OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON D. C., Sept. 25, 1879.
 The progress of Republicanism in the North, and the prospect that every northern State will be republican in future, inspires alarm among the Southern Brigadiers. This is manifested in several ways. When the Democratic National committee met here, Chalmers, Hampton & Co. proposed to them the policy of taking the choice of presidential electors away from the polls, and giving it to the Legislatures of the South. Before the war South Carolina chose its electors in that way, and the Constitution does not prohibit it. It is contrary to democratic republican ideas of government, but that does not stand in the way of those Southern oligarchs. The fact is they are afraid that the colored majorities of South Carolina, Florida, Louisiana and other states will assert their right to vote next year, and they want to provide against the possibility of being beaten in the popular vote. They can elect legislatures without the interference of federal authority, but they cannot elect presidential electors, without such supervision that fraud and bulldozing will be difficult. Nothing could better illustrate the fears that beset the Democratic usurpers, than this trick to cheat the voters and to subvert the United States government by an oligarchy.
 But this is not the only trick they are practicing. The Republicans of South Carolina, and other States have been reorganizing lately preparatory to the campaign of 1880. This is against Democratic wishes and Hamburg Butler's men have inaugurated the old system of repression. The shooting of the P. M. at Blackville is but one of many instances of violence that have already been discovered. It is probable that the bulldozers will not practice this system extensively against U. S. officers, for the government will discontinue the service if its officials cannot be protected. But no active Republican organizer can be expected to have peace or even life for a long time in any of the Southern States where there is an actual Republican majority to be kept down.
 Gen. Grant will not be in Washington, probably, until after the assembling of Congress. He will meet with warm receptions in the east from all classes.
 Minister Langston, who is now here from Hayti, will lecture on the exodus of the colored people from the South. He is a firm believer in it, as is Fred Douglass now, although opposed to it at first. Everybody who loves freedom and justice believes in it now as the most practicable remedy for the terrible evils that beset the colored people.
 The P. M. General announces that he will close the postal service to those parts of the South where the officials are bulldozed. This is well.

It will teach the "best citizens of the South" that they cannot bulldoze the whole country.
 It will probably turn out that Gen. Grant, instead of being, as reported, willing to take the Presidency of the Inter-oceanic Canal Company, is in favor of Capt. Eads' project for a Marine railway across the Isthmus, to transport loaded ships. He is a warm friend of Capt. Eads, and has a high opinion of his engineering skill.
 Pursuant to an invitation extended by Mr. John N. Garrett, President of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, a number of members of the National Fair Association visited Baltimore yesterday, for the purpose of having a conference with him relative to the work to be done by his road to aid in making the fair a success. The visit was very satisfactory. The arrangements for the fair are going forward very fast. LEO.
THE NEXT CONGRESS.—There are two vacant seats in the next Congress to be filled by elections, one from the 12th New York district and one from the 5th Iowa district. If the New York district elects a Democrat, and the Iowa district a Republican, the House of Representatives will be divided as follows: Democrats, 12; Republicans, 134; Greenbackers, 12; leaving a Democratic majority over all of one. If the next election of President shall result in no choice by the people, then the House of Representatives will make the choice, the delegation from each State having one vote. As the House now stands the Republicans will cast nineteen votes, the Democrats 18, with Indiana divided between six Democrats, six Republicans, and one Greenbacker. It has been suggested that the Democrats will endeavor to unseat Mr. Orth, the Republican Representative from the 9th Indiana district. If this be done it will give them the vote of Indiana make the vote of the House of Representatives a tie, and leave the decision to the Democratic Senate.
 It is reported that a number of Portland's wealthiest citizens have associated themselves together for the purpose of laying out and improving a fair ground for Oregon, Washington and Idaho. The grounds will probably be located a short distance north of Portland, where a beautiful piece of land, containing about 250 acres can be obtained, and negotiations are now pending, which is handsomely located, with a fine view of East Portland, Portland and the Willamette river. A natural site for a mile track exists, it being around a hill having a gradual slope on all sides. Pavilions much larger than the one erected by the Mechanics' Fair association will be built, substantial booths, and thoroughly finished stables, built on a plan of convenience and beauty. The society will also construct a narrow gauge railroad to the city, so that visitors can be carried to and from in comfort.
TRACK for the Utah and Northern railroad is now laid and trains are running to a new terminus known as Devil's Dive (not far from Pleasant Valley) 40 miles northward from the late terminus at Cama, Idaho, and 284 miles from Ogden. A few more miles will bring the road into Montana, which is now the only Territory in the United States, except Alaska, that has no railway. The road is now the longest continuous narrow gauge line in the United States, though it has not so many miles as the Denver and Rio Grande. But the main line of that road is only 259 miles long.
 During Gen. Grant's visit to Oregon Mrs. Grant will remain in the city as the guest of Mrs. G. W. Dent at her residence on Octavia street. She will be the recipient of a number of dinner parties on the part of her personal friends.

