HARVEST AND VINTAGE.

I dreamed of a marvelous harvest,
I dreamed of a threshing-floor,
Where men, like grain, by angels twain,
Were garnered in measureless store—
All bound in sheaves,
Like corn in the leaves,
And flailed from husk to core.

And the angels sang, with voices sweet,
"Out of the grain the dross we beat,
Out of the chaff we winnow the wheat—
True souls are the wheat of a nation!"

I dreamed of a wonderful vintage,
I dreamed of a wine-press red,
Where men, like grapes, by angel-shapes,
Were tradden with wrathful tread;
As grapes ye work,
To must and to murk,
And crush them shred by shred.
And the angels same, with tongues divine

And the angels sang, with tongues divine, "Out of the murk the must we fine, Out of the grapes we mellow the wine — Brave hearts are the wine of the nation! I would that my dreams were real—
That angels this land might beat,
And sceurge our sod with the flails of God,
And scatter the chaff from the wheat;
And schedulette middle of the chaff from the wheat;

And mightily tread, In our wine-press red, All dross beneath their feet! That our souls might sing, in joyous strain, "Out of the chaff the wheat we gain, Out of the murk the wine we drain.—
The wheat and the wine of the nation!"

There is no innect more thoroughly objectionable than the bee. It is even more disgustingly active than the ant. At the first dawn of day the bee sets off to hunt CORNER OF FOURTH AND MAIN STREETS, for honey, and continues at that sticky occupation until night. So far as is known, the bee receives no salary whatever, but works either to pamper the pride of a fat and useless queen, or because it is a prey to a miserly passion for heaping up honey. In the former case the bee deserves the contenant of all free men, and in the latter it displays a leathsome mental and moral degredation. In either case the bee's willingness to do unnecessary work is an insult to intelligent human beings. Scientific persons are fond of telling us knowledge, and parade in proof thereof

If these were really intelligent insects, If these were really inteligent insects, and knew the comparative value of wax and knew the comparative value of wax and honey, they would build cells holding a pound of honey each, and thus enable a human being to eat honey without at the same time filling up the interior of his person with wax. This simple plan has person with wax. This simple plan way at the hore. Then we would be the friend of that worthy, injured lady. They may be intelligent, but they do not prove it by adhering to a pattern of cell invented by their antediluvian ancestors. To hold up these miserly and wantonly busy insects to the admiration of mankind is a positive. Dr. Watts, who openly forbade all interference with dog fights, was in the constant habit of politely inquiring, "How doth the little busy bee?" thus word. He procured a horsewhip, and treating the little insect with a courtesy which would not be out of place if extended to a Bishop. The pernicious in-fluence of Watts in this matter has been widespread and enduring. It is time that a protest should be made against the bee, and that mankind should henceforth be taught the plain and obvious truth that an insect which spends its whole existence in working and stinging is even more un-worthy of emulation than is the mosquito or book agent. . Coldness of Manner.—There is no way by which friendship may be crushed out of existence as by coldness of manner; hard words are no competitors at all, for they are so often satisfactorily ex-plained. It is frequently said that "like begets like," and we believe that it is often so. If we meet with an acquaintoften so. If we meet with an acquaint-ance who grasps our hand cordially, and gives it a generous and hearty shake, and their countenance lights up with a cheer-ful smile as they utter a pleasant and wel-come salutation, if we are feeling dull and moody, we are, or at least should at once, be ashamed of that feeling, and instantly put forth our energies to disguise and banish it. If, on the contrary, we meet with one who repels our every attempt to be cordial by a studied coolness of manner, we very soon become impervious to any genial feeling for him, and a larger

Of the many crimes committed on the sacred soil of Kentucky there never has been one for romance of incident, chivalry of motive, tragedy of ending, equal to that of the Beauchamp affair. hey went to a retired spot by the river.

The bell at the Mansion House rang for supper.

Beauchamp turned upon Sharpe in a nervons manner and eye sparkling with anger.

