Old Friends Together.

O time is sweet when roses meet.
With Spring's sweet breath around them;
And sweet the cost, when hearts are lost,
If those we love have found them;
And sweet the mind that still can find
A star in darkost weather;
But nought cau he so weet to see
As old friends meet together.

As old friends meet together.
Those days of old, when youth was
And time stole wings to reced it.
And you ne'er know how fast time
Or, knowing, ild not heed it;
Though gray each brow that meet
For age brings wintry weather,
Yet nought can be as were to see
As those old friends together.

The few long known, whom years have shown With hearts that friendship bless; A haul to cheer, perchance a tear, To soothe a friend's distress; Who helped and tried, still side to side, A friend to face hard weather: O this may we yet joy to see, this may we yet joy to see, And meet old friends together.

A Goor One.—A good joke is told of Judge L.—. He always kept a demijohn of good Jamaica in his private office for his own comfort and the entertainment of his particular friends. The Judge had noticed for some time that on Monday morning his Jamaica was considerably lighter than he had left it on Sunday night Ameter for had left it on Sunday night. Another fact had gradually established itself in his mind. His son Sam was missing from his paternal pew in church on Sundays. One Sunday afternoon Sam came in and went up stairs rather heavily, when the Judge called him:

Sam, where have you been?

'To church, sir,' was the prompt reply.

'What church, Sam?'

Second Methodist, sir.'

Had a good sermon, Sam?''

'Very powerful, sir; it quite staggered.

me."

"Ah! I see," caid the Judge, "quite powerful, ch, Sam?"

The next Sunday the son came home
rather earlier than usual, and apperently not so much "under the weather."

His father hailed him with:

"Well. Sam been to the Second Meth"Well. Sam been to the Second Meth-

"Well, Sam, been to the Second Methodist again to-day?"
"Yes, sir."

"Good sermon, my boy?"

"Fact was, Eather that I couldn't get; the church was shut up and a ticket on

Sam says, on going to the office for his usual spiritual refreshment, he found the

THE DUTIES OF A MOTHER.—By the quiet fireside of home, the true mother, in the midst of her children, is sowing as in the vases of earth the seeds of plants that sometimes give to heaven the fragrance of their blossoms, whese fruit shell be a rosary of angelic deeds, the noblest offering that she can make through the ever ascending and expanding souls of her children to their Maker. Every word that she utters goes from heart to heart with a power of which she little dreams. Philosophers tell us in their speculations that we cannot lift a finger without moving the distant spheres.—Solemn is the thought, but not more solemn to a christian mother than the thought that every word that falls from her lips—every ward that falls from her lips—every the sheltered walk and reirrement of home, may leave an indelible impression on the young souls around her, and form, as it were, an underlying strain of that education which peoples heaven.

In "Notes of an Army Surgeon." is re-

which peoples heaven.

In "Notes of an Army Surgeon," is related an anecdote of a barber who, while having the stump of his arm dressed, (the limb had just been shot off.) burst into a loud laugh. "What is the matter? this does not strike me as anything very laughable," said the surgeon. "Indeed it is not," was the reply, "but I lost my arm in such a funny way, that really I cannot help laughing when I think of it. You see our first sergeant wented shaving badly; and as I always shaved him, it was of course my business to do it then. We went together in front of his tent; I had lathered him, took him by the nose, and was just applying the razor, when a cannon ball came, and that was the last I saw of his head and my arm. Excuse me, doctor, for laughing so, but I never saw such a thing before."

WE once knew a Quaker who was forced into a fight with a quarrelsome neighbor.

After a little scuffling, the Quaker's nose came into a violent contact with the other man's fist, causing our friend's nose to bleed man's fist, causing our friend's nose to bleed profusely. Quaker became enraged, and immediately took his opponent down, and, getting astride him, addressed him thus:

"Friend, I won't hurt thee, neither will I strike thee, but I will let my nose bleed in thy face;" which he did entirely to his own satisfaction and to the great disgost iof his adversary. The Quaker's victory was com-
