The Heart's Review.

Away into ages long veiled in No More,
The heart looketh back thro' the eyes of the mind,
And seeth recline on the Past's sterile shore,
The moments Youth squandered away on the wind.

In the tomb of By-Gones, 'neath palls of Regret,
It vieweth full many a beauty repose,
Whose splendor laid hid, till its being laid rest,
Like perfume melted from the lips of the rose.

On Pillow of Lost, 'neath the shroud of Self-Will'd,
There lieth a legion of treasures in waste,
Whose grandeur and worth were all sighted and killed.

By hands of False Pride and breaths of rude Hate,
O, how the heart bleeds, when the Reason of Age
Summs up in the book of the Present the Past,
And counteth the whole on its history's page,
To balance its gains 'gainst the losses at last!

It feeleth the force of Life's ungodward speed,
Like the tornado's break o'er Reality's gate,
And mourneth in gloom when fair Truth doth proceed,
Too slow Rigret's dial is pointing "Too Late."

The Star Spangled Banner.
Fling forth that proud banner whose glorious light
Triumphantly shines o'er every ocean and sea;
We welcome the field though so dreadful and grey,
Spreads its gloom o'er the brave of the land and the sea.

"Fling forth that proud banner!—ah! whence was that
As borne on the blast from the mountain it came,
And hark! to the summons the valleys reply,
"Unremembered forever its brightness and fame!"

Flag of our country! thou standard of glory!
When menaced by traitors thy honor to save,
Remember that dag to your country—your own!
Ay! welcome the combat, and welcome the grave.

Think of the blood which your fathers have shed—
Think of the blood which that banner has cost;
Then swear by their tombs and the fields where they rest,
That no star shall be dimmed nor a tear shall be lost.

When to battle aroused by the shrill trumpet's sound
And the shouting of thousands come thund'ring afar,
When the fierce steeds with their charge shake the ground,
Midst the rage of the fight and the storm of the war,

Oh, look to that banner! its sight will inspire,
Your souls to high deeds of heroic renown;
Oh, look on that banner enraptured with fire,
And remember that dag to your country—your own!

Like a condor, alarmed for the fate of her young,
From the cliffs of the Andes she darts through
The air—
To the clouds her pinions all backward are flung,
The splendor of her screams bring affright and despair.

Ye sons of the hills, from your mountains descend,
In a whirlwind of flame, like your fathers of yore,
On the foes of the banner and swear to defend,
His stripes and his stars until time be no more.

Short, Scientific Lecture.
THE NOSE.

MY HEARERS: The above is a subject upon which there has been a great deal written and said. I might assert, without fear of contradiction, that no organ of (any) sense has received so much "blowing" as the nose. It is so prominent that it is often the first feature that strikes you in a stranger, particularly if you come in contact with him face to face. Small noses are said to denote indecision of character and narrow views. It follows, then, that big noses are attended by broad views—caused probably by the increased width between the eyes.

It isn't always the person who has the most nose that knows the most. The elephant, (which, gentlemen and ladies, is the largest animal in the known world,) has got a remarkable development of nose. It is very convenient for picking crackers out of the boys' caps at shows, squirting water through, &c.; and the elephant isn't half so knowing as the monkey, who hasn't any nose at all, only a dent in the face and two gullet holes.

"Plain as the nose on a man's face," is a common and at the same time a very incorrect expression, for the merest tyro in geography will tell you that the nose is a promontory and not a plane, unless it has been planed off, in which case the comparison would hold good.

The nose is the only organ that can sneeze, hence, no matter how homely it is, it is not to be "sneezed at" by any of the other organs.

The "Roman nose" was very popular among the ancient Romans, because of the most of them had it. With them, not to "know the pride in a Roman nose" was not to "be a Roman." Romulus, who founded Rome and hence was the first Roman, was the first one who had that peculiar nasal formation. His nose was straight originally, but his brother Remus, a spiteful little devil, pushed him over a heap of limestone rock from Sandusky, with which he was intending to build the city's walls, and striking upon his face his nose was broken in three places.

Thus originated the Roman nose, afterward a mark of distinction. A writer on noses gives quite a different account. He says the original form for that style of probovis was "roaming nose," indicating a disposition on the part of the possessor to roam about, poking his nose into other people's business. I am inclined to the former explanation, and consider the latter a slander upon a large and generally respectable class of community.

It is not considered polite in good society for one gentleman to wring another gentleman's nose with his thumb and finger though different views are entertained upon the subject in different localities. In Arkansas, it is an unusual thing for a man to chew his friend's nose off in the most urbane and gentlemanly manner, when a little heated in debate, a taste that I certainly cannot admire.

The shape of the nose leads people off on the wrong scent, frequently in judging character. Individuals are often called "judging noses," "stuck up," in short, when in fact they are quite the reverse, and have merely got a stuck up nose. A man cannot be snubbed with impunity simply because he has a snub nose, nor are pug noses invariably attended by disposition to pugnacity.

Snuff takers are the only ones, my hearers, who are literally "lead by the nose."—They have been known to pinch themselves for the necessities of life in order to give their nose the accustomed pinch. It is no unusual thing to see an aged couple closing a life of usefulness by degenerating into a pair of snufflers, and snuff themselves out at last. Upon this subject, "a" nuff ced.

My youthful hearers, you see numbers about you every day, whose noses have "passed the Rubicon," and are fast taking to themselves the hue of the red pepper pod, dead ripe. Remember that the pugiest pug noses are far more respectable than a bottle nose, and that nose painting is the most extravagant and ruinous way in which you "can cultivate an acquaintance with the elements." You hear me, Jo Bows.

A SINGULAR EPISODE OF THE WAR.
Years ago, two New England brothers, named Moody, left their Eastern home to push their fortunes in the world of usefulness and business. Being men of education, one took to the Bar, the other entered the Pulpit. The Lawyer settled in Mississippi, the Pastor in Ohio. Both won distinction in their professions, and both became prominent in their respective States. And, during all the years that passed, their mutually fraternal regard remained intimate and tender.