"Do you remember the last words Miss Sharpe stood as if transfixed.

"I am the avenger, whom in the spirit of prophesy, she, the last time you ever saw her, warned you would right her wrongs." Sharpe stood still, deigning no reply.

Beanchamp meant to be as goed as his word. He procured a horsewhip, and presuming that Sharpe, surrounded by his friends, would make a show of resistance, provided himself with pistols with which to finish him. Sharpe felt that— "He who fights and runs away, May live to fight another day."

So before break of day he was on his horse en route for Bowling Green. Beauchamp re-turned to his home. Miss Cooke now re-solved to take vengeance in her own hands. Daily she practiced with pistols, till her aim Daily she practiced with pistols, till her aim became deadly. She tried to lure Sharp to her house. He avoided her. Beanchamp refrained from any further attempt on Sharpe's life to give Miss Cooke the oppor-tunity she wished for. It never came, and this desire to kill him herself gave to Sharpe many a day of life. In June, 4824, Beau-champ and Miss Cooke

WERE MARRIED.

MERE MARRIED.

And then he claimed he had the right to assassinate his wife's seducer. Sharpe was now a candidate for the legislature, but his treatment of Miss Cooke added to his unpopularity, so he announced that Miss Cooke's child was the offspring of a negro. He even produced aforged certificate to substantiate this great villainy.

Beauchamp heard the tale, and resolved that Sharpe's hour had come. He went to Frankfort, and, unable to get lodgings at the hotels, passed the night with Scott, the keeper of the penitentiary. Retiring early he prepared for his MIRDERGOES DEED. HIS MURDEROUS DEED.

Instead of shoes he put on yarn stockings. He concealed his face in a red bandanna handkerchief. He secreted a long knife in his boson. Stealthily he crawled unobserved out of his lodgings, and repaired noiselessly to Sharpe's residence. Drawing his darger he knocked.

A KENTUCKY TRAGEDY. "Covington" (a friend of Sharpe's), replied

"Covington" (a friend of Sharpe's), replied Beauchamp.

The door opened and Sharpe appeared, and Beauchamp seized him by the throat, Sharpe trying vainly to escape. Mrs. Sharpe appeared at a rear door. Beauchamp tore off the mask, and thrust his face close to his doomed victim. "Do you know me?" he scoffingly sneered.

Sharpe cried, "Good God, it is he." They were his last words. Beauchamp plunged the dagger deep into his heart, and the blood spurted upon the walls and dabbled the floor.

"Die," Beauchamp said, and he died,

THE HUE AND CRY Was soon raised. The assassin was followed by an eager crowd. Captured and arrested, he was brought back and tried. He was convicted and sentenced to execution. His wife remained was prought back and tried. He was convicted and sentenced to execution. His wife remained with him to the last, and made no attempt to conceal the fact that she instigated and urged on the assassination. She gloried in it, scouting the threat of indicting her as accessory before the act. The night before the execution, she the act. The night before the execution, she procured an ounce vial of laudanum, and persuaded her husband to cheat the gallows if he could. The liquid was divided and she took one half. Then they knelt and prayed. They sang for joy; they shouted that their sins had been forgiven, and in a delirium of ecstasy they aroused the other inmates of the prison. The poison did not work. She swore she would starve herself to death, and be buried in the same coffin with her hasband.

HE WAS EXECUTED He was executed June 5, 1826, a great day in Frankfort. The city was thronged to see the last of J. O. Beauchamp. The ominous black gibbet was erected on a hill-top near by. The drums beat mournful dinges from early dawn. At H o'clock Mrs.
Beauchamp asked the jailor to leave her for a few moments with her husband. The jailor left, but soon heard groans from the cell. He left, but soon heard groans from the cell. He found them weltering in blood.

