Money and time will not be spared to facilitate the transportation of freight from Rockford to the mines. Rockford is the most natural supply point to the mines, and with the new facilities for transportation, which are now in progress, it will be far the most accessible point to that place. With the natural advantages, and the energetic, wideawake and determined business element which now favors the town of Rockford we cannot but feel that Rockford is destined to become the best business point in this portion of Washington Territory.

we take the following questions from a letter from California and answer to the best of our ability in detail:

What opening is there for a man with a small capital?

This question is frequently propunded, and as the writers convey no hint as to what they consider a "small capital" we are decidedly at a loss to answer with any degree of satisfaction. With a "small capital" to be a small capital to be a small capita satisfaction. With a "small capital," if not too infinitesimal, and a and is operated on a capital of $2-9.00.

or the city at this time when we can look for an influx of people, good, bad and indifferent. In the first place it would be well to build at once a good jail. Heretofore this unpleasant appendage has been almost unnecessary, but as the place becomes more of a metropolis the want of a calaboose will be felt. After a building is constructed capable of retaining a sober prisoner for twenty-four hours, an assistant should be appointed to aid the Marshall in the performance of his duties. The Missoula Times is pulling for the Trout Creek route with a great pull, and in its eagerness to make out that that trail is as smooth and easy of travel as the gold paved streets of paradise it bangs on some impressions that will not stand the test of serutiny, and endeavors to make its readers believe, through jextness from the REVIEW, that the trail from here is impassable. The Times is intentionally or ignoranily attempting to mislead the public. The facts are just these and cannot be honestly denied: At no time this winter has the trail ric the Mission and Evolution been entirely closed only to pack trains. Last week Mr. S. E. Child, who makes Spokane Falls his home, arrived in the city direct from Eagle City, the Inhabited centre of the Cueur d'Alene mines, with the Intention of rustienting for a month at least. Mr. Child has a store in the mines, and during his absence the establishment is managed by hisson. He naturally sunposed, considering He naturally supposed, considering the difficulties to be surmounted in order to get into the mines, that common sense would teach the ma-jority of fortune hunters the absurdijority of fortune hunters the absurdity of rushing into a snow bound camp where there was no hope of working the ground, and thought that the business of his mercantile establishment would move along under the supervision of his son without any great tax on that gentleman. Imagine his surprise when he received a letter Sunday from his representative in the mines requesting his immediate presence, and stating the fact that prospectors were crowding in at such a rate that one pana was unable to meet the demands of the rapidly increasing business. The in at such a rate that one man was inable to meet the demands of the rapidly increasing business. The letter conveyed the information that the head and front of the anticipated rush was being felt. From every point on the line of the rail road from whence the mines could be reached a continual stream of fortune hunters were making their way to the camp. Scores of nen were coming in every day, the number increasing with the approach of spring, slow as that approach might seem. Mr. Child had his visit here cut short off. He immediately secured six pack animals and departed Monday for the camp. He carried such goods as tents, sheet fron stoves, lamps and those articles mostly in demand in the diggings. We met him just before he started on the trip. He informed us that there was many things he might take in that would pay him for the expense of freighting, some 40 cents per pound, but no line of articles so of freighting, some 40 cents per pound, but no line of articles so uch in demand as those enumera-d. While he admitted that other routes might attract that class of men willing to travel on foot and undergo the tribulations accompanying a march of that kind he was still of the opinion that any man who kad any desire to pack in provisions or other wares would rely entirely on the route from Spokane Falls, not only on account of its accessibility to the new El Dorado, but from the incontrovertible fact that purchases can be made cheaper at this place and that the route is devoid of the drawbacks that confront the traveler on other routes. It is evident from all we can learn and see that the grand whirl of excitement, the gloss and glamor that surrounds gold hunting, is to burst upon us a month at least earlier than was expected. In spite of all the warnings published far and near, pointing out the impossibility of performing any labor until late in the spring, men are determined to be on the ground and await. outes might attract that class of late in the spring, men are determin-ed to be on the ground and await, and to be on the ground and await, with what patience they may command, the breaking up of winter, in order not to lose a moment in their search for gold. There is an indescribable infatuation in all new discoveries of precious metals to draw men to the scene of the find. It is the hope of sudden riches, or the love of the excitement that lures them on. From the very best autorities we are informed that placer mining is impracticable in the mountains as late'ss May, and very often the ground is not free from snow antil June. At the spresent time there is five feet of white covering on the ground at Eagle City. Some prospecting is carried on even now, but it is easy to imagine that the labut it is easy to imagine that the la-bor is accompanied with much troubloand very little satisfaction. Snow fifty feet deep would not deter peo-ple from going into the mines, however, and it is safe to say the spring travel has fairly commenced, if indeed it has ever stopped during the been kept up steadily, and the trail has not really been closed for pedes trians for twenty-four hours at a stretch. If men will go into the camp at this season they cannot be prevented. Common sense ought to teach them that any gain to be made by actual mining is entirely visionary and they will soon realize that living in the mines is much more expensive than they dreamed of. Men commanding any means can take advantage of the surroundings, however, and manage to exist at less expense if they will only come to Spokane Falls, secure a complety outfit here, and with them go mot the camps via the Post. They will find the route from the Falls practicable, and will be surprised at the find the route from the Falls practi-cable, and will be surprised at the low price of goods. Anything and everything necessary for use can be procured here. The bulk of travel is coming this way now and as it becomes known that the Falls holds
