His eminent professional reputation is sufficient guarantee. WALLA WALLA, November 25, 1876. W. B. CLOWE.

JOB PRINTING, NEAT, QUICK AND CHEAP AT THE STATESMAN OFFICE.

APPLES.—Mr. John Hancock sends us his new year's remembrance in the shape of a lot of fine winter apples. Mr. Hancock will accept our thanks.

NEW YEAR'S DAY was generally observed at the Garrison. The ladies kept open house, and many of their gentlemen friends from town partook of their hospitality.

WALLA LIBRARY.—The regular monthly meeting of the Walla Walla Lyceum and Library Association will be held at the library room, this (Saturday) evening.

RAILROAD TAXES.—The tax imposed upon the Valley Railroad for territorial and county purposes amounts to $2500 per annum. This is at the rate of nearly $100 for each and every mile of railroad within the county limits.

THE NEW YEAR brings in its train most delightful weather. A thermometer placed in an exposed position at 12M yesterday, marked 59 degrees. The weather is perfectly agreeable, and leaves little to be desired.

ADDITION'S OFFICE.—On Monday next Hon. Thos. P. Page will enter upon the discharge of his duties as county auditor. In the past Mr. Page made many friends, and in the auditor's office we are quite sure he will be equally popular.

CITY HALL.—Parties desiring to give balls, concerts, or exhibitions of any kind, will please notice that the City Hall can be secured at low rates. Mr. Spansid has lately purchased the City Hall, and will at all times keep the same in good repair, and ready for immediate use.

DR. D. S. BAKER was passing up Main street, Wednesday night, and in crossing the bridge at the upper side he stepped off and fell a distance of some five or six feet. It was quite dark at the time, and under all the circumstances Dr. Baker was fortunate in escaping without serious injury. Dr. Baker has since had guards placed at the upper end of the bridge, so as to protect others from a similar accident.

A SMASH UP.—Wednesday, about noon, Mr. J. P. Buckley, in company with his wife, was driving down Main street, in a coach and buggy. When near the corner of Third street the shaft broke loose on one side, and the horse becoming frightened, the buggy was upset, throwing Mr. Buckley and his wife to the ground. At first it was supposed they were seriously hurt, but on examination were found to have escaped with a few bruises and scratches.

TAX ON RAILROADS.—We notice on the bills of the Central Pacific Railroad that freighters over that road are required to pay a proportion of the tax imposed upon the road. The Railroad Company has been in the habit of fighting the different counties through which the road passes and have in every way resisted the payment of tax, but at last cornered, they resort to the expedient of adding those who freight over the road with the payment of its taxes.

EXPORTS FOR THE YEAR 1876.—The following table shows the exports of grain over the railroad for the year 1876:

Table with 2 columns: Grain Type, Amount. Includes entries for Wheat, Barley, and Flour.

In addition to the above there was large shipments of eggs, butter, lard, hides, etc., that would swell the total shipments to fifty or sixty thousand tons.

TO THE LADIES.—Mrs. Butler, late of Oregon, and Mrs. C. C. Gray have purchased Mrs. Merchant's entire stock of millinery goods, and will carry on the business at the old stand. Hats trimmed to order in the latest styles. Bleaching and pressing a specialty. Dress cut and made in the most approved style. Mrs. Butler, after having six years' experience, feels herself fully competent to please the most fastidious. They will continue to sell out at cost until their elegant spring stock arrives.

DISTRICT SCHOOL No. 34, resumes studies on Monday next, when the pupils are expected to be prompt in attendance as a permit a proper arrangement of the classes. Mr. W. T. McKern remains in charge of the school as principal, with Miss Hattie Logan as assistant. During the last term these teachers gave general satisfaction, and those they retained in their respective positions.

NEW YEAR'S GALLS.—Many of our lady friends kept open house on New Year's day, and received the calls of their gentlemen friends. A gentleman to inaugurate this custom we made one year ago, but with indifference. This year the observance is more general and gives promise that with another new year the custom of making calls will be universal. In New York the observance of new year's day supersedes that of Christmas, and 's here made the great holiday of the year. Our Walla Walla fashionables are drifting in the same direction.

