Throw up the Sponge. Some days ago Robert E. Roosevelt wrote a letter to Mayor Grace, of New York, resigning his position as trustee of the New York and Brooklyn bridge.

When the trouble commenced in 1885, Mr. Davitt was one of the first to respond from America. He was not disheartened by failures, but kept on agitating until he was arrested in London and sentenced to 15 years' imprisonment.

Mr. Davitt is only 37 years of age, but his health is much impaired by his stormy life and imprisonments. His indomitable will is unbroken, however, and he is still a tower of strength to the Irish cause.

When the writer of this article was in Chattanooga at the close of the war, the prospect for anything more than the average Tennessee town was not promising.

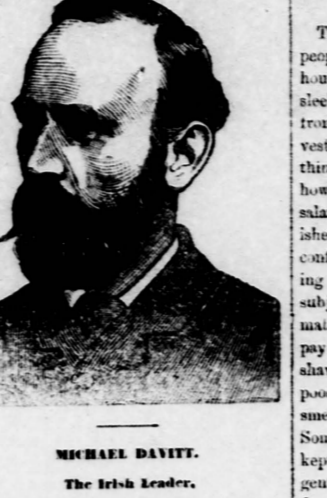

Chattanooga is no better than is that in this valley, the climate is no better, and, with the exception of the presence of iron for manufacturing purposes, Chattanooga has no better advantages than Walla Walla.

Washington county, Pa., produces annually 2,500,000 pounds of wool, worth in cash $1,000,000 for the wool alone.

The construction of the new glucose works at Peoria, Ill., is being pushed forward rapidly. An army of men are employed on the structure, and the first founding will be ready for operating on the new corn crop.

A son of a farmer of Marathon had been admitted into Strathmore Hospital suffering from severe injuries inflicted upon him by an owl. A pair of owls had made their home in an elm tree, and as they made raids on the farmer's chickens to supply the wants of a numerous family of young owls, one of the farmer's sons ascended the tree and secured two of the young ones, and kept them for some days, feeding them by hand.

Philadelphia turns out $1,000,000 worth of stoves annually and gives employment to 12,000 persons in that business. More land is to be planted to tobacco in Wisconsin this year than ever before.

It is estimated that from 300,000 to 400,000 pounds of grapes will be shipped from the vineyards in the vicinity of Chattanooga, Tenn., the coming season.

Washington county, Pa., produces annually 2,500,000 pounds of wool, worth in cash $1,000,000 for the wool alone.

The manufacture of textile fabrics in Maine is said to be rapidly increasing, as well as the ship-building interests.

There is no reason why all our farmers should have a patch of cantaloupes for family use. A plot of ground forty by forty feet would be enough for a moderate sized family, and it is not to spare the fruit land that they can raise for export to any found in the city markets.

How Congressmen Dress. The republicans are the best dressed people both in the senate and in the house. They have better kept beards, sleek faces, and look as though they had from two to five dollars change in their vest pockets.

The Giteau Hanging. In addition to the STATESMAN'S report of the Giteau execution, the telegraph brings the following features: Some crank belonging to the Young Men's Christian Association requested the body of the assassin to exhibit for the benefit of that order.

The last act of the assassin was the reading of his dying prayer. 'MY DYING PRAYER ON THE GALLOW.' Father, now I go to Thee and the Saviour. I have finished the work Thou gavest me to do, and I am only too happy to go to Thee.

After an extended correspondence with physicians in most of the counties of his state, he has published a report of diphtheria, in which he classes the disease as contagious and infectious, and demonstrates that it is on the increase—a fact due, in his opinion, to the failure on the part of physicians in recognizing its self-propagating properties.

(Raising his voice to the highest pitch that he could command.) 'Glorry, hallojah! I am with the Lordy.' This closed the chant, and Dr. Hicks gave Giteau his final benediction and farewell, saying: 'God the father be with thee and give thee peace for evermore.'

Attendants pinioned his legs and carefully adjusted the noose about his neck. Mr. Strong placed the black cap over his head, and as he did so Giteau called out 'Glorry, glory, glory!' Instantly the trap was sprung. The body turned partly around, but there was not the slightest perceptible motion of the limbs.

