Of the many criticisms on the labors of our recent Legislature, more are adverse, perhaps, than otherwise. A Portland exchange says the session was long, tedious and well nigh barren of good results, adding with a sigh that could almost be heard between the lines, "The world is governed too much." Another exchange remarks that if the session had continued much longer, Congress would have had to pass an act repealing the whole business, and adds that the result proves some men to be more successful in managing caucuses than making laws. Still another comments disparagingly upon the mental calibre of the members, etc. Some of the work done was doubtless more or less creditable, among which was the revision and codification of the laws—providing the job proves to have been as well done as the bragging would indicate. But much was accomplished deserving of censure. The old, sectional feeling was inflamed, and the breach widened; the charge of gross inconsistencies in regard to financial disbursements, so freely made by newspapers, was by no means unmerited; an attempt was made to do serious and lasting injustice to Western Washington by an apportionment bill taking largely from her ratio of legislative representation and giving to the Eastern section accordingly; we are creditably informed that this last move was only foiled by Representative Kuhn who manfully threw himself in the breach and secured justice, for all of which he deserves the thanks of his constituents. Perhaps the most outrageously peevish sets of our legislators, however, were those whereby much needed aid was refused so worthy a territorial institution as the University, and our pilot law was repealed. The Argus took a lively interest in the enactment of a proper and efficient pilot law, and it will see that the stigma of the miserable failure by the Council to meet the requirements of commerce shall rest where it belongs, on the shoulders of Messrs. Hovey, Evans and Miller. Kuhn introduced the new pilot bill twice in the House, twice it passed that body without a dissenting vote, and twice was it killed in the Council; and then, to complete the job, the latter passed an act repealing the old law, which set the House passed in hopes, we are told, that the councilmen would not dare to go home without any law at all upon the subject. Mr. Kuhn accomplished all that his constituents could ask of him in the matter, but the members of the Council (particularly the three mentioned) will find if they ever aspire to re-election, that the people have memories.

The Olympia "Transcript" man is glad to see Bancroft & Co. get a chance to bid on the work of printing our territorial laws, for the simple reason that he is unprepared to compete for it himself. In other words, he records himself as preferring that all money for printing, that he cannot get, should go to California printers. There are lots of us who are not prepared to do the printing mentioned, but no one but the "Transcript" editor has yet disgraced the fraternity by exhibiting such dog-in-the-manger littleness as that indicated by his utterances last week. That Gunn always had the reputation of being small bored, but this illustrates its calibre in double pica headlines.

OUR Clallam County friends will be pleased to learn that the obnoxious hog law, about which they have been so much dissatisfied, was repealed just before the close of the legislative session. Being satisfied from personal knowledge that the measure was desired by but a few residents of that county, and they of but one precinct at that, and that the Representative had been imposed upon in the matter, the editor of this paper called attention to it publicly and then wrote a letter to Mr. Kuhn, stating the facts. That gentleman, anxious to serve his constituents fairly and faithfully, and seeing the error he had been led into, had the law repealed. Although the law would not have been very oppressive, on account of the mildness of its terms, yet nearly all in the county desired no restrictions of the kind at all. The result showed that if dissatisfied people would only make their wants known in the proper way and time they would be acting more sensibly than by doing nothing but growl. The law in question would hardly have been respected with obedience had it remained in force, but it is far better out of the way.

THE Portland "Mew Northwest," of the 8th inst., contains editorial correspondence from Olympia, in which Mrs. Duniway gives pen pictures of some of the legislators, complimentary and otherwise. Of Mr. Kuhn, she speaks as follows: "Yonder member from Jefferson, with graceful gait and luxuriant hair, is the Roscoe Conkling of the lower House. He understands parliamentary tactics to a dot, and leads yonder grizzled gentlemen in the bewildering mazes of amendments and reamendments, and rejoinders and surrejoinders, till he outwits them all." Speaking of Messrs. Hovey and Miller, her tone changes into the following strain: "That crooked member has a clear head on 'Beggars.' Sorry we can't say as much for him on humanitarian principles. He has been employed as book keeper in a big lumbering monopoly till his brain has acquired a metallic texture that cannot be expanded with a new idea. His echo sits at his elbow like a Miller attracted by a blazing image. The echo votes like the metallic luminary, and both boast that they never change." Rather cutting sarcasm.

THE new apportionment bill provides that the Council shall consist of twelve members, as follows: county of Walla Walla, 1 member; Columbia and Garfield, 1; Whitman, 1; Walla Walla, Columbia, Garfield & Whitman, 1 jointly; Stevens, Spokane and Yakima, 1; Klickitat, Skamania and Clark, 1; Cowlitz, Whitman, Pacific and Chehalis, 1; Lewis and Thurston, 1; Pierce and Kitsap, 1; Mason, Jefferson, Clallam and San Juan, 1; Island, Snohomish and Whatcom, 1; King, 1. The House of Representatives shall consist of 24 members, as follows: Walla Walla, 3; Columbia, 1; Garfield, 1; Columbia and Whitman, 1; Yakima, 1; Whitman, 1; Stevens and Spokane, 1; Klickitat, 1; Skamania, Klickitat and Clarke, 1; Clarke, 1; Cowlitz, Wahkiakum, Pacific and Chehalis, 2; Lewis, 1; Thurston, 1; Pierce, 1; Mason, Jefferson and Clallam, 1; King, 2; Klickitat and King, 1; Snohomish and Island, 1; San Juan and Whatcom, 1.