NEW YEAR'S PRESENT.—Mr. John Stahl, of the "City Brewery," made the editor a new year's present that most strikingly illustrates his taste and liberality. The present was in the shape of a case of liquors, and embraced sample lots of all the best brands of wines and liquors known to the trade. All the wines and liquors are put up in neat packages, and just in shape for a gentleman who desires to entertain his friends handsomely. Altogether Mr. Stahl's present was peculiarly acceptable, and we recommend our friends whenever they want the best wines and liquors to purchase of the establishment.

WAGONS AND BUGGIES.—Hon. P. M. Lynch, at his wagon shop, is now finishing a number of wagons and buggies that are of superior workmanship. A buggy made to the order of Col. Whipple, promises to be light, neat and strong. A wagon intended to carry passengers to and from the cars, and built after the style of an omnibus, is another specimen of superior workmanship. Mr. Lynch has the best carriage maker in the country in his employ, and hence he is prepared to build better vehicles than his competitors in the same line of business.

SCHOOL HOUSES.—Recently we have made it our business to inquire into the condition of the public schools within the city limits, and we regret to say that we find them by no means satisfactory. Both schools are overcrowded, and with the best disposition in the world the teachers are unable to do the scholars justice. In one small room we find from fifty to sixty scholars, all under the care of a single teacher. The best writers on the subject of popular education lay down the rule that twenty five or at most thirty scholars is the highest number that can be taught by a single teacher. Here we double the number, and then parents and guardians wonder why the children fail to make progress in their studies. The remedy for this can only be found in larger school houses, provided with recitation rooms. Furnish the teachers with recitation rooms in which to hear their classes, and they will then be able to get along with the ever increasing number of children that crowd the public schools. They can also adopt what is known as the "monitorial system"—that is the appointment of the most advanced scholars to take charge of the classes during the absence of the teacher in the recitation room. As it is now, while the teacher is hearing a class the other scholars are idling their time, and thus it is that they make small progress in their studies. As already stated, the enlargement of school houses so as to permit of recitation rooms, and the adoption of the "monitorial system"—making the older scholars teach the younger ones—is the only remedy within our reach. If any of our friends have a better plan to suggest, we shall be happy to have them ventilate their views through the columns of the STATESMAN.

SCHOOL HOUSE AT WALLA.—The citizens of Walla and vicinity recently determined to build a schoolhouse and arrange for the education of the rising generation. Dr. Baker, President of the Railroad Company, was consulted in the matter and voluntarily contributed one half the lumber required to build the schoolhouse. The balance was made up by citizens, and already the lumber is dressed and on the ground to build the house. Walla is one of the oldest settlements east of the mountains, but owing to the limited population has hitherto been without that great American institution—the school house.

TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS DAMAGES.—Stephen Devenish has commenced suit in the District Court against Dr. N. G. Black, and for cause of action sets forth that on or about the 5th day of September, 1876, the plaintiff by accident broke his collar bone. That defendant in his character of physician was employed to set, dress and take care of said collar bone. That the defendant ignorantly, negligently and unskillfully treated said plaintiff, whereby he sustained damages in the sum of $10,000. Defendant demurs to the allegation, denies all the charges, and asks that the suit be dismissed.

PRIVATE SCHOOLS.—Walla Walla has a number of private schools that bear an excellent reputation. The States school for young ladies has always been well conducted, and ranks high. The Episcopal school for ladies, is also a model institution, and is attracting a large number of pupils. Prof. Grimm's high school, Dr. Clam's school, and Prof. LaMar's school for boys, are all well conducted, and are doing a good work in educating the boys and girls of this valley. These private schools serve an excellent purpose in relieving the public schools from being overcrowded.

SENATOR ROBERTS, just now is being treated for a feverish condition of the throat. The occasion for this is, in his opinion, his recent tour in the State, and his extreme exertions in all matters relating to the Presidential contest. As an industrious, painstaking Senator, Mitchell commanded respect; he who he descends to play the role of an extreme radical, his position is changed, and he must expect these references to his early "indications." A couplet in the old hymn book will fit his case.