When the body was lowered the black cap was removed and face exposed. About the mouth there was considerable moisture. After the body had been arranged in the coffin Warden Crocker ascended the steps of the scaffold and addressed the crowd, said: 'Those who desired could view the body.' Then a crowd of spectators formed was formed into a line and passed between the scaffold and the wall of the jail and viewed the remains. Some jail officers, two or three physicians and Dr. Hicks stood at the coffin. John Giteau joined this company and fanned his dead brother's face to keep away the flies.

At 1:40 p. m. the lid of the coffin was put in place, and the body borne to the jail chapel, where the physicians who were to make the autopsy were assembled. After the body was taken to the chapel, arrangements were made to let Mrs. Scoville view it.

John W. Giteau said to a reporter just after the execution that he was glad it was over. 'What will be done with the remains?' asked the reporter. 'We will bury him in the jail, where he will be safe,' said Mr. Giteau. 'He will not be taken out of jail.'

In view of the irrefragable fact that the first duty of an American citizen is to his country, there appears to be only a poor appreciation of the legitimate responsibilities that attach thereto, and what may be termed as a clear oversight, that these duties descend to the citizen...

In this city just now there is an apathetic state of affairs with reference to the election next Monday, that certainly ought not to exist in a city like Walla Walla, where so many varied and important questions are certain to present themselves to the members of the city government for adjustment.

Secular and Religious Papers.

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer in noting the enterprise of a church paper at Lewiston, says: "It cannot possibly pay, and the reverend gentleman will soon learn that he has a small elephant on his hands."

And it is very likely that the Intelligencer is correct in its predictions. The religious papers "hardly ever" go to press without a line from the editor complaining because church members do not take the paper, and that they do take many of the secular journals. The reason is obvious.

The Ohio Expedition.

The world is as full of reformers to-day as it was full of stay-at-home generals during the war. When the soldiers were slowly but surely cornering the rebellion, the country at the north was full of wise home-generals, who, with their lazy bodies tilted back in a bar-room chair, their feet elevated against the chimney-jam and half an ounce of navy plug in their mouths, whipped the Southerners every evening.

To-day we have hundreds of reformers, fertile of project for the reform and salvation of the world. One apostle thinks all men should go to farming; another, that no man should buy or sell, that the use of money is a cardinal evil; another, that all the mischief lies in the diet, that we eat and drink damnation; another defends the insects and wants to organize a society for the protection of army-worms, slugs, mosquitoes, and even the busy bed-bug.

But out of all this din and confusion emerges the Ohio crusader, a woman, and her expedition is destruction. Rum, is enemy in the shape of gin-sling, cocktails, or what-not, connected by the bar-keeper, and towards one of these personages in Berlin, in that state, who was until quite recently the prime dispenser or Magnus Apollo of different drinks the cordial dejection of our female Nemesis was directed. For a long time she and her cohorts gathered within the gilded palace, and gently persuaded at him. They wasted any amount of the fervent on him; invested the place with a whole warehouse of easy sobs and tears, but the man whose toes bloomed like a rutabaga refused to surrender. Failed in this, the sisters betook themselves to the policy of Richelieu. In other words, all means to conciliate having petered they determined to crush. The sisters tightened their belts, spit on their hands, waded in and thoroughly demolished the saloon-man's apparatus. Of course he went over to a lawyer, and the foolish virgins had to pounce. The great mistake of these people is, that destruction will win. Humanity refuses to be thumped.

The extent of the sale of obscene literature is best shown in the reply of a man arrested with the address of 50,000 girls and boys in his possession. "I have been offered $5,000 for my list."

The Oregonian proprietors have concluded to adopt the ancient feature of a society department. It will probably be the best edited feature in that paper, no matter how poorly it is put together.

The Washington Standard is thoroughly in favor of a press association, and says of the STATESMAN'S proposition: "The suggestion should meet with a hearty response from all members of the press-gang."

