "Two others attempted to go, and the maniac raved. He could save one, but that one must be damned, and he sprang across the counter for some knives. They grappled with him and calmed him. It was late and the light was out. He hastily collected the waste paper and lighted it, and forth his pocket-book and began throwing the bills into the flames, burning several hundred dollars. His associates then bound him and gave him over to the police. Over $3,000 were on his person, and his companions say that they took bank books from him representing from $50,000 to $100,000. He is said to have made a vast amount of money at sugar raising in the South, but he has recently lived in Brooklyn. There is something mysterious about last night's actions, and the police hold the theory that he was robbed of a much larger amount than was found on him.

GOOD MANAGEMENT.—If a man has a capable and industrious wife, it is astonishing how well he can live on a small income. Some men live better on fifteen dollars a week than their neighbors do on twenty-five. The man does his part well and enjoys it. In the latter case his wife does good for nothing. She will even upbraid her husband for not living in as good style as her neighbor, while the fault is entirely her own. His neighbor has a fine, capable and industrious wife, who makes the difference. So look out, young men, before you go into matrimony. It is a lottery in which most men can only buy one ticket, and if that turns out a blank, their whole life had better be a blank, too. Luckily, no one need go into the wadded state with his eyes closed, as in the case of lotteries, and we judge all who are sensible enough to use their optics may blame themselves if they do not draw prizes.

BEAN WALL is reaching the perfection of high art. It is a game he has been playing in the Harvards and Manchesters, last week, there were twenty-four innings without either side gaining a run. At this rate the game must soon become extinct. It will reach the perfection of the game which might be attained by the fashionable music of his time—it will become so difficult as to be impossible.

Cure of Consumption.

Consumption is the one universal foe of our civilization, and the higher and more refined our standard of society, the more closely and tenderly it smites us. We doubt whether it often smites an Arab of the desert. The medical faculty of Great Britain, and many of the same in America, are settling down on the old, tried, and true: 1. No known medicine has any uniform efficacious efficacy in consumption. 2. A case cannot be cured without a free exposure to outdoor air. 3. The best voyages are to the tropics, and the maintenance of an equal artificial temperature often hasten a fatal termination of the case. The disease is mainly due to a lack of daily exercise in the open air. Such exercise, keeping the appetite natural, the digestion good, the circulation vigorous, and the countless lung-cells supplied with pure air, almost certainly prevents consumption. If the system is weakened by other causes, such as malaria and this alone gives any hope of cure. The above we gather in part from Hall's Journal of Health but it has been our view for nearly forty years. That we saw a physician told us the following incident: He was medical adviser in a family where all the daughters but one had successively died of consumption. These are indications that must not be neglected. Brisk walking is good exercise, but horseback riding is better. Sunshine and cheerful accomplishments are great helps. Always abstain from rich food, and avoid everything violent.—Youth's Companion.

The Contrast.

When you see a young man sitting in a parlor, with the ugliest six-year-old boy that ever frightened him in the mirror, clambering over his knees, jerking his white tie out of knot, musing his white vest, kicking his shoes, feeling in all his pockets for nickels, and yelling incessantly for him to play a game of cards, and play while the unresisting victim smiles all the time like the cover of a comic almanac, you may safely bet, although there isn't the sign of a girl apparently in the room, that the young man's howling boy has a sister who is primping in a room not twenty feet away, and that the young man doesn't come there just for the fun of playing with his brother. They were very different, and there was apparently five or six years difference in their ages. As the train pulled up at Bussey, out on the A. K. & D., the younger girl blushed, flattened her nose against the window, and drew back in joyous smiles as a young man came dashing into the car, shook hands tenderly and cordially, insisted on carrying her valise, magazine, little paper parcel, and what you probably have carried her had she permitted him. The passengers smiled as she left the car, and the murmur went rippling through the coach. "They're engaged." The other girls, looking anxiously out of the window, and once or twice gathered her parcels together as though she would leave the car, yet seemed to be expecting some one. At last he came. He bulged into the car like a house, and he came along the seats until his manly gaze fell on her perturbed, expectant face, and roared, "Come on! I've been waiting for you on the platform for fifteen minutes." "Gracious! You barked and stirred her out of the car, while she followed with a little valise, a bandbox, a paper bag full of lunch, a bird-cage, a glass jar of jelly preserves, and an extra shawl. And a crusty-looking old bachelor in the further end of the car croaked out, in union with the indignant looks of the passengers, "They're married!"—Durlington Haukey.