WHAT RETURNS.—Several of our farmer friends who have lately had returns on shipments of wheat, inform us that after paying all expenses they received at the rate of 75 cents a bushel. In several cases we examined the "statements," and found the returns in excess of 75 cent a bushel. At this price for wheat, Walla Walla farmers will be the most independent men in the world, and in a few years all who the care of their money will be rich.

FURTY THIEVES.—Quite recently a trio of small boys have been in the habit of entering F. Orselli's store, and trying off any thing they could lay their hands on. Their first depredation was to steal three cans of oysters, next a box of candles, and their last attempt yesterday was to steal two cans of peaches. These boys are now down, and if they continue their depredations they are quite sure to be up in the county jail.

FUNERAL.—Sunday last the remains of the late Mrs. D. Baldwin were laid in their last resting place. The funeral was from the Episcopal church, and was attended by a large concourse of mourning friends and relatives. Mrs. Baldwin had been sick a long time, and her case death came as a relief. She left a husband and four children to mourn a loss of a faithful wife and loving mother.

FILTHY STREETS.—The bed of Main street just now is in a filthy condition, and in some places is almost impassable for teams. We frequently hear teamsters declare that the worst road in the county are to be found inside the city limits, and taking the present condition of Main street as a sample, we think the teamsters tell the truth.

REMARKS.—We hear of quite a number of "moral" individuals who seem off from the "straight" path, and propose hereafter to go under the temperance banner. Several of these gentlemen are intimate friends of the writer. [We fear all the circumstances, like Mousie, he bids them "Be firm!"]

NATURALIZERS.—In the U. S. District Court, Gregory M. Lyons, a native of Canada; Bernard Murphy, of Ireland, and Charles Abraham, a native of England, have been duly naturalized and admitted to all the rights of citizenship.

THE RAILROAD CARS are now tied up, but special trips are made over the road whenever called for.

CURSEY STRIPS.—Since the incorporation of Walla Walla city, the streets by ordinance created the office of fire warden. Usually three persons are appointed to this office, whose duty it is to examine the condition of floors, and to notify property owners to clean them when in their opinion necessary. Our citizens have generally obeyed the ordinance and expended from one to two dollars for each cleaning, yet it often happens that gas burns out immediately after being cleaned. The fact is, that the floors are not cleaned out at all. No doubt the warden think they do good work, but when we reflect that the cost cannot be removed by washing a bunch of hay or straw tied to a stick up and down the chimney, in the manner of wiping out a shot gun, which is the modus operandi, it is no wonder that the gas burns out shortly after cleaning. Set is an adhesive substance, and becomes in fact so firmly fixed to the floor, that it can only be removed by using a scraper. Until our floors are built of a sufficient size to allow the scraper to assist them scraper in hand, it is worse than folly to expect property holders to pay for cleaning floors that cannot now be cleaned. To our mind the ordinance is a sham upon property holders without any corresponding benefit.

THE POLITICAL ASPECT.—An incident recently occurred at the military post that will bear repeating: A week or two since the officers gave a hop that was largely attended by the beauty and fashion of the town. One of the young officers was observed to be moody and took no part in any of the dances, but sat around all evening chinning the "wall flowers." This attracted the attention of a young lady, who addressing the gallant son of Mars, asked him: "Why don't you dance?" The face of our hero is naturally serious, but putting on a longer face than usual, he replied: "Well, owing to the aspect of political affairs in the South, and in my own State of Alabama in particular, I am consequently unable to dance or enjoy myself." Since this explanation, when any of the boys look blue it is attributed to the "aspect of political affairs."

BARGAINS.—If the reader wishes to know where to buy cheap goods, he will read the advertisements. The man who advertises can always afford to sell cheap goods. Our merchants now desire to work off their heavy goods in order to make room for spring stock, and to that end they will offer great bargains. Goods are now retailed in this market at lower figures than at any other place on the coast, and hence it is that consumers can afford to buy freely.

HANDSOME PRESENT.—Dr. J. H. Ivy has presented the Washington Engine Company a very handsome pair of vases that are to ornament the President's table. The vases are very large, beautiful in design, and altogether a present that the firemen will appreciate. In this as in many other matters Dr. Ivy deserves credit for his liberality.

