CONSTANTINOPLE, May 26.—A detachment of Russian soldiers attacked the villages of Alakaba and Idriak, near Bataum, on Tuesday but were repulsed with a loss of 150 killed and many wounded. The Turkish loss was seven killed and eleven wounded.

The Russians' attempt to throw a bridge over the river before the Turkish lines at Bataum was repulsed with loss.

BERLIN, May 26.—The Monstralist Post continues to comment on the French crisis, and says France, ruled by the Vatican, is the center of the Papal system, which threatens the peace of the world, and is preparing a crusade against Germany. A disturbance of the peace is inevitable should France continue the course now taken.

LONDON, May 26.—A Vienna special says the proclamation of holy war looks like yielding to the popular demand, which has been growing louder daily now that the sultan joins the army. The proposal that the Sultan quit Constantinople has raised the question whether it is safe to leave Parliament, which is becoming more and more difficult to manage. It is felt at the palace that Mauklitar Pasha's incapacity necessitates his recall, yet the first attempted influence in the course of affairs may mature the Porte's resolution to check interference by proposition at least.

BERLIN, May 27.—Bismarck, during his recent visit to this city, had an interview with the French Charge D'Affairs, in which he expressed great disapprobation of the change of cabinet. The continuation of the Duc de Cassa in the ministry of foreign affairs, somewhat appeased the irritation of the great chancellor, who said no interference need be expected so long as the French government refrains from promoting Ultramontane interests. Otherwise the most serious complications might be feared.

LONDON, May 27.—The people of Ireland have made up a purse of from a hundred thousand to a hundred and twenty thousand dollars for the Pope. Far the greater part of this came in very small subscriptions, although one Wicklow county farmer is stated to have subscribed five thousand dollars. Cardinal Cullen took to Rome three hundred thousand dollars collected in Dublin diocese alone. The total amount of English Catholic presentations is seventy-three thousand eight hundred and fifty dollars.

LONDON, May 30.—A dispatch from Constantinople states that the Porte has made levies upon Christian people for two hundred thousand troops.

In Germany the land-trum has been ordered out under the pretense of reorganization. It is a body which has not been in the field since 1812. Under cover of establishing an equilibrium of forces on the Rhine, Bismarck and Moltke gave out that the frontier posts are to be reorganized to prevent a surprise on the part of France.

Editorially, every paper in London urges England to defend its interests in the East. The generality of the press says that if Turkey sues for peace within the next two weeks England must check the Russians' advance.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 26.—The Czar has issued a proclamation forbidding the granting of letters of marque. He says he accepts the declaration of the treaty of Paris regarding free navigation to neutrals, and guarantees a careful observance of this provision of the treaty. The Czar also declares his unwillingness to accept the proposal made at the recent conference at Brussels.

EASTERN STATES.

NEW YORK, May 29.—The Herald's correspondent with the Russian headquarters at Ploressi, describes the destruction of the Turkish monitor on the Danube, and says: Four gunboats left Ibraut on the 25th, under the command of Lieutenant Deubasoff. About two hours' steaming brought the Russian gunboats where the Turkish ironclads lay anchored in the stream, and without delay the signal to attack was given. Lieutenant Deubasoff made an admirable disposition of his gunboats, and in the conduct of the action displayed great courage and sound judgment. Taking the lead in the advance, he ran his own gunboat in between the Turkish ironclads without paying any heed to the heavy fire which the monitors opened on the approaching gunboats. Selecting the largest of the monitors, Lieutenant Deubasoff ran his boat alongside and succeeded in exploding a torpedo under her side, causing a bad leak, but not damaging her sufficiently to disable her. This partial feature was, however, soon remedied by the gunboat Yelina, which had closely followed the Czarowitch, and approached the Turkish monitor, succeeded in exploding under pressure a torpedo. This brilliant action did not occupy more than twenty minutes from the moment of giving the signal to attack till the withdrawal of the Russian gunboats. During the action the Turks kept up a constant fire upon the assailants, but the aim of the filibusters was so bad that not a single Russian was struck. The effect of the torpedo attack is likely to prove very demoralizing on the Turkish fleet in the Danube. It definitely settles the question of the value of the Turkish fleet in preventing the passage of the Danube, and will probably induce the Turkish ironclads to remove from the dangerous neighborhood of the Russian gunboats.

CHICAGO, May 28.—Dispatches to the English envoy represent unless instant steps are taken, the Russians will be in striking distance of Constantinople from the east within a month. The Russians now in Asia are in a condition to attack Mukhtar Pasha, capture his army and strike for Constantinople without serious obstacles. The English foreign office has, within a week, secured the exclusive use of a wire to Constantinople, and unintermittent correspondence has been carried on. The English press and members of Parliament comment with bitterness on Russian deception, and point out that the objects of war have been ignored, and that instead of relieving the so-called outrages in Bulgaria, the Russians are waging war in the East, where English interest are jeopardized by every step of her army.

Next week, under the pretense of a grand review, the entire English ironclad squadron, now in the East, will assemble at Portsmouth.

Pacific Coast.

VALLEJO, May 25.—Mrs. Annie Mallon, wife of James Mallon, both old residents of Benicia, came to a sudden death last night. Fully as can be gathered, Mallon came to the house of Clinton, steward of the government hospital, which is near the former's dwelling, at 12:15 this morning, wanting him to get up and see his wife. Mallon told him when he had got home he found his wife lying on the bed motionless and speechless. Clinton went to the house and found the woman lying in a crouching position on the bedroom floor in a semi-nude condition and dead. The family contains two children, both girls about 10 and 12 years of age. The younger was lying asleep in a bed in the same room, and had not been disturbed during the night. The other was up and dressed. There was blood upon the body of the dead woman, and blood was also sprinkled on the garments of the girl. The bed of the parents was in disorder and the sheets torn in pieces. The body was not examined to determine if it bore any marks of violence, nor was it touched but left for inspection by the coroner. Clinton took the older girl home with him. It is reported here that a story is told that her father came home and beat her mother until he killed her. The coroner will probably hold an inquest this afternoon. Mallon is not under arrest.

