The Old Mountain Tree.
Oh, the home we love by the bounding deep,
Where the hills in glory stood;
And the moss-grown graves where our fathers sleep,
'Neath the boughs of the waving wood:
We remember yet, with fond regret,
The rock and the flowery lea,
And the stream that flows thro' the long, long day,
In the shade of the old mountain tree.
We are pilgrims now in a stranger land,
And the joys of youth are passed;
And friends are gone, but the old trees stand,
Unshaken by the varying blast:
Oh, the bark may swing in the clouds of spring,
And the swan on the silver sea,
But we mourn for the shade where the wild bird made
Her nest in the old mountain tree.
Oh, the time went by like a tale that's told,
In the land of song and mirth,
And many a form in the churchyard cold,
Finds rest from the cares of earth;
And many a day we will wander away,
O'er the waves of the western sea,
And the heart will sigh, and sadly say,
For a grave by the old mountain tree.

Philosophy.
Be quiet. Take things as they come:
Each hour will draw out some surprise.
With blessing let the days go on:
Thou shalt have thanks from evening skies. (MILTON.)

Major-General McClellan.
Major-General George B. McClellan was born in Philadelphia, in the year 1826. At the early age of fifteen he went to West Point, where he graduated in 1846. He was universally regarded there as a young man of extraordinary promise, and, with his class of instructors, he bore a character for intelligence and military talent. His first active duty was at Vera Cruz, as a member of the corps of Engineers. He served through the whole siege and rendered eminent services in his department. Col. Totten, the chief of the engineer corps, in the official report of the operation of his corps during the investment of that city, speaks of McClellan in the highest terms. At the battle of Cerro Gordo, McClellan was attached to Pillow's command in the attack on the enemy's right. That General in his official report spoke of his "great zeal and activity in the discharge of his duties." Gen. Scott, also, in his official report of that battle, refers to McClellan in terms of high praise.

At Pedregal and Contreras, McClellan served with Twiggs' Division, and in company with Lee, made a bold reconnaissance of the enemy. At these battles he greatly distinguished himself, and Twiggs in his report said, that "not only did he render gallant services in his proper department, but when Callender was wounded, McClellan took charge of the howitzer battery, with judgment and with success, until it became so disabled as to require shelter. For Lieut. McClellan's efficiency and gallantry in this affair, I present his name for the valuable consideration of the General-in-Chief."

On the fields of Contreras and Cherusco, both his ability and his bravery won the strong commendation of his commanding officers. Gen. Persifer Smith states, "in the battles of Pedregal, Contreras and Cherusco, with Smith (Major Smith, of the engineers) and McClellan, nothing seemed too bold to be undertaken, or too difficult to be executed; their services rendered as engineers were valuable as those they rendered in battle, at the head of their gallant sappers, &c."

McClellan also superintended, or aided in the construction of all the batteries which invested and bombarded Chapultepec. Gen. Pillow names with distinction, and Major Smith, (at the head of the engineer corps) specifies him particularly as participating with great credit in all the battles in the valley of Mexico, rendering important services in the conduct of reconnaissance, serving batteries, and erecting works.

It must be remembered that during this period—when rendering services of great importance, in such a manner as to win the praise and official notice of every General under whom he served—McClellan was but twenty-one years of age. Already while a mere youth, he was generally efficient in the army as one of the most skillful, efficient, accomplished and mature of his distinguished corps. In every battle fought, from Vera Cruz to Mexico, he served with distinction, and all the leading military men on that line unanimously spoke of him as the most brilliant and promising young man in the army.

The war being concluded, he was selected by the Government as one of the Commissioners to be sent to Europe and the Crimea. Though the youngest man on that Commission, upon him was devolved the duty of preparing the report to the Government of its proceedings and observations. The report is voluminous, and military critics have pronounced it one of the ablest contributions which has been furnished from any source in this or any other country to the military literature of the present century. Those best competent to appreciate its merits speak of it as being remarkable as well for its perfection of detail as for its comprehensiveness as a whole, embracing at once the widest range, and the most unconsidered minutiae in the science and art of war.