The war of rebellion broke out. Both brothers took up arms; the Lawyer in behalf of the rebellion, the Pastor in behalf of the Union. They both received commissions, the Lawyer as Captain George Moody and Chief of artillery in Longstreet's army, the Pastor as Colonel Granville Moody and commander of the 47th Ohio Volunteers. At the battle of Stone River the two brothers met each other in battle array,—the Rebel Captain under Bragg, the Union Colonel under Rosecrans. Subsequently Col. Moody resigned his commission and returned to the duties of the Pastor. Capt. Moody continued with Longstreet till he made his ill-fated assault on Knoxville. There being disabled, he was left at a farm house on the line of retreat, was taken prisoner, and sent to camp Chase, of which his brother had become commandant.

In the military prison attached to this camp he now lies tortured with inflammatory rheumatism, and with his exposure in the field rendered excruciatingly acute. Thus situated, in suffering and a prisoner, the rebel captain sent for his brother, the Union Colonel, to come to his assistance. The true and loyal brother came, bringing with him such material aid in the form of creature comforts, as well as with fraternal counsel, as would make his brother's situation comfortable. And Colonel Moody is now engaged in measures for his erring brother's release on parole, in view of taking him to his own home, so that he can there minister to his comfort and restore him to health; and with a fair prospect of success.

When Rev. Mr. Humphrey (now Major Humphrey) went to Col. Brackett, in Chicago, for authority to raise a cavalry company, he was asked by the Colonel if he had any references. This puzzled the parson a little, for it just occurred to him that he was away from home; but reflecting a moment, he remembered "Old Joe Knox" was practicing law in the city, and referred the colonel to him.

He was told by the colonel to return in a few hours, and a reply would be given.

In the meantime Col. Brackett saw Joe Knox, and made inquiries as to the character and standing of the parson.

"Do you know Mr. Humphrey, of Genesee, Mr. Knox?"

"What, Minister Humphrey, the Methodist preacher, colonel?"

"The same, sir."

"Yes, know him like a palm-book, sir."

"Well, what kind of a man is he?"

"Parson Humphrey will preach like Paul, pray like Stephen, and fight like h-I-I and d—n, sir!"

"All right."

At the expiration of two hours, Mr. Humphrey returned to the office of the colonel; as he stepped in, he was greeted with:

"There are your papers, Mr. Humphrey." And the parson left for Genesee with his papers in his pocket.

EVERYTHING GOING UP.—The following spicy, humorous, and sensible article we clip from the Piscataquis Observer: Everything up and going up—everything edible and wearable—things of use and things of fancy—things tangible and things intangible.

The good man of the house takes a look at his last year's coat, and concludes to have the button-holes re-worked and new buttons put on, and it will do very well for another season. His thrifty helpmate overlooks the household gear, and determines to cut down the bigger children's clothing for the little ones; but she makes an exception in favor of the young ladies, for they certainly must have new bonnets and dresses. Economy is installed as presiding goddess in every well-regulated family; not the false economy that enwraps itself in a robe of selfish and contemptible meanness—unheeding the cry of want and helplessness, cutting off the book, the newspaper, and the benevolent contribution, and pinching the seamstress and the laborer—but the discreet economy that guards against waste, and prefers to deny the senses rather than slight the mind and starve the soul—the prudent economy that will not indulge in a luxury that has not been honestly earned and paid for—the indispensable economy which, universally practiced, will carry us through the impending crisis.

CORRECTION.—At a christening, while a minister was making the certificate, he forgot the date, and happened to say:—"Let me see, this is the 30th."

"The thirtieth!" exclaimed the indignant mother. "Indeed, it is only the eleventh!"

Difficulty in Getting Married in Bavaria:
The author of a lately published work, Social Life in Munich, speaking of the marriage laws of Bavaria remarks:

Gretna Green is quite out of the question because by an article of the Police Code every man that gets married abroad without the permission of the mother country is liable to a fine of a hundred florins, or thirty days imprisonment. In the Palatinate there is perfect freedom in the matter of marriage and establishment, but only for the natives of the place.

Immigrants from the other provinces of Bavaria are treated accordingly to their own laws, and many poor couples who have been denied the right of marrying at home have spent their last savings in journeying across the Rhine, hoping in vain to find liberty there. The Bavarian Government do everything in their power to enforce the rule; the minute surveillance of the police in every town is such that a secret marriage could not by any possibility be made; unmarried couples may not live together, except Kings and Lohs and other highest Lordships. The consequent immorality makes of Munich a place where the illegitimate sometimes exceed the legitimate births in number. Here is another illustration of the workings of the law:

I have heard of a case of two poor people having to wait fifteen years for permission to marry, and spending two hundred florins on applications. One of the writers on the subject gives the following instance:

An operative earning 12 shillings a week was engaged to a girl earning 7 shillings, and owner of a house valued at £120 and a cow. They applied for permission to marry and were refused; "means of subsistence not assured." Time went on; they had two children, and still their application was refused on the same ground. The owner of the manufactory took up their cause and pleaded it himself with the official, saying that this refusal was not what was intended by the Government. The official replied curtly, "What does that matter to us; the Government may have its own ideas on the subject but we have ours, and I in particular am of opinion that such marriages are neither right nor useful." The author from whom I quote this adds, "While I am writing, my servant girl aged fifteen years, comes in dressed for a feast day, and says that her father and mother are to be married to-day, and she must henceforth be called by her father's name.

Twelve times her father's application for license to marry was rejected and each time he had to pay fees and expenses, lawyer's bills," etc.

A WARNING TO HAM EATERS.—The New York papers record the following extraordinary case: A family named Flaig, residing at No. 45 Elizabeth street, has recently been poisoned by eating uncooked ham.