THE first bill that passed the Senate was that conferring the franking privilege for life upon the widow of the late President Garfield. A like privilege had previously been granted to Mrs. Tyler, Mrs. Polk and Mrs. Lincoln.

SENATOR Grover, of Oregon, has resurrected the vetoed fifteen passenger Chinese bill and introduced it in Congress, with slight alteration.

WANTED—A DONKEY.

Maggie was in trouble—that was clear. There she sat on the nursery window-seat, only seven years old, and in trouble already. The two big tears striking down by that very small nose. What was it all about?

This is what it was all about. Two months before that had been her birthday, and a picnic, and donkey riding.

It was Maggie's first ride, and ever since she had been thinking of donkeys, morning, noon and night. Her great idea was that if she could but possess a donkey of her own it would be the most delightful thing in the world to be able to ride every day.

So she set to work, living in hopes, and putting by all her halfpence and pence with the grand object of buying a donkey; for she remembered hearing papa say that money could buy anything; therefore there were live donkeys to be bought somewhere, though one never saw them in a shop window. Maggie had collected in her money box the vast amount of one and two pence three farthings, when she heard the dreadful news that her brother Tom had asked the man at the stand, and the man had declared he would rather shoot the donkey dead than sell him for less than fourteen shillings down!

That sum was far too much for Maggie to hope for. But there was worse still.

Tom had told their papa, and he had said he could not think of having a donkey; did Maggie want a stable built? or would she stable Neddy in the coal-cellar, or have him jog up stairs every night and be packed tightly into the toy-cupboard, standing up straight with his fore-claws on the shelf? Tom repeated all this to her, and dwelt with great glee upon the donkey being a tight fit in the toy-cupboard on the top landing, but Maggie would not laugh with him.

All her hopes were over; all the donkey-dreams of the future were gone; what was the good of one and two-pence, three farthings now?

Tom ran away down stairs whistling. Maggie leant her head against the window and cried.

All the day the trouble in the nursery lasted. At last Maggie's tender-hearted mother found out what was the matter, and tried to comfort her.

"Next week, my dear," she said, "I am going out shopping; and if I add another shilling to yours, we can bring home a beautiful grey Neddy from the toy shop. Won't that be nice?"

"But I want it to-morrow," answered fretful Maggie, with not a little self-will in the tone, and her brother Tom now came in and added his entreaties.

And in vain their mother argued that the next week would come quickly. Nothing but to-morrow would do for Maggie; and so she had her way.

"Well, my dear children," said their mamma at last, "you may choose for yourselves. But as I like children to be patient, remember Maggie will have a two-shilling toy next week; but if she goes this week she must do the best she can with her one shilling. And of course Janet will go with you, if you will go to-morrow."

At the last word Tom's eyebrows were beginning to look what Maggie called "lumpy" with a frown.

Afterwards he told her he most decidedly would not go, if Janet went.

He would not be led about with a nurse's apron strings—not he!

Maggie might choose either to have him or to have Janet; and Janet could not choose a donkey properly; he would choose one that wouldn't break—Janet's donkey would be dead before night, and done for.

Maggie was soon persuaded; and by asking and pleading hard, they got leave to go by themselves; but they were strictly told not to delay for any purpose either going or coming, and to keep to the straight road and streets, and on no account taking short cuts through fields or by-paths.

Next day Maggie had three great pleasures:

First, the weather was bright for the walk with Tom.

Secondly, she was to wear the new dress that had been finished the day before, and a very pretty dress it was, too, all cream colored with a broad crimson sash.

Last and greatest, she learned that dear good papa, the very day he had made fun about the donkey and toy cupboard, had written off to Uncle John, who had a great house in the country, and it was very likely that Uncle John would invite her and Tom to pay him a visit.

Off Maggie went now all brilliant in her new dress, hand-in-hand with Tom.

They kept most obediently to the high roads and streets, and after about an hour's choosing, they bought a donkey not without wistful glances at the two-shilling large one, that might have been bought the next week.

Still this was a capital Neddy, when one kept one's eyes off the other.

Tom and Maggie took a good look at their purchase before it was rolled up in paper.

Tom even made Maggie laugh out loud by making Neddy look "ashamed of himself"—an expression which a toy donkey shows at once, when his head is unhooked from the wire and pushed in as far as it will go, so as to leave him with a hanging head and no neck whatever.

The donkey had a beautiful neck with a woolly mane, when it hung properly; his bridle was decked with plated trappings, little basket work panniers were slung across his saddle, and his stand had the delicious smell of new toys.

It was only when Maggie proudly brought her parcel out of the shop that Tom revealed the real cause of his anxiety to come along with her to-day.