At daylight of the morning on which Mexico was taken, McClellan moved forward to the Alameda with his sappers, and until 3 P. M., of that day, was engaged in street fighting, breaking through houses with crowbars and axes, in order to reach the enemy. This was the most desperate and dangerous kind of service; while engaged in it, he reached a strong position of the enemy, and found himself opposed at close quarters by a greatly superior force of Mexicans. Notwithstanding the vast odds, he and his little band subsistingly attacked the enemy and drove them from their position, killing more than twenty of their number.

After his return from Europe he resigned his position in the army, and accepted the control and management of the western railroads. The present we called him to the head of the Ohio volunteers, and the Government knowing his man, at once conferred upon him the title of Major-General.

Rothschild.
George III came to the throne there was Frankfort who did not dream of anything to do, personally, with Europe. He was in the first stage for the Jewish priesthood. His name was Anselm Rothschild. For some time he was placed in a counting-house at over, and he soon discovered what he was to do. He began humbly as an exchange broker, went on to be the banker of the Landgrave of Hesse, whose private fortune he saved by his shrewdness, when Napoleon overran Germany. How he left a large fortune and a commendable character of the highest order, and how his five sons settled in five of the great cities of Europe, and have had more authority over war and peace, and the destinies of nations than the sovereigns themselves, the world pretty well knows.

Despot monarchs must be dependent on money-lenders, unless they are free from debt and can command unlimited revenues for untold purposes—which is never true of despotic sovereigns. Constitutional rulers are free from the responsibility and difficulty, and British sovereigns are supplied by parliamentary vote, and need not stoop to borrow. Yet there is room for a Rothschild in London; where loans are negotiated for all countries, and which is a kind of a central office for the financial needs of all the world. In London, then, one of the sons—Nathan—settled. Anselm remained at Frankfort; Solomon went to Vienna; Charles to Naples, and James to Paris. Nathan was the leader, to whom the others looked up with reverence and confidence.

He had assisted his father by his admirable ways of investing the moneys lodged in his father's hands; and he enriched his brothers by his wise guidance, and his generous extension to them of his knowledge and opportunities. He paid and provisioned the soldiers in the peninsular war, and he reaped the large profits which were his due for such a service; and from that time his fortune became colossal. He will be remembered in the history of the financial empire by his having introduced foreign loans into this country as a financial feature, as Gresham opened to our sovereigns the resources of domestic loans. Before the days of the Rothschilds, an Englishman here and there had invested his money abroad; but the difficulty of receiving the dividends, and the uncertainties caused by fluctuations in the exchange had confined the speculation to a very small number.

Nathan Rothschild made the arrangement perfectly easy and regular, to the convenience of borrowers and lenders alike. Sovereigns and Emperors competed for his countenance, as his opinion decided their credit; and Spain has not yet got over the effects of his quiet, steady refusal to enter into any money contracts with her or her dependencies. He was enrolled in Austria; but he preferred his personal consideration to any adventitious rank, and never used his title of Baron. The Member of London is his eldest son. Everywhere in Europe the Rothschilds are regarded as exemplars of the commercial character in its loftiest phase, in an advanced state of civilization. Their honor is proverbial, like the word of a king, or the gage of a soldier; their intellectual range is wide; their faculties are keen and sound, and their charities are equal to their wealth. Such are the results of a German boy having left the priestly calling to be engaged in trade.

THE OLD SCOTCH WOMAN'S PRAYER.—In almost all religious wars, the contending powers have occasionally offered up prayers to heaven for their own safety, and the extirpation of their enemies; and such high prayer have generally addressed, according to the justice of our cause, O Lord! help us, &c. Considering that the cause of both parties can be precisely just, it would perhaps be quite as judicious, and somewhat more modest, to adopt the language, or at least the spirit, of an old Scotch man, who was a sutler in the Duke of Marlborough's army. It so happened that this faithful soldier of the camp was one evening talking to a general in the sister of the same profession, but not of the same country, on the probable consequences of an engagement, expected to be fought between the two armies the next morning. "Well," says the English sutler; "well, it will certainly be a most bloody battle; and all I have to say, my eye God stand by the right. De'el pick out your eyes for your wicked wish," replied the Scotch one; "May God stand by Hamilton's regiment, right or wrong!"