May 26.—The jury in the case of Mrs. Mallon yesterday afternoon found that the deceased came to her death from blows received from the hands of her husband. His examination will take place next Monday, and he is now in jail. The body of the dead woman presented a most revolting spectacle, the whole breast was one mass of discoloration, and imprints from the nails in the man's boots were plainly visible in the flesh. Under the ear was quite a deep wound which looked as if made with a boot heel. Deceased was a large, healthy woman. Her husband was intoxicated at the time.

Port Ludlow.

Last week found us at that beautiful mill town. Improvement seems to be the order of the day there. The mill company have just completed a new store building and office. The main building is 67x20 feet, with an ell for offices 29x32 feet. The whole building is two stories high. The Port Ludlow mill cuts at present about 60,000 feet of lumber per day. At present the principal event there is getting out timbers for the new mill. It is proposed to tear away the whole of the present mill, and erect in its place a new one complete in all its appointments. If completed as designed, it will be the model mill on the sound.

The main building will be 23x33 feet long by 65 feet wide, and two stories high, being fifty-three feet from sill to ridge pole. The engine room will be one side of the main building, and will be 36x24 feet. There will also be another addition, 30x50 for a planing room.

It is estimated that it will require over one million feet of squared timbers for the frame of this mill.

There will be three new engines in the mill, two very large and powerful engines being attached to the main shaft.

Among the improved machinery there will be Mirenet's Machine Co's pony saw, Rabb's patent head blocks, Rabb's patent gang edger and board mill, got ten up by Mr. Phinney, self acting, double link log chain, gang lath mill, two planes, four edgers, etc., etc.

The new mill will be running this fall.

Hall Bros. have now the eighteenth of their beautifully modeled and sturdily built vessels on the ways. When completed, she will be a three masted schooner, able to carry about 500,000 ft. of lumber.

WALLA WALLA, }
May 17, 1877. }

Dear Mother:

I wrote to you some time ago, but under different circumstances than I shall write to you this time.

I am not doing very much at present, the fact is, I am lying in bed and have been for the last two weeks at Dr. Binghams private hospital, waiting for a hole to heal up in my limb, that was caused by a pistol ball going through it.

The circumstances are these, about two weeks ago, the weather being good, I made up my mind to leave this part of the country and go north.

Well, I packed up my trunk and left it in charge of the man I had been working for, rolled up what few clothes I wanted in my blankets, and was all ready for a start. But just then an Indian came along on a pony, and I tried to trade him out of it, as I wanted it to pack, but he would trade for nothing only a pistol. Well there was a fellow had a pistol that he wanted to trade to me for my accor-dian. Thinks I, "now here is my chance," so I got into a wagon and drove over to where this fellow lived and traded with him. I slipped the pistol in my coat pocket, got into the wagon and started back, and had got up to the house, and as I went to jump out of the wagon to open the gate, the pistol fell out of my pocket, the hammer striking a rock discharging it. The man that I worked for happening to be standing by; he helped me to get to the house. He then started to get his team to take me to town; by the time he got ready to go it was dark, and probably I did not have a nice time riding sixteen miles over a rough road in a dark night, with a game leg. Well, about eleven o'clock we arrived at the doctors, and after waiting for the doctor to get ready, he commenced operations, which was to lay me on a bed and probe for the bullet. The ball entered on the under side of my right leg just above the knee, and ran through the thickest part of the leg and lodged in the center of the hip; the doctor traced it about twelve inches, and then lost track of it, so it is in there yet and always will be. When the doctor found he could not get it out, he put on a cloth saturated with carbolic acid, and bound it on to keep an abscess from forming. He says that he does not think the ball will trouble me, as it missed the bone, and he thinks I will get along alright, if he can keep an abscess from forming; if one does form he will have to cut the leg open etc.

Well probably I did not suffer when he probed the wound. A bad awl twelve inches through a fellows leg is no pleasant feeling if I am any judge. I was hearty and strong when I got hurt, and lying in bed for so long without any exercise caused me to have one glorious attack of biliousness, and I am just getting over the effects of it now. Take it altogether I have had one rough surge; but I have had splendid care taken of me. The doctors mother and wife have both nursed me, and taken the best of care of me; they are both splendid women, and I have had no cause to complain so far. I am getting along so that I can stand upon crutches a little, but my leg is so painful that I can't stand it to stay up very long at a time.

The bullet bored its way through all the muscles of the hip, so when I go to straighten the leg out, I find considerable difficulty.

The chances are now, that I wont be able to do anything for sometime; but I will be glad if I get the use of my leg again; I wont mind how long it takes, I guess I can stand it, I have got over the worst of it now. It was a close call though, the pistol shooting up, if it had raised a little more I would have received my quietus.

WILLIAM A. OLIVER.

WILL the little lady who brought to the office these beautiful flowers, please accept our thanks. May her matured life be as beautiful as those sweetly blooming flowers.

Those who push out into new countries and early establish business enterprises are the kind of men, who, by home industry, and stopping importation, thus retaining money at home that otherwise would go to maintain similar enterprises abroad, invariably establish their own fortunes, as well as contributing to the general prosperity and advancement of the community. Such a man is L. A. Treen, of Olympia, who has recently started a branch of his manufactory at Seattle. It will be seen by reference to our advertising columns that he offers unusual inducements in his line both to consumers and dealers, and we doubt not he will reap a rich reward for his enterprise and foresight.