THE GREAT COLUMBIA PLAINS.
 Mr. Phillip Ritz, of Walla Walla, in a letter describing the great plains of the Columbia, through which the Pen d'Orielle division of the N. P. R. R. is soon to be constructed, gives some startling facts of the immensity of that country.
 "It embraces a scope of 450 miles north and south, by 250 miles east and west and is capable of producing fully 100,000,000 bushels of wheat per annum. There has not been a failure of a crop for twenty years, where the land has been put in proper cultivation, and seeded in good season. A very remarkable fact about the soil is that the same fields have produced great crops for twenty years in succession without any fertilization. This led to an amelioration of the soil, which shows it to be composed of the very elements that will produce the most perfect crop of wheat in abundance and in unlimited succession. The soil is very largely made up of volcanic ashes, and carbonate of lime, the proportions being almost the same as the great wheat fields of Chili, and the Island of Sicily, and the country bordering on the Bay of Naples, which has been the granary for Southern Europe for ages, and has furnished Rome with wheat for 2,000 years. These facts, with a mild and healthful climate, render this country of great commercial importance.
 The Northern Pacific railroad in running from the mouth of Snake river to Pen d'Orielle Lake would pass directly through this great wheat belt, and would supply the one great need, fuel and lumber, which could be brought cheaply over from the great coal and lumber country of the Puget Sound basin on returning trains.
 This extensive country is well watered and at present covered with the nutritious bunch grass, making it a very desirable country, for raising horses, cattle and sheep; but it is almost unknown to commerce, where, if it had railroad facilities, there could be found homes and employment for more than 500,000 persons from the overcrowded countries of the Atlantic States."
 The day is not distant when the great wheat-growing plains of Eastern Washington, Oregon and Idaho will naturally turn to Puget Sound for their outlet. Then the railroad whistles will deafen the residents of the Port Townsend peninsula, as the road must pass on the west side of Olympia, and make its terminus where large ships can come with safety.
PRESIDENT Hayes, in his reply to President Pendleton of the Cincinnati Industrial Exhibition, who welcomed him to the fair Sept. 10, said that the revival of prosperity was due largely to the fact that values are measured and made steadier by a currency that is worth its face in the markets of the world, and that credit rests upon a sound and staple basis.
 A great tenants'-right meeting was held at Mallow, Ireland, on Saturday. It was addressed by Sir Joseph McKenna and other member of Parliament. Twenty thousand people were present. Resolutions were passed calling the attention of the government to the distressed condition of Ireland, and suggesting the establishment of a system of State relief, and a general abatement of rents.
 In England the distress among the laboring classes looks more and more gloomy, and the winter promises much suffering. The severity is greatest in northeastern England.

THE MOUNTAIN MEADOW.
 The Salt Lake "Tribune" says that the scene of the Mountain Meadow massacre is now the very picture of desolation. Before the Mormons murdered one hundred and thirty-one innocent men, women and children there in 1857, the Meadows were known far and wide as a paradise in the desert, with abundance of grass, crystal streams, and ever-flowing springs. To-day the grass is gone, the water courses dried up, and nothing but a dreary waste marks the once beautiful spot. It is said that the earth is also sinking, and the bones which were collected after the massacre, though thrice buried, continue to reappear, while settlers in the vicinity shun the spot as haunted and say that the winds from the meadows bring piercing cries for help to their ears.

Russia's Clergy.

It has been a thousand times put on record that ignorance, greediness, and immorality are the characteristic features of the clergy of the Greek Church in Russia. But to render them justice, it is proper to admit that with the general progress of the Czar's subjects they also are much changed, though against their own will, being touched by the spirit of the age. It is an undisputable fact that they are amazingly far behind the other educated classes in Russia, which in truth differ from them as much as the men of the modern ages do from the men of the middle ages.

The Russian clergy have no excuse for their degraded position. During the long period of seven centuries they held in their hands their own fate as well as that of their country. From the introduction of Christianity into Kieff till the time of Peter the Great, the clergy were the only educated class in Russia; they were the sole teachers and moral guides of the people for generation after generation. If they have chosen a careless and sluggish life, and kept the people in the deepest ignorance, it is on this account that their power in the State has disappeared.

When Peter the Great mounted the throne, he realized at once that in order to guarantee his country from indolence and darkness he had first of all to liberate it from the yoke of the clergy.

This he did, in spite of furious anathemas, and of conspiracies and revolts instigated by the holy men. Peter abolished the title and powers of the Patriarch, who had been the despotic chief of the Russian Church, and in its stead he created a Holy Synod, composed of Bishops appointed by the Czar, who himself then became the real head of the church. Then European learning was transplanted into Russia and entrusted to lay teachers, who became the intellectual and moral guides of the people.

Russian history does not make mention of any great or brilliant clergyman. There is a story of a priest who turned merchant, and justified the change on this ground: "After a mature trial I found out that I was a philosopher, and so I left the priesthood and went into trade."

For the last half century the most able and successful students of the theological colleges have been encouraged to enter the university and to abandon the clerical career. Naturally the pulpits of the Russian churches are filled with mediocrities, crude scholars and poor preachers.

Having no regular salary, the clergy are thrown on their own skill for their subsistence; and as marriage is obligatory upon all Russian priests, making a living for their families (which are proverbially large) becomes a question of paramount importance. In this struggle for daily bread the clergy have acquired an unenviable reputation. The peasants say: "The Pope has greedy eyes and big, grasping hands." The extortions are almost incredible.

The Golos gives this example: "A peasant was about to leave his village and to settle in a neighboring one, where he was going to marry a girl; but he could not do this without a certificate from the priest. The priest said: 'I will give you a certificate, but not before you make good to me all my loss by your going away.' Now, I lose what I would charge you for your wedding, say ten roubles. Then your wife will bring you, say seven children, whose baptism would bring me seven and a half roubles and seven towels at twenty kopecks each, and for each of seven prayers I would receive in addition twenty kopecks. Further, of seven children, four surely would die, and for each burying I would charge one rouble. Then, your daughter would marry, and I should charge one rouble for her certificate. Perhaps your son would marry; but, well, let us drop your son as a possible soldier. Now, you ought to pay me 21 roubles 30 kopecks; but, to make an even amount 20 roubles will do.' The priest was finally induced to give the certificate for 10 roubles."

