Journalistic Missions.

It is surprising how many persons there are who have—in their minds—journalistic missions. They are generally attached to advertising dodgers to which they affix high-sounding names, and, out of which they scrape a bare living. The smaller circulation of this dodger, and the lesser advertising patronage it gets, the louder brags the man with a mission.

He imagines himself infallible in his judgment of what a newspaper should be. He does not give the public credit for being able to judge of literary efforts as presented in the newspaper. The beam of persistently soliciting advertisements for his dodger, never gets between him and the light in the eye of the real journalist.

Soliciting advertisements for a newspaper is as legitimate as going around the country buying beef cattle, and the man with the mission doubtless understands this, so far as his dodger is concerned. But he cannot bear the idea of success attending the labors of another, in this direction. And then the man, whose duty it is to correct journalism, is alarmed because the non-fide journal is gaining influence in the community, and he is melted to tears lest capital grind labor, or the influence be used wrongfully, as the man with the mission judges.

We might say to these young men who imagine that they have a journalistic mission, that there are more ways than one of removing a stone wall, and, perhaps the most foolish way to attempt removal is by butting one's head against it.

The man who establishes himself in a community, and neglects his business to reform everything else, will soon be rated as a fool. There is a great deal of error and wronging in this world, but the contract to remove it is an immense one for a man whose ability is only equal to an advertising jobber.

Getting Nervous.

Labored under the erroneous impression that his utterances in the local or territorial political arena, have some slight influence, the Union begins to talk about the impropriety and bad principle of a third term in local office holding. The Union is getting nervous, because it is letting its personal aversion and dislike get the better of what little journalistic judgment it may possibly be credited with. We truly understand the Union's motives, and in due time shall take occasion to explain it to this public.

As to the third term in local office holding, there is neither impropriety nor bad principle in it, and most of those who oppose it do so because they are opposed to it; they cannot give the color of reason or justice for any such article of political faith. Probably we shall have the argument of nepotism against our local office holders, and he sharply reminded by the Union that our sheriff, probate judge and some other officials have brother-in-laws and other relatives. Of course this is a grave offense and no man should be a probate judge or sheriff whose brother-in-law's father's brother-in-law's sister has married the brother-in-law's grand uncle's brother-

An Unfortunate City.

For some time it has been up and tuck between Boston and its neighbor Fall River in the production of defalcations among its gilt-edged business men. For while Fall River produced more embe-zlers than cotton cloth. Preaching was in vane, and people waited in amazement to see what would come next. But Boston, not to be outdone, has produced a couple of disgraced bank cashiers and a deputy treasurer of a missionary society.

He was a most pious member of the church, and, as it appears, an energetic theist. He was noted for his devotion to the cause of missions and to business which now appears to have been stealing.

He had the longest and most devout face in Boston, his cravat the whitest, his hal-lucelush the most unctuous. He had no voices—on the surface. He was temperate. His life appeared to be consecrated to the advancement of religion among the Hottentots. In and out of season he seemed capable of eternal violence in behalf of the gospel and his own territorial benefit. He was head usher at a fashionable church and the lover of a multitude of sisters. He engineered a Sunday school, and probably never missed a prayer meeting, unless there were two many of them on the same evening for him to make connections—or he was too busy posting up two sets of books, one for the eye of the Board of Mission managers, the other to tell him of his stealings. He spent his Sundays at church and the balance of the week stealing funds donated by Sunday school children for the missionary schools.

Nothing is more dangerous than the apathy of society with regard to such crimes as this. Indeed, such are the maxims of society with reference to these gilt-edged thieves, that a man has little credit for conscientiousness. To be governed by a sense of duty rather than self-interest, is seemingly regarded by the world as an extravagance of devotion; and to be deterred by conscientious scruples from seizing advantages within reach, as fanaticism and folly. It is not hard to find men who have a feeling of contempt for him who lets opportunities of fortune slip on such frivolous pretexts as principles. Thus men excuse themselves in dishonesty.

Art in Assassination.

A terse dispatch comes from Waco down in Texas; Mr. Delmar was offended by the presentation of a bill for a month's board. His friends calmed him by saying "pay the bill but shoot the clerk. Remember, sir, that you are a gentleman."

Mr. Delmar did not forget for a moment that he was a gentleman. Doubtless he was polite to the judge who ordered his release. He probably thanked the sheriff for his courtesy, and shook hands with

The Destruction of the Democratic Party.

The Olympia Standard, in its last issue, very severely criticizes the ways and means employed by the Republican party to compass the destruction of the Democratic faction in this country.

