

Love.

Love? I will tell thee what it is to love! It is to build with human thoughts a shrine...

Change of Duties.

Once on a time there was a man so surly and cross, he never thought his wife did anything right in the house...

Then he went into the dairy, and found enough cream left to fill the churn again, and so he began to churn for butter they must have at dinner...

Then he went into the dairy, and found enough cream left to fill the churn again, and so he began to churn for butter they must have at dinner...

Now it was near dinner time, and he hadn't even got the butter yet, so he thought he'd best boil the porridge, and filled the pot with water and hung it over the fire...

The crockery-ware on the table. His little son, who was sitting at the table at the time, was taken with a chill, and shook all the buttons off his inexpressible, and then shook himself clear of them!

We then prevailed upon Tom to stop; he did so, with the understanding that he would give the balance at some future time.

A party of eighty North Carolinian emigrants, en route for Oregon, passed through Danville, Mo. While stopping to make some purchases, one of them was pounced upon by a lawyer of the town, who indulged largely in the not exclusively Yankee recreation of asking questions.

They were going to find a town; the pursuit of each person was already marked out, and there was no drones among them. What was this man to do? He was to open a store. And that? Start a blacksmith's shop. And the other standing behind him? Engage in sheep-raising.

They were nearly all inventors, when a decrepit white-haired octogenarian, ancestor of the present day, in the not exclusively Yankee recreation of asking questions.
