SOMEWHAT TOUGH.

The Experience of Land Hunters North of this Point.

While the days of Indian troubles in this section are passed, yet occasionally a white man finds a good deal of trouble getting along with them.

On Saturday morning Deputy Sheriff James Severson of Spokane county, arrived in the city in charge of 13 Indians and two white men.

SATURDAY, MAY 19, 1884.

The Dayton Chronicle, one of the greatest and richest little dailies on the coast, comes to us in a new and becoming dress, much to its improvement typographically, although the room for improvement was very limited.

If we are to put any faith in the telegraph Blaine's stock is booming, and the chances are growing more favorable every day for the nomination of the "plumed knight" to Chicago on the convening of the Republican Convention. Let it be Blaine & Lincoln's team that would sweep the country from the rocky ridges of Maine to the sunny shores of the Pacific, and from the Great Lakes to Mason & Dixon's line, it would be hard to bet on anything south of that point.

ELSEWHERE we have mentioned that this closes the first volume of the REVIEW. A year ago we started the publication of this paper with very little encouragement, but a good deal of determination to make it stick. Upon this we depended for support and all of our poor ability has been exercised to advance the place. Whether or not we adhered closely to this policy we leave it to our readers to decide. We may not have pleased all but we did not start out with any intention of trying to cater to the vagaries and eccentricities of every single individual in the country. Our failure is not a matter of regret. The REVIEW will enter on another year in a condition of prosperity in keeping with the advancement of the city it has aided in building up. We have no grand promises to make for the future, but when Spokane needs an advocate or the people thereof a defender we will try to come along in front of the procession. Our thanks are due to the many friends of the paper who have during the year charitably overlooked its faults and emphasized its virtues. We will try to retain the confidence of the public so long as we have control of the REVIEW, working steadily for the city, county and Territory, feeling sufficiently rewarded if our labors in any measure aid in bringing about the great desideratum of securing Statehood for Washington.

At the present time there is nothing that Spokane stands in such desperate need of as some means of checking the inroads of a conflagration. There are certain lateral improvements that would enhance the appearance of the place, but they can be put off without damage to the city. A town hall is almost indispensable, and yet the Falls would survive if the construction of such an edifice should be postponed. A jail is sadly needed, still some shift could be made to tide over the summer without one. But fire apparatus and fire hose are an immediate and imperative necessity. The purchase of one should not be put off until the next year. In a month, but secured instantly. Let there not be a day's delay in this important matter. Let our people spring to the front with their engines. Presuming that water-works will be constructed this summer, we can hope for no relief from that source until late next fall. In the interim what is to be done? Remain passive and invite destruction? Or people cannot afford to wait about an hour. With the food at hand and the means of subsistence, fanned by the light breeze, would erase the entire business part of the town. There does not exist the faintest semblance of an organization, nor the rudest tools for combating the devouring element. The city is completely and wholly at the mercy of fire. The knowledge of this is not confined to one or two, everybody knows it, and yet the public is slow to act in one of the most vital questions of the hour, and in which every single property owner is personally interested. Let an apparatus be purchased by the Council and a special tax levied to meet the expense, or let it be bought by individual contributions. It makes no difference what means are used so we have it. There is no use of procrastinating, something must be done for protection and that at once. Citizens of Spokane! You to whom an appeal for a public good was never made in vain, awake! House up and face this all-important question, now! The desperate situation of the city is known to you. Are you to continue on unconcerned, and in indifferent to the ruin that threatens you daily? Will you make no effort to avert a menacing fiend that may at any moment burst forth and with demonic glee sweep from the face of the earth the fruits of your labor? Are you willing to see the present progress of the city checked, and, possibly, irretrievably ruined, for the want of a few paltry dollars? Action is wanted now, and that short, sharp and decisive.

A PERILOUS VOYAGE.

DOWN THE TREACHEROUS SPOKANE RIVER.

A Trip Fraught by many Dangers and Fatal to One of the Adventurers.