Education.

AN ADDRESS TO ITS FRIENDS BY THE ASSOCIATE ED.

Education—what is it? How define it? Something that begins with life, continues through life, and has an effect on the life to come. It modifies character in embryonic life, before the infantile cry is heard. Its influence is both good and evil. It determines the weal or woe of humanity. The fate of myriads who have preceded us has been determined by it. The future of the race is under its control. "As a man thinketh," so he is. He acts as he thinks. By his actions do we judge him. His thoughts control his actions; and how seldom do they leave the ruts and grooves in which they were placed in early childhood. One sheep leads the flock, be it large or small. Sometimes they are led to green pastures, with refreshing shades, cool fountains and mossy banks. Oftener to desert wastes, fields of husks and thistles, bitter herbs and chaff. Daerets swept by blighting winds, with troubled pools, prowled by beasts of prey and thick with poisonous thorns and hissing serpents. These flock leaders should not be blind or deaf—should not willfully shut ear or eye. Should be able to discern right from wrong, light from darkness, truth from error. Should accept nothing by faith until proven. Should neither condemn or approve the doubtful, but investigate—remembering, that, "things are not always what they seem."

To whom does this apply? To every teacher, parent, public man or private citizen. Who is responsible for the training of children for life? The public and each individual. The individual can not sink his identity in the public. There is no escape from individual, personal responsibility. The earth is made up of ultimate atoms; each atom plays its part, has its history and destiny. The roar of the ocean may drown the murmur of the brook. The individual voice may not make itself heard above the multitude. The multitude can be as one voice. We are all teachers whether we will or not. The low are the basest teachers. The exalted mind the highest. Between these extremes are every grade of teachers, with a commingled mass of truth and error; weeds and grain; chaff and wheat. It should be the business of the professional teacher, aided by parents and the public to act as guides and judges; to clear the way, make easy the road, and sustain the tottering footsteps of childhood in its life search for purity and truth. To thrust the weeds and thorns out of sight. To feed with milk and honey, not husks. If they call for bread give them not stones. Clothe them in garments from the closely woven woof of reason—garments that never grow old—the longer worn the more brilliant the adornment.

There is power in association. The bundle is stronger than the single faggot. Hand in hand, little children will cross foot bridges and climb heights, where single they would have to be carried. We have profited by this and organized glorious school systems in all civilized communities. Our schools are the indices of our communal civilization. Three hundred years ago not one in five hundred of the Caucasian race could read and write. One five hundredths of the race free. The remainder slaves—the most abject of slaves, for their very souls were chattles. To-day, the degraded negro of the south stands on a higher intellectual platform, than did four hundred and ninety nine hundredths of the very race from which we sprung, three hundred years ago. Take our race to-day, scattered in various countries and climes, over three fourths can read and write. One half have a passable education. One fourth live by their education. One tenth are ripe scholars. One in fifty are men of scientific attainments; men of culture—of ideas—fit leaders of the flock. Hardly, trained and tried intellects are plentiful, scouting far ahead of the eager, thirsting, rapidly advancing column—delving in the darkness—hunting for hidden truths—for lost Eldorados and unveiling new worlds. There have been scholars in all ages. But men of past ages come down to us like ghosts from the tomb. Their renown is mystical, clouded by fable and darkened by superstition. Often the masses, being ignorant, worshiped scholars as Gods, persecuted them as demons, scorned them as witches, loaded them with chains of bigotry or killed them because they knew too much. We have only faint glimpses of their real worth. Now all is changed, and perpetual change is an eternal law, prevailing the mental as well as the physical world. Sometimes mental changes are terrible as the lightnings flash, the earthquake, the avalanche or the volcano. Such is not the nature of that change that is going on in the modern mind. It is gradual; but no less possible and enduring because slow. Education is silently working.

Its throes resemble geological epochs, more than sudden upheavals or submersions. Could the dead of past ages be made to behold the intellectual world of to-day, their astonishment would exceed that of the early navigators when they found themselves sailing calmly over the sunken continent of Atlantis.

What has wrought the change? So flattering to our vanity, yet, really, so little to boast of. It is education; training children; the common school system; which medieval vandalism has lately lain ruthless hands on. The windows of the soul have been opened; letting in sunlight and pure air. That alone will kill rank weeds and noxious vermin. Only plants whose values are undetermined should be marked for classification and analysis. But tear up the weeds by the roots. Burn them with the unquenchable fire of truth. Have no cumberers of the ground. Weed, carefully, patiently, thoroughly and continually; and reweed as often as there is resprouting.

Vast sums are lavished for the ceremonial worship of God. None need object to this if kept within reasonable bounds. But the Cathedral should not be more grand than the University. The church than the college. The chapel than the seminary or the wayside shrine than the district school house. The church has its bell, organ and choir, its mellowed light from stained glass dome and memorial windows, its carved and gilded altars, silver services, marble baptismal founts, furniture of spice wood, carved and costly, velvet carpets and cushioned seats; all this for an hours worship. Have we forgotten that God dwells not in earthly tabernacles made with hands? The architect should blush when he beholds the magnificence of God's chosen dwelling place. How is it with our school houses? A wooden bench; a rough floor; uncurtained windows; rickety, unpainted furniture; unventilated ceilings; a hot, stifling stove, often cracked and unsightly are good enough for our tender offspring, susceptible to disease, easily deformed, for 6 hrs. out of the twenty four, four terms in the year. They can be crowded, crammed, jammed and jostled. The deity is not pleased with such inconsistency. He loves not the splendors of the cathedral and church, looking down upon the squalid pen, misnamed school house, in the shadows of their glittering spires. Childhood should learn that the deity loves to dwell in the hearts of men, not in temples. Is that an old logyish notion? Then let us burnish it up and give it a resetting for our precious jewels. Many of our clergy are paid exorbitant salaries. Many much more than they are worth. Many are grossly ignorant. Many more have wandered only in theological fields; consequently, have become like needles—long polished, brittle, slim, slender, sharp pointed and one eyed. Many claim to be miraculously called; and that after failing at every other occupation of life except hard work. But they are willing to teach the, "young idea how to shoot," during the week, and preach the gospel on Sunday—the latter without salary, trusting to some good brother to pass round the hat for the benefit of the heathen. Thus they drone through life—half one thing, half another—wholly nothing, while the masses are too apathetic to shake them off. No community can commit a more fatal error than to employ poor teachers or poor preachers. The strong hold of both is the young, tender, susceptible mind. A good teacher or preacher can not undo in many years, what one poor one does wrongly in one.