THEY HAD STABBED THEMSPIVES With a knife the wife had concealed. She soon expired, but his wound was not fatal. He was taken to her bedside, as her life-tide was ebbing fast. He felt her pulse, and said: "Farewell, child of sorrow; farewell, victim of persecution and misfortune! You are now safe from the tongue of slauder. For you I've lived; for you I've." He kissed her lips; he was ready. The blood was trickling from his wounds; he was too weak to stand up, so they laid him in a covered wagon, and drove him to thegallows. He waved his hands to the ladies whose weeping eyes cheered him with sympathy and consolation. They were compelled to help him get on his coffin. He was too weak to sit on it unsupported.

get on his coffin. He was too weak to sit on it unsupported.

"Give me some water. Let the drums beat Bonaparte's Retreat from Moscow." were his last words. They buried the executed husband and the self-murdered wife in the same coffin, folded in each other's arms. Even in death they were not divided. Thegrave is at Bloom-field, Ky, marked by a modest shaft.

THE EXCITEMENT

Over the fate of Beauchamp, and the tragic ending of his wite, has lent to the tragedy a sort of romantic halo; and some years ago W. Gilmore Sims, the southern novelist, wrote a novel entitled "The Beauchamp Tragedy," which was founded on the facts of the case. The Sharpes were wealthy, and partially suppressed the edition, but copies are occasionally seen. A few years ago, John Savage, a New York playwright, worked the leading incidents into a drama, entitled "The Sybil," which he sold to Avonin Jones, the daughter of Count Joannes. The play was performed only twice. A to Avonia Jones, the daughter of Count Jonnes. The play was performed only twice. A son of Sharpe got out an injunction at Louisville against the performance of the piece, and by the aid of George D. Prentice, and the use of "dacats" upon the fair Aronia, succeeded in suppressing it entirely.

Were the tragedy to occur in these days, it is very doubtful if Beauchamp would ever have felt the halter draw.

A MULISH PERFORMANCE.-" Not on the Bills" was a performance at one of the theatres in Nevada. The play of the 'Forty Thieves" was lately presented, but in rather a meagre manner, from the lack of abundant scenery and properties in the far West. When Ali Bada had seen the thieves enter and quit the cave, Peck, in his Fourth of July oration at he went to the wings and brought out a La Crosse, said: It may have been nomule, which, having grave offence at ticed that thus far I have made no allusion something, awaited his opportunity for revenge. No sooner had Ali come out of the cave with his bags of wealth, and at-Attorney-General, I cannot fight you on Miss tempted to put them on the back of the species of poultry occupies on these occabeast, than he began his part of the persons. The poet, allading to the eagle, passionate voice, that sometimes goes with beast, than he began his part of the part out of the bags; kicked down the eavern; kicked down a whole forest; kicked down the wings; kicked in the end of the voil, leaning against the stage; smashed the as a national emblem should have been footlights, and finally doubled up Ali by planting both feet in the pit of his stom-ach. The mule fairly cleared the stage and set the audience into a great roar, the miners laying wagers that he could out kick any mule in the State. The quadruped continued kicking as if he were hung on a pivot, until a rope wasfastened around him and he was dragged off by the united strength of the company.

A DIPLOMATIC ANSWER.—The old man Smith, of Richfield, is a self-sufficient sort of an old fellow, and prides himself upon his riding abilities. One day he espied his young hopeful leading a colt to espied his young hopeful leading a colt to water rather gingerly, and remarked. "Why on earth don't you ride that beast?" "I'm 'fraid to; 'fraid he'd throw me." "Bring that hoss here," snapped the old man. The colt was urged up to the fence, and braced on one side by the boy, while the old man climbed on to the rails and stocked himself on the colt's back. Then he was let go, and the old gentleman rode proudly off. Parthe old gentleman rode proudly on. Par-alyzed by fear, the colt went slowly off for about twenty rods without a demon-stration. Then like lightning his four legs bunched together, his back bowed like a viaduct arch and the old man shot up into the air, turned seven separate and distinct somersaults, and lit on the small of his back in the middle of the road, with both legs twisted around his neck. Hastening to him, the young hopeful very anxiously inquired, "Did it hurt you, pa?" The old man arose slowly, shook the knots out of his legs, brushed the dust from his ears and hair, and rubbing his bruised elbows, growled out, "Well, it didn't do me a dom bit of good. You