The true teaching of politics in this country, is, that there must be some element in the party which can lay hold upon popular imagination.

Get Out of the Way.

We are given to understand that a citizen of Walla Walla, who, unfortunately—as it seems—for the best interests of the city, owns a ranch on the proposed route of the railroad, between this place and Pendleton, has made up his mind to consult his selfish interest at the expense of his fellow citizens, by demanding for a narrow strip through his ranch, as much nearly as the whole place is worth.

When the road was projected, an enterprise, from which this city is to reap almost inestimable benefits, we supposed that every citizen was so fully identified with it that there would be a universal effort in its behalf.

Getting Fat. He gets fat who gets oleomargarine is gospel truth, yet those who have been providing a grease substitute for milk butter, and clinching the sale of it with affirmations that it is the sweetest results of the churn, have been holding a banquet in New York, the object of which is to convince certain Congressmen that it is their duty to naturalize oleomargarine, to protect it from the challenges of those who assert that to peddle the stuff is an unnatural crime.

At the recent semi-centennial celebration in Buffalo, the Mayor called to remembrance "the name of Joseph Darr, the modest and unassuming man who in 1843 devised and erected in Buffalo the first elevator of grain ever built in the world."

A Mr. Gotch has started as a rival to Oscar Wilde, and is drawing crowds to his aesthetic lectures in London. He pronounces the present male attire idiotic, condemns hat, coat and vest, and reserves special bitterness for trousers. He goes in for knickerbockers and stockings, no shirt fronts, no coat tails, and no pockets.

BRENTS' speech on Washington Territory, made to the type-setters in the Congressional Globe office, appears to be an inexhaustible source of fun to journalists. Like Proctor Knott's Deluth oration, this speech of Brents' will live in history.

JUSTICE HALLAN in the Federal Court of Illinois has just rendered a decision of interest to all foreign-born citizens. It was in the case of a young man indicted for illegal voting. Justice Harlan found that—"The parents of the indicted man, were subjects of Prussia, where the father died in 1815, at which time the son was only seven years of age. His mother came to the United States, bringing the boy with her, and in 1865 she married a naturalized citizen of the United States, Justice Harlan decided that the mother upon this marriage became a citizen of the United States as fully as if she had been herself naturalized, and that the son, being a minor and dwelling in this country when his mother married, became, by virtue of her marriage with a naturalized citizen, himself a citizen. The contention of the government was that the son could not vote except on complying with section 217 of the Revised Statutes of the U. S. relating to naturalization. This view was, however, overruled by the Justice, upon the ground that section has no application to the case of a resident foreign born minor who became a citizen by force of his mother's marriage to a citizen. The accused was therefore, discharged honorably from imprisonment."

Telegraphic Clicks.

Hecker & Co.'s great flour mills in New York, were burned on the 31st. Loss half a million, and 500 men out of work.

In consequence of rejection by the chamber of the motion for a vote, the original movement of French troops and fleet is stopped. Admiral Courat, commanding the French fleet in Egyptian waters, is ordered to maintain strict neutrality.

With one exception, no congress since the war has remained in continuous session so long as the present one. The exception was the first session of the forty-fourth congress, which lasted until late in August, 1876. Even now it is impossible to state whether it will adjourn in one, two or three weeks.

A telegram from Denver dated August 1st says: The National Mining Exposition opened to-day at 12 o'clock. Nearly every western state was represented. Military from Leadville and other towns in the state participated in the opening exercises and the city was crowded with strangers. Hon. Wm. D. Kelly of Pennsylvania made the opening address.

The refusal of Italy to co-operate with England in putting down Arabi Pasha may be taken as representing the attitude of Germany and Austria. High authorities at Berlin assert Russia is about to quit her passive attitude in favor of and with Gladstone's reported declaration that England under certain circumstances would undertake the task of restoring order in Egypt.

A cablegram from Alexandria, dated August 1, says: There are troops enough here to hold Alexandria against any attack by Arabi Pasha, though scarcely enough to drive the enemy back to Cairo. Arabi has organized a committee of five officers in Cairo to prepare for defence. Many peaceful natives have been arrested for lukewarmness in Arabi's cause. No hope of good result from negotiations between the Khedive and Arabi Pasha.

The British ambassador has again sent the secretary of legation to ask the Sultan to issue a proclamation denouncing Arabi Pasha as a rebel, and the secretary at the same time gave the sultan a conciliatory explanation, stating England did not aim at a protectorate over Egypt. He also asked for particulars concerning the composition of the Turkish expedition to Egypt. The Sultan gave no satisfactory answer, but stated, however, he is irritated at England's action, and has sent verbal messages through the secretary that he would do nothing for England but would only yield to the wishes of Europe.