One child having died, Coroner Nauman held an inquest thereon, when the testimony of Mrs. Werkmester, grandmother of the child, and of several physicians was taken. Three doctors who had examined the ham, testified that it was alive with microscopic insects known as trichina spiralis.

This insect is a borer, and when introduced into the human stomach pierces the coat of that organ in order to make its way into the muscles of the body, where it makes itself a nest and lives. Several instances of death from this cause are already recorded in the medical books. It is always unsafe to eat ham uncooked, for the trichina haunts that kind of flesh. Says another account: The symptoms were griping in the bowels, causing intense pain, accompanied with a violent diarrhoea. Medical aid was called in, and all the family stated that they were taken with the symptoms immediately after partaking of some raw ham. The suspected meat was subjected to a microscopic test, and found to be full of poisonous animalcules.

To the naked eye the ham looked perfectly good, and there was nothing in the taste to distinguish it from perfectly good fresh meat.

The "Paid Reporter" of the Syracuse Courier, who studies economy notwithstanding he is "paid," gives the following cheap recipe for getting up a sleigh-ride on short notice: "Sit in the hall in your night clothes, with both doors open so that you can get a good draft—your feet in a pair of ice-water—drop the front-door key down your back—hold an icicle in one hand and ring the tea-bell with the other." He says "you can't tell the difference with your eyes shut, and it's a great deal cheaper."

PERT.—We have some German friends up at Galena, who, in daily conversation, use the English language, but the mother teaches her children the same German prayers she used to repeat in her childhood, away back on the banks of the Rhine. One night, as little Earnest, a precocious chap of some four summers, was quietly going through his evening devotion, he suddenly electrified and astonished his pious mother, by exclaiming: "Ma, why do we always talk Yankee and pray German? Is God a Dutchman?"

A young and pretty girl stepped into a store where a spruce young man, who had long been enamored but dared not speak, stood behind the counter selling dry goods. In order to remain as long as possible, she cheeped everything and at last remarked, "I believe you think I am cheating you. 'O, no,' replied the youngster, to me you are always fair." "Well whispered the lady blushing as she laid an emphasis on the word. I would not stay so long bargaining if you were not so dear.

Punch says that a Yankee baby will crawl out of its cradle, take a survey at it, invent an improvement, and apply for a patent before he is six months old.

Don't Rock THE BABY.—If all the ultimate consequences of one's acts are to be laid to his charge, the man who invented rocking-bradles for children rests under a fearful load of responsibility. The downright murder of tens of thousands of infants, and the weakened brains of hundreds of thousands of adults, are undoubted results of this invention. To rock a child in a cradle, or to swing him in a crib, amounts to just this: the rapid motion disturbs the natural flow of the blood, and produces stupor or drowsiness. Can anybody suppose for a moment that such an operation is a healthful one? Every one knows the dizzy and often sickening effect of moving rapidly in a swing; yet wherein does this differ from the motion a child receives when rocked in a cradle? It is equivalent to lying in a ship berth during a violent storm; and that sleekens nine people out of ten.

A very gentle, slow motion, may sometimes be soothing, though always of doubtful expediency; but to move the cradle as rapidly as the swing of a pendulum three feet long—that is, once in a second—is positive cruelty. We always feel like grasping and staying the arm of the mother or nurse, who, to secure quietude, swings the cradle or orb with the rapidity equal to that of a pendulum a foot long. If any mother is disposed to laugh at our suggestions, or consider them whimsical, we beg of her to have a bed or cot hung on cords, then lie down on it herself, and have some one swing it with the same rapidity that she allows the cradle to be rocked. What she will experience in both head and stomach is just what the infant experiences.—Etc.

A NEW THING IN ART.—We have news from Paris of a remarkable extension of the uses of photography. Strange as it may appear, one may now enter a photographic studio, constructed with reference to the new process, be therein photographed in a few seconds, and, on calling the next day or the day after, instead of the usual photographic print of one's face or figure, an exact fac simile in the shape of a statuette in modeling clay is produced by the operator. The invention is French, and it has been patented in England, and in all the Continental States. The process appears to be simple, a mechanical application supplement

THE WASHINGTON STATESMAN

FRIDAY EVENING, APRIL 15, 1864.

PREJUDICED.—Many of the Administration organs throughout the country are beginning to manifest a bitter hatred for Gen. McClellan. They call him a traitor, a copperhead, a grave-digger, and seek by every possible means to lower him in the estimation of the people and bring his fair fame into bad repute. And why this unjust attack upon McClellan? Simply because his great popularity with the masses makes it highly probable that he will be the candidate of the conservatives in opposition to Mr. Lincoln in the next Presidential canvass.—As McClellan is now the worst abused man in the North, by the radicals, it is natural to infer that his chances to become the opposition candidate are better than those of any other man. Other prominent men come in for their proportion of vilification and abuse according to their respective merits and popularity with the people and their chances to become the nominee of the Chicago Convention. But "little Mac" gets the most of it. Here is a specimen of the style adopted by the journals alluded to, taken from the Carson City (Nevada T.) Independent:

"The Copperheads of the North have called a Convention to be held at Chicago on the 4th of July next, for the purpose of nominating a candidate of their persuasion for the Presidency. We presume the grave-digger of the Chickahominy will be their candidate. The man who has done more for the rebels, and less for the flag he was fighting under, will make a good standard bearer for such a party. If there is a man who deserves the execrations of all loyal men, that man is Geo. B. McClellan. To think of desecrating the anniversary of our National Independence by nominating a traitor for Chief Magistrate of our Republic. 'Oh! shame where is thy blush!'"