He no Sabee.—He was an almond-eyed Celestial who had saved a few dollars by "washee and ironee," and found his way to a chuck-a-luck game last evening, and after witnessing the turns of the dice for a while concluded that it would be a good investment, then dropped half on the deuce, which won. Then he bet on the tray, the ace, the four, with equal success, and his small eyes sparkled as he said, "Me sabee, same Melican man." Then he ventured on the six, the five, but fortune changed. His winnings were gone, and with them his pile, which amounted to about four dollars. "Play them again," said the dealer, while the crowd burst into a laugh at the discomfited Chinaburst into a laugh at the discomfited Chinaman, who left, saying: "No sabee, heap dam fool, four dollee, dam."

The Earliest Newspaper.

To Italy the world is indebted for the rigin of the newspaper. Seven centuries wife you have also won a slave. Don't think that your wife has less feeling than before the Christian era, a journal, called the Acta Diurna, was published at Rome. It was not in the likeness of the printed sheet now left at every intelligent man's door in the early morning; not issued in her you married. She appreciates those copious editions and circulated among the subscribers for a stipulated price. It was a public enterprise, supported by government; and the few copies struck off in the Latin script, on white wooden tablets, were hung at conspicuous points in streets and frequented places in the city, giving the curious passer by the latest intelli-gence of passing events. With the downtall of the empire, journalism perished, and for upward of a thousand wearisome years, was one of the lost and forgotten

By Italian genius it was finally revived again, and Venice was its second birthmodern newspaper of which we bave any wife at home to nurse the chidren, on the knowledge. It was entitled Gazetta, some score of economy, while you bolt down chatterer, others say from the name of a small coin for which it was sold. It was small coin for which it was sold. It was published at Venice once a month, by the government, and continued to be written in script even after printing was invented.

James I, a paper appeared, under the title of the London Weekly Courant. In 1643, the time of the civil war, a variety of other publications, claiming unworthily the office and name of newspaper, were produced; but the first genuine newsournal published in England was established by Sir Roger L'Estrange, in 1665. THE AMERICAN EAGLE.—George W.

"Bird of the broad and fleeting wing, Thy home is high in heaven.

This is too true. He is a high o'd bird, and the committee that selected the eagle as a national emblem should have been on pinions airy, until you see a poor little mouse with one leg broke, and then you swoop down like a ward constable and run him in. You are a nice old bird for a trade-mark for a nation of heroes, you natural to an artificial tone without the trade-mark for a nation of heroes, you old coward. You sit on a rock and watch a peasant woman hanging out clothes, and when she goes in the house to turn the oused, is the mule. There is no bird aroused, is the mule. There is no bird that combines more virtues to the square foot than the mule. With the mule emblazoned on our banners, we should be a terror to the foe. We are a nation of uncomplaining hard workers. We mean to do the fair thing by everybody. We plod along, doing as we would be done by. So does the mule. We as a nation are slow to anger. So is the mule. As a nation we occasionally stick our ears a young woman was walking alone, a man are slow to anger. So is the mule. As a nation we occasionally stick our ears forward and fan flies off our foreheads. So does the mule. We allow parties to get on and ride as long as they believe themselves. So does the mule. But when any nation sticks spurs into our flanks and tickles our heels with a straw, we come down stiff leagued in front our flanks and tickles our heels with a straw, and make leave to be a superstant of the property o forward and fan flies off our foreheads. So does the mule. We allow parties to get on and ride as long as they believed themselves. So does the mule. But when any nation sticks spurs into our flanks and tickles our heels with a straw, we come down stiff-legged in front, our ears look to the beautiful beyond, our voice is cut loose, and is still for war, and our subsequent end plays the snare drum on anything that gets in reach of us, and strikes terror to the hearts of all tyrants. So does the mule. So does the mule.