GRAND SCHOOL.—Olympia has a public school that employs three teachers, who take charge respectively of the primary, intermediate and grammar departments. If a little one were torn the Olympian can afford a graded school, it really seems as though Walla Walla ought to be able to support a public school in which the higher branches are taught.

PLOWING.—Our farmer friends are taking advantage of the present mild weather and have turned loose their plows all over the valley. A large amount of land was broken up last fall, and if this mild weather continues the whole country will be brought under cultivation.

PRIVATE HOSPITAL.—Dr. Bingham is making important changes in the building at the corner of First and Alder streets, and will soon have it in readiness for the reception of patients. In the meantime the sick are received and cared for in the adjoining building.

PUBLIC INSTALLATION.—The officers elect of Iveshoe Lodge No. 1, K. of P., will be publicly installed on Tuesday evening next. It is understood that the friends and acquaintances of the members will be invited.

E. H. CURRY, an accomplished teacher of penmanship, has been engaged to take charge of a writing class in the lower district public school.

DISTRICT SCHOOL No. 1, opens on Monday next, with the same corps of teachers employed during the last term.

A CARD.—To all who are suffering from the cross and indisposition of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a receipt that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. Chinese Matrimonial Agents.

The circumstances related in this item are necessarily abridged, but are given as literally as possible, and we vouch for their truth in all respects: A married lady residing in the north-eastern or southwestern part of the city was visited recently by a younger and married sister, from a neighboring city. An exceedingly aged, but remarkably shrewd Chinaman, has for two years been accustomed to visit the house to sell fruit and vegetables. While the sister was a guest it was noticed that younger and very spruce mongolian males frequently accompanied the elder heathen. Since the departure of the sister the elder Chinaman has been remarkably kind to the members of the household, exhibiting unwonted liberality with his goods, and insisting upon leaving trifling presents from time to time. A week or so ago this ancient joss-worshiper, presuming upon the familiarity which had grown out of his long trading relations with the family, took his accustomed seat in the wash room of the residence and thus addressed himself to the house maid as she was engaged at her laundry work: 'You like walk here, hey?'

'Oh yes, very well.' 'How much you catchee?' 'Fifteen dollars a month, John, why?' 'You gettee much eat an—an good room?' 'Yes, certainly, plenty to eat, and a good room.' 'Sany—you—likee mally Chinaman—sabe?' 'What! you old—'

'Yes, one nice young Chinaman; got heep money, you no work more, gettee more fifteen dolla month. Chinaman give you one tounsa dolla. Yes, Chinaman Sal Flaseco all some now Melican woman tree tounsa dolla, she he wife; sabe? You likee Chinaman you husb n—b e y?'

He continued in this strain for some time. The joke was too broad, and the proposition to go ludicrous to listen to long, and the young woman fled to tell the lady of the house of the astonishing proposal, which for the next day or two was the standing jest in the family. But a few days after ward the gray-headed old matrimonial agent found excuse to enter the dining room, where the mistress of the household was at work with the children about her.

'You—sister, she go' way?' 'Yes, she's gone home.' After a contemplative pause he continued: 'S a a y (confidentially), she like mally one—oh? nice Chinaman?'

'Why! John! you old rasca!—'

'Top, top, you see, all same Melican man, he got wife—top, top, as the lady showed signs of anger. You sister, one young Chinaman, he got heep money; he give you sister tree tounsa dolla she he wife; good horse; him by he mak' heep more money, she heep dolla—'

At this, John was told to go about his business, and that the sister already had a husband and home, and did not wish to emulate the example of the white woman in San Francisco who married the Chinaman. He set forth the argument a while and continued the advantages of the offer, and only ceased on pre-emptory command. But yesterday the bold rasca returned to the attack in the following manner, as the lady met him at the kitchen door: 'S s a y; in low tones, Missis, you husb n pretty soon he no catchee so much money like Chinaman. Chinaman he get all woked, he uskeee, everything, he buy house, he buy horses, he buy store, he buy team cars—all tings; he much good; Melican man he no get much anything; s a a y, you sabe? You likee mally one velley nice Chinaman now, all same Melican woman Sal Flaseco? And the old Mongol chuckled over his logic as he unwound a brief and ragged cue from his grizzled and wrinkled pate, and carefully replaced it in coils again.