The writer of the above might well ask, "Oh! shame where is thy blush?" after unblushingly penning and giving publicity to such a villainous paragraph against the well-earned fame and name of one of the country's noble defenders. The editor in thus showing his venom and malignity upon McClellan and in the same article giving honest Abe a fulsome puff for the Presidency, shows that he is at least "prejudiced." It might be in this instance that the trite old saying "a man may smile and smile and be a villain," would fit his case. At any rate, whatever his case may be, whether he be honest or dishonest, whether prejudiced or blindly infatuated in favor of the existing Administration and its entire policy, it is certain that there are scores of editors who are the mere tools of corrupt officials and designing men, engaged, for a price, to applaud the reprehensible acts of the party in power, and to malign and vilify the character of all who dare bring those acts in question or doubt their wisdom and infallibility.

But a corrupt and venal press and the combined influence of the host of corrupt officials that disgrace the offices of the country will fail to induce the honest masses to believe that Gen. McClellan is anything else than a true patriot, who loves and has labored to preserve the Union the Constitution and the liberties of the people. The soldiers of the army of the Potomac who idolized him, while he commanded them and who still revere his name, will hardly believe him a traitor when the charge comes from such irresponsible sources. As evidence against McClellan's loyalty, the radicals assert that he is the man of all others in the North that the Southern people would best like to see occupy the next Presidential seat. If that be so, and if it proves anything, it proves that they would rather live in the Union under the Administration of a conservative President than under a radical one whom they would hold in contempt and despise. By this standard of "loyalty," in choosing for the next President the people of the North should take for their candidate the man that would be most odious and despicable with the Southerners, as the one best calculated to ally sectional animosities and restore national harmony and unity. Such a President, once in power, the more he could exasperate and embitter the feelings of those misguided people, by whatever means, the speedier would the two sections embrace each other and be bound together by ties of affection and brotherly love. This is a sort of reasoning which sounds more like deceit or insanity than common sense. It is a sort of progressive logic which is becoming very common of late and which reasons backwards from facts instead of forwards. But such reasoning in fact looks like a settled purpose, on the part of those who make use of it, to deceive the people and make renunciation an utter impossibility.—To denounce treason, secession, Jeff. Davis and all those who labor to establish a Southern Confederacy and break up the Federal Republic, is certainly commendable, and it is therefore commendable and just to uphold all those great and good men who have sought on the bloody fields of battle to crush rebellion; and it is contemptible, to say the least, in those who denounce as traitors, men who have not only not thrown any impediments in the way of a reunion of all the States, but have labored with untiring zeal and are still laboring, to accomplish that glorious purpose. Gen. McClellan had well matured and fixed principles in the beginning of the war, and he still holds to those principles. Others who started out proclaiming the same views with him and urging the same measures and general policy to be pursued for the final overthrow of the rebellion, have changed and are now floundering in a sea of doubts and uncertainties. Whether McClellan's policy is the very best that could have been adopted, or not, is a question which people can decide for themselves; but whether best or not, we are willing to believe that he thought so from the first and that he has acted in good faith throughout for the cause of the Union. He has at all events been straightforward, bold and consistent.

MAJOR HALLER.—Most of our citizens and of the citizens of the Territory are acquainted with Major G. O. Haller, and will perhaps take an interest in knowing why (?) he was dismissed from the service of the United States. Charges of uttering disloyal sentiments were preferred against him, which he denied and asked for a Court to investigate the charges, but was refused by Secretary Stanton. He has issued a pamphlet upon the subject, and the reader will glean from the following extracts from it the extent of his "disloyalty" and the reasons why he was so summarily dismissed:

The facts presented in these pages contain internal evidences of the destruction of those fundamental principles which have heretofore regulated at least the administration of the War Department. It will be difficult to shut out from one's mind the evidence that we are now governed on the principle that "might makes right" to the exclusion of those principles which relied on their inherent wisdom and justice for the support of the American people. It will be difficult to believe otherwise than that the Secretary of War is conscious that his charges of "disloyal conduct and the utterance of disloyal sentiments" cannot be sustained and will not bear a moment's investigation; else why does he mutely refuse me an investigation of his direct charges against me? But the most remarkable thing connected with my dismissal is the tribunal which brought it about. The informer is one Joseph H. Holt, * * * the prosecutor is Col. Joseph Holt, * * * and the Judge and Executive is Edwin M. Stanton. And these were devoted friends (?) of the Democratic Administration while Mr. Buchanan dispensed the public patronage; but they are now devoted friends of the Administration, or the Government.

Of the latter two it is generally understood, they were competitors for the office vacated by Mr. Cameron, Ex-Secretary of War, and the influence of Gen. McClellan at that time with the President obtained for Mr. Stanton the Port-folio. Such partiality and kindness with most gentlemen would have created a feeling of indebtedness and a disposition to support to the utmost such a benefactor. We might naturally expect cordiality and harmony in the councils of the Secretary of War and General-in-Chief. But public sentiment had recognized in Gen. McClellan a Military Genius—the military operations in all quarters were prosperous, and victories marked our path—and all successes were ascribed to him. The power and abilities of the Secretary of War seemed lost to public view. This did not suit Mr. Stanton. He soon took upon himself the Command-in-Chief the army—he soon took away from McClellan a part of his army, and he saved Richmond from McClellan's grasp! Yes! and if McClellan's Generalship had not saved his army on the Chickahominy Creek, Mr. Stanton's Generalship would have given the Southern Confederation such a victory as would have secured the recognition of their independence by Europe.

In the foregoing pages I have given a synopsis of my military service for twenty-four years. * * * I believe my services have uniformly been satisfactory. Notwithstanding I have been on many well-fought battle fields, and have on all occasions faithfully discharged my duties; notwithstanding I have endured great privations, hardships and dangers; notwithstanding I have aided as far as laid in my power to restore the Federal authority in the States now in rebellion. I have been expelled from the army overwhelmed with whatever of infamy it is possible for Mr. Stanton to heap upon me, and he has exchanged my knowledge and experience in War for a person who must enter the regular army at the bottom of second lieutenants, and then learn his profession.