THE story comes from Deadwood that a nember of a certain church congregation was bowie-knifed by a zealous deacon for putting a counterfeit quarter in the contribution box and the excited pastor, without leaving his pulpit, shot the good deacon for creating a disturbance during divine service.

Forger to remove a pitcher of cream from the kitchen table, and several hundred flies will tumble into it in less than five minutes. Set the same pitcher of cream as a fly trap, and you won't catch more than two of the insects in half a day. Such is the experience of a young housekeeper.

Don't make your wife feel that she is an incumbrance on you by giving grudgingly. Give cheerfully what she needs, as if it were a pleasure; you will feel better, and so will she. Don't meddle in the affairs of the house under her charge. You've no more business poking your nose into the kitchen than she has to walk into your place of business and give directions in regard to it. Don't find fault with her extravagance in piace. There are now in the Florentine ribbons, etc., until you have shut down inbrary, thirty volumes of the oldest on eigars, tobacco, etc. Don't leave your knowledge. The earliest French journal, the Gazette de France, still in existence, was edited by Renaudot, a physician in Paris. It was a weekly, the first number appearing in 1631. It was patronized by the king, and a least one was a weekly and contact and contact and the still and contact a of a selfish man who has not soul enough to appreciate her. What Voices Indicate.

There are light, quick, surface voices, that seem involuntarily to utter the slang, "I won't do to tie to." The man's words may assure you of his strength of purpose and reliability, but his tone contradicts his speech.

Then there are low, deep, strong voices, when the words seem ground out, as if the man owed humanity a grudge, and meant to pay it some day. That man's opponents may well tremble, and friends may trust his strength of purpose and his ability to act.

There is the coarse, boisterous, dictato rial tone, invariably adopted by vulgar persons, who have not sufficient cultivation to understand their insignificance.
There is the incredulous tone, that has in it a covert sneer, or a secret "you-can't dupe-me" intonation.

Then there is the whining, beseeching voice, that says "sycophant" as plainly as if it uttered the word. It cajoles and flatters you; its tones say, "I love and I admire you-you are all you should be.'

sharp features (as they indicate merely in-tensity of feeling), and sometimes with blunt features, but always with a warm nature and a good heart. If you are full of affectation and pretence, your voice proclaims it.

If you are full of honesty, strength and purpose, your voice proclaims it.

If you are cold and calm, or firm and consistent, or fickle and foolish, or decepfact betraying itself.

HE WAS ENGAGED. - A young man enwhen she goes in the house to turn the clothes-wringer, you, great bird, emblem of freedom, you representative of the land of the free, and the home of the brave, you swoop down on the plantation and crush your talons in the quivering flesh of her little baby, take him to your home high in heaven, and pick his innocent little eyes out. The bird that should have been selected as the emblem of our tenth of the promptly answered all the necessary questions, produced high testimonials, and greatly prepossessed the merchant in his favor, and was just about to be hired, when he was casually asked how he got that black eye, his left orb being evidently closed for repairs. With verdant country, the bird of patience, forbearance, dently closed for repairs. With verdant perseverance, and the bird of terror when aroused, is the mule. There is no bird plied, "Oh, I was pretty drunk last night, and got into a scrape, and a bar-

A California paper says: In the palace car on the Central Pacific Railfoad, the other day, was a little girl whose dress was adorned with a sash. In seating herself she happened to sit down on a portion of the sash, but suddenly bounced up, and, with an expression of pain, exclaimed: "Oh, goodness!" "What is the matter, little girl?" asked a passenger in a seat near by. "Oh, there ain't much the matter," was the reply, "but you just bet your bottom dollar that I ain't going to sit down on that seah again in a hurry."