The report of the Central New Jersey railway accident, which reached here late Saturday evening, was much exaggerated. It was reported that fully one hundred were killed and wounded, among others, Grant. There were several people killed outright, many will die from their injuries received, and others be crippled for life. Grant was only slightly injured.

The intellectual toast who runs the Palouse Gazette and has earned the right to make a fool of himself on every occasion, uses up half a column in the weak endeavor to prove that the O. R. & N. Co. do not intend to give Colfax the go-by. The STATESMAN simply stated the fact that the surveyors had found and adopted a line via Endicott to Moscow, without touching Colfax, and it is hardly probable that the Gazette has influence enough to move a single peg set by these gentlemen. The youth is also referred to the incorporation article of the Columbia and Palouse railway company, which does not choose to take in Colfax, the Gazette growls to the contrary.

Last Saturday afternoon Guitau was buried in the northeast corner of the jail, and, so far as known to the contrary, his remains will lie there undisturbed by any future sepulchre. Under the law the disposition of the bodies of criminals who are executed rests within the discretion of the warden. In the case of Guitau, his sister, Mrs. Scoville, was without means and could not have undertaken his burial expenses, even if she was permitted to do so. The only other relative who has appeared on the scene is his brother, John W. Guitau, who was unwilling to assume the risk of taking charge of the remains, believing that he would be powerless to prevent body snatchers from stealing them. General Crocker resolved to bury the assassin's body within the walls of the jail, where it would be beyond reach alike of vengeance or speculation. The northeast corner, in which Guitau is buried, is upon the opposite side of the rotunda from the one in which he was hung and from the window of the cell in which he was confined, one can look down upon his grave. The brick floor was removed this morning, a grave seven feet deep was dug and at four o'clock that afternoon the coffin containing Chas. J. Guitau was born from the chapel up to the shoulders of six jail prisoners and without any service or ceremony whatsoever was lowered into the grave and buried from sight.

CHARLES JULES GITEAU. Executed at Washington, D. C. on the 30th day of June, 1882, for the Assassination of President Garfield.

How Garfield Looks.

Gen. Sherman of Iowa, who, visiting at Elmira, N. Y., said to a reporter there the other day: "I saw President Garfield a day or two ago in Cleveland. You need not look astonished; I really saw him—not his spirit, but his own form and features. I had visited the tomb to do homage to the spot where the martyr President was sleeping. The watchman in charge, on learning whence I came and who I was, asked me if I would like to see the President. I was as greatly surprised as you can be. He simply showed me that he was in earnest, invited me into the tomb, unscrewed the lid from that sacred casket, and there lay G. A. Garfield before me just as he looked the day of his funeral—as if in a weary, unrefreshing sleep. I was surprised, for, despite the emanation of those noble features, I was at once struck with their likeness to the General as I had seen him alive. I presume that years will pass ere the preserving traces of the ex-president's work will have been removed from all that is left on earth of Garfield."

A reporter of the Herald, with the above extract in hand, visited Lake View Cemetery to make an inquiry in regard to the matter and learn if it was true that the remains of the dead President had been exposed to view even to satisfy the curiosity of the Governor of Iowa. The sexton, being interrogated about the matter, said it was true that Governor Sherman had been allowed to view the remains of the dead, but that he had nothing to say or do in the case. The keys of the vault were in possession of Lieut. Van Vleet of the Tenth United States Infantry, the officer in charge of the detail of soldiers guarding the tomb, and the Lieutenant opened the gate of the vault, unscrewed the lid that covers the glass plate set into the top of the coffin, and allowed Gov. Sherman and party to view the remains.

A Texas Cloud-Burst.