Is it then disloyal to examine into and speak of the conduct of members of the Administration? On this point I will quote Judge Pearson of the Dauphin district of Pennsylvania, who is well known for his Administration sentiments, or to use the language of the newspaper before me, "a double-dyed Republican. In a charge to his Grand Jury on the subject of disloyalty, he says:

"Do not misunderstand me on this point: men have the most unlimited right to condemn, and if you please, to rail at the National Administration, and to object to the manner in which it conducts public affairs. Parties will always exist in every free country, and whether men will sustain, or oppose a particular Administration is one in which there should ever be the most perfect freedom of opinion. There certainly can be no difficulty with persons of ordinary intelligence in drawing the distinction between sustaining the Government itself, and sustaining or opposing those who temporarily administer its affairs (i. e. the Administration). The latter is a question of party, the former of patriotism.

I have sometimes canvassed the proceedings of the Administration, but always without one thought of disloyalty to the Constitution, and Mr. Seward expressly says this canvassing is "even essential to its stability." We find above that the Government is one thing and the Administration's quite another,—that our loyalty is entirely due to the Constitution and it is our duty to maintain it in its integrity. From the commencement of the Secession agitation, my only desire has been to see the question settled, so that Union and Fraternity would still exist. "All my conversations and writings aimed at this one object. I have endeavored to be purely patriotic. The Constitution knows no North and no South, and I have thought only of the benefits which will flow from a PER-

SEVED, not a reconstructed Union. Even if I had done a wrong my offense must be slight, for I had never voted nor circulated tickets against the Administration: I had neither written for newspapers nor spoken at public meetings; my duties prevented my interfering in any way with elections, and yet my conduct is denounced by Mr. Stanton as disloyal, and it is extraordinary that he will not allow me to see or get a copy of the secret proceedings upon which he charges me with disloyalty—the Articles of War to the contrary notwithstanding. * * * And I will venture to say that my dismissal rests upon the special pleadings of Col. Holt, the Judge Advocate General, whose implacable malignity towards Gen. McClellan extends to those subordinate officers who have a high regard for him. In my position I had peculiar opportunities to observe the General's private character and worth, as well as his military abilities. I have often made 'grand rounds' of the Headquarters' guards at two o'clock in the morning and even later, and found the lights still burning in his tent, and the General engaged in his studies and duties of the field. I have seen and felt the enthusiasm which his presence among the soldiers has inspired, and heard their loud and heartfelt 'huzzas! I have frequently spoken of his merits, but even if he had lacked ability, I have seen at the devotion to him of the army of the Potomac was sufficient reason to retain him in the field, for it was worth thousands of soldiers. This, in the eyes of Col. Holt, is no doubt a crime, and when the proceedings of his secret inquisition are dragged to light and placed before the public, it will be found that my greatest crime is that I have been the commandant of Gen. McClellan's Headquarters during his campaign in Eastern Virginia and Maryland.

FROM HELLGATE.—Mr. John S. Caldwell, writing from Heligate, Bitter Root Valley, to Mr. John A. Simms, under date of Jan. 31st, says:

On the 24th inst., twenty-one of the Vigilance Committee visited Heligate and hung—Skinner, John Cooper and Alex. Carter, and on the 25th they hung Geo. S. Burns and Robert Zachary. At Fort Owen they hung Wm. Graves, alias Whiskey Bill; and in December and January they hung twenty-one of the rascals. The Committee made their appearance unexpectedly to every one, and they had no trouble in getting their victims. They came to the house where I was stopping and got George Shears and hung him in fifteen minutes. The Committee bury none they hang, so the citizens have to bury the dead.

Some of the robbers acknowledged robbing Frush and Sherwood's Rocky Mountain Express, last summer. The band of robbers had become so bold that if they saw a man venture out alone any distance from his house they would kill and rob him. For instance, at Charles Allen's a man went out about two hundred yards from the house, and they attacked him, robbed him of seventy-five cents—all the money the poor fellow had—and then beat him over the head with a revolver till they thought he was dead; but he recovered. Samuel Buntun [brother of Bill] got into a row at Salt Lake and had his bowels cut out.

The merchants of this section cannot go down the Missouri river this season for goods on account of the Sioux Indians; so they will have to get them from some other source—from Portland, provided the Mullan road is put in condition for travel.

MONTEANA.—According to our latest dispatches, the bill providing for the organization of the Territory of Montana had been amended in the Senate. The word "white" was struck out in the clause bearing upon the qualification of voters. The Senate is so overwhelmingly black, that we are left in doubt as to whether the bill as amended disfranchises white persons or only places the "freedmen" of the ebony persuasion on an equal footing with white citizens. Garrett Davis, of Kentucky, subsequently, while the Senate was deliberating upon amending the U. S. Constitution so as to prohibit slavery or involuntary servitude, except for the punishment of crime, offered the following:

"No negro, or person whose mother or grandmother is or was a negro, shall be a citizen of the United States, or eligible to any civil or military office, or to any place of trust or profit under the United States." When the eyes and noses were called for upon the resolution there was found to be no quorum present and the Senate adjourned.—It is altogether probable that the Republican members were unprepared to give a vote and left the Senate without a quorum for the purpose of consulting as to how they should evade or meet the question. But in leaving out the word "white" in the Montana bill, the country can be left in no doubt that all of the more radical members would vote against the resolution at once if they believed anything like a majority of the people would sustain them in so doing. As the N. Y. Times says, "there is hardly a Northern State yet quite ready to endorse negro equality," and this being true, as a matter of policy, we take it the radicals will await the "progress of events" before they make practical, by legislation, the sublime idea of the higher-law theorists, that "all men are created free and equal."