The Russian clergy are peculiar people in all respects. Their ugly long robes make them scarecrows for the village children. Their pockets are said to be bottomless. Their schooling, which lasts for fifteen years, is conducted on a curriculum of the middle ages; it doesn't comprise one study of use in common life. Their long poring over the Greek, Latin, Hebrew and old Slavonic languages perverts at last their native tongue, and makes their speech unintelligible to all mortals except those of their own caste, as that of the old Roman augurs is said to have been. Under the influence of monk teachers, and being isolated from society during the long school years, they acquire peculiarly awkward manners that have become proverbial.

This is but a faint picture of the Russian clergy. Hated by the peasants, ridiculed by the merchants, and despised by the nobility, they form a close corporation of their own, and so perpetrate their peculiarities. As an illustration of this: Suppose a young theological graduate of twenty-five years in search of a parish. He finds one, but he cannot get it unless he will marry his predecessor's daughter, who may be 35 or 40 years old and as ugly as sin, with half a dozen brothers and sisters. The young priest and the old maid with a parish attached to her never hesitate to declare, in answer to the question asked during the solemn ceremony of matrimony, that they choose each other of their own free will.—Sun.

The Idea of a Deluge.

"The earth inhabited by men," says the Singhalese version of the System of the Universe, "with the various continents connected with it, is subject alternately to destruction and renovation in a series of revolutions to which no beginning and no end can be discovered. Thus it was; thus it will ever be. There are three modes of destruction. The world is destroyed seven times by fire, and the eighth time by water. Every eighty-fourth destruction is by wind." Such is the orthodox Buddhist belief in the destructibility of the earth—a belief that elaborates the intensities in a most unpleasant manner the idea commonly pictured in most other creeds of the way our world must perish some day. But the story of a flood is enough for most people, and, when we contemplate for a moment the terrible destruction that is wrought by excessive rains and inconceivable rivers, the prominence it has in the mythologies of Pagan countries is hardly to be wondered at. The Romans, we know, had a superstitious, if not a devout belief in the age of Pyrrha as in the paternity and attributes of the Thunderer himself; while the ever restless, over-uppermost in their minds:

When fish were tangled in the branching elm,
The brooding stock dove's haunt in days of yore,
And roe deers swam affrighted 'mid the roar
Of seas that did their native glades o'erwhelm.

That "uxorious river," was, indeed, always avenging its Iliad's plaint, as Horace would say, and creating as much discomfort and expense among the poor Quirites as the Father of Rivers periodically commits among the dwellers along its muddy banks. After Horace's time, when Christians multiplied, the misbehavior of the Roman river was generally set down to the increase of their number and the malignity of their rite. Under the earlier Empire their back was made to bear the numerous shortcomings of a not very careful people, and "Christi ad Leones!" was the common remedy even in the time of Juvenal for an excess of zeal on the part of the Tiber or a neglect of duty on the part of the Nile.—Boston Courier.

The Faithful Wife of a Communist

The Paris correspondent of the London Daily News says: As might be expected, there have been Enoch Ardens among the returned Communists, but happily very few. When their wives read their names in the lists published in the journals, they disappeared. A case of an opposite nature has been reported to me by a friend of the family in which it happened. The wife in this instance was heroic in her constant affection, and accomplished prodigies of energy in putting her children to trades, setting herself up in business and sending money to her husband, who was laid low with a chronic malady. He was so altered by illness and hardship that at the railway neither she nor her children recognized him. The latter went back to distant parts of the city where they are employed, and the wife returned home in a despairing mood, which the spectacle of the rejoicing people around her intensified. The amnestied husband first lost time seeking for her in a crowd and then waiting to see if she would hunt him up. He remained until 6 o'clock, waiting in the hope that she would arrive, and then went to look after some baggage in which he had a collection of curious shells and stuffed animals, which he thought would please her. When at last he got to her domicile he was shown to her room and found the door bolted inside. Nobody answered to the loud knocking, and the police commissary was sent for. Upon his arrival a letter, freshly written, was found, in which the unfortunate woman said that she had only loved once in her life, and that the object of her love was her husband. It was evident that he was dead, and death only could relieve her from her heart wound. Her dead body lay on the floor. She had committed suicide.

THE COUNCIL CLERKSHIP.

The Olympia correspondent of the "Democratic Press" has been "spotted," and will be exposed if necessary. The personal and malicious interest which he betrays in discussing the theme of his article betrays his identity with unerring certainty.

The statement that Prof. Roberts was our "strongest competitor" falls with peculiar force upon the ears of those who know that he did not have a vote for the position. We have always had the kindest feelings for Mr. Roberts, and, in speaking of him to the councilmen, we assured them that he would fill the position of chief clerk in their body creditably, if he were elected.

Mrs. Packard is here, working assiduously to procure a recognition of the postal rights of inmates of insane asylums. She will likely be successful. A bill, introduced in the lower House, provides a liberal appropriation for the Territorial University at Seattle, on the free scholarship plan, and the general basis of the last one.

The object of our visit to Dungeness had nothing whatever to do with Mr. Cline and the council clerkship. Another barefaced falsehood has been added to the long list which the "Press" miscreant is rapidly piling up.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

OLYMPIA, W. T., Oct. 13, 1879.