Greatly amused, and moved by curiosity to hear what further the chap had to say, the lady asked him what dower his ambitious principal would accord her if she deserted her white husband for one of dark hue. 'We le, he give you two tounsa dolla.'

'What, only two thousand, why you offered three thousand for my sister?'

'Top, top, she heep young woman.' 'Why, John! interposed the housemaid, you offered me only a thousand dollars.'

make her much presents; she no buy anything! This last brilliant outlook brought the interview to a sudden close, and John was sent to the 'left about' quickly.

He was heartily persistent in his offers for his principals, and is either a perfect joker or in downright sobriety intended all he uttered. Steps have been taken to prevent further Mongolian matrimonial advances in that quarter, and the women folks have an unhealthy reception for the agent when he again appears in that role. The affair is made the subject of much merriment by the women, while all are impressed with the feeling that the aged heathen was in real earnest. We learn that a young lady in another part of the city, a lady of beauty and accomplishments, has been complimented by a direct offer of marriage from a wealthy San Francisco Chinaman through a Chinese matrimonial agent here. We are also informed that the Chinese here entertain the belief that the ice now being broken, it is in order for them to seek white women for wives, and that money is the grand thing to bring about success.—Sac. Record Union.

FASHION NOTES.

Cardinal Red—How It Shines Upon Broadway. Its Influence on the New Paris Dresses. Broadway, the busy, restless, fascinating thoroughfare, is as gay with coloring this season as it has been distant with dead black for half a dozen winters. The lively of New York women was black silk or velvet cashmere, according to their means, but black, with a glimmer of jet, perhaps, yet unrelieved by a touch of color. Now, the black toilets to which women of taste still cling, and which in fact cling closely to them, are glowing with shades of warm bright red. Bows of red on sleeves and pockets and waists are seen on those who ignore good taste in the rush after the fashion of the hour, while only an edge of color shows in the lining of bows on dresses that are worn by ladies of quieter taste.

THE RAGE FOR RED. In perfect accord with the brilliancy of the season, with its sunlight days and its crimson tinge, is the glowing red that fashion brings us from over the sea. The French modistes have usually been afraid of much red, but this season King Sarclet holds high carnival in Paris, and he flaunts his gorgeousness along the stately grandeur of New York's pet avenue. Red with none of the dark, deep tints of crimson, nor the hot, fiery, brick dust glare that pains the eye and offends the taste and sallows the complexion, but red, with the soft, warm glow that is seen in the drapery of old pictures, that forms the coloring of the Court robes that royalty sweeps through its palaces, that flames on the shoulders of a Cardinal, that burns and gleams in soft, satin folds, like waves of fire, as the belle floats her costly train through the ball-room. The beautiful Siddons wears a dress like this one evening in your city just one year ago, and the shiny satin waves glowed beneath a web of rare lace, and the actress looked like a priestess of light, with her flaming drapery and her dashing eyes. The perfection of this color is not reached in the cheaper silks and ribbons, hence the rare shade of red that is much sought this season cannot become so common as to detract from its richness. Seal brown, with its quiet elegance, has been partially discarded from the colors that fashion decrees. The gray tints make the plain, respectable browns look plainer and more respectable still. The dark shade of green, known as hunter's green, is the most desirable shade of the season, and dark gray will be much sought for. Navy blue has been thrown overboard and ink blue substituted in its place, silky threads of cardinal frequently being thrown up against this dark background. Rich, deep maroon always holds a conspicuous place among the choice shades. It appears in soft damasse silks, in matelasse and in the richest brocade velvet and silks, such as we see in portraits of the grande dames of the old regime.

NEW MATERIALS. One of the most beautiful and most uncommon materials is a chintz matelasse, all silk, with the ever varying chameleon shades. But one house in New York has imported this goods, and it has only been seen at the openings of one or two of our most fashionable modistes. Worth sent it over, mingled with bottle green silk of the richest quality, in one of the most unique costumes that has crossed the water this fall. The box-plaid flounces of the train were lined with Cardinal silk, so that just an edge of color was visible. The chintz coats that glowed on the dark green ground of the rich matelasse were effectively combined in scarf drapery with the silk of the train. Bright bits of this coloring were draped on the dark waist and sleeves.