THE INDIANS in the vicinity of the John Day Mines, continue their depredations upon the whites. A party of six men, who left Canyon city a few weeks ago in pursuit of outlaw Indians are supposed to have been overpowered and murdered by them, as the time during which they had intended to be absent had long passed at last advices. The horses belonging to a detachment of the Oregon Cavalry sent to that country several weeks ago, were driven off by the Indians and the soldiers left on foot.

Report of Grand Jury Relative to County Books and its Jail. On examination of our County Jail we find it to be entirely unadapted for a place of safe-keeping and recommend that immediate steps be taken to make it secure.

The books of the Probate Court we find incomplete, there being no Ledger nor Fee Book—the former to show the Debit and Credit of each estate; the latter to show the charges for fees in detail and not in bulk, as heretofore. These books appear to us indispensable; in fact, our Statute provides for them. See section 9, page 200.

The books of the Auditor and Treasurer, we are pleased to report, as far as Book-keeping is concerned, are in admirable condition, showing each and every entry in a clear and perceptible manner, and are worthy of praise for their cleanliness and correctness.

The indebtedness of the county we find to be $17,000, exclusive of legal interest, $7,000 of which—paid for the Jail above reported upon—with a number of other county orders, stand recorded since 1862, bearing interest. In consideration of the unfortunate financial affairs of the county, we recommend the propriety of voting in favor of the 7 mill act passed by the Legislature, subject to the decision of the voters of the County—the proceeds of which to apply on outstanding scrip exclusively; according to the Number of the scrip. Unless this be done the county will not be able to liquidate its indebtedness, and consequently cannot entertain the idea of making the necessary repairs needed, not only on the Jail, but throughout the county, generally. Our last legislative assembly in its wisdom, saw fit to reduce our county taxes from 7 to 5 mills, the proceeds of which are barely sufficient to pay current expenses, and therefore will not reduce its heavy indebtedness by calling in scrip, nor allow improvements in the county to be made; nor can the commissioners even practice that noble and glorious virtue, "Charity," by taking care of its sick and dead citizens, and all this through the depreciation of its scrip.

All of which we respectfully submit. S. MAXSON, Foreman. GRAND JURY ROOM, WALLA WALLA, April 12, 1864.

Letter From Colville. COLVILLE, April 23, 1864.

EDS. STATESMAN:—I do not think it unfair that you should be posted occasionally with regard to matters up here that interest all the people in this part of our territory. We have been called "Barbarians," but we are going to show our humanity by giving you a little reliable news from the Kootenai and "Columbia Head" mines. Mr. Linklighter, an employe of the Hudson Bay Company, has just arrived from the Tobacco Plain Post. From him we get a few items of interest, worth noting. There was little or no snow the past winter in the mining region. Stock kept in remarkably good order. He brought with him about one hundred dollars of beautiful gold dust, that was taken out sometime during the winter. He informs us that an old man and two of his sons went from his place and worked in the mines some eight days, and during that time they took out six hundred dollars. They washed only with a common pan, making more than twenty-five dollars per day to the hand. This proves beyond a doubt that these mines are rich; for if a "barbarian" can make twenty-five dollars per day with the rude implements of the pick, pan and shovel, one of the enlightened ought to be able to make a heap more.

There has been a party fitted out at this place and sent up to the mines via the Columbia river and Great Lakes. The object is to ascertain, if possible, if that country cannot be reached cheaper and more expeditiously by navigation, than by land. Some of the Hudson Bay employes say it will take but ten days to reach the gold fields from this place with five ton boats. Should this prove to be correct, supplies can reach the mines and be sold at nearly the Boise prices.

So soon as we get a correct and reliable report from the expedition, I will inform you of all the particulars worth knowing.

LEAGUES.—The secret societies known as "Union Leagues" are fast falling into disrepute, and the order will no doubt soon be buried in a dishonorable grave and be held in equal contempt with the dead ashes of Know-nothingism. These leagues have become the mere instruments of the radical party and only serve as an engine to foist corrupt demagogues and fanatics into place and power, and the sooner they are cast aside by the honest and well-meaning, the better it will be for the country. A man who is afraid to proclaim his Unionism in the light of day to the world, and sneaks at the dead hour of night into secret conclave, to make his sentiments known—well, we don't know what such a man might do, but it is safe to say that he would steal chickens on his way home from the league, if cowardice did not prevent him. If ever the midnight prowlers get banded together in this section we shall give people due warning to look out for their chickens and valuables.

The Governor of Iowa, in view of an anticipated large emigration from that State to the Pacific, has issued the following proclamation, to prevent persons escaping from the draft:

"No person will be permitted to leave the State in that direction without a proper pass from the Provost Marshal of the district in which he claims to reside; and passes will be granted only to those who make satisfactory proof that they are going out of the State for a temporary purpose, and of their intention to return—and be in the State on the 10th of March.

Nor So.—The report that Kenj. Harding, Senator from Oregon, had declared in favor of Mr. Lincoln for the next Presidency is unfounded.

Council Proceedings. CITY COUNCIL CHAMBER, April 12th, 1864.

Present.—His Honor, Mayor Craig, Messrs. Guichard, Abbott and Thibodo.

Minutes of the previous meeting read and approved. The newly elected City officers were sworn in, as follows: Mayor—Otis L. Bridges. Common Council—Geo. L. Thomas, Geo. McCully, A. J. Thibodo, P. M. Lynch and J. F. Abbott. Mr. Guichard submitted a verbal report of the financial condition of the city, and recommended various measures for the action of the new Council.

On motion, the Council adjourned sine die. The new Council having been called to order Dr. A. J. Thibodo was elected President.

A. L. Brown was appointed City Clerk. Mayor Bridges then addressed the Council in a practical business-like speech, showing that he fully understood the condition and interests of the City, and demonstrating that he should spare no effort to promote her prosperity.