The Council organized very harmoniously, after a certain gentleman from Eastern Washington, an aspirant for President, found that his goose was cooked. Its member are all fairly installed, the contested case between Messrs. Montgomery and Ringer having been decided in favor of the latter.

FINANCES

The following flattering showing is made: "The finances of the Territory continue in a sound and satisfactory condition. The Territory is free from debt, and warrants upon the treasury are usually paid upon presentation. Interest to the amount of $1,203.03 cents only have been paid upon warrants, during the past year, a sum much smaller than during any preceding period."

though a Colt be found among them, and dear knows how many other quadrupeds. In these days of sewing machines, they thought it necessary to have a Tucker, and they find him equal to a Baker's dozen in hard sense. Their clothes ought to be faultless, on account of the presence of an efficient Taylor; and as to music, their Harper is hard to beat.

LEGISLATION

is fairly piling up ahead, like the inevitable "breakers ahead" on a perilous voyage. Let us hope that it may be wisely disposed of.

Sheriff's Sale!

In the District Court of the 3d Judicial District of Washington Territory, holding terms at Port Townsend. ISRAEL KATZ, plaintiff, vs. HENRY QUINLAN, defendant.

PUBLIC notice is hereby given that pursuant to a copy of the judgment and order of sale in the above entitled action which was issued to me by the clerk of the above named court on the 17th day of September, 1879, and bearing date on said day, and is duly certified by said clerk under the seal of said court, as required by law, I, H. W. Whitener, Sheriff of San Juan county, Washington Territory, have seized and levied upon, all and singular, the following described real property, to-wit: The north half of the northwest quarter of section sixteen (16) and the south half of the southwest quarter of section nine (9) in township thirty-five (35) north, of range three (3) west; containing one hundred and sixty (160) acres of land, and situate, lying and being in San Juan county, Washington Territory, as the property of the defendant named in said order of sale, and I will, on the 17th day of November, 1879, at one o'clock P. M., in front of the court house door, Friday harbor, San Juan county, Washington Territory, sell at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, gold coin, the above described premises, or so much thereof as may be required to satisfy the said judgement and order. The amount required to be made upon said order is the sum of two hundred and seventy-nine dollars and twenty-one cents, gold coin, with interest thereon from the 15th of September, 1879, at the rate of two per cent per month, together with plaintiff's costs, taxed at forty-three dollars, with increased costs and expenses of making said sale.

Vivid illustrations are drawn in proof of the emphatic position taken that counties should be compelled to pay their Territorial taxes in full. The arguments on this point are so clear that we cannot forbear giving a quotation:

"A county that has no delinquent list, in a given year, collects, and pays over, the territorial tax at the rate of four mills on the dollar, while another county, with a delinquent list amounting to fifty per centum of the total tax, actually pays only at the rate of two mill upon the value of the taxable property of the county. It will thus readily be seen that this system is not only unjust to those counties which fully discharge their liabilities to the Territory, but it is also an indirect violation of the organic law, which requires all taxation to be equal and uniform."

The governor thinks that the payment, by the Territory, of the cost and expenses attending the conviction of criminals for felonies, is a very doubtful policy, and that its practical results are to compel one county having no criminals, or only a few to pay the expenses of another county which has a large number.

The following comparative statement will show the condition of the finances of the Territory on the first day of September, 1877, and one the first day of September, 1879:

Table with 2 columns: Item and Amount. Includes Assessed val. prop'y, Territorial tax levied, Bal. cash in treasury, Total receipts up to Sept. 1, 1879, Am't. disbursed from Sept. 1, 1877, to Aug. 31, 1879, Cash in treas. Sept. 1, 1879, Warrants drawn and paid for same time, Hospital for the insane, Territorial convicts, Prosecuting Attorneys, Constitutional convention, Printing and advertising, Territorial University, Supt. public instruction and board of education, Library and librarian, Miscellaneous, Sal. of Auditor and Treasurer, Amount of criminal expenses allowed to counties, Am't of int. p'd on warrants, Amount of decrease, Warrants outstanding, Sept. 15, 1877, Warrants outstanding, Sept. 1, 1879.

Amount of criminal expenses allowed to counties, Am't of int. p'd on warrants, Amount of decrease, Warrants outstanding, Sept. 15, 1877, Warrants outstanding, Sept. 1, 1879.

A Slight Mistake.