The only four of the seven who were seriously considered were Grant, Blaine, Coukling and Washburne, whose strength was in the order mentioned, with a possible change of place between Blaine and Conkling. The four democrats from whom the candidate will probably be taken are Tilden, Thurman, Hardiside and Envers!

Gernack Platern.—Gen. Butler has been nominated as the grantlest on the next house. The greenback-labor national party will first test its strength in this state, and much of result. The vote will be the largest for many years.

dition is heart-rendering. For weeks yet, until frost shall come—not before the middle of October, most likely—the yellow fever will rage and destroy. While it ravages the land, trade will remain as if paralyzed and the laboring poor must meantime languish in want and woe, to starve or to die. The North has generously, nobly contributed. But there is yet much more to be done. But there is yet much more to be done. Fully a million of dollars is required for the frightful exigency, besides the much larger amount supplied by those of the stricken states which have the means to give. It is the time now for the exercise of charity, full-handed and prompt.

A Degraded Bishor.—The action of the Episcopal church, with regard to Bishop McCoskey, will command the respect of all persons who desire that the church shall retain its influence for good over mankind. The subject of the scandal was not entered upon; but it was held that the action of the bishop, in preventing investigation of the charges against him by sendering his resignation. charges against him by tendering his resig-nation and leaving the country, was so cul-pable as to unfit him for his high trust. He was, therefore, formally deposed from the ministry by the unanimous vote o the house of bishops. It is by such prompt and thorough action as this that the church maintains its high repute and continued usefulness. There was no condoning of the crime as there would have been had the resignation been accepted. It must be that evil menshall been accepted. It must be that evil measual get into the clergy as into other callings; the clergy as into other callings; the church to hesitate in dealing with them. It is only when, as in a late case, the crimes of a pastor are concealed, his hypocritical "explanations" accepted, and the pulpit still protects him with crime in his heart, and amazing falsehood on his lips—it is offer the concease which throw wage-workers cut of empty such moral cowardice as this that makes of religion a revolting mackery.

It may be that the advertisers of cards do not want the list for sale, and are themselves the vampires upon society who take this method of getting addresses for nefarious traffic. Be this as it may, the thousands of names sent for cards thus advertised are on a dangerous

The above corresponds with our observation. Of the large number of farmers that are in the habit of calling at the STATESMAN office, we have yet to meet a single man who favors the adoption of the constitution. They are all opposed to it, as sure to increase the taxes and retard the settlement of the country. The farmers fully understand that the whole movement originated with office-holders and office-seekers, who see in a state organization of the control of the co seekers, who see in a state organization a means to feather their own nexts at the expense of the dear people. They know, too, that we lack the population that we lack the steady steady to steal into the union under the cloak of a fraud. The constitution is already dead, and at the November election it will be for the people to bury the stinking carcass.

EDITOR STATESMAN:—Hon. Fernando Wood is chairman of a congressional committee, now sitting in New York, to find means for improving the methods of enforcing our custom laws. The large merchants of the city will be asked to furnish information and advice. Untaxed to furnish information and advice. Untaxed and unrestricted importation is an impossibility for many years to come; but it is the wish of all that the burdens, light or heavy, should not be made unnecessarily onerous by the manner of their enforcement. Mr. Wood has perhaps as much knowledge of affairs of this kind as any man in the country, and he is resured of the cordial co-operation of his fellow citizens of New York, and of all the aid that the treasury department can give him. The results of the committee's labors will no doubt be of great value.

The more we hear of the success of American The more we hear of the success of American exhibitors at Paris, the more we are amazed that so much has been accomplished with so little aid from the government. It is a matter of special congratulation that, after our Philadelphia exhibition had made our products so well known to all classes of people alroad, and well known to all classes of people abroad, and thus increased the demand for them so wonderfully, we should be able to secure so complete a foreign endorsement of their value.

There is now no apparent limit to the market abroad for many of our manufactures. All that they have needed was to be made known, and this is just what these international exhibitions have done for them. I cannot help believing that, whenever congress is hereafter asked to add in affairs of this kind, men of all parties will freely vote all the money necessary to make our exhibit complete. The unwilling ness to do so heretofore has always seemed to me very strange.