He went and bought gunpowder, and other chemicals in their blue parcels for making fireworks—an art forbidden at home.

"I'm not afraid, you know," he explained, "but I must take care of you Maggie, and girls always get in the way. Oh! I say, there's the donkey yonder with his head over the gate."

Away they went to Farmer Stubbins' donkey, Maggie running as fast as she could; it was indeed a rare opportunity of making acquaintance with a real live Neddy.

Tom told Maggie to hold the gunpowder parcel. Then he made a rough bridle out of the donkey's halter, mounted his bare back by climbing up the gate and certainly kept his seat—for the simple reason that the donkey stood quite still.

At last, when coaxing and thumping were in vain, Tom climbed down again, voting it a silly animal; and Maggie, holding her own parcel, was put up instead. Now this donkey of Farmer Stubbins was apt to take odd whims into that patient looking head of his.

No sooner was the little girl on his back than he turned away from the gate, and to her great delight went off with her at a most leisurely walk.

"Oh! it's beautiful! Chuk, chuk, chuk! gee up! what a dear Neddy!" shouted Maggie with pride and glee. "Why, it is quite easy to ride without a saddle. Anybody could do it, and—" The words ended in a scream.

Over went the deceptive Neddy, legs in air, rolling on the grass.

And Maggie was down on the grass too, all pain, all fright, struggling out of the way, and content to scramble anyhow through the mud and wet of yesterday's rain.

"The brute!" roared Tom, running to her. "Oh! Maggie, Maggie, are you much hurt?"

"Not much—Tom dear—oh! take me home!" she sobbed, sitting on the grass; and then she could only cry out loud, with choking sobs.

Tom was in great trouble for her, but he was in a greater rage with the donkey.

The big shaggy beast had got up again, and after a good shake all over seemed harmlessly to forget the fit of mischief and frolic.

"I'll give it to him! I'll make him go! I'll break him in!" cried Tom, snatching a knotty branch from under the hedge.

And somehow he sprang upon the donkey's back in a trice, and so vengefully "gave it" to Neddy with the stick, that in half a minute he found himself clinging to the donkey's neck, and going now at a trot, and now at a canter down the field.

He was riding a barebacked steed now at last, but the difficulty was, not to keep on, but to get off.

He clung to the mane tenaciously; no prospect of stopping, no prospect of escaping.

At the end of the field there was a shallow, slimy pool, looking very uninviting, and now straight into the middle of this walked the donkey to cool his obstinate legs.

There he came to a stand-still, and putting his long ears back viciously, lifted his head on high, opened his mouth, and sang, and snorted, and hee-hawed, till the very air rang with the braying.

Tom let go of the mane, and sat straight up with a sense of relief.

"He must walk out of this some time," he reflected, "and the moment I'm over dry ground, off I'll go with a jump. The vexatious brute—wouldn't I like to lick him!"

All at once the braying ceased, and the frolicsome mood caught the donkey again.

Up he went rearing straight, and away out of the pool, plunging and whisking his tail, and splash, splash, went Tom at full length into the stagnant water.

Half an hour later—were these the children that had gone out, now returning home in such a sad plight?

A very wet boy, all muddy and slimy, sometimes trying to carry, and sometimes helping along on his arm a lame girl, with a red, tearful face, and a dragged cream-and-crimson dress all over soils and stains.

In the pocket of the boy was a parcel of wet gunpowder—of no use, and all the money gone.

In the arms of the little sister was a parcel containing her donkey, all in smashed pieces—of no use again, and all the money gone.

And before them at home there was the letter from Uncle John, saying they were to come down at once to Sussex, and they might ride the pony as they liked; for he meant to keep it there as Maggie's own—a birthday present not yet too late.

Now they could not go, for poor Maggie's foot was sprained, and she would be laid up for a fortnight; and as for that disgraceful fellow, Tom, he should not go, papa said, until Maggie was well. And serve him right, too!

But after all, they knew that though papa was angry, he would forgive and get Maggie well, and hurry them both off to Uncle John's and the pony; and though mamma was grieved, all would brighten up with pity and kisses, as indeed all had brightened already for Maggie, who was being soothed in loving arms, while she whispered:

"Oh, mamma, I wish we had left the donkey till next week!"

And Tom was wishing exactly the same thing—but with regard to Farmer Stubbins' donkey.

If man, or woman either, wishes to realize the full power of personal beauty, it must be by cherishing noble hopes and purposes, by having something to do and something to live for.—[Prof Upam.]

Darkey Jim.

"Where under the sun is Darkey Jim?" said Pinkie to herself, and she turned over and over in bed trying to find him. "I don't believe Kitty put him to bed at all."

Kitty was the nurse, you know, and Darkey Jim was the black rubber doll that Santa Claus brought last Christmas time. I don't know why Pinkie always wanted Jim to sleep with her, because he was torn most to pieces. The big dog got him once and ate a whole leg off, and one night Jim was left outdoors in the rain, and was dreadfully soaked out of shape. But Pinkie had a little sister Ruth, who slept in another room, just through the doorway, so when Darkey Jim wasn't found that night, Pinkie called out:

"Ruth, are you asleep?" But no answer came.