To say that Harvey Foster was in a bad temper was to put the mildest form of words to express the savage mood in which he found himself one Winter's evening, as he shot through the main street of the town of L., on his way homeward. Everything had gone exactly contrary to his wishes all the week. Entirely ignorant of the fact that Harvey Foster was a man of standing and wealth in L., pretty Josie allowed the minor fact, that he was insultingly free in his addresses, to influence her strongly, that her dignified reserve taught him the lesson he needed; and when he sought her for his wife, she refused the honor. To add to his discomfiture, the heiress, Miss Maud Chester—whom he had held in reserve, that his ambition might win a wife if his love would not—had coolly informed him that she was engaged to Fred Holt. Now, if there was one man above another who was utterly detestable in the eyes of Harvey Foster, it was Fred Holt. They had been rivals at school, where both stood well in talent, application and social position; and Fred was ever a little in advance in every study, carrying away the contested prizes far more frequently than it suited Harvey he should. In society, Fred's handsome face, ready wit, courteous manners and frank, sunny temper, kept him always in higher favor than Harvey Foster's sullen, cold disposition could gain. And now, when Maud had been ever gracious to the son of the wealthy banker, Silas Foster, she answered his love-suit by the tidings that his life-long rival had won her promise to be his bride. "And the worst of it, it will be just the match to suit his uncle," muttered Harvey, savagely. "No fear of his inheriting Fred now." For Harvey knew that Fred depended entirely upon the good will of his mother's brother, James Rutherford, a wealthy and eccentric bachelor, for his income. He had been left an orphan when a mere boy, and his uncle had adopted and educated him, and would probably make him heir. But the bachelor, having long ago put away sentiment, if he ever felt it, looked to Fred to make a match that would increase his fortune and social position. It was the wish of his heart to see Fred the husband of Maud Chester, and his wish was to be fulfilled. Harvey Foster, at odds with love, would like to see his rival refused, disinherited, humbled as he felt himself humbled, since neither love nor money would accept him. He strode over the pavement in a savage mood, and started suddenly to see Josie Ormstead coming out of a shop a few steps in advance of him. In her hand were several small packages, and her face was pale and anxious. In a moment Harvey was at her side. "Let me carry some of your parcels," he said, lifting his hat as he spoke. "Thank you, I have only a few steps to go," answered Josie, hurrying forward nervously. "You need not be afraid of me," Harvey said, noticing her nervous manner. "I will not annoy you! Why will you not believe my respect is as great for you as my love?" And before he knew exactly where his words were leading him, the young man was renewing the offer he had made before. At the door of a small lodging-house, Josie stopped and faced him. "You have spoken so before, Mr. Foster," she said, gently; "and because I believe you are sincere, I will tell you what I have kept secret for six months; I am already married!" "Josie! Be quick! Why do you stand there?" cried a voice in the narrow hallway, and a man stepped into the bar of light thrown across the open door by a street lamp. "Fred Holt!" muttered Harvey, starting forward. "Married! and to Fred Holt!" It almost consoled him in his own disappointment to think of the hold he had upon his rival. Engaged to Maud Chester, and married to Josie Ormstead! Fancy the proud face when she knew she had been deceived for a girl who worked. And sweeter still was it to Harry Foster to think of the wrath of James Rutherford when the news reached him. But in his triumph Harvey Foster had resolved to be very cautious to have proof of his rival's marriage before venturing to accuse, to either his uncle or his betrothed. He had noticed the number of the house in the glare of the street lamp, "No. 28 Ralph street." This was the entry he made in his notebook, in case his memory proved treacherous. It seemed as if fortune favored his plans. Only the next day, happening to go into a large fruit and flower shop, he saw Fred Holt selecting the contents of a large fancy basket of choicest fruits and rarest blossoms. Nodding carelessly to Harvey, he wrote the address upon a card and attached it to the pretty basket. "You will send this at once," he said and left the shop. And Harvey, taking the place Fred had just vacated, read the card: "Mrs. F. Holman, No. 28 Ralph street." What proof was needed now? It was not in the nature of Harvey Foster to work openly in the scheme. A blow in the dark suited him better. Feeling sure of his position now, he hurried homeward to write two anonymous letters, which would, he fondly hoped, disinherit and utterly confound his long successful rival. One of these venomous missives found Maud Chester in her pretty boudoir, trifling with some embroidery, and dreaming sweet dreams of her love and Fred Holt's devotion. She was a handsome, dignified girl of nineteen, full of all womanly sweetness, unspoiled by her great wealth. She loved Fred Holt with the whole strength of her young heart, and she was sure that her love was returned. The dainty work under the slender fingers progressed slowly, as Maud lay back in her deep arm-chair, looking into the glowing fire, and building castles of future happiness. From this tender reverie she was aroused by a servant, who handed her a squarely-folded letter, awkwardly addressed, and fastened with a wafer. Wondering who her unknown correspondent could be, she opened the paper. The same straggling hand met her eyes. Only these few lines were written:—"If you would have proof of the falsehood of one you believe true, go at eight o'clock this evening to the second floor of No. 28 Ralph street, and you will find Mr. Fred Holt and his wife." "Anonymous!" the proud girl said, her lips curling and her eyes flashing. "It is a falsehood!" She threw the note upon the coals as she spoke, and watched the flames curl and blacken the paper till it flashed out of sight up the chimney. Then, with all the color stricken from her face, she took up her embroidery. Had Harvey watched her then, he would have thought that that poisoned arrow had missed its aim. But it was not so. The work was thrown aside, the piano rang out under the