An Appeal to the Genzeous.—A number of eminent citizens of the North have united in an appeal addressed to the various chambers of commerce, and to the charitable, throughout the United states, in behalf of the suffering and destitute in that section of the country. It is impressively framed and presents the painful situation in plain earnest, eloquent language. There are nearly thirty thousand who need aid, and their condition is heart-rendering. For weeks yet,

ON A DANGEROUS JOURNEY.—In all the papers of the flashy sort, as well as some that claim a higher standard, may be read the advertisement: "Your name neatly printed on fifty cards for the cents-postage," etc. Every printer knows that the cost of the cards furnished, which are of fine beard, together with the work and postage, will at least cost three times ten cents. How then can men make this traffic pay? It is claimed that the list of names of thoughtless young ladies and innocent young girls, as well as those of young men and boys, gathered by advertisements of the beard. The public hashs are the property of the working man and should be assessed to persons to whom they are due.

The State Constitution Don't Take.—On Wellneshay last, we had the opportunity to boll an extended converse with a resident of Clark county, whose business has called him to travel over the greater part of Western Weshington during the past few weeks. He says that among the forming class almost universally they are opposed to the territory being churred into a state, because of the sure intercase of taxation beyond what is now imposed, which is now as high as their circumstances will lear. But in the towns, where the office-hunters and politicians must do congregate, he found it do only outspoken advocates for adopting the Walla Walla constitution. Jakie on Watermelon Pickle. Old lady Jonas borrowed Mrs. Brown's re cipe for making watermelon pickle, the other day; and being hard of hearing, and as she could'nt see to read well, she got her grandboy, Jakie, to peruse it for her. Jakie took the paper like a dutiful child, and holding it upside down, commenced: "Take a green watermelon—" "Why, Jakie, ain't you mistaken; I thought the melon must be ripe."

"O, wat's the matter id you, jewever see a watermelon that wusn't green?"

"Cut the watermelon into four halves—"
"But there ain't only two halves to anything; I don't believe you are reading that right, Jakie."
"Well, I don't halve to. But anyhow that's wat the resect says. Then soak the watermelon in a pint cup—" that's wat the resect says. Then soak the watermedon in a pint cup—"

"O, dear me! how in the world can you put a watermelon in a pint cup?"
"Well, I ain't here to tell the whereases and howfores. I'm jest readin the facts and you kan put in the philosophy to suit yer taste. After soaking the melon, put it in a skillet and fry it for four days."
"I wonder if Mrs. Brown sent me such a resect as that," said the old lady, but Jakie kept on.

"Then put the watermelon in a quart bowl and pour over it a gallon of vinegar, taking care not to spill the vinegar—"

"I'd jest like to know how you can pour a gallon into a quart without spilling any of it," but Jakie continued:

"Then sift a peck of red namers through gailon into a quare without spining any of it," but Jakie continued:

"Then sift a peck of red peppers through a milk strainer over the melon; and to one cup of butter add the whites and the yolks and the shells of three eggs, and throw in the old hen that laid 'em, and four sticks of cinnamon drops, and a bottle of Dr. Mary Walker's Vinegar Bitters, and two table-spoonsful of sassafras, and ten grains of quinine, and run it through a coffee-mill, and let it stand till it ferments, and then put it in a tin can, and tie the can to a dog's tail—this will stir it up to the right consistency—and then you can turn it off into crocks and have it ready for use. Serve it up cold and spread it on minee pic, and it makes a capital dessert," and Jakie slid out of the door, and left the old lady looking like a wrinkle on a left the old lady looking like a wrinkle on a STRANGE CURE FOR RHEUMATISM. foreign paper contains the following in regard to the cure of rheumatism by the means of to the cure of rheumatism by the means of bee stings. The correspondent says: That his wife having suffered so much as to be un-able to enjoy any sleep or rest for the space of six months, the right arm being very lame, preventing her from doing any household work, making her unable to dress or undress work, making her unable to dress or undress herself, and having heard that a farmer, quite incapacitated by rheumatism, had been accidentally stung by bees and thereby got entirely cured, he persuaded his wife to try this remedy, as the nain from the sting of the bees would not be greater than the that already suffered. Three bees were therefore haid and pressel upon the right arm for a considerable time, in order that the poison bladder of the insect should entirely empty itself. The effect produced was astonishing, as the lady, on the very first night, was enabled to enjoy a long, good sleep, the first time for at least six months, the racking pain being entirely gone. The arm was of course swollen greatly in consequence of the stinging. swollen greatly in consequence of the stinging, but the swelling disappeared gradually upon the application of some cooling lotion. All pain was gone, the lame arm recovered its previous vigor, and not the least sign of rheumatism has since shown itself.

