The story of our great friend's life has been cloquently told. We have borne him now to the home of the dead, to the cemetery which, after fit services of prayer, he devoted in a tender and thrilling speech, to its hallowed purposes. In that address he said: "Within these grounds public reverence and gratitude shall build the tombs of warriors and statesmen * * who have given all their lives and their best thoughts to their country." Could he forecast, seven years ago, any such a fulfillment of those words as this hour reveals? WALLA WALLA CTTY, Jan. 15, 1862.

EDS. STATESMAN:—I have before me a great many letters from friends in various parts of the blower country, asking my advice in regard to moving to this valley. Now, to answer all of these communications esperately would be an endless, or at least a very tedious undertaking. If therefore propose, through your, paper to give my friends elsewhere my opinions of this country and its advantages over other countries. The healthfulness of this country is, I think, nequal to that of any other valley on the Pacific coast. This I judge from my acquaintance with the people here, and the health of my own family, none of whom have had a day's sickness during the three years that I have resided here.—The climate I consider as pleasant as I ever related in The spring, summer and fall seasons are delightful and the winter, with the exception of from two weeks to two months, can not be equaled anywhere north of Mexico.

Agriculture.—There is no question in my mind but this valley offers greater inducements to the farmer than any other point on the continent. Our market prices compared with those of any other market prove this beyond a question; and I will only add that the expense of producing here is not so great, and never has been since I shave resided there, as it is in the Willamette valley.

Frut Raising.—This question has not been

Professional Men would find their services in good demand, as our thriving settlement is not overstocked with that class of men yet.

To conclude, I will say to men of all trades and professions that I believe this upper country is the place. As a gentleman of my acquisinace lately said, in comparing this country with others. "Nature has fulled to make a better place than Walla Walla." Being, as you may say surrounded by mining regions, it is bound to be the center of an immense trade; and produce will always bring a good trive here.

To the emigrant it would asy, there is a great deal of unoccupied land in this valley which will make good farms for the industrieus farmes.

DUELING IN WISCONSIN.-There has been a dueling correspondence between Mr. Tracy, of the Kenosha Times, and Mr. Wheeler of the Sentinel, of the same place. It seems that Mr. Tracy lately wrote a poem for the opening of the Mil-waukee Academy of Music, for which he obtained a prize of $50. This poem his editorial rival of Sentinel, both criticised and ridiculed, and thereby so excited the poet's ire that he challenged the man of the Sentinel to mortal combat. Mr. Wheeler replied;

The duel was not fought, but Wheeler's seco has since published the letter of instructions which he received from his principal. Among the in-structions were the following:

"If you are in any doubt as to the kind of weapons, I append a list from which you may be able to choose: Broadswords, rolling-pins, shov-els, fish-knives, ice-cream freezers, 18-pound carronades, injection pipes and sprinkling pots." Our town is now in a very thriving condition.
There is not a vacant house in the place, and there is a demand for houses—both dwelling and bust ness houses. Preparations are being made to construct a railroad between the Dalles and Des construct a railroad between the Dalles and De-chuttes. A man has gone east to purchase the necessary iron, and the work on the necessary bridges will very soon be commenced, I am in-formed. We shall soon expect you, Messrs, Ed-itors, to tip your hats to us as the iron horse purs and snorts through our streets. You cannot fail to do this in grateful recognition of our enterprise and of the inauguration of railroads on the north Posific coast.

"Routes to Salmon river," which, reckoned by the rule of "answering a fool according to his folly," deserves a passing notice. The editor, in the article referred to makes it appear that there are but two routes to Salmon river, viz: by way of the Grand Ronde valley. In the first named route, the editor purposely commiss a blunder when he gives the distance from Deschutes to Lewiston at 300 miles, for it is only 270 miles. Again, in giving the distance from Lewiston to the mines at 100 miles, be blunders just 229 miles, for it is only 270 miles. His indirect assertion that there are but two routes, when properly understood, is correct; but when viewed in the light in which he-presents it, is certainly an unpardonable blunder! "Us knows full well that the rare four found from the Grand Ronde valley to the mines; that old mountaineers who have traveled over that section of country, pronounce the mountains between the Grand Ronde valley and Salmon niver impassable; that parties have tried to each the mines by that route, and have been compelled to records the mountains and come by Wella Walla; that Mr. Abbott, whom he gives in former numbers a authority on the Grand Ronde valley and Salmon niver many than the control of the process the mountains and come by Wella Walla; that Mr. Abbott, whom he gives in former numbers a authority on the Grand Ronde route, has here numble to find a trail in Salmon, view and

Very True.