restless fingers, a novel was opened, a room was put in order; but while the calm face betrayed no secret suffering, the girl was tortured all day by the words of the anonymous note: "Fred. Holt and his wife!" Could it be? Had the frank, brown eyes that had looked so lovingly into hers mirrored only a false heart? Was she indeed, so far deceived? Long before eight o'clock Maud Chester had resolved to prove or falsify the words that seemed burned upon her brain. Surely, of all the world she had the best right to test the truth of such a monstrous charge against her betrothed lover. And while she was striving to hide from any eyes the tortures she endured, James Rutherford was storming up and down his library, holding the second of Harvey Foster's communications in his hand. In the same awkward handwriting, the same facts were stated, the same hour and place to verify the writer's words. But the peppery old bachelor made no secret of his wrath. To have listened to him one would have supposed that making mince-meat of his disobedient nephew was the least he intended. He called him all the pet names suggested by a furious rage; he used up all the abusive adjectives in the dictionary to describe Mr. Fred Holt. He exhausted every threat that he could devise; long before eight o'clock he had wrought himself up to a rage that was frightful to witness. It was with a chuckle of satisfaction that Harvey Foster, secretly hidden in a narrow courtway, watched a tall stately figure leave a carriage at the head of Ralph street, and walk to the door of No. 28. In the quiet of the street he heard a clear voice ask the servant who opened the door—"Does Mrs. Holman live here?" "Yes ma'am, second floor." "Is her husband at home?" "Oh, yes, ma'am; you will find them both there." Then Maud Chester entered the house just as a short, panting man dashed up the steps, and, not pausing to make inquiry, also entered. In the passage, Maud Chester, turning, as rapid steps followed her, faced James Rutherford. "You here!" he said. "You have heard, too, then, of the trick this ungrateful hound has played both of us?" "I have heard," she answered, in a cold voice, "that your nephew's wife lives in this house. I wish to ascertain if it is true." "We will soon see! we will soon see! Second floor. Here we are. Now then!" And the old gentleman's raps proved the excitement under which he was laboring. A very pale, sweet woman, opened the door, her eyes showing she had been weeping very recently. "Does Mrs. Holman live here?" the old gentleman asked. "That is my name, sir." "Can I see your husband?" The soft eyes, full of deep trouble, were lifted inquiringly to his face. "Is it on business, sir?" "Very important business," was the rather dry response. "Because the doctor said to-day he must not have any mental excitement. He is so very much worse to-day; I—I am afraid he is dying!" And sobs broke out again. "Dying?" Maud Chester reeled into the room, and sank dizzily upon a chair. James Rutherford, with a face white as death, exclaimed—"Dying! An accident?" "No, sir; it is a fever from over-work." "Fever—over-work?" "Josie—Josie!" If ever Fred Holt spoke, he spoke then from an inner room, and the little wife, seeming to forget her strange visitors, answered quickly—"I'm coming, Fred." She went at once to the room from which the voice came, and again the two, listening intently, heard Fred's husky voice. "Bring the last cordial, Josie. Ten drops! I am sure he knew me, but he is faint." A moment later, the same cheery voice spoke again. "Drink this, old fellow. See!—see! here is Josie! Don't you know Josie?" Then another voice—oh! so very faint!—said: "Josie—little wife!" A moment of utter silence followed, and then Josie said—"There is a gentleman and lady in the other room, Fred, who want to see Frank. Will you see them?" And Fred, appearing in compliance with this request, found his uncle vigorously fanning Maud Chester with a newspaper to bring her out of a fainting fit. Before he could frame a question, his uncle said, quickly—"Get me some water!" He obeyed. Then, when Maud's blue eyes opened with a bewildered stare, the old gentleman continued—"We were sent here to see your domestic felicity, and we seemed to be misinformed." "My domestic felicity!" cried Fred. "Read that," said his uncle, handing the anonymous note. And Fred complied. "Humph! yes," he said. "So you came to see Mrs. Fred Holt. Well, that lady has made me a happy man; and his eyes flashed merrily upon Maud. "But I will introduce you to my cousin's wife, Mrs. Frank Holt. Maud," he continued, with gentle gravity, "since you have come here, it will be an act of Christian charity to remain, for"—and his voice sank very low—"we are afraid the poor little woman will be a widow before morning." "Poor fellow!" said James Rutherford "What is the trouble?" "Over-work. He thought he could increase his small salary by toiling over fine engravings in the evening, and he broke down. I never knew of his marriage till last week, when he wrote me a painful note, begging me to care for his wife if he died. I came here at once, and was fortunate enough to win poor little Josie's sisterly confidence and affection. Maud, if the great trouble we fear comes—" "I will be her true sister, Fred!" interrupted Maud. Here was a deep silence of several minutes. Then Josie, very pale still, crept softly into the room. "He is asleep!" she whispered. The doctor said if he slept he would live." And when she broke into hysterical weeping, Maud held her close in loving arms, whispering that she must let her stay and comfort her, for Fred's sake. Nearly eleven o'clock came, and still Harvey Foster waited, half frozen, in the dark courtway, to see the discomfiture of his rival. Then his patience was rewarded by seeing Fred and his uncle come out of No. 28, arm-in-arm, evidently the best of friends, and enter Miss Chester's carriage and drive away. Not until the day of the wedding, when he saw Josie an honored guest, and was introduced to Mrs. Frank Holt, did Harvey Foster understand the slight mistake which he had made. Good doctors are liable to be rapped up in their business. From 1873 to 1879 inclusive the United States mints coined 376,641,340 pieces of money, aggregating in value $419,071,313 30. Lord Beaconsfield made the following cynical remark when some one called the Zulus uncivilized: "Uncivilized? I do not quite see that. They have routed our armies, outwitted our generals, killed a prince, and converted a bishop. The most civilized nation could do no more."