Some ten or twelve days since Captain Merrill's corps of engineers and assistants were encamped in the valley of Buck creek, in Childers county, Texas. Their tents were set 100 feet from the dry bed of the creek. This creek was about twelve feet deep from the level of the valley on either side of the bank. The valley is nearly a mile wide, but the high lands curved in close to the place where the camp was pitched, and the valley widened on the opposite bank. The night was clear and no cloud in the distance betokened a rainfall. The boys staked their horses near by, turned their mules loose, and laid down to rest in their tents. About midnight one of the boys felt water at his feet. Sprung up he saw the water coming, and yelling like a wild savage giving his war-whoop, roused his companions. In less than a minute they were all standing in water up to their waists. Knowing to which side of them was a hill, they rushed wildly through the water and succeeded in gaining a safe foothold. The water rushed by them, covering the valley to a depth of six feet and carrying away their tents and baggage. The pony was saved by one of the boys cutting the stake-ropes as he passed him, he fortunately having gone to bed with his pants on. Most of the boys were in their night clothes, and a solemn set they were. The sudden rise of water was undoubtedly caused by what is known as a cloud-burst on the head of the stream, some twenty or thirty miles away. Any number of cattle were carried down stream, but most of them finally escaped.

An Electric Icestorm.

Texas is a country of marvels. Wonderful things are constantly happening. Strange stories are told and strange truths are developed. A week ago a cloud a little larger than a man's hand passed over the Big Wichita valley, eighteen miles north of us. It lingered but a moment, yet in that moment unheard-of things transpired. It did not hail, but there dropped electric ice. Pieces of ice five inches in diameter, fifteen inches around, were hurled from the upper realms, dashing upon the ground like cannon balls from heavy artillery. Dozens of pieces were gathered up and weighed and found to run from fifteen to twenty ounces. One piece broke through the new pine shingle roof on Tom Gee's house, and descending went through the pine ceiling over the sitting-room. At another house, Colonel Whaley's, we believe, a piece struck the stove-pipe projecting from the roof and cut it off as smooth as could have been done by an immense cleaver. A number of sheep on Stine Brothers' ranch were killed, and we have heard of a few cattle having their legs broken. Fortunately there were but one or two pieces to the acre fall. Had they fallen in numbers like hailstones usually come, the entire district would have been one vast ruin; a mingled heap of animal and vegetable life gone out.

County Assessor's Report. This morning Assessor Samuel Jacobs affixed his affidavit to the assessment rolls of the county of Walla Walla and transmitted them to the auditor.

At sundown on the third, which came gratefully to our sweltering population, dark clouds loomed up in the west and southwest, and hundreds of curious weather prophets declared that we were to have the annual Fourth of July storm.

Not only a vast amount of labor has been required of the assessor in the preparation of these rolls, but exceptionally good judgment and firmness in the valuation of all kinds of property.

Election Notice. Notice is hereby given that a general election will be held in the several wards of the City of Walla Walla, Washington Territory, on the Driftwood From Sunday.

A large proportion of the music-loving population of Walla Walla, slept late Sunday morning, or if they awakened early, it was to lie prone, and recall the marvelous playing of the Liszt Tarantella in E flat, or the vocalizing tones of the piano in Saint-Saens' "Romance" of Mme. Rive-King at Saturday night's concert.

One of the features of Saturday night's concert was its peculiar grouping, and upon inquiry at the box office, we find that it was pre-arranged. For instance, three physicians almost joined elbows. Half a dozen lawyers were collected together, as many people engaged in business as a business set near each other.

A Chance for a Woolen Mill.

The agitation of the question of a woolen mill here in Walla Walla is in some way attracted the attention of a firm in the business located in Missouri, and by last evening mail, we received the following letter which explains itself:

BUTLER, Mo., June 22, 1882. EDITOR STATESMAN, Walla Walla, W. T. Dear Sir: Enclosed I send you $1.00 for which please send the WEEKLY STATESMAN and oblige. I am anxious to know the territory, its advantages, resources and outlook for the near future.

This is the second letter of this nature received at this office within a month. These gentlemen have determined upon the removal of the machinery to some point in this territory; that much has been determined upon. Would it not be wise for some of our citizens interested in forwarding this enterprise, to enter into correspondence with these gentlemen, and ascertain what they have to offer in the way of machinery?

Medical Society.

