A GRAND FARCE.

The fact that A. M. Cannon an B. H. Bennett (who were bound over to appear before the grand jury on a charge of attempt to commit murder) were not in-dicted, was not owing to a lack ged such a crime as they committed would have been punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a fixed number of years.

Judgo Wyllio ov The names of witnesses placed in the hands of the proper authoricould truthfully testify that Cannon stated before he made pocket," and that Cannon and Bennett left the bank when they expected and probably knew no one was to be present in the office but their intended victim and his wife and child; they turned out of their natural course, to avoid held under consideration until notice, passed down over a gulch, crossed the ravine, came behind and between buildings to a point on Howard street, where they quickly crossed over and entered the Times office. Entering in a friendly manner, they chose their positions and after a few words Cannon stated in a loud voice that he "feared neither God, man nor the devil," and he 'would kill' the editor if he did not do as he wished him to do; Bennett saying, as he also drew a revolver, "I am going to take a part in this." Each attempted twice to shoot Mr. Cook, but were prevented from so doing by having their arms struck down by an iron "side-stick." The man whose life they were vainly struggling to end in the presence of his wife and babe, had it in his power to kill them, and gave them their lives twice, each, trusting that the law would give them sufficient punishment for their attempt to murder. this encounter was ended, and Mr. Cook had given up his iron reatened to shoot Mr. Cook. This was witnessed by over twenty of our citizens. He acknowl-

while in the office, and wondered why he did not hit him. The above statements are facts, and can be clearly PROVEN by the witnesses whose names were given the prosecuting attorney for this district. That Cannon and Bennett were not inducted is no evidence that they were not guil-ty, because the above facts are well understood by the residents of this city, and are commented upon by people all over the Northwest. We are almost ashamed to tell the world that such an atrocious crime goes unpunished; but such is the history of all new NEW YORK, April 21 .- A Wash countries.