Bend the twig out of shape and it never becomes straight. You may succeed in lifting its branches and leaves from the ground, but it is deformed still, and its fruit stunted. Don't hackle the vine all to pieces by too much pruning. Dead branches alone need be cut away. Better have no teacher or preacher than poor ones. The poor one may do a little good and a vast amount of evil. Our clerks, mechanics, common laborer, choppers, swamper and ex teamsters command better wages than most of our teachers. If our legs are not carefully started and run they will not fetch up right at the mouth of the river or the mill. Start our children wrong, and their lives may fatally terminate in sorrow, the penitentiary or premature death. Often are the seeds of moral and physical death ignorantly sown in the school room. We are all teachers, by precept and example as well as those who follow it for a profession. With few exceptions there is hardly an occupation of life so begrudgedly remunerated. Reference is made to no particular school, teacher or clergyman. They apply all over the Territory. Our school rooms are over crowded, and teachers over worked. We are making little preparation for an increase of pupils. Emigration is increasing. Families with children are coming to crowd our school rooms still more. Every dollar that can be raised by taxation, subscription or credit should be expended on our public schools.

Snohomish City is the capitol of the county. People from abroad will buy our town lots, build and settle here, or near here, if we make our school system what it should be. Long ago the fact was recognized, that large cities are no places to bring up children. The very atmosphere reeks with corruption and vice. Within a radius of fifty miles around all our eastern cities, have sprung up villages and towns, peopled by those who have removed out of town to raise their families. Their school houses are as conspicuous as their churches. They are models in architecture, neat, airy and roomy within, with ample ground attached. Seattle is destined to become the great metropolis of the north-west. Soon she will be looking for some quiet town, with good schools in which to educate her children. Our communication with Seattle is ample. If our schools are on a proper basis we cannot fail to attract attention from abroad. What is to hinder our town from becoming, if we do our duty, the Harvard, Oxford, Yale or Berkely of the north-west. Money ought not to be considered. We must curtail expenses, fare less sumptuously and dress less expensively.

School houses must be built and good teachers employed. We are taxed less here than any of our sister districts; but in proportion to scholars and money, we are the poorest represented. We have done much but the work still presses. The want is a perpetually returning ghost that it will not down. We have advanced since our father's time. We shall fail in our duty to the rising generation if we do not furnish them with facilities for advancing beyond our present intellectual standpoint. The pleading lips and eyes of our children mutely appeal to us for more room and purer air; more teachers and better text books. Parents, they also plead for you to come to them—to the school room—breathe the air—try the hard benches,—to come as they do—come at all hours and all kinds of weather. Don't console yourself with the reflection that you have done your whole duty by delegating your personal responsibility to a teacher, the trustees and the superintendent. You are individually responsible still. Can't you come even if it is not exhibition day, so you can be amused? It is your duty to look after teacher, trustees and superintendent and the little ones too. By staying away you openly manifest indifference. Your own listlessness will soon be communicated to the children. Have you not seen how they strive for your approving smile, closing days on the exhibition platform? Show the same interest every day, at home, go often to the school room, and their ambition will be daily aroused. Your indifference is manifested in a hundred ways. Many of you are only glad to get the children off out of the way, so you can follow your trade, delve in the counting room or behind the counter, scrub, iron, wash and bake unannoyed at home; gain time to talk politics, study the last fashion plate, drop into neighbor Grundy's for a nice gossip and a cup of tea.

Paying school taxes is not the whole duty of a man. The burden of a liberal, thorough, practical education, is the great load of life. To drag on this car of progress every shoulder must go to the wheel. None must ride. Every hand to the rope. Let us all take one spoke of the wheel. Skilled teachers will mind the brake. The old and useless must be left by the wayside. The old that has been tried and proven must be daily burnished as bright as the new.

To sum up. We are far away on the frontier. We are all adventurers together. The children are our loved idols. The public schools should be more precious than household Gods. We are in a new country. A few years ago, this was a wilderness in which wild beasts and savage men alone contended for the mastery. We are poor. Had we been rich, none of us would have ever abandoned the luxuriant east. Every steamer adds to the juvenile element of our population. New cooling voices are making themselves heard every day. They are our heritage. Dare we allow them to be cowered with ignorance? Ignorance only, is vice in its most appalling form. Dare we cram them for room and saddle them with mental and physical deformity? Shall we allow the flock to become too large for the shepherd and the fold? If we do, some must be smothered, contaminated and crowded out. Cold and hunger, in childhood, shrink, and pinch the features, and stamp into them a brand that after life seldom efface. Mental physiologists and philanthropists read the same marks in intellectual manhood, carelessly placed there in youth.