The fact that our physicians have made the initial step towards the formation of a medical society will be received with pleasure. The physician of the family antedates the minister and shares equally the honors of pedigree with the lawyer. That of medicine is a noble calling, the physician coming into the closest personal relations with men and having for its object the alleviation of pain and physical suffering; and any movement that is made for the benefit of the race, by either working out those who have no legitimate right to the confidence of the public, or by bringing forward elements to contribute to the knowledge of the "family doctor," in a general or special sense, will meet a hearty response from the public.

The secretary was instructed to write all qualified regular practitioners to be present at that time, and to inform them that this society will act under the rules of the American Medical Association. The secretary was authorized to sign the names of the physicians present to the invitation. Adjourned to date special d.

H. F. McCORMACK, M.D., Secretary. H. G. MAZEY, M.D., Chairman. The attention of physicians will naturally be directed to the requirements embodied in the above proposition. The most cordial invitation is extended to the physicians at Milton, Weston, Pendleton, Fossil, Dalles, Dayton, Sprague, other outside places and Walla Walla to attend the called meeting.

The New School Building.

Mr. F. P. Allen, the architect, has completed the drawings for the new school house, and has until the meeting of the board on Monday evening to make his estimates as to cost. We take it as highly creditable to Mr. Allen, that the committee appointed for the purpose, after visiting Portland and other places with a view of selecting a plan, came back, and adopted that made by our architect.

The question of material for the school building appears to be pretty generally agreed upon, and it is to be hoped that it will be more fully considered. As to the matter of expense. It was an error that the figure was not made $25,000 instead of $17,000, since it is evident now, that the first sum would have been raised as easily as the last named. The assessment for the first district amounts to $2,441,520, which at 8 mills on the dollar gives $19,532. Allowing about ten per cent for collection, etc., and the total remains something over the sum applied as to the cost of the building. Mr. Allen is of the opinion that this school building can be erected for about $20,000, using brick as the material. If that is true, and there is no doubt of it, the question of material ought to be reconsidered before making a final decision. The determination to dump the whole thing into "because others have done it." Portland builds of wood because of the prevailing dampness there. San Francisco builds of wood because that will withstand earthquake shocks. All over the eastern states they build brick because the school houses can thus be made safer, more healthful, and more greatly add to the thrifty and enterprising appearance of the town. If this school house can be built of brick for $20,000, or even a thousand or two more than that, it should be done, even if there is a small debt remaining. The question of insurance is something. For one year the insurance on a wooden structure will be $15 per $1,000 of the cost. On a brick building it will be $8. Upon a three-year policy there will be a saving of $140 per year. This is a saving worth the consideration of the gentlemen of the school board. A brick school house will add materially to the appearance of our city, and our citizens will take a pride in pointing it out to visitors.

Mr. Allen's plans are 92 by 35 feet. There will be four school rooms 25 by 30. The school will be 16 feet in height. In each school room there are five single and two double windows. Besides this ventilation and light, rest-rooms will be placed in the base boards, and the hot air will go through these tubes leading to a ventilator in the comb of the roof. This is the system adopted in Portland, and there, thermometers placed within three feet of the floor, and the ceiling do not vary two degrees. The main hall will be fifteen feet, and the stairs leading to the upper floor, 5 feet wide. The porches at the entrance will be 5.12 feet and 4 feet wide. The basement will be 5 feet in the clear, and here will be located the furnace for heating. The school rooms will be supplied with wide entrance doors and windows back of the teacher's desks. These plans will probably be accepted, and the decision as to material made Monday evening.

Prospects for the Harvest.

The dry weather, continuing so long, has ruined the prospect for any crop whatever, in a few localities in Eastern Oregon, where the soil is of a very light nature, but take the whole country throughout, from Pendleton in Unadilla county, to Pataha City, in Garfield county, and the grain everywhere looks tolerably fair in spite of the many drawbacks such as the extremely late spring and rainless season. Yet, in every instance that has come under our observation, where the grain has been put in and the ground prepared with anything like care, the yield will be a fair average. More wheat was allowed to volunteer for the present harvest than ever before, and this is what will suffer more than any other. The volunteer system is shameful, and our farmers do not act with their usual wisdom when they allow their fields to raise grain for three and even more years in succession, without putting it into the plow. Within three miles of this city we know of a large field where this system (if such it may be called) has resulted in the land actually being covered with a tough sod and yet wheat is yet growing upon it. And in Unadilla county where so much new virgin soil has been broken for the first time in the past three years, we have not only the third crop in succession raised from the first crop which was harvested in on the sod. This soil is now lying under a pine tree, large and as hard as an apple, and still without growing on it and the owner of the soil is hundreds of acres away from the place preparing still more land for cultivation. These are the class of men who will suffer by the drought this season, and it is well that they should be warned in advance, first as to the fact that they will suffer, and secondly as to the means of avoiding it.