A CERTAIN CURE FOR COLDS.—A remedy never known to fail: Three cents' worth of liquorice; three cents' worth of rock candy; three cents' worth of gum arabic. Put them in a quart of water, simmer them till thoroughly dissolved; then add three cents' worth of paregoric, and a like quantity of antimonic wine. Let it cool, and sip whenever the cough is troublesome. It is pleasant, infallible, cheap and good. Its cost is only fifteen cents.

We asked a man a few days since, what induced him to make a law student of his son; he replied: "Oh, he was always a lying little cuss, and I thought I'd humor his leading propensity."

General Jackson and the "Turtle."
Among the many charges brought by the opponents of General Jackson against him, to prove that he was not fit for the presidency, was that he was illiterate, and this was the honest belief of a great many everywhere.
During his Administration a vessel arrived at Norfolk from the West Indies, and on its deck were several sea-turtles. Among them was a giant of a reptile, which attracted the attention of everybody who went aboard. The captain had them all taken on the wharf and exposed for sale. Among those who admired the huge fellow above mentioned were several leaders of the "unruffled," four or five of whom made up a purse, bought the monster, and by the next Washington boat sent it up as a present to Old Hickory.

It was much gratified at such a present, and the inmates and the visitors at the White House enjoyed a rare treat in the way of "turtle soup" of the most magnificent description.
The General wrote a very polite note acknowledging the receipt of the present, which was duly received by Dr. A. who had sent it in the name of himself and his other democratic friends.

Shortly after the receipt of the General's answer, Dr. A. was hobbling along on Main-street, and just when he nearly in front of Mr. B.'s bookstore he was hailed by five anti-Jacksonians as follows:
"Well, Doctor, have you heard from the General about your turtle?"
"Yes, answered Dr. A., and I have his reply in my pocket."
"Let's see it! let's see it!" they all cried in a breath.

"Here it is," Dr. A. replied.
He produced the note, and they read:
"Gentlemen: I thank you for the very fine tortoise you so kindly sent me, &c. &c."
"There," said one of the gentlemen, "we had always heard that your great man could not write English, and now we know it. Who ever heard of a turtle being called a tortoise?"
"Will you take a bet on it?" said A.
"That we will," answered they, "and we will decide the point by going into friend B's."

So in they went, and both parties agreed to abide by the definition of a certain dictionary, then the standard of the language. One of them turned over its leaves till he reached the word "turtle." The definition was "a bird of the dove kind," and in the next line, "this word is sometimes used to designate the tortoise found on the shores of the West Indies. It is a corruption used by sailors and illiterate people."

"Are you satisfied gentlemen?" exclaimed Dr. A.; "I know you are not sailors—so, by your own authority, you are illiterate. Be pleased to say your bets, and never after this say that General Jackson can't write English."
They did as requested, giving each an order for six bottles of Madeira; and as they went out of B.'s a bystander observed that there was in the ear of each a very large flea.

From San Francisco in a Twinkling.
We have received a telegraphic dispatch which has come all the way from San Francisco to New York by the magnetic telegraph direct. The Great Overland Continental Telegraph line is now at length completed and in working order. This achievement of science, enterprise and skill is one of those things for which America may well challenge the world to find a parallel.—While England has vainly wasted her treasure in endeavoring to stretch the telegraph across the ocean, we have spanned it at its widest part with the wonder-working wires. If we had not to traverse the deep recesses of the great ocean to do this, we have had to render practicable the mountain passes of the Rocky and Sierra Nevada ranges, the great deserts east and west, and, in fact, a wilderness three thousand miles in extent. The mere statement of the length of the line affords an inadequate conception of the difficulties of the undertaking; and it is only when we call to mind the character of the region penetrated that we appreciate the boldness of the enterprise.