These facts are daily becoming better understood. There is something of higher importance for children to be taught than the science of dollars and cents. The brain is the safest bank of deposit and pays the richest dividends. The world is waking up and moving in this matter. In spite of a tory house of lords, in England, a mercurial and revolutionary population in France, a strong monarchy in Germany and Prussia, a despotism in Russia, and ultramontanism at the Vatican, the cry of the masses for a more wholesome mental diet has reached the ears of those who sit upon thrones, and been tremblingly granted. We are losing our former prestage as a nation. The old world is outstripping us in popular education, in the magnitude and splendor of their school systems. Are we content to follow behind, where we have so long led? Are we to fall back or advance? Stand still we cannot, for inactivity is death. Will our people here follow or lead? We cannot be idle and climb higher. Let us advance; forward the watchword. Let us practice economy and make personal sacrifices. Our hands must go down in our pockets, and if any one growls about taxes, we will not "shoot him on the spot," but leave him alone to wallow in his own ignorance, short sightedness, stinginess and degradation. Let him be ostracised, but not anatomized. Punish him with contempt without pity.

Neighbors, the wheel is large; there is a spoke for every willing hand. Let us steer our noble educational barque, freighted as it is with all that is dear to us under heaven, from darkness to light; from the shoals, rocks, quicksands and mad waves of ignorance, into the clear, calm, peaceful haven of true knowledge; the silver sheen of whose pure sparkling waters will be a bright halo of glory lighting us far out upon the untired waves of eternities sea, when we come to say farewell and turn our backs upon our little ones, who will see our faces no more in life.

A Bit of Romance from 1812.
(We insert per request the following story, as re-written by our friendly contributor. Ed.)

My old school-mate Glib—that I have not seen for twenty years, was in town last—, he looked quite "business like" when I met him, after friendly greeting, I asked him if he had come from "up country" to lay in a winter's stock (he keeps a general assortment store). Glib —Well, no—I'm on other business this time. The old woman is gone at last, and she was so particular about the place she was to be buried that we had to promise to bring her back to Boston. She never got entirely weaned off from the home of her childhood. In fact she often thought Boston the best place in the world. And here I have brought her to gratify her last request.

John—Ah! then your mother is dead, you seem to be quite "business like" about it.

Glib—Well you see she out-lived her usefulness, and she was so helpless that it was a great task to take care of her, each one tried to shirk the job, and let some one else attend to her.

John—When we were little folks together, I always thought you had such a good mother—she was so kind, and always seemed so contented, when she was entertaining such crowds of folks that used to come to your house.

Glib—Oh, yes! she was good in her young days, but she got old and helpless—and as I said before "she out lived her usefulness," when one gets so old, and of no further use in this world they ought to draw up their feet and give up the ghost—like Jacob of old, or they ought to end their days—that is the way I'll do when I get to be old and helpless. I strongly urged it on mother, but there was always some one to urge her to live on as long as possible, she wouldn't have had so much "tenacity of life," and would have given up and gone long ago, if folks only minded their own business, and not be prying into private family affairs, which was an impertinence to all—and of course an impropriety, and as brother Fry would remark, it would have been better for me if they could (had less sensitiveness?) have been in other business, and let my private family affairs alone—and I could persuade her to feed the soul instead of the body.

John—Ah! how could that be done, one "feed the soul instead of the body?" Glib—"Why—by eating a little less, every time until they would not need any more and they could draw up their feet like Jacob of old—and give up the ghost, and some of my intimate friends thought as I did."

John—"But don't you think that is running a good deal of risk?" Glib—"The way they do with old folk in China, seems to me you have changed very much in regard to your opinion of your mother."

Glib—I don't want you to think that I don't respect my mother. I defy any man to say that I ever said one disrespectful word of my old mother.

John—You had better not get excited on the subject, you and I are old and fast friends, and not going to quarrel about trifles, come let us have a good glass of Lager. We went into the saloon and had a "gay old time," while the "undertaker was getting the box ready for the old lady" as Glib—expressed himself. I could not help feeling a faintness come over me as I contemplated what an enviable life that dear old lady must have lived the last few years while she was helpless—and would I live to see the day that my children would feed and talk thus about me? Ah! the fickleness of this frivolous age—we neither know our beginning nor our ending—"But vengeance is mine I will repay saith the Lord."

Letter from Linn County, Oregon.

LEBANON, LINN Co., OREGON. /
MAY 18, 1877.

Dr. A. C. Folsom, Dear Friend:
Well, Doctor, here I am once more among the "Web Feet," in the same place I was before I went to Washington Territory. I found many friends here on my arrival, two days ago, ready to extend the hand of friendship and bid me a hearty welcome back again.

Times are very dull here at present, but there is a bright future before the people of the State of Oregon this summer. The grain prospects are flattering, with good evidence that the prices will be high. Farmers, in consequence, look forward to the coming harvest in confidence, for they are certain of a rich reward.

At present there is little work of any kind being done here. I have seen three or four bands of young cattle pass through town on their way east of the mountains. They are being driven to the Ochoco country where there is feed in abundance.

Ground was broken yesterday for the Corvallis & Yaquina R. R. The people of Lebanon are confident that the road will be extended to this place and thence into Eastern Oregon. If they have a good harbor at Yaquina (and I am told that they have) this road will seriously interfere with the business and growth of Portland and Astoria, as it will cut off the grain trade of the Willamette and Eastern Oregon, because the same can be shipped via Yaquina so much cheaper. Portland capitalists have been bucking against this road for a long time, but the road is now on a firm footing and will undoubtedly be completed soon.