JERUSALEM cannot be regarded as an important manufacturing center, inasmuch as its leading industry is olive wood carving. The chief manufacturer of souvenirs recently informed a correspondent of the London Times that he could not find employment for his workmen; the market was overstocked and the number of pilgrims very small. The German colonists are increasing in number and influence. In Jerusalem they have opened the ruins of the great hospice of the Knights of St. John, and have established a colony at Jabara at the foot of Mount Carmel, and have organized a service of mail carriages from Jabara to Jerusalem. They are also constructing a carriage way from Carmel to Nazareth.

The cultivation of peanuts appears to be on the increase in those States where this plant succeeds best. The crop in North Carolina, Virginia and Tennessee for '75-'76 is reported to have reached nearly 800,000 bushels, and it promises to be still larger for 1876-'77. From these statistics we may safely conclude that there is either a large quantity of peanut oil made, or a good many peanuts eaten by somebody.

Wheat.

The edge of the mania for speculating in wheat has been taken off in the market, which has brought considerable losses to over-sanguine operators...

The entire withdrawal of our great competitor, Southern Russia, from the lists, and consequently cutting off the supply to make good the deficiency...

The singular coincidence of partial and total failures of wheat crops in countries which have competed to a less important degree...

If we grant all these causes their full effect, it would imply that we are to be supplied for just twice as much grain as usual...

But against these reasons can be urged: 1.—The supply from Russia has been very small for the last two years...

2.—The contingency now happening, has been anticipated for over a year in Europe, and shrewd grain operators have been energetically providing against it...

3.—But a still more potent factor to be considered in the question is that as price of any article rises, its consumption is diminished in something like the same proportion...

The Sea Thrasher.

I was very much interested in Captain Nemo's letter on the thrasher, which appeared in a recent number of the Sun. He is doubtless right in saying that the thrasher has been frequently mistaken for the sea serpent...

The common belief is that the thrasher has a huge weapon, very like a sledge hammer, protruding from his mouth, with which he administers to the whale's back those terrible blows you can hear ten or twelve miles distant...

These two sea villains, the sword-fish and thrasher, invariably kill the whale when they get him into close quarters; and as soon as the combat ceases, which is done by the whale's body floating motionless, the thrasher will proceed to clear water, where, raising his serpent-like head in triumph...

FRIDAY, JUNE 23, 1877.

"Come, Let Us Reason Together."

We give place this week to a communication from one of the leading citizens of this town, in regard to the opening of the public streets.

Not understanding the nature of the dispute, and desiring to do full justice to all parties in the matter, we called on Dr. Minor, whose interests we understood were conflicting, and who has entered suit in the District Court against the City Trustees for destroying his fences. He agrees fully with Mr. James as to the importance of establishing the title of the city to the streets, and the establishing of this title now, while the original proprietors of the land are living and can remedy any defects which may exist. The Doctor claims that, holding possession of this property, he could not be deprived of it save by due process of law; that the effort to oust him has been characterized by a desire to satisfy malice instead of benefiting the public; and he further desires us to state publicly that should he obtain title to the land in question, in the courts, whenever six leading, impartial business men of this City state that the public need said land, a right of way will be granted them; but that to knock down fences and destroy gardens is in no sense demanded by public welfare.

So much for showings thus far made. We have been watching developments in this matter, with the keen interest taken by one who feels that as a journalist, pledged to defend the people from imposition, he has a duty to perform in removing any prejudices that may exist, and giving a fair showing all around. It is perhaps most fortunate for this city that the question of titles has come up for settlement in this contest. Feeling identified with the interests of the public, we say if there are any defects in titles, by all means remedy them as soon as possible.