How many would our pity share
Who raise our envy now!
The fatal secret when revealed,
Of every aching breast,
Would fully prove that while concealed
Their lot appears the best.

A Fascinating Fellow

About thirty years ago, says Jules Gerard, the great lion hunter, a young man named Seghir, bolonging to the tribe of Anamera, established in the Aures mountains, fell in love with a young girl who had been refused to him by her father because of his poverty. The young people, however, were much attached to each other, and one evening the girl ran away with her lover. The distance being considerable between the two douars, and the road extremely perilous, Seghir had armed himself from head to foot.

Already the most dangerous part of the road had been cleared, and they were beginning to hear the dogs of the douar towards which they were rapidly advancing, when all at once a lion, who till that moment had lain concealed behind the bushes, roso and walked straight towards them. The young girl shrieked so fearfully that her cries were heard by the people in the tents, and several of them immediately rushed out to the rescue. When they came to the spot to which they were directed by the loud sereams of the young maiden, they saw the lion walking slowly a few feet in front of Saghir, with his eyes steadfastly fixed upon him, and leading him thus towards theiforest. The young girl did all she could to prevent her lover from following the lion, or induce him to let go his hold of herself; but it was in vain; he kept dragging her on in spite of all her efforts, saying.—Come, my dear, come; our master will have it so; we must go! "But your weapons," she cried; what are they good for, if not to save me? "Weapons! I have none," answered the fascinated wretch. 'Great Lord, believe her not; she lies; I am perfectly unarmed, and will follow you wherever you will!"

At this moment the Arabs, eight or ten in number, who had come to the rescue of the unfortunate couple, perceiving that the lion would very soon have them in the forest, fired every one of them upon him; but on finding that he did not fell, they took to their heels. The lion sprang upon Seghir, and with one bound crushed him to the carth, devouring his head at a b sight of her.

The moment the guns of the Arabs were leveled at him, the lion sprang into the midst of them and seized one of them with his teeth, and two others with his claws, dragging them thus together so as to make as it were one bundle; then placing under his that were one bundle; as it were one outnet; their pacing under him that mass of palpitating flesh, he in-stantly smashed the three heads as he had done that of Seghir. Those who had es-caped ran off to the douar, and related what they had witnessed, but no one was hold enough to return for another attack. bold enough to return for another attack. The lion then took hold of the maiden and bold enough to return for another attack. The lion then took hold of the maiden and carried her off into the forest.

The next day the Arabs came to carry away the bodies of the four men. As to the young girl, nothing was found but her hair, her feet and her clothes. All the rest was devoured.

Is it then really true that the lion has the power of fascinating the weak organization of certain men to the extent of forcing them to follow him? All that I can say is that every Arab I have interrogated upon the subject has answered me in the affirmative, and quoted a number of examples in support of his assertion. As for myself, I can only say that whenever I had the honor to find myself in the presence otte great monarch, I never felt the slightest inclination to follow his royal steps, though I can quite understand how his threatening aspect, his kingly majesty, the piercing fixedness of his fiery look, should paralyze the heart and brain of him who meets him unexpectedly. eets him unexpectedly.

A WITNESS in a Hoosier court being asked how he know that two certain parties were man and wife, replied: "Why dog on it, I've heard 'em scolding each oth er mor'n fifty times. The evidence was held as conclusive.

AN INPERENTIAL OFINION.—In passing down a back street one day, we heard a colloquy between a couple of darkies, and were just in time to hear the following:—Now, look'er yer, Charlie, Jim mout be an honest nigger, and then agin he moutent; but ef I was a chicken, and know d dat he was 'bout de yard, I tell yer wor, I'd roost high, I would."

Consumption.—Dr. Hall insists that of air, exercise, and as much food as the patient can digest. He says, in so many words, "If you want to get well, go in for beef and out-door air."

Wisdom by impulse is to be trusted in y those only who have habitually used heir reason to the full extent of its powers ing the heart and cultivating the