The above institution having been placed on a permanent footing, as the United States Hospital for Marine Patients on Puget Sound, the proprietor takes pleasure in announcing that no painful expense will be spared in maintaining the comfort and convenience of private patients.

This is the largest General Hospital north of San Francisco, and by far the most complete in equipment. It has been thoroughly refitted and re-furnished. Its general wards have accommodations for about one hundred patients and are peculiarly adapted for cases requiring the most careful treatment and constant supervision at limited expense. Those who desire them will be furnished with private rooms, entirely separate and distinct, at a slight additional cost.

The attention of Mill owners, and those interested in shipping, is called to the fact that women suffering from contagious diseases will be treated outside the Hospital without expense to the vessel.

Guarding the Gold.

The Sub-Treasury contains at present $164,000,000 of national wealth. The details may be given thus—$11,000,000 silver, $130,000,000 in gold and $23,000,000 in greenbacks. The new silver vault which has been in use some months, will store $40,000,000, and the present prospects indicate that it will soon be filled. The vault is in the basement and connected by an elevator with the specie room on the main floor. The silver is placed in bags containing $1,000 each, and the varied issues of coin are kept separate. Gold is held in bags containing $5,000, and greenbacks in packages each of one thousand notes. In addition to the silver vault there are other vaults on the main floor, each of which is built on the plan of a first class safe. They contain the gold and the greenbacks, the lock combination being held by Mr. Ashby, the specie clerk, and Mr. Brittan, the cashier. Once a month the Surveyor of the Port makes an examination of the treasure on hand, but with this exception it is under the care of the above mentioned officials.

At night four men, suitably armed, are put on guard and patrol the main hall. Eight men are engaged in this service, their tour being alternate nights. During the day there are two policemen in their usual uniform on duty in the hall, in addition to which two detectives in ordinary citizens' dress are keeping watch. One of these (Thomas Sampson) is an expert of high order of skill, and hence commands a salary of $1,800 a year. These detectives often see professional thieves lingering around, but the latter all know Sampson, his presence prevents any attempt at crime. The watchmen receive $75 per month. They come in at 5 o'clock in the afternoon (at which time the detectives leave) and then lock up, and remain until relieved in the morning. In addition to this, the treasury has lately been put in condition of defense against the attack of a mob. The windows are protected by steel bars and the inside shutters are perforated with loopholes. The entire aerial force is 70, for each of which a basket is kept in the armory. Such a force could hold a large body at bay, in addition to this, Gatling guns will be stationed on the roof, which will insure the safety of the place against popular violence. This vast institution is under the general care of Thomas Hillhouse, Assistant Treasurer. He has been in the western part of the state, but has held his present office for several years. His salary is $8,000—a small sum for one who must give bonds amounting of half a million. Next in importance is Cashier Brittan, whose salary is $4,000. The pay here is generally small, and an immense business is done in a very economical manner.—New York Letter to Troy Times.

The Country Press.

There is no influence in America so powerful in advancing civilization, and moulding and shaping opinion, as the press. The widely circulated, ably conducted, and long established daily press of the large cities have an influence more perceptible and more widely felt than the smaller weekly journals, but the country or rural press has an influence more general, more forcible and more lasting than is generally known or understood. To that powerful lever do the Western States and Territories owe their rapid advancement and prosperity more than to anything else. The country press of the West and Northwest holds an influence which many of the more and more populous States may well envy. The newspapers of the West have been true pioneers. They have been the place beside the farmer, the stock-raiser and the miner; marched with the foremost adventurer who came to the prairie fruitful, unburdened the wealth of his treasures, and utilize the productions of the forests. They have witnessed the birth of towns, nourished them in infancy, and either pronounced their benediction at their death, or advocated their interests in adversity or prosperity. It was not their part to wait until the harvest was garnered before sowing upon the field, but they toiled, and with the husbandman long before the blade gave promise of the ear. Now, in many of the central West states (if we may be permitted to so term them) the elder brothers of the country press are beginning to receive their reward. The prairies are dotted everywhere with evidences of civilization; villages and cities have sprung up where the farmer was wont to drive his plow; railroads—great arteries of commerce—spread their iron lines from county to county and State to State; and amid the general prosperity, the tireless and energetic editor of the country comes in for a reasonable and well-deserved reward for his years of mental and physical labor.—Exchange.

A weary individual who was found lying in the gutter last night, about twelve o'clock, with his nose buried in the earth, said he was "perfectly sober." "Merely lookin' for the planet Jub—hic iter, which the papers say is splendidly bright (hic) now at midnight." He was gathered in by a "star" but not the one he was looking for.

From the Rockport, Ill, Banner There is no medicine in the world which has gained such fame as St. Jacobs Oil; this is, however, not in the least astonishing, when we consider its truly wonderful curative powers. Mr. F. Rodenberg, of Grandview, called at our office last week and related the following circumstance: I suffered with rheumatism for over six years; consulted many physicians, and tried hundreds of remedies; but without avail. Having seen St. Jacobs Oil advertised in your paper, and heard of some most astonishing cures, I sent to Rockport for a bottle of the Oil, and used it according to directions. The relief I felt was almost "electric." I got better at once, and now there is not a trace of rheumatism left in my body.

HISTORY OF THE INDEPENDENT ORDER OF GOOD TEMPLARS.

Written for the "Good Templar Gem" BY REV. T. F. PARKER.

On May 16, 1855, a convention assembled at Cleveland, Ohio, for the purpose of instituting a National Grand Lodge. N. W. Davis, G. W. C. T. of the grand lodge of N. Y., took the chair. N. Curtis and G. Chambers, P. G. T.'s of New York, were also present. At this session New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Kentucky, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Canada and Iowa were represented by thirty delegates. A committee was appointed to prepare a constitution and another to revise the ritual. It was ordered that the Grand Lodge of North America be hereafter known as the grand lodge of New York, and that a charter be issued to that grand lodge by the R. W. G. L. The officers were as follows:

R. W. C. T. James M. Moore, of Ky. R. W. G. C. Dr. Case, of C. W. R. W. G. V. Orlo Strong, of Ill. R. W. G. T. S. Steele, of Mich. R. W. G. S. Mary C. Ruckman, of Pa. P. R. W. G. T. N. W. Davis, of N. Y. R. W. G. Chap. G. Taylor, of Mich. R. W. G. M. B. H. Mills, of Mo. R. W. D. G. M. Ashel Stoue, of Ind. R. W. G. I. G. H. Hoover, of Ohio. R. W. G. O. G. W. G. Farris, of Iowa.