I went to Astoria, as I intended when I left Snohomish, but did not meet with the success I anticipated. I met certain parties that I expected to be able to turn to good account, but it was a failure—I found them worse broke than myself—I also found a big rush there—some five or six hundred men broke and looking for work. I also noticed in many places that Chinamen had the inside track of white men in the numerous large canneries on the Columbia. I have seen since by the papers that superintendents of canneries have received orders from headquarters to employ Chinamen exclusively—no white men. I had the pleasure to visit the large canning establishment of Wm. J. Kinney at Astoria. But as they were not running at the time and I had no one to explain the process intelligibly to me, I will not attempt a description of it. You will doubtless have read all about the business in the papers ere this, doing it better justice than I could.

This is the season when the native Web-Footers ride their blind, bawky, spavined, maimed and dilapidated old plugs into town, loaf round all day, chew tobacco and spit, wear out jack-knives manufacturing dry goods boxes into shavings—and amuse themselves swapping horses. They don't make much money, but they seem to enjoy the amusement, no one ever getting cheated unless he gives money to boot or gets both horses.

I should like to hear how that "peet and shilow base call" come out. Remember me to the boys in the STAR office and to everybody else. Excuse the intolerable length of this epistle and allow me to subscribe myself your friend
A. LOCHRIE.

Letter from Alaska.

FORT WRANGLE, ALASKA, May 8, 1877.
Friend Morse:

It has just occurred to me that my subscription must be fully up for the "NORTHERN STAR," and as I don't care to deprive myself of such a welcome visitant, I herewith enclose a couple of Our Uncle Samuel's Greenbacks, for which, of course, you will give me due credit on the book, and "Continue the wheel" by sending the STAR as usual.

I must compliment you on your success in making up one of the best papers to represent a locality that I ever saw. And the people of Snohomish Co. and Puget Sound generally, ought to be proud of your effort, and give you a most liberal support. I have lived at the principal towns in Eastern Washington and also the principal towns on the Columbia river in W. T., and have been interested in trying to glean information of those respective localities by reading the local press, but I have generally failed to believe that the local papers were of much advantage to the towns represented. And I can fully appreciate the superiority of the STAR, when I read of the rambles of the Chief Editor and his description of the whole country around, written from personal observations and facts obtained on the spot. But I presume you would like to hear how matters go in Alaska, and I must say they go slow. There has not been half as many men going to the Cassiar diggings this spring, as went last year. There seems to be no doubt among honest minded people, but that Cassiar district has seen its best days. Mr. Neil Mc Millian's ideas of these mines as expressed in the STAR some time since were about as nearly correct as possible. Although the Cormorants alias merchants of this section would try and make people at a distance believe that Alaska was virtually paved with gold. Parties are now engaged experimentally at a point some sixty miles up the coast from here called "the Slugh," but reports from them, indicate but a small amount of gold in that section; the place is easily reached and is in U. S. territory, and should good pay be struck—which is not probable—it would no doubt be a good thing for Alaska. A gold and silver mining company are operating near Sitka, on some of the rich quartz ledges we read about in that section, but they have not had time so far, to publish the extent of their richness. I hope they may be successful. The Indians through the whole of Alaska are maintaining a serene and peaceful demeanor, and would be much better, were it not for the contamination of the whites. There seems to be a strong probability that the military garrison will be withdrawn from Alaska, and the control of the Territory placed in the hands of the Custom officials. It is possible this move may be in the interest of economy, but for the peace and quietness of all things and parties concerned, I believe there is nothing so conducive to good order, with the kind of men who flock to this Territory, as the ever just and strong arm of military law, which must perforce, deal justice with unswerving impartiality, but the military themselves will be glad of the change, as there is little glory, or even comfort to be derived from services rendered in Alaska. The weather during the past winter has been good the thermometer has never fallen to zero and there was but little snow. The spring rains have not been heavy, and for several weeks we have had delightfully clear bright weather. I am as ever yours.

The Seattle Post Office.

In reply to our article alleging specific acts of gross negligence in the Seattle post office, designed to work an injury to the STAR. Articles in reply were published last week in the Olympia Courier, the Seattle Tribune and the Intelligencer. The Dispatch also noticed the matter.

We have not seen the Courier article, therefore can make no reply to it at present, yet presume that what we now have to say will cover the whole ground. Our charges were not made until after we had carefully investigated the whole matter, and found by repeated efforts that nothing else would reach the evil.

Even then we should have delayed, for a time at least, making them public through our columns had not so many of our patrons in Seattle inquired why the STAR was scarcely ever distributed until several days after the arrival of the Snohomish mail at the Seattle post office. Although Mr. Prosch's attention had several times been called to these irregularities in that office, yet until we had so strong evidence of design, we made most of our complaints directly to the clerk in charge of the office.

Not until we found by experience that aught we could do, would induce the Seattle postal clerk to treat us fairly we appealed directly to Mr. P.; who promised to do all we could ask a gentleman to do, to set the matter aright. He now promises to personally notify us of anything wrong and to see himself that our subscribers get their mail at the proper time. This is all we ask, therefore, we have nothing to say against Mr. P., nor as long as we are treated fairly, do we care who is connected with the office.

Mr. P. as editor of the Tribune replies to our charges of past bad service in that office in such a manner as to impliedly admit part of them, and to exterminate the rest by attempting to show that there was no design against us, or the STAR, that the office clerk rendered us many extra services, and that the STAR mail came to the office in very bad shape etc., so that the blame must be as great on our side as elsewhere, each one of which we will notice in detail.

The lengthy reply of the Tribune, while gentlemanly in tone, presents the excuses of his subordinate, and seeks to create an impression that we wrote from inference, not from a full knowledge of the facts, in his language, "went off half cocked;" yet he admits that he knew but little about the affairs of his office and gave mainly other than facts of which he had personal knowledge.