But there is no difficulty in a public work insurmountable by American perseverance and energy. The same people who have made the Pacific shores thrill with every pulsation of the national life have planted colonies along the vast highway, organized the beginnings of inchoate States, and laid almost by magic the foundations of a mighty empire. They are laying out roads in Nevada, Utah and Colorado. Cities have already sprung up like mushrooms, hardy pioneers cluster around the mail and telegraph station, and civilization is rapidly seizing upon the whole line. How long will it be before the Pacific Railroad becomes a reality? Who can doubt it now, in view of this great telegraph line? Already we have a daily mail to the Pacific, and the San Francisco papers reach us more regularly than those from States east of the Mississippi. We have but to organize the Territories as rapidly as possible, give land grants to help the railroad, and in less than ten years it will be built.—Phil. North American.

The London 'Times' says the principle on which the Government rests its demand is that British ships, until their violation of the neutrality laws is fully proved, must be held to be British ground as much as if she were an actual piece of British soil, and the rights of all persons on board are as valid as on British territory. No such violation has yet been proved, or sought to be proved against the 'Trent,' consequently, the seizure of persons, dragged from her deck, was entirely illegal. Slidell and Mason were at most civil servants to a hostile power, and were traveling from one neutral power to another, in a neutral vessel. If the Government at Washington declare them rebels their right of asylum has been clearly violated.

The discharge of duty at this time involves the discharge of cannon, rifles, and muskets.

Woman's Worth.
We beg pardon of our lady readers for any dereliction of the sex they may fancy there is in the following, which we copy from the Edinburgh Ladies' Own Journal:
"How charming, indeed, do young ladies often appear when dressed in silks and satins, and decked with jewelry and ornaments! Ungrateful thought, that they should ever be untidy in person, or disagreeable in manners, or fret, or be selfish or unkind. Oh, no, poor innocent creatures! not they! Yet what light does a peep behind the curtains sometimes throw upon their real character and temper. You may sometimes find them idling away the morning, when they could have been putting things into a proper trim for the day—sometimes acting towards younger brothers and sisters in principles other than love; sometimes easily irritated by mole hills, and refusing to be pacified by the removal of mountains—sometimes in preparing for a fashionable party, hawking for this, tossing everything topsy turvy for that, and complaining that a third article is not properly washed or dressed, or don't fit; and after having got themselves "rigged out," as Jack would say, as tastefully as galeity and fashion require, or their means will admit of, they hurry off, leaving their wardrobes and bedrooms in sheer confusion. Look ye mortals! with one eye at such an angelic form—her sparkling eyes vying with her smiling countenance and ruby lips, as she sits the piano notes with her melodious voice, or glides so sweetly along in the graceful dance—and, with the other, on the disorder she has just quitted! Look upon this picture and upon that, and say whether it be not a step from the sublime to the ridiculous! Yet, strange anomaly! we must with candor say of woman, that "with all their faults we love them still."—They are good-hearted creatures after all.

KEN RETORT.—At the assize at Naas, one time, while Mr. Parsons was addressing the court an ass in the street happened to bray so loudly as to interrupt the learned gentleman; whereupon the Judge, Lord Norbury, said, "One at a time gentlemen.—One at a time, if you please." This sally caused much merriment in the court, but did not in the least discompose Mr. Parsons, who pursued the tenor of his discourse as if nothing of the kind had happened. He was not however insensible to the merit of the joke, nor willing to let it go unrewarded, and an opportunity was soon afforded him of giving a "Roland for an Oliver." When his lordship was charging the jury, the same ass, who seemed fond of the vicinity of the court, brayed again and "deeper and deeper still." At this moment the judge was so entirely taken up with the business in progress, that he forgot his own joke, and started at the sound of Neddy's sweet voice, he hastily said, "What's that—what noise was that?" "It's only the echo of the court, my lord," said Mr. Parsons, gravely. The justice and excellence of this retort were acknowledged by the loud and continued peals of laughter, in which the judge himself could not refrain from joining.