ADVANTAGE OF YEARS.—You are getting into years. Yes, but the years are getting into you—the ripe, rich years, the genial, mellow years, the lusty luscious years. One by one the crudities of your youth are falling off of you—the vanity, the egotism, the insulation, the bewilder-ment, the uncertainty. Nearer and nearer you are approaching yourself. You are consolidating your forces. You are becoming master of the situation. On the ruins of shattered plans you find your vantage ground. Your broken hopes, your thwarted purposes, your defeated aspirations, become a staff of strength by which you mount to sublimer heights. With self-possession and self-command of all things, the title-deed of creation, for-feited, is reclaimed. The king has come to his own again. Earth and sea and sky pour out for you their largesse of love. The very clouds pass down to lay their treasures at your feet.

A TRUE MARRIAGE. - Theodore Parker wrote thus sensibly on the marriage question: Men and women, and especially young folks. do not know that it takes years to marry completely two hearts, even of the most lov-ing and well-assorted. But nature allows no sudden change. We slope very gradually from the cradle to the summit of life. Marriage is gradual, a portion of us at a time. A happy wedlock is long falling in love. I know young persons think love belongs only to brown hair, and plump, round, crimson checks; so it does for its beginning, just as Mt. Washington begins at Boston Bay. But the golden parties is a rate of the property of the policy of the policy is a partie. the golden marriage is a part of love which the bridal day knows nothing of. Youth is the tassel and silken flower of love, age is the full corn, ripe and solid in the ear. Beauti-ful is the morning of love with its prophetic crimson, violet, purple and gold, with its hope of days that are to come. Beautiful hope of days that are to come. Beautiful also is the evening of love, with its glad re-membrances, and its rainbow side turned toward heaven as well as earth.

HE was an entire stranger to the girls present, and the boys were mean and would not introduce him. He finally plucked up courage, and stepping up to a young lady requested the pleasure of her company for the next dance. She looked at him in surprise, and informed him that she had not the pleasure of his acquaintance. "Well," remarked the Cazendovia, "you don't take any more chances "than I do".

THE five-year-old daughter of a San Francisco merchant, the other day, stood watching her baby brother, who was making a great fuss over having his face ware washed. The little miss at length lost below Third street. Walla Walla Walla washed. her patience, and stamping her tiny foot, said: "You think you have lots of trouble, but you don't know anything about it. Wait till you're big enough to get a lickin' and then you'll see—won't he, mammar."

A Parisian Scene.—The lady was leaning on the arm of an elegant and wealthy young man and leading her little daughter by the hand, when saddenly the child cried: "Oh, ma, ma, look there! See that gentleman that's passing. Don't you know him?" "N-no, my child." "Why mamma? he was pa last year." Ma faints.

CHEERFULNESS is a hopeful view of life un der whatever conditions; whether one is in prison, or travelling upon a thoroughfare, or wandering in the wilderness—whether one is laboring and overtaxed, or in any kind of trouble. Cheerfulness is a slining state, which amounts to more than contentment.