What We Must do to be Saved.

A baby who is an earnest advocate of the cause of the "sickly" in the STATESMAN, writes as the appended letter: DEAR SIR:—The exercise that I think best adapted to develop all parts of the body in a natural, healthy manner, is domestic labor. That is the most natural kind of calisthenics. It is always at hand; it can be taken daily as a steady diet, and in such an infinite variety of ways that every muscle can be exercised, every one be tested fully. Household should never be considered menial or degrading. I've commenced it in Paradise, and it is labor's laboratory, in which the young girl may not only obtain the best of physical development, but most valuable knowledge that will fit her for the practical duties of life. This training may be, as you have suggested, supplemented by other kinds of exercise, such as walking, driving and out-door sports, but it should not be de-stayed by them. The general introduction of foreign help into our domestic service, especially the filthy-baby! Chinese man, has proved most unfortunate for the health of American women and girls. And now let me in this connection say that allied to this neglect of physical training at home is the evil, and one of magnitude, of supreme decision to brain work. That the practice, pursued very generally at the present day, of confining girls in schools or seminaries for a series of years consecutively, is attended with most serious evils. In the words of a popular writer, it is "educating our girls to death." While I would not advocate the discarding of education in all its various departments extending to a higher culture, I maintain that it is no advantage or blessing if all this is obtained at the expense of the physical system. Other parts of the body need training, and the highest accomplishments will not compensate for impaired constitutions and poor health. Hoping these random thoughts may find space, I am, Respectfully Yours, ALMA.

Mr. Smalley.

Mr. E. V. Smalley, who is published as the accredited correspondent of the Century Magazine, and who has given out that the Scribner people, in sending him out to write a series of articles for their descriptive of the Northwest, are not actuated by the narrow motives governing the advertising street, nor has any one outside the editorial department any selfish or personal interest in this work, has come and gone. He remained here one day and was most pleasantly entertained by citizens. It was not possible that a gentleman of his ability as a journalist, or one so accredited, should visit Walla Walla without creating some anxiety among business men as to what impressions of this section he had laid away for a leisure moment of writing; as to his attitude toward this part of the Northwest. That little in the interest of this city and its surrounding, except so far as that can be made tributary to Portland, need be expected, from E. V. Smalley seems to us very much assured. Portland is the most natural thing in the world that Mr. Smalley should come over the Northern Pacific; that he should come down the Palouse belt, and in order to get to Portland by rail, take a short day in this city, but people will be loth to believe that it is perfectly in keeping with the advertised character of his work that he should in answer to the propositions of Astoria, Seattle and other Sound points as site for a Northwest metropolis, invariably offer Portland as possessing everything needful. That it is barely possible Mr. Smalley has studied Portland as a metropolis from a citizen's view, and continually presents itself to the citizen's eye. It may be only a suspicion that grows out of a sensitive feeling on this subject, and Mr. Smalley may write strongly and impartially in Walla Walla's favor. His September article will tell best. Mr. Smalley drops the opinion that the Northern Pacific folks made a mistake in locating from Astoria east, instead of taking Lewiaton as the route. He seems to be inclined to the opinion that the line will be shifted some time in the future. When Mr. Smalley comes to write of us, if he does at all, we shall be likely to go before the world as wholly destitute of such hotel accommodations as are sought for by first-class travelers. It will not be a very sorry reputation for such a large and enterprising city as Walla Walla, but we shall have to endure it until a first-class house is erected and put into operation.