CALUMNY.—Calumniators are those who have neither good hearts nor good understanding. We ought not to think ill of one till we have palpable proof, and even then we should not expose them to others.

We ought to attend to our own business, and not meddle with the affairs of others, unless we are applied to, to render a service. We should condemn no one unheard.

Look on slanderers as direct enemies to civil society; as persons without honor, honesty, or humanity. Whoever entertains you with the faults of others, designs to serve you in a similar manner.

The great Zimmerman justly observed.—"That there is always something great in that man against whom the world exclaims; as if every one throws a stone, and on whose character all attempt to fix a thousand crimes, without being able to prove one."

TO FORM A VIGOROUS MIND.—Let every youth early settle in his mind that if he would ever do anything, he has got to make himself; or in other words, to rise by personal application. Let him always try his own strength, and try it effectually before he is allowed to call upon others; send him back again and again to the resources of his own mind, and make him feel that there is nothing too hard for industry and perseverance to accomplish. In his early and timid flights, let him know that stronger pinions are near and ready to sustain him, but only in case of absolute necessity. When, in the rugged paths of science, if difficulties impede his progress which he cannot surmount, let him be helped over them; but never let him think of being led, when he has power to walk without help; nor of carrying his ore to another's furnace, when he can melt in his own.

A WISCONSIN farmer wrote urgently to his son, a minor, who had enlisted, that he must at least return home till harvesting was finished, as he could not get help at any price, and he had a large amount of thrashing that must be done. To this Young America replied: "Dear Father—I can't go home at present. I should be very glad to help you, but Uncle Sam has got a mighty sight bigger job of thrashing on hand than you have, and I'm bound to see him out of the woods first."

MERRI.—A man of brilliant talents, combating the storms of adversity and misfortunes, is like the sun behind a cloud; hid, but not impaired,—obscured, not forever; but only for a time, to shine with greater splendor when those storms are over, like the sun when the clouds have passed away.

It has been suggested that a regiment of hotel-keepers should be enrolled. They are unrivaled on the "charge!"

No GRAND RONDE TRAIL.—All the evidences that come to us from time to time regarding this visionary trail, are to the same effect as published in our columns, viz: no trail whatever yet open, nor no feasible route yet discovered.

SLEDGES, JUMPERS, AND PLANK SCOWS.—It is amusing to witness the variety of contrivances, in the shape of vehicles, which are from day to day leaving this town for the Salmon river mines.

THE KUMATH TRAIL FROM YREKA.—During the past few weeks we have conversed with men who have traveled the above trail from Yreka to this place.

FOR THE MINES.—Several parties have left town during the week, en route for the mines. A number have gone on foot, carrying only their blankets with them.

A Gentleman who came down from the mines last week, informs us that a party of ten or fifteen men who started down from the mines some days before he did are supposed to have been frozen to death on the Camas Prairie.

FROM FLORENCE.—We extract the following items from a letter dated Florence, Feb. 2, 1862.

NEW EXPRESS LINE TO SALMON RIVER.—Messrs. McBride & Rhodes have started an Express line between this place and Salmon River.

[By McBride & Rhodes, Express.]

Letter from Florence.

FLORENCE, Jan. 20th, 1862. MESSRS. EDITORS.—The only thing new or worthy of note that has transpired here of late has been the discovery of a very rich quartz lead, running a north-west direction, into a hill facing Smith's Gulch.

There was a code of mining regulations adopted by the miners of the Salmon river mines in September last and again revised at a general meeting of miners held on the 12th inst., a copy of which it was resolved should be forwarded to the Washington Statesman for publication.

FEB. 3d, 1862.—The weather, which had been extremely cold up to the last of January—the thermometer ranging at from 28 to 35 degrees below zero—has so much changed that a thaw is anticipated.

Miner's Meeting in Salmon River Mines.—At a meeting of the miners of the Salmon River Mines, held on January 12th, 1862, the following laws were passed.