We quote from a late edition of "Hyle's Political Etiquette": Candidates before sacrificing themselves upon their country's altar will appear before the dear people clothed in the regulation smile, unlimited in breadth, with cheek cut full and slightly projective. In shaking hands a firm hold is needed, and in some instances it may be necessary to take a half hitch on a stout button-hole. Beyond this no other means of detention are recommended by this code. The old method of catching the suffragan around the neck is now only practiced in the districts where the prohibition act is in vogue, and where energetic measures have to be adopted. A very noticeable feature of this edition of Hyle are the lines appearing upon the margin of each page: "Candidates must not forget to invest largely in printer's ink—verbum sap." Which last means, "and don't you forget it," or words to that effect.

Men of the Hour.

GENERAL LEWIS WALLACE.

The present trouble in Egypt, intimately associated as it is with the interests of Turkey, has brought into particular prominence the name of General Lewis Wallace, our representative at Constantinople, who has had frequently of late, the honor of private conferences with the Sultan. General Wallace is an able man, experienced in both war and Government, and distinguished himself as a soldier during the civil war. He is, moreover, a novelist and dramatic writer of acknowledged ability, but has not given that prominence to his literary work which its qualities merit.

He was born at Brookville, Franklin Co., Indiana, on the 10th of April, 1827, the son of Governor David Wallace. He was reading law when the Mexican war broke out, and when volunteers were called for, gave up his books for the tented field. After the war, he began the practice of the law at Covington, Indiana, from whence he removed to Crawfordsville. Between then and the beginning of the civil war, he served on terms in the Senate of Indiana. His first position in the Federal army, was that of adjutant-general of Indiana. He was afterwards made colonel, in which capacity he commanded at Romney.

He forced the Confederates to evacuate Harper's Ferry. Soon a brigadier-general, as such he led a division at the capture of Fort Donelson. For this distinguished service he was made major-general. He fought at Shiloh, saved Cincinnati from capture, and prevented Early's capture of Washington, by fighting the battle of Monocacy, Md., July 9th, 1864, which resulted in his defeat, but gave General Grant time to reinforce the Capital from City Point. General Halleck having deprived him of his command after this action, General Grant reinstated him, and acknowledge in handsome terms the obligation which the country owed him in the saving of its capital city from capture. General Wallace acted as president of the commission appointed to investigate General Bull's operations in Tennessee and Kentucky. He was a member of the court which tried the persons alleged to have been in complicity with Wilkes Booth, in the murder of President Lincoln, and presided at the trial of Captain Wertz at Andersonville. After these exciting events the General resumed the practice of the law at Crawfordsville. He was subsequently Governor of New Mexico and is now in Constantinople.

The man in the moon is one of the most popular, and perhaps one of the ancient superstitions in the world. The name is given to the dark lines and spots upon the surface of the moon, which are visible to the naked eye. Some say that these lines and spots are the figure of a man leaning on a fork, on which he carries a bundle of thorns or brushwood, for taking which on Sunday he was confined in the moon. Some of those versed in such lore, explain that this theory undoubtedly had its origin in the incident recorded in the fifteenth chapter of the book of Numbers, thirty-second verse. With the Italians, Cain appears to have been the offender. The Jews have some Talmudical story that Jacob is in the moon, and they believe his face is visible. Bishop Wilkins wrote that "as the forms of these spots, some of the vulgar think they represent a man, and poets guess 'tis the boy Eudymion, whose company she loves so well that she carries him with her; others will have it only to be the face of a man, as the moon is usually pictured; but Albertus thinks rather that it represents a lion, with his tail towards the east, and his head to the west; and some others have thought it to be much like a fox; and certainly it is as much like a lion as that in the Zodiac, or as Cass Major is like a bear."

A cure for drunkenness was discovered by Capt. John Vine Hall, of the steamship Great Eastern, a brother of the Rev. Newman Hall. He became such a habitual drunkard that all his efforts to regain his former sobriety had failed. The receipt is as follows: Sulphate of iron, five grains; magnesia, ten grains; peppermint water, eleven grains; spirits of nutmeg, one drachm; to be taken twice a day. This acts as a tonic and a stimulant, and has become a medicine in general use in England, by which thousands annually have been assisted to recover themselves, and resume their former station in society. Let every man who has become the slave of a debasing appetite, cut this out and keep it for his own bodily restoration. The iron acts as a tonic, and strengthens the shattered nerves, while the peppermint water serves as a gentle stimulant to quicken the enervated appetite.