Another toilet that a celebrated modiste brought over from Worth was an evening dress, the tablier composed of folds of rich rose silk. At the sides were wing pieces of rose and deep maroon silk, trimmed all around with a double row of fringe, rose color above maroon. The immense court train was maroon velvet broadened on white satin. The low corsage was square before and behind, and was composed of folds of rose and maroon silk, puffed, and not so short as has been seen in the dresses for some years past. The flowers were of maroon velvet. The price of this consummate piece of workmanship was the modest figure of $500.

CENTENIAL STYLES. Another of Worth's costumes that attracted much notice was a Continental coat of velour trappe, edged with a net work of black chinille, through which knife plaitings of Cardinal silk gleamed. The coat was fastened together in two places in the back with bows of satin faced ribbon, which destroyed the otherwise almost perfect copy of a man's swallow tailed coat. The vest and sleeves were black silk, the cuffs were velvet and silk, edged with the chenille lace over the Cardinal plaitings. There was a long tunic front of velour trappe, trimmed to match the coat. A profusion of plain fine knife plaitings of black silk covered the back breadths, which were of Cardinal silk. As many ladies object to the mainly style of the Continental coat, which Worth has revived for us in this our centennial year, it is not likely that it will become at all common. Indeed, only an artist can produce the perfect cut and fit that this garment requires.

Among the very elegant black velvet costumes is a Princess polonaise, trimmed with a heavy fringe half a yard deep. The sashes are velvet and silk, and the skirt has a saw tooth ruffle of silk on the velvet fan shaped train.

Polonaise continues to be in vogue, and frequently a confection of the same material is worn over the polonaise in the street. Often the polonaise costume is made in one piece, with the back part laid in large plaits, but this was a fashion which many elegant toilets of silk and velvets were made last winter.

Nearly all the elegant dresses have the skirt and overskirt made together, and this is a distinguishing difference between the modistes' work and dresses that are made at home, the deft fingers and skill of the artist alone being able to manage the intricate drapery.

THE TIGHT CORSAGE. The perfection of the art of dress-making has been attained to such a degree that the corsage must fit like wax. From the throat to the bottom of the bodice there must be a soft, graceful curve, unblemished by the slightest shadow of a wrinkle. What the natural form lacks in roundness and symmetry must be supplied by the most wonderful artistic skill. High shoulders must be made to take a graceful droop, narrow chests must be given breadth, until, like the great Rachel's, the contracted, bony, almost deformed chest must be padded and draped and disguised until it takes the lines and curves and fulness of beauty.

In order to produce this perfectly fitting corsage, soft kid, the exact shade of the silk of the dress, is sometimes used, but an accomplished artist can fit the silk as smoothly as the kid. In Paris the leading modistes say that the demand for novelties and exaggerated, impracticable styles is so great, that dress making has become by far the most exacting and difficult of the arts. The restless, eager pursuit of American women of fashion after novel, striking combinations is such as to tax even French ingenuity.

EXTRAORDINARY.—In disproof of the charges of bull-dozing and intimidation in Louisiana, nothing could be stronger than the united testimony of the clergymen of all denominations who have in their address to the people of the United States borne witness to the fact that there never was a more orderly and fair election than that by which Tilden secured the State by nearly ten thousand majority. Furthermore, it is not extraordinary that the aggregate vote of Louisiana shows a large increase over preceding elections, in spite of all the fabrications put forth by the radical returning board?

DEBATING THE MATTER.—The managers of the Centennial Exhibition are still puzzled over that $1,500,000 appropriated by Congress to carry on the enterprise. They have gathered in all the money possible to be realized, even to the proceeds of the sales of the Centennial buildings. The amount on hand, it is estimated, will pay the investors about ninety per cent. on the dollar, if the division is made by counting the government out. If it is taken in, then no more than thirty or thirty five cents to the dollar will be received on the investment.

NEW TESTIMONIALS.—We have thousands of similar testimonials. It earns the public that he now has on hand a full assortment of COFFEINS, which he will sell at greatly reduced prices.