"I believe she's got him herself, and won't tell," said Pinkie.

So she got out of bed and went into the next room.

"Ruth, have you my Darkey Jim?" she asked, as she came to the crib. Ruth didn't answer, and so Pinkie began to feel all about her for the doll, and at last she found it. But do you suppose that Ruth was really asleep? Not a bit more than you are at this moment; and when Pinkie tried to lift Jim out of the crib to take him to her own bed, she found out that Ruth was wide awake and had tight hold of Jim's leg.

"Go 'way!" cried Ruth, sitting up in bed and tagging with all her might to keep hold of Darkey Jim.

"He's mine, Ruth Vail, and you know it," answered Pinkie. "So give him to me."

They were both dreadfully cross, it seems to me, but they were dreadfully sleepy, too.

Well, the end of the quarrel was that mamma, who was down stairs, came running up to see what the noise was all about. Ruth was crying, but Pinkie wasn't—because she had the doll.

"He's mine, and I want him," said Pinkie, crossly.

"I got him first, and I think I might keep him, I do," sobbed Ruth.

"Now look here," said mamma, taking Darkey Jim away from Pinkie, "this is too bad, to make all this noise and fuss, and neither one willing to give up to the other. I tell you what I must do. 'I'm going to stand Darkey Jim up here against the door between the rooms and have him sleep there all night. He'll be just as near one of you as he is to the other, and I hope both of my little girls will be satisfied—although I must say that I think Ruth shouldn't have taken Jim at all, because he didn't belong to her."

So that was the arrangement made, and mamma went down stairs again, leaving the children in bed, and Jim standing on his one leg against the door.

Pinkie hadn't been in bed two minutes before she began to think:

"I don't see what use Jim is to anybody over there."

Then she thought a little more:

"I don't think I was very good to Ruth, particularly as she gave me half her peach to-day. I know what I'm going to do. I'm going to get Jim and put him straight in Ruth's crib."

Now it happened that Ruth hadn't been in bed two minutes either before she began to think:

"I expect I was real cross to Pinkie." Then she thought some more, too:

"I don't see what good Darkey Jim's doing over there all alone by himself. I know what I'm going to do. I'm going to get him and put him straight in Pinkie's crib."

So both the little girls got softly out of bed at just the same time, and went carefully across the floor.

"I must be very careful, so Ruth won't hear me," said Pinkie to herself.

"I must be very careful so Pinkie won't hear me," said Ruth to herself.

So they felt along the wall, and put out their hands, and ran bump against each other in the dark.

"You take him," said Pinkie.

"You take him," answered Ruth.

"He's yours, you know—and I'm real sorry."

"But you gave me the peach, and I was cross," said Pinkie, holding out Jim in the dark.

And how do you think they made it all right?

Why, they both got into the same bed, and Darkey Jim slept between them.—[N. Y. Tribune.]

SAWDUST.—In New York there are about 500 vendors of sawdust, having a capital of $200,000 invested, and doing a business amounting to $200,000 annually. Forty years ago the mills were glad to have the sawdust carted away; twenty-five years ago it could be bought for fifty cents a load, but the price has been increased until now it brings $3.50 a load at the mills. It is used at the hotels, eating houses, groceries and other business houses. It is wet and spread upon floors in order to make the sweeping cleaner. Plumbers use a great deal about pipes, and builders to deaden walls and floors. Soda water men and packers of glass and small articles of every kind use it, and dolls and some living creatures are more or less stuffed with it. Washington Market takes two or three loads a day, and a great deal is spread on the piers, and stables take many loads a day. Yellow pine makes the best sawdust, as it is the least dusty, and has a good, healthy smell. But any white wood dust will do. They make a great deal of black walnut sawdust, but it will not sell, as it is burned.

A Canadian has picked up 185 small diamonds from the banks of the Gatineau and taken them to Montreal to be tested.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF JEFFERSON CO

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1881.

PILOT LAW AGAIN.

The Tacoma "Ledger," of the 2d, attempts to sneak out of its former advocacy of no pilot law, and says: "Certainly, let there be a pilot law for Puget Sound, but not in the form of the defeated bill." If its language in the first instance, as referred to by us, did not convey the meaning ascribed to it, then we have something to learn about the import of words. The further remarks of our contemporary relative to the old law, and its vague objections to the defeated bill, lead us to hope, for the good of its reputation for intelligence, that neither of the instruments in question had been read with any degree of careful scrutiny by its editor. The old law was unconstitutional, and so defective that an appeal to the Supreme Court would have been decided against it. It had been a source of fruitless and costly litigation, and left those who enforced its authority powerless to prevent fraudulent action, or to carry out their manifest duties. The Pilot Commissioners had been aware of these defects for the past twelve years, and have sought from time to time to have them remedied; but whenever the Legislatures have been in session, the same parties who effected the defeat of the last bill in the Council have succeeded, by means of their lackeys and paid attorneys, together with the awe their corporate power inspires, in defeating every amendment or improvement proposed. "What influence," asks the verdant "Ledger," "worked the repeal of the old law?" It was the influence of the Puget Mill Co., through its Council members, Messrs Hovey and Miller, aided by Councilman Evans, who had given his word to parties in this town, we are informed, that he would support the new bill, in the face of which he not only opposed it but delivered a violent philippic denouncing it. We learn that his excuse is that a certain board of trade, so called, at Tacoma, instructed him so to do. We would like to ask who this board of trade is, that it should dictate to the commercial interests of Puget Sound, or if Mr. Evans did not have a duty to perform to the public at large vastly higher and more important than any obligation that could possibly exist toward a petty, local organization that chooses to call itself by a high-sounding title? The matter looks more like a subterfuge to avoid responsibility than anything else.