We quite agree with Dr. Minor that there is no necessity for destroying any of his private property, and on the other hand we agree with all concerned that the streets of the city ought to be held sacred for public use, and city rights defended if necessary. There seems to have been more feeling manifested than ought to have characterized a healthy state of affairs; however, it is certain that the most of this would have been discovered to have arisen from fanciful causes, had all parties understood each other better.

PROSPERITY AWAITS US.—From Mr. Jas. Dalgarno, our enterprising friend across the way, who has just returned from Clallam Bay, we learn the following: A gentleman from one of the prospecting parties which started a short time ago to look for gold, has returned, and reports having discovered the object of their search in several streams, emptying into the Sound, in Clallam County. But small quantities, however, have been thus far obtained, and paying prospects yet remain to be developed. Work is still going on, as present indications are regarded as decidedly encouraging. Mr. Dalgarno went from here with a party taking supplies for the newly formed company just established at Heco river, for the purpose of barrelling salmon. This company is composed of our most enterprising citizens, and we bespeak for it a grand work in developing the immense unused natural resources of Puget Sound. Among the names furnished us were Mr. Thos. Stratton, of Port Angeles Light House, and Messrs. D. W. Smith, Thos. Phillips and others of this town. About 21,500 worth of supplies have already been shipped to the scene of action, and work has begun, looking to a large cannery. More anon.

JOURNALISM.—The Daily "Herald" is now one of the sprightly papers of the Sound. Bro. Cook is making a much better showing in this enterprise than any in the newspaper line ever embarked in by him before.

RELIGIOUS.—Rev. J. B. H. Hewitt will preach in the Presbyterian Church on Sunday next, morning and evening. Services as usual in St. Paul's Church, conducted by the Pastor.

THAT STREET QUESTION.

The following communication has been received from Mr. F. W. James, and we cheerfully accord it a place in our columns:

"Vox Populi Vox Dei."

SHALL THE CITY'S RIGHT TO THE PUBLIC STREETS BE ESTABLISHED?

MR. EDITOR:

Believing with many subscribers that a proper ventilation through the Press of local questions affecting the public interest in every community, if not indeed the true duty of a journalist, is yet, under many circumstances both proper and right, the following remarks upon a subject at present agitating the citizens of Port Townsend, may not be deemed intrusive:

Nearly twenty years ago the writer bought from A. A. Plummer and wife, six lots fronting on both sides of Quincy street, "as shown on the map of the town of Port Townsend" together with all the privileges thereunto belonging, (the use of the public streets being thereby secured to him) and obtained a warranty deed therefor. At this time and long subsequently Quincy street in common with all other streets shown on the map of this city were open thoroughfares, none of them being obstructed or closed—the city's right to the public street being unquestioned.

In all communities there are people of commanding influence and power, not always perhaps rightly acquired, nor justly used. Doctor O'Brien was one of these. He had but to ask the County Commissioners for permission to close a portion of Quincy street near his dwelling, though their right to do so is questioned, and it was done, and an important street in the very center of the town was at once closed; in defiance of the rights of private citizens who had purchased property in the line of Quincy street. This was the beginning of private citizens closing up the public streets. Since then other citizens have closed up other streets until it would seem that the public of the city of Port Townsend have no rights in the public streets, which private citizens are bound to respect. The writer desires to reflect upon no one, but depreciates a state of affairs which greatly affects the present and future prosperity of the place, depreciates the value of adjacent property, and has become altogether a nuisance of the most unbearable description.

A short time ago the main thoroughfare of this city—Water street—was blocked up at one end, against the public, completely closing up that part of the city below the bluff; the gentleman owning the adjacent property, however, in deference to public opinion, re-opened the street. It is to the interest of every citizen of Port Townsend, and especially owners of city property, to see that the city's right to the public streets be firmly and unmistakably established, at once, by the proper lawful tribunal. The matter is of the greatest importance, and cannot with safety to the city be longer delayed. Of the equity of the case, and the right of the citizens to the public streets, there can be no question. It affects not only the present, but in a greater degree the future prosperity of the city; and in the same sense the value of all real estate contained therein, and especially the value of all property on the line of the streets enclosed.