ARTICLE 1st.—These mines, known as Salmon River mines, situated between the head waters of Slate Creek and Meadow Creek—tributaries of Salmon River—shall be divided into the following districts, namely:

ARTICLE 2d.—Any person or persons discovering a Quartz ledge, or lode, shall be entitled to one claim each by location, and one by right of discovery.

ARTICLE 3d.—All claims shall be one hundred feet front, running back to the center of the hill. Gulch and creek claims shall be one hundred and fifty feet in length, running up and down the gulch or creek, and two hundred feet wide, measured from the center of the gulch or creek, one hundred feet each way.

ARTICLE 4th.—Quartz claims shall consist of two hundred feet each on the ledge or lode, with all its width, depth and angles.

ARTICLE 5th.—All claims through which twenty inches of water runs at the lowest stage, shall be considered creek claims; but this article shall not be construed as to conflict with creek claims located previous to this date.

ARTICLE 6th.—All persons locating claims, who do not enter upon and work the same, shall have their claims recorded within three days from date of such location.

ARTICLE 7th.—All persons holding mining claims in the districts herein defined, shall be required to do one day's labor in every ten on such claim or claims, until the first day of March next; and from the first day of March, one day's labor in every seven.

ARTICLE 8th.—Each claim, or claims, shall be entitled to a drain-race through any adjoining claim or claims.

ARTICLE 9th.—All controversies between miners in relation to mining claims, shall be settled on the claims disputed, by a meeting of the miners of their respective district, or by arbitration.

ARTICLE 10th.—All controversies between miners not included in the districts herein described, shall be settled by a meeting of the miners in the adjacent district, in connection with themselves, or by arbitration.

ARTICLE 11th.—The Recorder shall be allowed the sum of two dollars for recording each claim, and the book of records shall always be open for the inspection of the public. Each district shall elect their own Recorder, whose duty it shall be to keep a legible book of records and general mining laws of the district.

STOCK IN THE MOUNTAINS.—About two weeks since, most of the stock that had survived the winter up to that time, was driven into the foothills of the mountains, where they are subsisting chiefly upon grass and we learn are doing well.

VALENTINES.—Over a hundred billets-least passed through this office on the 14th inst. Cupids arrows flow about town at a rapid rate, and the post-master hasn't as busy a day for two months.

RECOVERING.—We are glad to learn that Mr. R. B. Smith, who a few weeks ago had his feet severely frozen while making a trip into the country, is rapidly recovering.

COUNTY ROAD.—We have seen a petition, numerously signed, praying the County Commissioners for the location of a county road from this place to Wallula. The petition sets forth that such a road is much needed and would be of great public utility.

LIEUT. MULLAN'S EXPEDITION.—Advices from Lieut. Mullan, received by express from his camp, dated January 25th, report all well; working every day, grading, bridging, &c.

WOOD THIEF.—There is a celebrated wood-thief living not far from this office, whom we would caution against further thefts of this kind, or he will receive a visit from an officer.

NINE-TENTHS of the stock in the vicinity of Lewiston has died of cold and starvation.

WORK OXEN.—Good work oxen now command $200 per yoke in this market.

Voiceless Verse.

"The world is rife with noble thought
That trembles on the tongue;
The world is full of melody
Unwritten and unsung.
The music of a march is sweet,
But action is nobler;
And you may live a nobler verse
Than can be told in rhyme!
Let lyrics and lutes, with tinkling breath,
To love sick girls belong;
The rhythm of a well-vent life
Is sweeter far than song.
I'm weary of the waste of words—
O'er world were not so dead;
If half our words would cease to write,
And live their verse instead."

Cutting Capers.