A clergyman of Seattle, who was present at the meeting described in our article, of the Seattle clergy, was the first one to give us a full account of D. B.'s language at that meeting in reference to the STAR, as well as the name of the person who volunteered to come to Snohomish and carry out D. B.'s work with his proposed method of action. This information was given us a few days after their meeting was held in Seattle under D. B.'s supervision. The same week, friends of ours came to us in Seattle stating that if we persevered in our independent course it would be at our peril, and notifying us of Bagley's hostility. A short time after Bagley's volunteer aid came to Snohomish, with two assistants, not meeting with any success, (we enlarged the STAR the week after their visit,) they left. A week afterwards, meeting them, and they finding out that we were familiar with their designs, and had quietly checkmated them, they demanded the name of our informant.

We gave it, when they acknowledged the statements by him made to be true in every particular but became very angry at the reverend gentleman who wished to see honest dealing and had put us on guard against such under ground work. Now this clerk of that office, is known in Seattle as Daniel Bagley's brother-in-law. When we first inquired in regard to what kind of a man he was, the answer one of the best business men in Seattle gave us, was that he belonged to that class, who always expected their relations to find a place for them, or to support them; in other words, he looks to the influence of Daniel Bagley to secure him place and position, while Bagley expects fealty and subserviency to his designs in return.

Now this man has known in common with hundreds of others, that everything that resulted to our injury, provided that it remained undiscovered, could not fail to please his master.

Now upon this man's removal from that office, Daniel Bagley took counsel, in the presence and hearing of one of the most reliable business men, doing business on Commercial street in Seattle, as to how he could get off Prosch's bonds as postmaster, a few days after Bagley's brother-in-law again became clerk of that office. This merchant was our informant in this matter. The only remaining matter to be noticed, is the way our mail arrived at that office.

As it is well known, we travel a large part of our time, more than all the other editors of the Territory combined, and always make it a matter of special inquiry to see if our subscribers get their mail regularly, and we also try to ascertain if there is anything else that can be done for the improvement of our journal, or the benefit of our patrons. Consequently few irregularities can exist for any length of time, without our finding them out.

We have been doubly careful in this respect, ever since our trouble began with the Seattle post-office, to notice every omission, and correct it as soon as possible thereafter.

No complaint was ever made as to the manner of our mail being done up until after Mr. P. became post-master. Upon our employing a new foreman of extensive experience in the printing business, at least twice or thrice as great as that of the editor of the Tribune, he folded the STAR in a different form than before used in the office, and did up the paper in a shape that would have been amply secure, with ordinary careful handling of the mail.

The purser of the Nellie, in place of looking after the mail himself, as is usually done on other steamers, left the matter wholly to the steward, who handled the mail very roughly, throwing the mail sacks a great distance oftentimes into mud and water on the wharves, and with such force as to loosen or break any large packages, not done up with extraordinary care, taking the whole mail ashore in this manner at Lowell and Mukilteo.

As soon as this was observed by us, we immediately took steps to remedy it, so that no mail for Lowell or Mukilteo was put in the large paper mail sack making it unnecessary to carry it ashore except at Seattle. Soon after we ascertained that a few packages had failed completely to reach their destination; suspecting that the source of it must be in the way the mail had been handled, we went to the Seattle post-office, found these broken packages, in that office, done them up and redirected them to the proper destination. The clerk then informing us that the Seattle mail had never failed to reach the office so that he could distribute all of it, but suggested a different method of doing up the papers as more secure. In compliance with his suggestion we changed in part the method of folding and doing up the mail, not tending the papers so small yet leaving them so that all the mail could be distributed in less than several minutes. Now this was several months ago, during all this time, we know not of a single instance of the Seattle package going to Seattle outside of the regular mail sack and do not believe it to have so gone. If it has it has been in direct violation of our orders at the office, or else it has been taken out of the sack, after being aboard of the steamer. After careful inquiry, we do not believe either of these things to have taken place.

One week, the mail was put up differently, and less securely by one in our absence who had not made up the mail previously for several months. One package came undone, as we ascertained directly after at the Seattle office, where we made inquiry; as soon as we found how that number was mailed we secured it there.

Then we were again informed by the clerk of the office that every other package excepting those we had tied up ourselves, some three or four in all, had all come in such shape that they could be forwarded to their destination.

He also admitted again that the Seattle mail had never failed to reach the office so that he could distribute it.

We personally know it never has failed to reach the office in good condition since that date. It was then, after going to that office some two or three times a month for several months to see why the STAR mail was not distributed more promptly, this clerk admitted that he frequently had left it undistributed for some time after its arrival and by way of excuse again complained of the way it was folded. We required him to show the way he preferred to have it folded, since which date the Seattle mail has been folded in accordance with his desires, and so securely done up and tied with heavy cord as to make it impossible to undo it, except it was done purposely, and with one exception has always reached the office on time, that exception was the fault of the steamer; yet it is a fact well known to our Seattle subscribers that for the past three or four months the STAR would scarcely ever be distributed until several days after its arrival there, and distributed so irregularly that some of our subscribers would get their papers two or three days or more later than others and that the first time it had been promptly distributed for a very long time was the Monday after our next to last publication.

From the admissions of that clerk alone it can be proved that the distribution of the STAR mail has been so frequently delayed after its arrival in good condition and our subscribers have been so irregularly served, that even the grossest negligence will not account for it. In fact nothing else will account for it but the fact, that this clerk knew it was pleasing to his real master, Daniel Bagley to delay its distribution as long as possible, and make the mail service useless to our patrons.

But relying upon Mr. P.'s word that he will hereafter personally attend to the matter, and requesting all officers of the office as well as subscribers to aid us by every means in their power to make the service prompt and efficient, we close this article, hoping that the like may not occur hereafter.