VERITAS.

Port Townsend, W. T., June 27, '77.

PHOTOGRAPHIC.—By a private letter from Mr. Chas. J. Huntington, photographic artist now at Steierson, we are informed that he will be in Port Townsend about the 10th of July. He will remain here but a short time, during which, parties desiring first-class work in his line can be accommodated. Mr. Huntington is a Chicago artist of enviable reputation. He is making a tour of the Sound; has the finest outfit for his work, ever brought to this part of the country; and, speaking from experience as one of his patrons, we would advise our friends to get ready for sittings.

Mrs. O. C. Hastings, formerly of Port Townsend, and at present residing at Victoria, returned to the latter place this week, after a visit of a few days with relatives in this place. Mr. O. C. Hastings is now doing a prosperous business among our British cousins, in the photographers' line.

Gov. Tom Hendricks has departed for Europe.

Communicated.

EDITOR ARGUS:

I have been a resident of Port Townsend since 1850, and have had to do with shipping during that time and I must say that I have never seen a better crew than that shipped on board the Little Willie by Messrs. Waterman & Katz. There was not a man intoxicated or showed the least signs of having been drinking. Every one of them obeyed the commands of the officers cheerfully and willingly, and went on board quietly. Capt. Nissen, that noble commander, used the most gentlemanly and kind language, and the comfort of his officers and crew was well attended to. In my presence Mr. J. A. Murphy, first officer, told the men to give the men regular time for their work and meals, and if any were sick to report immediately to him, and see that their quarters was clean and comfortable. Why could not every crew be put on board in the same condition? Because the land sharks want to get the men drunk and get every dollar of their advance from them. The men go on board crazy drunk and get quarrelling with the officers, who protect themselves and the ship, and then the land sharks howl and yell around the prod shops about BRUTAL OFFICERS while they are in reality the ones to blame. Now as the Little Willie has gone to sea, in such fine condition, can we not get others? I think we can if the good people of the town, which nowadays are in the majority, will give their assistance. J. BARR.

We insert the above as received, that responsibility may rest where it belongs.

Just received at Jas. Jones' a lot of blotting, drawing, tissue gold and silver paper, card board, etc., etc.

PUGET SOUND ARGUS.

Our European Correspondent.

GRAND HOTEL, PARIS, May 16, 1877.
I wrote to you from London, I believe, after my return from a two weeks' tour in Scotland. I got along reasonably well in Great Britain, although I did get astray and lost my baggage in the railways several times; but in France-la belle France-what would I do without my wife's knowledge of this infamous language? I am afraid to open my lips for fear of making some sound that will be taken by Johnny Crepeau to mean the very thing I do not want. Yesterday, while driving in the Champs Elysees, I asked the cabman what building that was ahead, whereupon he turned around and commenced to drive in an opposite direction. I swore in good saxon, gesticulated powerfully, and finally got him right. In the stores and public places I get into a maze of difficulties.

Paris is the most beautiful of all cities I am sure. It is better to see London, Edinburgh and such places first. The Arc de Triumphe, the Place de la Concorde, the Place Vendome and its column, the Bois de Boulogne and Versailles are magnificent and lovely beyond comparison. We attended service in Notre Dame on Sunday morning. It was the climax of all the cathedrals I have seen. An organ at each end and the singing of the very best; but what shall I say of irreligious France? It was the forenoon service, and the Cathedral will hold 25,000 people. There were not 500 present, exclusive of the crowd of priests, acolytes and christies.

The Bois de Boulogne is almost a primeval forest, the beautiful woods covering 2,900 acres. I saw a horse race there on Sunday afternoon, and 6,000 of the finest carriages and thorough-bred teams to be found anywhere.