To a person not acquainted with the nature of the stream a trip from Spokane Falls to the Columbia River by water would appear to be a very easy matter, and one containing all the elements of pleasure. But actual experience and observation will dispel that idea. Spokane river is one of the most picturesque streams in a country noted for the striking beauty of its water courses. The water itself, distilled from the immaculate snows of winter that give with summer, is cold and clear as crystal. From its very source it travels along over a rocky bed, and is cut up with rapids and falls clear to where it joins the Columbia and contributes its might toward making up that great river. In many places it flows through high banks, and possesses scenery which for grandeur and beauty cannot be surpassed.

While there is sufficient water almost to float a steamboat, yet it is not navigable for skiffs on account of the rapids, riffles, falls, etc., that break up the surface. A number of efforts have been made by parties to go through to the Columbia by this route, but in every case, as far as we know, the experiment has proved a failure, and led to a recent case resulting in the drowning of one of the bold adventurers. A short time ago three young men named H. C. Bowen, C. C. Bowen and Henry Underhill conceived the idea of going to Portland by water, and with that purpose in view proceeded to build a skiff to carry them through. The craft, while a staunch boat of its kind, was a frail affair to trust their lives in, yet the boys had the utmost confidence in their ability to manage. They started from this place Saturday morning in high spirits, but the voyage was destined to be of brief duration. When only some five miles west of here, at a point on the river known as Pitcher and Barred rocks, the boat was capsized in the rapids. With great labor the Bowen boys were enabled to reach land but Underhill was swept away and drowned. The young man who was lost was about 27 years of age and has a mother somewhere in Canada. The Bowen boys lost their coats containing all the money they had besides the outfit. Sunday Mr. Bailey, Chas. Peckles and Geo. Mettauffin happened to drive over to Pitcher rock, where they met the Bowen boys. The gentlemen instituted a search for the craft and contents. The boat was found and some of the articles were picked up along shore. The Bowen boys returned to this city, satisfied with their experience on the Spokane. The body of the unfortunate Underhill has not been recovered.

UNDER A CLOUD.

A Party of Confidence Men Shake the Dust of Spokane from their Shoes.

Last week we had occasion to dish up a dissertation on gaming that was brought out by a little bunko practice. More light was thrown upon the operations of this gang Saturday, and at the hour of going to press a crowd was on trial and neck-stretching was a theme of conversation in numerous quarters. Things looked squally, and a heavy party was on the tapis for a time. It seems that not contented with the shop in town, that was to all outward signs visible closed upon the orders of the authorities, the gang was still plying their nefarious trade. They continued their operations to working railroad trains, and numerous parties learned how not to do it at an expense running all the way from dollars up to hundreds. A part of the force was at the depot Saturday morning, for no honest purpose. The got into a dispute with some of the travelers from a to anxious desire on the part of one man to point them out as confidence workers. In the trouble so stirred up the sharpers had the very bad taste to kick and cuff one of their opponents. This was more than flesh and blood could very well submit to, and the man assaulted lodged complaint against the assaulter. Three of them were at once arrested and brought before Judge Allen. Excitement about town ran high and a cloud of people hovered about the Judge's office. Expressions of violence were frequently heard, but no demonstrations were made. That old war horse, Judge Bettis, appeared; as attorney for the prosecution. The Judge's temper was aroused by the performances of the gang, and he handled the case without gloves. The jurisdiction of the court as far as burning the prisoners was limited. Mr. Allen was so sorry that he could not lift the fines to a thousand, so were the balance of the community. One of the party was fined $100, the other bound over to the next term. The fellows weakened and promised to skip the town if the latter punishment was omitted. Considering the riddance of the gang was more to be desired than anything else, they were permitted to vamoose, which they did Saturday night. There was rumors of the formation of a vigilance committee, but the matter is resting at present, still we feel perfectly satisfied that if another crowd of the kind loaves in town such an organization will be instituted and warm work result therefrom.