Now see the result of having no pilot law. Last week the English steam tug Etta White, belonging to the Burrard Inlet mill, was here, and her owner, Mr. Rithet, of the great house of Welch, Rithet & Co., of Victoria, stated that after the 1st of January next he intends to keep her at Cape Flattery to tow vessels to American ports on the Sound. All other English tug boats are preparing for similar duty, and the "Ledger" will soon have the gratifying sight of English pilots and English tug boats bringing vessels to Tacoma. We predict that before the next Legislature meets the mill owners will be tired of such suicidal business, and the people will know who not to elect to make our laws.

The Chilean bark Twenty-first of May recently struck on Race Rocks and proved a total loss—all because she had not a competent pilot. It may be considered a trivial matter, by some of our wisecracks, that incidents of this kind should occur; but we can assure them that just such incidents conspire to give our waters the reputation of being dangerous, to say nothing of the terrible losses to owners, and the danger to human lives, and the heightened rates of insurance. The vessel mentioned was bound to Port Discovery, for lumber, and had vainly tried to secure a pilot.

Now that our Legislative representative has returned home, it may not be inappropriate to refer him to the experience of a member once upon a time, who was suspected by some of his constituents of having received bribes because he wore such fine clothes and was so lavish with his money. An agent was delegated to inquire into the matter; he returned with the following information which he delivered before a called meeting: said he. "My friends, the Hon. member explained the case as clear as day. He said that the member don't have anything to do evenings, and instead of reading novels or attending the wicked theater they gather in little crowds around the table and the one who has four of a kind of something or other rakes in something or other they call a pot. I don't know where the money comes in, but it's somehow or other; and somehow or other our esteemed representative always has more of a kind than any one else. I suggest a vote of continued confidence in our member until he returns to explain what the 'kinds' are and what the pot has to do with it." How is it Joe?

COL. John W. Forney, the famous editor of the Philadelphia "Press," died on the 9th inst. He was an eminent journalist, and his funeral was largely attended by members of the fraternity.

AN exchange says that a dangerous disease has broken out among the Indians of the Skokomish reservation. It somewhat resembles the diphtheria, has been fatal in two or three instances, and many are down with it.

THE North Pacific and Starr are now doing duty between Tacoma and Victoria, the former making through trips and the latter making every other night, as per former arrangement. The Otter has been in port.

PIERCE'S "News." "THE PUGET SOUND ARGUS" is now back to its old eight page form greatly improved in its appearance. Bro. Weir means business and is a live newspaper man. If any one can make a paper win in Port Townsend he is the man." Thanks.

We have received a lot of valuable statistics of the shipping of Puget Sound, prepared by Dr. Minor and sent to the various newspapers on the Sound. The part referring to the year 1880 was published in the ARGUS in June of that year. The increase in our commerce since then has been most gratifying. We are sorry to be unable to publish the subject matter just yet.

THE following is a list of the officers elected last evening by "Juan de Fuca" lodge, A. O. U. W., to serve till July 1, 1882: Master Workman, C. M. Bradshaw; Foreman, A. Weymouth; Overseer, J. Roesch; Guide, J. LeMaister; Recorder, D. H. Hill; Financier, H. L. Tibbals, jr.; Receiver, Henry Laudes; Inside Watchman, J. F. Sheehan; Outside Watchman, O. H. Holcombe; Past Master, Allen Weir.

DIED.—On Oreas Island, Dec. 4th, after a long illness, Elizabeth, wife of Enoch May, one of the first settlers of the island. The funeral was attended by an unusually large number from that and surrounding islands. The foregoing information comes to us in a communication signed, "Mourner." Col. May had made himself a nice little home and surrounded it with many of the comforts of life. He doubtless feels his bereavement sorely.

EXTENT OF THE DISEASE.—The small pox in New Tacoma was contracted by in all about 75 persons, of whom 13 died. The disease cost the town government just about $5000, while it cost the people, directly and indirectly, several times that sum. No case is now known to exist. The quarantine has been raised at every point, and trade and travel have resumed their wonted activity.

THE old adage "The best is always the cheapest" will apply to no article with greater force than to SEEDS. D. M. FERRY & Co. of Detroit, Mich., seem to be one of the very few firms engaged in the Seed business who have fully realized the importance of putting up and sending out only the freshest and best of all varieties of seeds, and as a legitimate result their brand of Seeds has become exceedingly popular all over the land. We take pleasure in referring to their advertisement in our columns, and would advise all our readers who will be likely to require seeds to send and obtain their beautiful catalogue giving prices, instructions for planting, etc.