Versailles is the largest palace in Europe. It was built by Louis the Fourteenth, and its grand halls and saloons are covered with paintings by the best artists of France, of the Kings, statesmen and nobles from Olives to Napoleon the 3d. There are more than 20 different ones of Napoleon the 1st and of Josephine and Maria Louisa, some of the beauties of France, including Mad. de Maribeu, and 300 different ones of the Grand Monarque, each in a different costume. The state carriages are 500 in number, and their cost one million of francs. These figures are somewhat stunning, but so were the carriages and the harness. We attended at the Palais des Champs-Elysees, an exposition of modern French paintings. There are only 5,000 of them. I became somewhat weary before getting through. I met an Englishman here named McLean. I said, "do you go to see the pictures?" He said, "I don't look at pictures, your Honor; I saw 60,000 paintings of Dresden, some 20 years ago, and I have not looked at one since." I am beginning to feel that way.

I attended sittings of the House of Commons in England, and the French Chamber of Deputies. It is enough to say that I will return to America with a high opinion of the U. S. Congress.

This "Times says the Russian loan of seventy-five million dollars was originally offered to houses here and refused. It is now to be issued at Paris and Berlin. The issue is 7 per cent, and a syndicate has taken the loan at net price far below this figure. In face of the fact that an internal forced loan of two hundred million roubles has also been decreed. This borrowing indicates rapid exhaustion.

Stocks show an upward tendency at San Francisco.

CENTAUR LINIMENT.
One kind for the Human Family. The other for Horses and Animals.
These Liniments are simply the wonder of the world. Their effects are little less than marvelous.
The White Liniment is for the human family. It will drive Rheumatism, Sciatica and Neuralgia from the system; cures Lumbago, Chilblains, Lockjaw, Palsy, Itch, and most cutaneous eruptions; it extracts frost from frozen hands and feet, and the poison of bites and stings of venomous reptiles; it subdues swellings, and alleviates pain of every kind. When sprains or bruises occur, it is the most potent remedy ever devised to heal the injured parts. The Centaur Liniment is used with great efficacy for sore throat, tooth-ache, caked breasts, carache and weak back. The following is but a sample of numerous testimonials:
"Indiana Home, Jeff. Co., Ind., May 28, 1875.
"I think it my duty to inform you that I have suffered much with small pox and cords. A few bottles of Centaur Liniment has done the work for me. I have not been free from these swellings in eight years. Now I am perfectly well. The Liniment is to be applied warm."
BENJAMIN BROWN.
The proof is in the trial. It is reliable, it is handy, it is cheap, and every family should have the White Centaur Liniment.
The Yellow Centaur Liniment is adapted to the tough muscles, cords and flesh of horses and animals. It has performed more wonderful cures, in three years, of sprains, strains, wind-galls, scratches, swellings, and general lameness, than all other remedies in existence. Read what the great expressmen say of it:
"New York, Jan. 29, 1876.
"Every owner of horses should give the Centaur Liniment a trial. We carry it, and the best article ever used in our stables."
"H. M. RICH, Supt. Adams Ex. Stables, N. Y."
"ALB'S. OLIN, Supt. Nat. Ex. Stables, N. Y."
The best patrons of this Liniment are Farmers and Veterinary Surgeons, who are continually using one Liniment. It heals galls, wounds and poll evil, removes swellings, and is worth millions of dollars to the stomach-ache, liver men, stock-growers, sheep-raisers and those having horses or cattle.
What a farmer cannot do for $20 the Centaur Liniment will do at a trifling cost.
These Liniments are sold by all dealers throughout the country. They are warranted by the proprietors, and a bottle will be given to any farmer or physician who desires to test them.
Laboratory of J. D. Ross & Co.,
46 Day St., New York.

HONEY.
Pitcher's Castoria is a complete substitute for Castor Oil, and is as pleasant to take as honey. It is particularly adapted to feeble and irritable children. It destroys worms, assimilates the food, regulates the stomach, and cures wind colic. Few remedies are as efficacious for feverishness, croup, worms and whooping-cough. Castoria is a scientific and purely vegetable preparation, more effective than Castor Oil, and neither gives nor gripes. Prepared by Messrs. J. B. Rose & Co., 65 Day Street, New York on the receipt of Saml Pitcher, M. D., of Barnstable, Mass.