On motion it was agreed to address the presiding officer as Worthy Templar. The seal adopted was very nearly the same as at present.

The order was introduced into Vermont, Massachusetts, California and Tennessee during this year. Missouri at its grand lodge session offered the introduction of the subject of prohibition on the ground that it was a political question; while Iowa hailed the prohibitory law "as an important item to encourage us in the prosecution of the cause of Temperance."

The grand lodge of New York, having given its supreme power over the order into the hands of the R. W. G. L., met as a State lodge at Utica, Dec. 5, 1855. G. W. C. T. Davis gave a full account of the action taken at Cleveland. L. M. Smith was elected G. W. C. T. Twenty-seven Lodges had been instituted during the year, and fifty had gone down. Thus the decline of the Order commenced in the Mother State.

HISTORY OF ALCOHOL.

Alcohol was invented 930 years ago by the son of a strange woman, Hagar, in Arabia. Ladies used it with a powder to paint themselves, that they might appear more beautiful, and this powder was called alcohol. During the reign of William and Mary, an act was passed encouraging the manufacture of spirits. Soon after, intemperance and profligacy prevailed to such an extent that the retailers in intoxicating drinks put up signs in public places informing the public that they might get drunk for a penny, and have some straw to get sober on. In the sixteenth century distilled spirits spread over the continent of Europe. About this time it was introduced into the colonies, as the United States were then called. The first notice we have of its use in public life was among the laborers of the Hungarian mines of the fifteenth century. In 1751, it was used by the English soldiers as a cordial.

The alcohol of Europe was made of grapes, and sold in Italy and Spain as medicine. The Genoese afterwards made it of grain, and sold it as medicine in bottles, under the name of the water of life. Until the sixteenth century it had not been kept by the apothecaries as medicine. During the reign of Henry VII. brandy was unknown in Ireland, and soon its alarming effects induced the government to pass a law prohibiting its manufacture. About 120 years ago it was a beverage, especially among the soldiers in North America, under the preposterous notion that it prevented sickness and made men fearless on the field of battle. It was looked upon as a sovereign specific.

Such is a brief sketch of the introduction of alcohol into society as a beverage. The history of it is written in the wretchedness, the tears, the groans, the poverty, and murder of thousands. It has marched the land with the tread of a giant, leaving the impress of his foot prints in the bones sinews, and life-blood of humanity.

The Olympia "Standard," says that a number of citizens of that place, are trying the famous Dr. D'Unger's "chinchona rhuhra" cure for drunkenness, with a fair prospect of ultimately removing the appetite for strong drink.

John B. Gough, the famous lecturer will sail for the United States during this month.

Cathartic Pills

Combine the choicest cathartic principles in medicine, in proportions accurately adjusted to secure activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. They are the result of years of careful study and practical experiment, and are the most effectual remedy yet discovered for diseases, caused by derangement of the stomach, liver, and bowels, which require prompt and effectual treatment. AYER'S PILLS are especially applicable to this class of diseases. They act directly on the digestive and assimilative processes, and restore regular healthy action. Their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, is one of the many proofs of their value as a safe, sure, and perfectly reliable purgative medicine. Being compounded of the concentrated virtues of purely vegetable substances, they are positively free from calomel, or any injurious properties, and can be administered to children with perfect safety.

AYER'S PILLS are an effectual cure for Constipation or Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach and Breath, Dizziness, Headache, Loss of Memory, Numbness, Blisters, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Eruptions, and Skin Diseases, Dropsy, Tumors, Worms, Nerealgia, Colic, Gripes, Diarrhoea, Dysentery, Gout, Piles, Disorders of the Liver, and all other diseases resulting from a disordered state of the digestive apparatus.

As a Dinner Pill they have no equal. While gentle in their action, these PILLS are the most thorough and searching cathartic that can be employed, and never give pain unless the bowels are inflamed, and then their influence is healing. They stimulate the appetite and digestive organs; they operate to purify and enrich the blood, and impart renewed health and vigor to the whole system.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Practical and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass.

LIGHTNING SEWER

THE NEW WILSON Oscillating Shuttle SEWING MACHINE

Is wonderful in its conception, unprecedented for doing a large range of sewing in textile fabrics and leather. Its motions are continuous, admitting of an extraordinary rate of speed, either by steam or foot power. Every motion of the treadle makes six stitches, thus producing about one-third more work in a day than other Sewing Machines. It has no stop motions, and tightens the stitch with the needle out of the fabric. It uses the well-known Wilson Compound Feed on both sides of the needle. It has two-thirds less parts than any other first-class Sewing Machine. Its arm is fully eight and one-half inches long and five and one-half inches high, and the whole Machine is very compactly and scientifically constructed in proportions, elegance, design and appearance. Its simple, powerful and perfect mechanism places it as far in advance of all other Sewing Machines as the telephone is superior to the tin speaking tube. The WILSON MENDING ATTACHMENT, for repairing all kinds of textile fabrics WITHOUT PATCHING, furnished FREE with all WILSON SEWING MACHINES, together with a Tacker, Ruffler, Corder, Set of Hemmers, Binder, etc. Prices furnished with freight charges prepaid, and machines furnished on trial to responsible parties, to be used with steam-power, in places where we have no agents.