BRIEF LOCAL ITEMS.

Mrs. F. Winslow is very sick. Buy at Clinger's and save money. THE Dispatch has resumed duty on her two mail routes.

THE M. E. and Presbyterian Sunday schools are making extensive preparations for the proper observance of Christmas.

THE best of working boots, at GROSS BROS.

ONE day last week Mr. Jordan, of this place, while at work upon Mr. Bartlett's building, accidentally fell from the scaffolding and sustained severe injuries.

At the M. E. church on Sunday next the subjects will be: morning, "The Christian Sabbath—Territorial Law;" evening, "The man with one thousand wives."

MAJ. VanBokkelen and Judge Swan have been appointed, and have received their commissions from Governor Newell, as Notaries Public for Jefferson County.

ON Monday last, the schooner Letitia, Capt. Cornish, arrived from Dungeness with a load of general farm produce, which the owner, Mr. Clapp, disposed of in a very few hours.

OVERSHOES at 50 cents a pair, at GROSS BROS.

ON Friday last four Snohomish Indians were upset in their canoe in a tide rip off Point Wilson, and were all drowned. At the time, they were returning home from a potlach, and it is supposed that they had been imbibing too freely of the ardent.

Mr. James Smith commenced taking account of the rainfall at this place last month, by means of a signal service standard rain gauge, belonging to Judge Swan. Mr. Smith reports the whole amount of rainfall during the month of November to be 3.96 inches.

Mr. W. H. Llewellyn, our gentlemanly telegraph operator and express agent, has announced that he is prepared to effect transfers of money by telegraph to all important points on the Pacific coast, and to procure drafts on the eastern states or Canada, or any part of Europe. This will prove a great advantage to the public.

FOR the best quality of all kinds of groceries, and cheap, go to James Jones', opposite Central Hotel.

IT seems that Port Townsend is to have a grist mill among her other good things. Capt. deLion has purchased a portable engine which he will fit up out on the new wharf, for grinding flour, meal, &c., sawing wood, unloading vessels, etc. This is an enterprising move, and indicates the general spirit of development cropping out on all sides.

MESSRS. Waterman & Katz have sent out large posters announcing that they propose to allow 5 per cent. discount on all bills, for cash, till Jan. 1st, in order to take up stock at that time. They never stop to dream over the chances of getting customers, but offer inducements that will bring them. Evidently, now is the accepted time to buy goods.

FOR good cigars, go to James Jones' head of Union Wharf, opposite Central Hotel.

MEASLES have made their appearance in town. Our friend Herbert Burkett has been one of the victims. Thus far, it has been confined mostly to children. Only one death has occurred, that of the little girl at the Cosmopolitan hotel, and in whose case the fatal result was caused by neglect, or rather, ignorance of what was the matter till it was too late.

BY request we announce a grand ball, to be given by the Old Fellows of this place, in Good Templars' Hall, on Wednesday evening, Dec. 28th. Great preparations are being made by the committee, Messrs. Thos. Drummond, Wm. Katz and J. T. Norris. The best music on the Pacific coast has been engaged to come from Victoria, and, if we may judge from the thorough manner in which the Old Fellows always carry out what they undertake, we may predict the social event of the season.

YES, of course I got it at Clinger's auction store. There's no other place in town where you can get good articles so cheap.

LAST week a gentleman who is a resident of San Francisco remarked on our streets that Mr. Bartlett's stone building would compare favorably with any business house in the Bay city. The sentiment is generally appreciated by those who know how to appreciate Mr. Bartlett's enterprise and the immense benefit resulting therefrom to this place. The patronage of our citizens should be directed liberally to build up the business of one who thus uses his capital for lasting public benefit.

THE Peruvian Syrup has cured thousands who were suffering from Dyspepsia, Debility, Liver Complaint, Boils, Humors, Female Complaints, etc. Pamphlets free to any address. Sold by W. Fowle & Sons, Boston.