The following Committees were appointed: Ways and Means and Current Expenses—Messrs. Thomas, Abbott and McCully. Elections and Fire Department—Messrs. Abbott, Lynch and McCully. Health, Police, and Public Improvements—Messrs. Thomas, McCully and Thibodo. Fire Wardens—R. Guichard, H. Howard and E. H. Massan.

Report of City Treasurer for quarter ending April 12th, 1864, was received.

Mr. W. W. Johnson submitted a plan for laying out and fencing the City Cemetery explaining his diagram and views in detail.

On motion, the subject was referred to the Committee on Public Improvements. The Bonds of the various city officers were approved.

Adjourned. A. L. BROWN, City Clerk.

IMPORTANT TO LAND CLAIMANTS.—We are indebted to Mr. Washington Hall, for the following letter from the Register at Vancouver, in relation to land claims.

REGISTER'S OFFICE, VANCOUVER, } March 21st, 1864. } TO WASHINGTON HALL, } Walla Walla, W. T. }

SIR: I have received a letter signed by yourself and four others, asking for information in relation to your land claims. In reply, I have to state, that you can hold forty acre lots on each side of a section line. It is only necessary that the land be in compact form, in one body. It will not do if it merely touches at the corners, thus: but it must actually join by a line.

In case the State line should pass through either of your claims it would be unfortunate, as it would give you much trouble, but it would not invalidate your claim. I know of no way in which land on both sides of the line could be held by one man, as a preemption, but it might as a homestead. You would have to enter the part in Washington Territory at this office, and the part lying in Oregon, at the office at Oregon City, and it would be necessary to appear in person at both offices. Or you might file your declaratory statement upon the part including your residence, in the proper office, and after proving up and paying for it, go to the other office and enter the balance under the homestead act as an adjoining farm, but in such case you would run the risk of losing the last part. The best way would be to enter both parts at once as a homestead. Very Respectfully, JOSEPH M. FLETCHER, Register.

The St. Louis correspondent of the Sacramento Union says a bill drawn up by Senator Nesmith, of Oregon, to provide for suitable protection to the overland emigration to the Pacific States, has passed both Houses of Congress. The bill appropriates $40,000—of which it is provided that $10,000 shall be used in providing a suitable military escort on the Fort Benton route, and $10,000 on the route from Niobrara, on the Missouri river, by the valley of the Niobrara, to Idaho Territory. The remainder will be expended on the usual route.—Captain Crawford, will leave the Missouri river with his command on the 1st of June.

TEAM DROWNED.—On Saturday last Mr. C. McWhirk, while on his way from Snake river to this city lost two valuable horses by drowning, in the Touchet. On arriving at the bridge, the horses seemed to want water and Mr. M. drove them into the river at the ford above the bridge for the purpose of watering them. The river being unusually high, as soon as the horses struck the current they were tamed down stream and became entangled in a pile of drift wood above the bridge. In the meantime the wagon was upset and the horses were thrown and, with the wagon turning over and over, were floated down the river several hundred yards and drowned. Mr. M. and the gentleman who was with him, saved themselves by catching at the bridge as the wagon floated under it.

CANDY.—Candy-making has been added to the branches of "home industry" in this city. The first batch of this kind of 'sweetness long drawn out' was manufactured at the establishment of Mr. W. V. Brown, under the new Daguerrean Gallery, on Main street, this week. Dealers here and above can hereafter be supplied with this article without sending to Portland or San Francisco.

THE WAR IN "EGYPT."—Late dispatches make no mention of the insurrection in Illinois, reported in last week's news. Whether the telegraph fabricated the story to impose upon our credulity or whether the particulars have been suppressed, of course we have no means of determining.

NEW SUBJECT.—Mr. Newel, of the Mountaineer has found a new subject for Mrs. Sallie B. Thayer, the lecturer, and suggests it in the following pointed style: "During the absence of the Editor, Sallie B. Thayer left the Dallas, forgetting to settle a small bill due the printer. We suggest that in future lectures she dilate upon the 'duty of paying the printer!'"

TANNERY.—Two gentlemen, lately arrived from below are making arrangements for the erection of a tannery on the northwest side of Mill creek, on Mr. Shawble's claim, adjoining the city. Where hides are so cheap and leather so dear, a tannery will be a profitable institution to the proprietors, and a great benefit to the country in general.

SHINGLE MANUFACTURE.—Mr. John Picard, carpenter, has sent below for a shingle machine, which he designs to set up in this city and will have in operation in three or four weeks. Shingles have of late been selling at $13 per thousand, and Mr. P. proposes, when he gets his machine started to supply them at $7.

A LARGE proportion of the passengers that now come up from below are Chinamen en route for the different mining camps.—The "Celestials" have composed the larger proportion of the strangers that have been stopping in our city during the past week.

LARGE CROPS.—The present spring has been especially propitious for farmers in this valley, and if no "preventing providence" should intervene, the present season's crops will be the largest and best ever produced here.

ONE of the Indians brought down from Colville last week and tried in the District Court for the murder of the man at Kettle Falls, was found guilty of murder in the first degree and sentenced to be hung on Friday the 27th of May. The other one, it appeared from the testimony, had nothing to do with the murder and sought to prevent the deed. The guilty Indian is to be taken back to Colville, by order of the commander of the post there, where he will be hung.

MAJOR G. O. HALLER, has written to friends here that it is his intention to come out the present season and settle permanently in Washington Territory—perhaps in this valley.

MINING hands are reported scarce at Canyon city, on account of the great exodus from there to Boise. Wages in that camp are $5 per day.

DELAYED.—The expedition which was to have left the Fort this week, has been delayed in getting out-fitted for the trip and will probably not get off until about the 1st of May.

FOUND.—Near Wells, Fargo & Co's Express office, an autotype likeness of a lady and child, which the owner can have on application at this office.

