Diseases in Hogs. The hog is in many physical peculiarities more like man or the human species, than any other domestic animal. Like the man he is umniverous and lives to a considerable extent upon the crumbs that drop from the rich as well as the poor man's table. His like the diseases to which man is subject than those which afflict any other animal, wild or domestic. Hogs, like men, have the lung and throat diseases, such as consumption, congestion of the lungs, diptheria, quincy and common coids or influenzy, and Asiatic or at least hog cholera. They are also subject to rheamatic complaints, and diseases of the kidneys, quite similar to man. Like the themselves to it most of the time Now suppose our Western friends would say diseases of man, those of the hog are, or seem constitute the great corn and hog district of our country, and here, also, the hog diseases present themselves the more frequently and in the greatest number of forms. Half of the lameness among horses is caused by bad sheeing. There must be a level bearing of the boof for the shoe, so that the horse's hoof can stand upon the ground naturally and evenly, or the horse will be in pain, and something, somewhere in the foot or leg, will finally give away, and the borse become permanently lamed. If the heels are cut down too much, as is frequently the the be injurious. If one side of the boof is lower than the other, the foot must suffer. The constant study of the shoer should be to study the horse's foot, read authors in regard to it, understand its anatomy, and notice how horses stand without shoes. New York, Dec. 22.—The Times! New Orleans special says: The House committee subjected Wells to a severe cross questioning. Wells said about the vacancy in the returning board that they had once elected Col. J. M. Spandige, democrat, but he had declined to serve. Subsequently another democrat (Arroyo) was elected a nember and he resigned, saying he would not serve if number demo-rat was not elected. The name of Hugh Kennedy was mention ed to make the fifth member, but the loard could mot agree as to him, and went on with its work. The carvies made by the board had been done fairly, openly and seconding to The.

Which?—Mr. William M, Evarts is credited with saying at Washington, in substance, that party leaders and party organs hold now the oil in their hands, can and can choose whether to throw it on the water or on the fire. The troubled waters need its calming influence; the smouldering fire is prepared to receive it. In the one case the result will be peace and safety, in the other coefficient and destruction. Can any sensible man hesitate as to which use to put the oil?

PROSPEROUS .- With the close of the year we may be indulged in saying that at no time in her history has Walla Walla been as prosperous as at present. The year about to close has witnessed a greater number of substantial improvements than any former year, and these improvements simply mark the general progress. It is true that we have a smaller number of stores, but this is owing to the fact that business is consolidated and in fewer hands. The average sales of merchandise have greatly increased, and some of our leading merchants report their sales as showing an advance of full one-half over last year. This is specially the case with such houses as the Messrs. Schwabachers', Johnson, Reese & Winans', Dusenbery Bros', and Adam Bros. The houses named do the bulk of the business, and the roports they make showing a steady growth in all branches of trade, at once attests the general prosperity. Another encouraging feature is the fact that the business has mainly been conducted on a cash basis. It would searcely be fair to say that money is in abundant supply, but nevertheless the fact remains that purchasers very generally have the means to meet their engagements, in and the language of a leading merchant, "Collections are easy," This prospercus condition of affairs is the more enconraging from the fact that from all parts of the country comes up the complaint of stag-nation in trade. In New York and all the great Eastern cities tens of thousands of men are out of employment, and all branches of business are depressed. Even our near neigh tends balls, but he has it on the authority of a friend that the parties given by Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien are always up to the mark.

SIMPLICITY IN DRESS.—It is absurd to dress children in the height of fash ion under any circumstances, but particularly so while they are attending school. The object for which children are here gethered together is certainly not the display of the wealth or tenderness of their parents. Anything which diverts the attention of the pupil from his duties is an injury to him, but it will accord with the observation of teachers that fine clothes oftener work mischief to their wearer in this respect than mean clothes do. The highest-minded children are oftenest found in plain garb, while those be ringed and be ruffled and otherwise showily attired are generally quite destitute of intellectual home culture. Their mothers have been too busy with their clothes to pay much attention to their brains. This sounds severe; would it were not true! While over-attention to toilet matters is a henderance to study, negligence and over-attention to toilet matters is a henderance to study, negligence and untidiness are as carefully to be avoid-

A Piece of Gossir—Jefferson city rejoices at the thought of a legislature come to stay so long. The bit of gorsip mentioned is part of the prospective excitement. It concerns the Governor elect, General J. S. Phelps. The General, life some other politicians, has not been happy entirely in his relations with the opposite sex. Years ago his home was broken up, and his wife, a high spirited woman, left him. There was no divorce, but a separation by mutual consent, the General provided for the lady a monthly stipend of seventy dollars. Atter everything had been arranged firms. Phelps left Springfield and went to Oregon, where for a long period of time she has been making her home with a married sister. She had almost dropped out of sight until a couple of weeks ago, when the election was all over and Phelps' success assured. Without any warning she arrived in Springfield, accompanied by her daughter, and took rooms at the hotel, at once anouncing to her acquaintances that she had "come to be inaugurated with the Governor." Mrs. Phelps still remains in Springfield, living with the Governor." Mrs. Phelps still remains in Springfield, living with the Governor." Mrs. Phelps still remains in Springfield, living with the Governor." Mrs. Phelps still remains in Springfield, living with the Governor." Mrs. Phelps still remains in Springfield, living with the Governor. Mrs. Phelps still remains in Springfield, living with the Governor. Clean clothes, neatly made, need not be expensive of time or money, and a proper regard to personal cleanliness in all its details is what every person owes to himself and to his as sociates. As a rule the more simply a child is dressed the more attractive it is to all servible people. The bewildering maze of rufiling and embroidery and krife plaiting and sharring and great broad brown sash, big enough to sbrond the child in, with which little girls and boys in kilts are dressed is simply shocking to people of correct taste. Let us not have it in the school room.

APPLE BUTTER.—Pennsylvania is famous, among other things, for apple sauce, as it is called in New England; and a Pennsylvania farmed's wife tells the Germantown Telegraph how she makes it as follows: 'Take thirty gallons of sweet cider (that just from the press is to be preferred); boil it dayn to one third of the causity.

samous among other things, for apple sauce, as it is called in New England; and a Pennsylvania farmer's wife tells the Germantown Telegraph how she makes it as follows: 'Take thirty gallons of sweet cider (that just from the press is to be preferred); boil it down to one third of the quantity, then add together about two bushels of pared, quartered and cored sweet apples, about one third at a tine, judging as to the quantity of apples; then stir the whole mass constantly with a long-handled stirrer, reaching down to the bottom. This stirrer must be from four to five inches broad at the bottom of the kettle, and have half a dozen or more half inch holes bored through it. The mass must be kept boiling and stirred until the whole is reduced to say one half of the original quantity of cider, assumes a dark colar, and is perfectly smooth and palatable. For this purpose, samples should from time to time be taken out and tasted. When done, it should be put in jars, well tied over with paper, and then placed in a cool place. Otherwise, it may work, and lose a great deal of it value."

Maxims for Hand Times.—Take care of the pennies. Look well to your spending. No matter what comes in, if more goes out you will always be poor. The art is not in making money, but in keeping it. Little expenses, like mice in a barn, when they are many, make a great waste. Half by hair the head great waste. Hair by hair the head great waste. Hair by hair the head great waste. It is the right side. It is the right side. The times may be hard, it will make them in lit."