ABOUT THE SAW MILL AND SHIPYARD.—In addition to the particulars of the citizens' meeting held here on the 1st inst., we may record the doings of a second large and enthusiastic gathering on Monday evening last. In the first instance, the meeting was presided over by Mayor Minor who stated the object of the meeting briefly to be to ascertain if our citizens would take an interest in having a saw mill built in the town, after which he called upon Mr. Geo. W. Bullene, of Seattle, who produced a plan for a mill 240 feet long and 40 feet wide which will cut ship's plank 80 feet long and can turn out of common lumber for building purposes 20,000 feet every ten hours. Mr. Bullene stated that he had been examining into this matter for more than three months past and had come to the conclusion that the bay between Point Wilson and Point Hudson forms a natural and desirable harbor for the purpose. The question of water supply had been carefully considered, and he found that an abundance of pure and fresh water could be obtained anywhere round the base of the bluff by sinking wells from 10 to 20 feet. Remarks strongly in favor of the enterprise were made by Mr. F. W. Pettygrove, Capt. deLion and A. I. Smith, Esq., owner of the Central Hotel and late of the Port Discovery mill, better known as "Boss," a mill man of large experience; he made a good common-sense speech which was well received. On motion it was then decided to form a joint stock company with a capital stock of $25,000, in 2,500 shares of $10 each. A subscription list was then opened and $10,230 was subscribed on the spot, after which the list was placed in the hands of Capt. H. E. Morgan, and the meeting adjourned subject to the call of the Chairman. Last Monday evening the meeting was called to order by the chairman who stated that there had been raised up to that time over $15,000, and that articles of incorporation had been drawn up by C. M. Bradshaw, Esq., who on invitation produced and read the same, explaining each section, after which the instrument was adopted by sections serially, with but slight alteration. Those present then proceeded to elect seven directors to serve six months, as follows: A. I. Smith, N. D. Hill, C. C. Bartlett, H. E. Morgan, J. A. Kuhn, Chas. Eisenbeis and F. Terry. The chairman was twice nominated for a director, but each time declined, closing in a few telling remarks urging diligent efforts to secure subscriptions covering the remaining ten thousand dollars' worth of stock.

ON the 5th inst., George Moore, a seaman, was brought before James G. Swan, U. S. Commissioner, on complaint of Geo. H. Jones, Deputy U. S. Shipping Commissioner, charging him with deserting the American ship Dakota, and receiving an advance note of sixty dollars after having signed shipping articles. Moore plead guilty, but said he was sick and could not perform duty, and that the Captain refused to allow him to go ashore for medical advice. The Commissioner thereupon called in Dr. F. W. Meade, of the U. S. Marine Hospital, who made an examination of the man and reported that his illness could be cured in a few days; and it being shown by the Shipping Commissioner that Moore had paid hospital dues and was entitled to medical advice, the Court remanded him to the custody of the U. S. Marshal to receive the regular medical aid, and to be brought up on the 10th inst. for final hearing. Upon the final hearing he was committed to await his trial at the February term of court. Mr. Jones, the acting Shipping Commissioner, is making an example of this case in a manner that indicates a determination to do his duty thoroughly.

AN OLD SONG.

BY LYMA HOPE.

"God hath chosen the weak things of the world."

It was an old and once familiar strain,

A distant echo from the years gone by;

We hushed our busy talk to hear her sing,

To that far distant land beyond the sea,

Back to the land which we had left behind,

And one there was who heard that soothing song,

Silently, proudly, had he borne his pain,

Strange longings rose once more to see the place

To meet again his gentle sister's smile—

New would their faithful hearts rejoice to greet

Thus he resolved that, when the morning came,

Little the singer guessed the power that lay

The lengthening twilight stole into the room

The song was ended, and the singer rose;

And when the morning dawned he homeward turned,

O happy maid! Go sing thus through life,

Autumn Thoughts.

There can be nothing sadder than the solemn hush of nature that precedes the death of the year.

Thus while nature dons her regal robes of scarlet and gold in honor of the farewell benefit to autumn, the sad-eyed poet steals swiftly away to the neighboring clothes line, and in the hour of nature's grand blow-out dons the flaming flannels of his friend out of respect for the hectic flush of the dying year.

Leaves have their time to fall, and so has the price of coal. And yet how sadly at variance with decaying nature is the robust coal market.

Another glorious summer with its memories is stored away among the arches of our history. Another gloomy winter is upon us. These wonderful colors that flame across the softened sky of Indian summer like the gory banner of a royal conqueror, come but to warn us that in a few short weeks the water pipe will be busted in the kitchen and the decorated wash-bowl will be broken.

We fit through the dreamy hours of summer like swift-winged bumble bees amid the honeysuckle and the pumpkin blossoms, storing away perhaps a little glucose honey and buckwheat pancakes for the future, but all at once, like a newspaper thief in the night, the king of frost and ripe, mellow chilblains is upon us, and we crouch beneath the wintry blast, and hump our spinal column up into the crisp air like a Texas steer that has thoughtlessly swallowed a raw cactus.

Life is one continued round of alternate joys and sorrows. To-day we are on the wave of prosperity and warming ourselves in the glad sunlight of plenty, and to-morrow we are cast down and depressed financially, and have to stand off the washerwoman for our clean shirt or stay at home from the opera.

The October sky already frowns down upon us, and its frozen tears begin to fall. The little birds have hushed their little lay. So has the fatigued hen. Only a little while, and the yawning chasm in the cold, calm features of the Thanksgiving turkey will be filled with voluptuous stuffing and then sewed up. The florid features of the polygamous gobbler will be wrapped in sadness, and cranberry pie will be a burden, for the veal outlet goeth to its long home, and the ice-cream freezer is broken in the woodhouse.

Oh, Time! thou bald-headed pelican with the venerable corn cutter and the second-hand hour-glass, thou playest strange pranks upon the children of men. No one would think, to look at thy bilious countenance and store teeth, that in thy bony bosom lurked such eccentric schemes.