THE NEW COUNCIL met on Tuesday evening and organized by electing Dr. A. J. Thibodo, President, and A. L. Brown, Clerk.

A PRIVATE letter from Heligate says that for one week during the month of January the mercury stood at forty-six below zero.

A DETACHMENT of twenty troops belonging to Company — Oregon Cavalry, Fort Lapwai, arrived here this week. They are to be attached to Capt. Curry's Company for the expedition to the plains.

The California papers, after a week's jubilee over their equinoctial storm, are again predicting a drought. The Marysville Appeal says: "The earth is now as dry as it was before the storm, and if there was any cause of panic about breadstuffs, the same exists to-day. Unless we have more rain immediately we look to see wheat and flour take another start!"

EASTERN dispatches say that about two hundred wagons leave St. Joseph, Mo., daily for Idaho.

DIED.

SULLIVAN.—At Phillips Ranch, Indian Valley, Ore. Gen. Mrs. Cordelia Ann Sullivan, aged 77 years and six months. (Dialo. Assoc. please copy.)

Religious Notice.—Quarterly meeting will be held in the M. E. Church on next Saturday and Sabbath—services commencing at 11 o'clock a. m., April 15, 1864. JOHN PLANS, P. E.

The Waiting. BY JOHN G. WHITTIER. I wait and watch: before my eyes Methinks the night grows thin and gray; I wait and watch the eastern skies To see the golden spears arise Beneath the oriflame of day!

Like one whose limbs are bound in trance, I hear the day sounds swell and grow, And see across the twilight glance, Troop after troop in swift advance, The shining ones with plumes of snow.

I know the errand of their feet, I know what mighty work is theirs; I can not lift up hands unmeet, The thrashing-floors of God to heat, And speed them with unworthy prayers.

I will not dream in vain despair The steps of progress wait for me; The pay leverage of a hair The planet's impulse will appear, A drop of dew the tided sea.

The loss, if loss there be, is mine, And yet not mine if understood; For one shall grasp and one resign, One drink life's use and one its wine, And God shall make the balance good.

Oh power to do! Oh, baffled will! Oh, prayer and action! ye are one; Who may not strive, may yet fulfill The harder task of standing still, And good but wished with God is done.

Black and Blue Eyes.
Black eyes most dazzle in a hall; Blue eyes most please at evening fall; The black a conquest soonest gain; The blue a conquest most retain; The black bespeak a lively heart, Whose soft emotions soon depart; The blue a steeper flame betrays, That burns and lives beyond a day; The black may feature best disclose; The blue may feelings all repose; Then let each reign without control, The black all mind, the blue all soul.

The Midnight Shriek.
VENGEANCE. CHAPTER I. She wept! CHAPTER II. She dried up! CHAPTER III. As the maiden wept her last breath away she fell fainting upon a pile of chips. CHAPTER IV. There is something terribly sublime in the scene referred to in the foregoing chapter. How long that fragile form lay, unconscious of passing events, the writer knoweth not; but at length her eyes detected a shadow which caused her to look up. She gave a long, loud and piercing shriek, which rent the night and drove the chickens off the roost. CHAPTER V. "My adored and lovely Jemmy," softly whispered the wooing lover, "is it thus I find you after a protracted absence, mingling the salutiferous elements which flow from your optic orbs with the mutilated fragments which had once their existence in the mighty giants of the forest?" Jemmy clasped her forehead, and could only utter "Come to my arms!" CHAPTER VI. The Plot Thickens. There lay the innocent lovers, who had fainted in each other's arms, un mindful of the night of time and a big burly youth who was watching the unique proceedings through an aperture in his father's dilapidated pig pen. CHAPTER VII. We must now take leave of the following incidents till the reader is better informed as to the position and origin of the tenement which had been deserted by the porcine quadruped, from which our hero was fast getting ready to leave. The opposite end from the north inclined perceptibly to the south, so that when old Boreas blew his loudest blast from the west it fell harmless upon those extremities. It was built upon a romantic site, and the very roof being built precisely over it testified somewhat to shelter the juvenile porkers which once inhabited it from the driving storms which used to beat so unmercifully upon that structure when it storming hard. It was one of those tenements which would strike the beholder as being a pig pen, which it was. CHAPTER VIII. With a frightful effort the youth cleared the top-log, and rushed frantically to the spot. His first impulse was to stamp the unconscious lovers imperceptibly with the chips, but a manlier impulse smote his heart as his eyes fell upon the palpitating bosom of Jemmy. His feelings were touched, and unable to quell the rising tide of emotion, he too fell prostrate across the fainting forms of Reuben and Jemmy!!!! CHAPTER IX. They were up quicker than I have told it. Restoratives were immediately applied, but only once did his feeble voice mingle with the surrounding melancholy. He asked for bread and cheese!!!! CHAPTER X. Let the traveler, as he passes by, linger a moment and reflect upon the sad drama that was enacted upon that pile of chips. When the shadows fade away and twilight veils the dim horizon—when naught creeps into the Egyptian darkness but venomous reptiles and spiders—when no sound rends the balmy night air but the heavy ostent of the tom cat—when in the dead hour of night, comes a phantom lover from out that pile of chips, ever pleading in hungry accents for bread and cheese!!!! PLAIN—"I am astonished, my dear young lady, at your sentiments. You make me start." "Well, Sir, I have been wanting you to start for the last hour." Gail Hamilton says: "Precocious children grow who do not die young, develop into idiots." Better be accused of a vice, being innocent, than acquitted of it, being guilty. The most and the best that is done for you must be done by you. Don't tempt a cudgelling unless you have some ability to cudgel. If an allegation is made against you consider the character of the allegator. Many run about after felicity, like an absent man hunting for his hat while it is on his head. When the head and the heart eat each other's parts, both perform indifferently.—Let each stick to its role. The world is not greater than man. No man is called on to lose his own balance for the world's advancement.