Sheridan used to relate of an Irish officer, who had once belonged to a regiment in Malta, and returned to England on leave of absence, and according to the custom of travelers, was fond of relating the wonders he had seen. Among other things, he one day, in a public coffee room, expatiated on the excellency of living in general among the military at Malta.
"But," said he, "as for anchovies, by the powers, there is nothing to be seen like them in the known world," and he added,
"I have seen the anchovies grow upon the trees, with my own eyes, many of the hundred times, and beautiful the grove of them that the Governor has in his garden on the esplanade."
A gentleman present disputed the statement that anchovies grow on trees, which the Irishman with much warmth reaffirmed.
The lie passed—a challenge was given—and the upshot of the matter is thus humorously related:
The Englishman gave his address, and the next day the parties met, attended by their seconds; they fired, and O'Flanagan's shot took effect in the fleshy part of his opponent's thigh, which made the latter jump a foot from the ground, and fall flat upon his back, where he lay a few seconds in agony, kicking his heels.
"You have hit your man, O'Flanagan,
that is certain, I think not dangerously,
however, for see what capers he cuts."
"Capers, capers!" exclaimed the Irishman. "Oh! by the powers, what have I done! what a dreadful mistake!" and running up to his wounded antagonist, he took his hand, and pressed it eagerly, thus addressed him: "My dear friend, if you're kilt, I ax your pardon in this world and in the next, for I made a devil of a mistake; and it was capers that I saw growing upon the trees at Malta, and not anchovies at all!"

PRINCE JOHN'S LATEST.—A good story was told us the other day about John Van Buren. He had taken some technical legal advantages, by which his opponent's client in an action was non-suited. The man was furious, and declared his purpose to give John a piece of his mind when he saw him;
he would "whip" him. Happening to see John one day at Downing's standing at the bar, getting outside a dozen of New York Boys, he boldly confronted the prince, and being a small man, looked up at him fiercely, and burst out—
"Mr. Van Buren, is there any client so low and mean, or in any case so nasty, that you won't undertake to defend him in it?"
"I don't know," said John, stopping to put away another oyster; then, bending down and confidentially drawing out his reply in the little man's ear, "what have you been doing?"

NEW RULES FOR GOING TO SLEEP.—Fix
the thoughts on some one thing. If you can't do that fix them on two things. Fix em! You can easily unfix them after you once get to sleep.
Don't go to sleep with your head down against the footboard, or your feet dangling on the floor. It disturbs the electric fluids.
A writer recommends to suspend a base drum over your head, within your reach, and pound on it with your fist. It will induce sound sleep.
The danger in falling asleep lies principally in the distance you fall. Those who are subject to such, should have a rope-ladder convenient to climb back on.
Dining late is a poor way of nodding.
In order to fall asleep with dispatch, don't eat anything the day previous.
Try to think of something you can't remember; the more you can't think of it, the sleepier you will get.
Count two millions slowly and deliberately. You will certainly be asleep before you have counted that number.

GOES BY STEAM.—There is a story of one of the hangers-on at Washington, who was appointed engineer, a business of which he had no knowledge. The day after his appointment a gentleman and two ladies had the curiosity to look at the engine-room and its machinery, where they found the new officer-holder on duty merely as gentleman usher, practical engineers doing the real duty of the so-called "assistant engineers."
"How many horse power is your engine?"
"Horse-power!" replies greeny, with a look of contempt, "don't you know the machine goes by steam?"

WORK.—"Work," said I, "earn your own perk, and see how sweet it will be;
work, and see how well you will be; work,
and see how cheerful you will be; work,
and see how independent you will be; work,
and see how happy your family will be;
work, and see how religious you will be;
for before you know where you are, instead of repining at Providence, you will find yourself offering up thanks for all the numerous blessing you enjoy."

MAN'S ACCOUNT WITH WOMAN.—Look here! you must allow that woman ought,
as much as in her lies, to make this world
a paradise, seeing that she lost us the original garden. We talk as philosophers; and, when all is said about what we owe to woman, you must own that we have a swinging balance against her. There's that little matter of the apple still to be settled.

A witty doctor said that tight lacing was a public benefit, inasmuch as it killed all the foolish girls, and left the wise ones to grow to be women.

It is with our health as with our property; we rarely trouble ourselves in looking seriously after it until it is gone.

NEITHER wealth nor birth, but mind only should be the aristocracy of a free people.