Some young men of Hays City, Kansas, found diversion in teasing a dying old tramp. When he feebly defended himself, they beat him, throw him into a mud hole, and left him to die alone.

John S. Prince, of Boston, rode a bicycle fifty miles in 2 hours, 59 minutes, and 15 seconds, beating the American record.

Where birds fly very little their feathers never acquire or else soon lose their distinctive quill-like character.

The death is announced of Edward Arthur Wellington, second baron of Keau, aged 68.

Short-Stops at other Editorial Rooms.

The editor of the Glendive (Montana) Times has this sketch of a mighty hunter lately seen in that region: "He was alone and on foot, wore a linen duster, a plug hat, and carried an umbrella. He was hunting deer and antelope."

The Northern Pacific graders are within a mile of Helena, Montana. A few days ago, says the Post-Intelligencer, James McNaught, of Seattle, sold ten feet of ground in that city for $3,000. The local of the Astorian, speaking of Walla Walla's lack of hotel accommodations, says: "How differently we do these things in Astoria. Lots and lots of folks here over here, just to get a chance to stop at one of our Astoria hotels."

Mullan tunnel is the greatest of Montana. It is already 810 feet long. The white-sarke young business men of Miles City, Montana, set an example for the same class here. They have formed a building association to erect residences and sell them on the installment plan.

The water in Clark's Fork, at Rock Island, is 180 feet deep, and the N. P. R. R. people will have to use barges on which to place the supports for the bridge.

The town of Cabinet Landing is on its travels. It moved five miles last week. The editor of the Inter-Mountain lost $300 a year in advertising because he used an "h" instead of a "k," in writing about ladies' undergarments, that are worn next to the epidermis.

The editor of the Baker City Tribune says the Oregon Short Line bridge across Snake river will be commenced this month. The bridge is to be located about 800 feet above the mouth of the Burnt river. From a private source we also learn that some three hundred or more men will commence grading at the river in September next, and the work will continue without intermission, weather permitting, until completed.

The editor of the New Northwest says: The Northern Pacific advertises in the Missoulian for the resumption of trade between Missoula and the Pacific Coast, claiming that in August, 1882, the railroad will be completed so far that freight will be delivered in twenty-five miles less wagon haul than from Butte. Freight from Portland to Thompson's river, the terminus, is 22 cents, and the same from Thompson's river to Missoula.

A correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial, writing from here, says: The character of the immigration to this section is excellent. The people are largely of original New England stock—active, intelligent and hardy. The church, the school and the newspaper are well supported—the town of Walla Walla, five thousand inhabitants, for instance, having two dailies. Land can be had cheap, the prices varying, of course, with regard to location on present or proposed routes of travel. Inquiry should be addressed to the local real estate men, as the Portland operators knew very little about outside property.

ON OR ABOUT SEPTEMBER 1 DOHENY & MARUM. Will remove to the vast establishment now being erected for them on Main street, just above the Post-Office.

DOHENY & MARUM. Propose to enter their new building with new goods only. Not a vestige of their old stock will be carried away from their present establishment. Summer Goods of every description will be swept away alike regardless of their cost or present value.

DOHENY & MARUM. That's Our Motto Now. ON MONDAY, JULY 17, We shall Inaugurate a REMOVAL SALE. On a magnitude which rarely falls to the lot of the public of any city to witness. No Old Goods to be Carried from our Present Store.

That's Our Irrevocable Purpose. We propose to enter our new building with an entirely new and elegantly selected stock of DRY GOODS, CLOTHING, BOOTS AND SHOES.

Removal and other sales have been so often advertised in this city that the public look with suspicion on all announcements of this city, but the American public are sufficiently intelligent not to confound every random statement with a genuine announcement, for which substantial reasons are given.

We are well aware that we lose considerable money in this sale; we look on that as an inevitable fact, yet we deliberately accept the situation, as we know exactly what we are doing. Our programme now is to dispose of all the goods we have at present on hand and when the people have seen the prices at which we are offering most staple and desirable goods; we don't apprehend any delay on that score.

ONE PRICE. ALL GOODS MARKED IN PLAIN FIGURES. The public know the meaning of this system; it requires no silvered language to tell them that human understanding can suggest no more upright method than this. Goods Sold Only for Cash.

That's the lever of low prices, and on Monday next we will be ready to prove to the people of Walla Walla the truth of the assertions we have made. DOHENY & MARUM, CORNER MAIN & SECOND STREETS, Walla Walla, W. T.