SAURDAY..... JUNE 2, 1877.

Local Items.

Mr. WENSTER has up the frames of the Blackman Bros' houses.

A large amount of matter we are compelled to let lay over until next week.

SNOHOMISH County has three men whose united height reaches the figure of 19 ft. 4 inches.

D. O. PEARSON is getting in a good stock of goods, and doing better than anticipated at his new store in Centreville.

Messrs. McNaught and Leary are the legal firm doing the most enterprising business of any in the Territory. See their card elsewhere.

Esq. OLIVER, besides putting up a very neat veranda around his house, is painting his house inside and out, and fitting his premises up in a very neat manner.

LAST week the job of finishing the church was let to the lowest bidder. Mr. Tomkins secured the contract. It is to be finished by the 10th of June.

THE Wenat came in on Tuesday, having a party of San Francisco gentlemen on board who, as agents for several commercial houses there, are making a tour of the Sound. Mr. D. K. Baxter of Seattle was one of the party.

We call attention to the card of Messrs. Williams & Murphy, of the Seattle iron works. They are getting new tools and a new outfit in every particular, and know their business, and guarantee satisfaction. Give them a trial.

NEARLY all our up river loggers who can are getting down their logs. The general expression among the lumber men is, that the prospects of much of a June freshet is very small. Hence their anxiety to get their logs to deep water before the river reaches too low a stage.

LOGGING.—W. B. Moore of the Sillaganish is now putting in about 100000 feet of very fine saw logs each week. Has now a boom of about 600,000 feet of logs ready to be towed to the mill, which he considers the best in quality of any logs ever cut or handled by him.

THE card of Dr. Locke, dentist, will be noticed in another column. The Dr. has been at this place and left with an excellent reputation, both as a gentleman and a man skilled in his profession. His permanent location at Seattle will not prevent his paying this place an occasional visit.

We have not been able to learn whether Dr. Hewes, whose advertisement elsewhere indicates his speciality, as well as his present location, intends to visit this place or not. It would be well for all who wish to consult him to apply early, as his stay in our vicinity may not be a protracted one.

We had a very pleasant call from Dr. Kellogg of Whidby Island last Tuesday. He brought over a small sloop load of vegetables. He expresses himself highly pleased with the town, and its future prospects. He also speaks very encouragingly of the crop prospects in Island County.

Our friend B. L. Martin, we find well fitted up in his new quarters, in charge of the new store of the Puget Mill Co. at Utsalady. They have upwards of $10,000 worth of goods on hand, and are increasing their stock with the increase of business, and as fast as they can learn the class of goods desired in that section. May this store meet with success, and be a benefit to the community at large.

PINKHAM & SAXE received recently some fifteen tons of freight, being an assorted stock of clothing and gents furnishing goods to be added to their already extensive stock of goods in this line. These gentlemen do a very large trade with this section. Men have dealt with them for a long time, and have always found they could depend upon their word in getting a good article at reasonable rates.

The Nellie brought the intelligence of the death of Arthur Phinney of Port Ludlow. Also of the killing of a negro by a Kanaka at Tacoma, as well as the little unpleasantness between two gamblers at the same place. The Yakima arrived Wednesday morning very early same day. D. B. Jackson of Port Gamble was on board.

"THE NORTHERN STAR comes regularly to hand as brilliant as ever."—Independent. We would respond to this kind greeting by saying that under its present able management, the Independent is among our most valuable exchanges, doing everything in its power to estimate local progress, and especially to forward the progress of education and social growth.

WILSON'S foundry is the oldest, and best established on the Sound, now in existence. Messrs. White & Tenney have the interest of Messrs. Wilson & son, and are fully prepared to keep up the reputation of the original concern. Mr. Tenney was for a long time Mr. W's. foreman and understands the whole business, while Mr. White has for a long time been known as one of the representative business men of Seattle.

Messrs. Harris & Aitridge, druggist of Seattle W. T. are the successors to Mr. Morrill's drug business at his old stand. They are fully prepared to keep up and improve upon the excellent reputation this house has acquired, and will doubtless retain an increasing patronage from this section. The many Snohomish friends of Gard. Kellogg will be pleased to find him there behind the counter administering to the wants of suffering humanity.

In the Intelligencer of May 29th and 30th, can be seen an extended account of the shooting and killing of Capt. Howard by a saloon keeper named Sutton at Port Townsend. The article is too long for the crowded state of our columns.

ONE evidence of the forwardness of the present season is the fact that many species of forest birds have hatched out, and the young are sufficiently fledged and far enough grown to care for themselves, and the parent birds are laying again. This is the case with sparrows, robins, blue birds and many other species. Many broods of pheasants and some grouse are already out.

THE Exchange, when fully completed will be the most elegant hotel in Washington Territory. The rooms are all to be hard finished and repainted. It will have bath rooms, store and wash rooms, a butcher and barber shop. The dining-room will comfortably accommodate one hundred guests at once. There will be sleeping accommodations for eighty persons. French windows will open from the ladies parlor out upon the piazza in front. The kitchen has all the modern improvements, with plenty of water in the house. The bill for painting alone has cost $250.

MR. ENTWISTLE from the Snoqualmie was in town Tuesday. He reports that the prospects for a large yield of hops at his place this season is very flattering. He also informed us that a pack train, loaded with flour for the Seattle market, crossed the pass successfully last week, and that another is now on the way. The people of the Yakima are made of the right kind of stuff; they are bound to have an outlet for their produce, and if they can't have a wagon or railroad, they will fall back on the "days of 49" and scratch through. Come this way neighbors next time, you can find a market here for a load.