The chubby boy, whose danger signal hangs sadly through the latticework of his pants, knows that Time, who waits for no man, will one day, if he struggles heroically on, give him knowledge and suspenders, and fame and a solid girl, experience and a soft white mustache, and eventually a low grave in the valley beneath the sighing elms and the weeping willow, where, in the misty twilight of the year, noiselessly upon his breast shall fall the dead leaf, while the silent tear of the gray autumnal sky will come and sink into the yellow grass above his head.—Boomerang.

H. P. Gregory & Co.

One of the largest houses on the coast dealing in machinery and representing manufacturers is H. P. Gregory & Co. of San Francisco. Their Oregon and Washington trade has grown so large of late that last year they decided to open a house in Portland and did so at 43 First street, with Stewart McClure as resident partner, a gentleman who thoroughly understands the wants of our people here and who has become to all intents and purposes a thorough Oregonian. The house here carries an immense stock of goods and people in the interior can purchase almost anything they want here in Portland and not have to wait for it to be ordered from below. Gregory & Co. made a splendid exhibit at the late Mechanics' fair and carried off numberless silver and bronze medals and diplomas. This house carries everything from a large $5000 steam fire engine to wood working machinery or "spider" hose. It will pay our country friend to see their stock before purchasing elsewhere.—Pacific Overseer.

An Excellent Druggist.

In our columns is the advertisement of Dr. John A. Child of Portland. Dr. Child has been but four years in the drug business in Oregon, but during that time has carried a fine stock of goods in the toilet and fancy line which he procures direct from the east and sells at eastern prices. His holiday stock is now arriving and will contain many unique and handsome articles. We can vouch for Dr. Child as an honorable dealer and are glad to say a word in his praise.—Pacific Overseer.

NOT WORTH IT.—A backwoodsman promised to send the minister fifty pounds of maple sugar for marrying him. Time passed on, and no sugar arrived to sweeten the minister's household. Some months later he saw the newly married husband in the town, and ventured to remind him: "My friend, you did not send the maple sugar you promised." With a saddened countenance he looked up and replied: "To tell you the truth, governor, she ain't worth it."

According to the Boston Traveler, it is a fact somewhat unaccountable to the medical fraternity that malaria is beginning to appear in New England.

A Good Article.

We have been publishing the advertisement of the Peruvian Bitters for some time, and would like to direct attention to their merits. As a reliable tonic and appetizer the Peruvian Bitters have no superior. They are pleasant to take and are a powerful adjunct in building up the system. They are not like many others, a pure whisky decoction, but contain drugs that have genuine medicinal qualities. Messrs. Wilmerding & Co. of San Francisco are the general agents for the coast, while the popular house of W. J. Van Schuyver & Co. of Portland, have the agency of Oregon and Washington for the goods, and they assure us that there is being built up a large trade in these bitters.

GOVERNMENT FOR ALASKA.

The N. Y. "Times" Washington special, under date of Dec. 9th, say: "If any system of government is provided for Alaska at the present session it is probable that the plan advocated in the bill introduced by Sherman will be adopted. This bill sets up a judicial district in the territory and establishes there a district court with jurisdiction civil and criminal, which is given by law to district courts of the United States, and such other jurisdiction as may be conferred by the laws of Washington Territory. A Judge is to be appointed by the President with a salary of three thousand dollars. The bill also provides for the appointment of an Attorney and Marshal for the district, whose fees and salaries shall be the same as those of officers in Washington Territory. A Clerk is also to be appointed. Two terms in each year are provided for, one at Sitka and the other at Wrangel, with special sessions when necessary. The general laws of Washington Territory are extended over Alaska. Three Justices of the Peace are to be appointed, to hold court, one at Sitka, one at Wrangel, and the other on the deck of a revenue marine steamer in any port along the coast. Appeals must be taken from the Justices' courts to the District court. Fines received by Justices are to be paid to the Collector of Customs. There are also to be three constables, one of whom is to be jailer. Justices are to have jurisdiction in all testamentary and probate matters, and their courts are to be courts of record. Justices are to be ex-officio United States Court Commissioners and have power to grant writs of habeas corpus. The bill requires the Attorney General to compile and print in pamphlet form in the English and Russian languages the general criminal laws of Washington Territory, and the law and practice there relating to testimony and probate proceedings, and to place the officers above named. These laws are to be distributed in Alaska. Some bill of this kind ought to become a law at the present session. Its provisions are probably such as the San Francisco Board of Trade would approve. This Board of Trade petitioned Congress today to establish in Alaska a simple, effective and inexpensive system of Government."

The new law provides for two prosecuting attorneys in the 2d judicial district. The boundary line between Clarke and Cowlitz counties divides the two new districts. Clarke, Skamania, Klickitat and Yakima compose the upper district, and Cowlitz, Walkikakum, Pacific, Chehalis, Lewis, Mason and Thurston compose the lower.

WILL BE SENT FREE TO ALL APPLICANTS, AND TO CUSTOMERS WITHOUT ORDERING IT. It contains five colored plates, 400 engravings, about 200 pages, and full descriptions, prices and directions for planting 1500 varieties of Vegetable and Flower Seeds, Plants, Fruit Trees, etc. Invaluable to all.
