'Weston,' said Mr. Dayton to one of his

The Parsimonious Clerk.

'Weston,' said Mr. Dayton to one of his clerks, as they were alone in the spacious counting-room, which was attached to the large store of which Mr. D. was proprietor, give me leave to say that I do not think your dress sufficiently genteel to appear as a clerk in a fashionable store.' A deep blush suffused the face of the young man, and in spite of his endeavors to repress it, a tear glistened in his full, black eyes.

'Did I not know that your salary was sufficient to procure more genteel habiliments, I would increase it.' 'My salary is anoly large, sir,' replied Weston, with a mortified air, but with that proud independence of feeling of which even poverty had not because to different appearance in the future. You are watched in the store.' Weston turned and left his employer, who muttered to himself, as he took up his paper, 'how I do detest these parsimonious fellows.' Mr. Dayton was a man of immense wealth. He was a widower and had but one obild, a daughter, who was the pride of his declining years. She was good as an angel and as beautiful as she was good. She was simple in her tastes and appearance. Such was Laura Dayton when Weston May first became an inmate of her father's house, and what wonder was it that he soon learned to love her with a deep and ardent affection. Though their tongues never gave utterance to what their hearts felt, yet the language of their eyes was too plain to be mistaken. their eyes was too plain to be mistaken. Weston was the very soul of honor, and al-though be perceived with pleasure that he was not distasteful to her, still he felt that he must conquer the passion which glowed in his heart.

'I must not win her heart,' he said to him "I must not win her heart," he said to him-self; 'I am penniles, and her father would never consent to our union.' Thus he rea-soned and thus he mainfully endeavored to subduc, what he considered an ill-fated pas-sion. Laura had many suitors, and some who were worthy of her, but she refueed all their overtures with decisive yet geatle firm-

Her father wondered at her conduct, but would not strive to alter her inclinations. He was in the decline of life, and wished to see her happily settled ere he departed this world. It was not long before he surmised that young Weston was the new the surmised that young Weston was the cause of her in-difference to others. The pleasure which she took in hearing him proised, the blush which mantled her face when their eyes which mantled her face when their eyes met, served to convince the old gestleman that they took more than a common interest in each other. He forebore to make any remarks upon the subject and was not so dis-pleased at the thought as Weston had im-agined he would be.

marks upon the subject athe was now so are pleased at the thought as Weston had imagined he would be.

Weston May had now been three years in his employ. Mr. Dayton knew nothing of his family; but his strict integrity; good morals, and pleasing manners conspired to make him esteem him highly. He placed at Mr. Dayton do him. He wished him to dress as well as others, and had often wondered at the scantiness of his wardrobe; for although Weston dressed with the most sorupulous regard to neatness, his clothes were almost threadbare, which Mr. Dayton thought proceeded from a niggardly disposition, and, accordingly he addressed him upon the subject as before related. Soon after this conversation Mr. Dayton left home on business.

As he was riding through a pretty little vil-lage he slighted at the door of a cottage and requested a drink of water. The mistress with an ease and politeness which told that she had not always been the bumble cotta-ger, invited him to enter. He complied, and a sect of poverty and neatness met his gase which he had never before witnessed. The furnity consisting of nothing more than was actually necessary was so clean and nest, that decays an air of comfort all around. A venerable old man sat by the window with A venerable old man sat by the window with his st his hand. His clothes were whole but so patched that they seemed a counterpart of Joseph's coat of many

'This is your father, I presume,' said he addressing her.

'It is, sir.'

'He seems quite aged.'

'He is in his eighty-third year; and has survived all his children but myself.'

'Have you always resided here?'

'No sir; my husband was once wealthy, but indorsing, rained him, and we were reduced to this state. He soon after died and two of my children followed him?'

'Have you any children living?'

One sir, who is my only support. My own health is so feeble that I sannot do much, and father being blind and deaf needs a great deal of attention. My soniwill not tell me how much his salary is, but I am sure he sends me nearly all of it.'

'Then he is not at home?'

'No sir, he is a clerk in New York.'

'Indeed! Pray what is his name?'

'Weston May.'

'Weston May! Is it possible. Why he is my clerk. I left him in charge of my store only two weeks ago.'

Explanations followed, and Mr. Dayton soon left promising to call some other time. 'Noble fellow,' and he mentally, as he was riding slowly along, and ruminating uyon the call. 'Noble fellow. I believe he loves my girl, and he may have her, and part of my money, too. Let me see,' here he fell into a thinking mood, and by the time he reached home, he formed a plan which he determined to execute. How it terminated we shall see. Full of his new plan, he entered the breaktast room where Laura was awaiting his appearance. 'So, Weston is going to England,' said he carelessly.'

'Sir!' said Laura, dropping her coffee cup;

'So, Weston is going to Engunu, sau ne carelessly.

'Sir!' said Laura, dropping her coffee cup; going to England?'

'To be sure; what of it, child?'

'Nothing—only—I—we shall be rather lonesouce,' replied she, vainly endeavoring to suppress her tears.

'Come, come Laura, tell me, de you love Weston? You never deceived me, don't do it now.'

No, we'll I—I do love him most sincerely.'

I thought so,' replied he, as he left the room.

'Yes sir, in about four weeks.'
'If it would not be inconvenient I wish you would defer it a few weeks longer,' said
Mr. Dayton.

'Laura married!' said Weston, starting as

'I aura married: said Weston, starting as if shot; 'Laura married?'

'To be sure. What ails the boy?'

'Indeed, sir, I cannot stay,' said Weston, forgetting what he had just said.

from a dream.
'Do you love my girl!'
'I do, sir.'

Mr. Dayton repeated the incident already related, and in conclusion said:

'And now, boy, I have written to your mother and offered myself, and she has accepted; what have you to say.'

'That I am the happiest fellow on earth and proud to call you father,' replied the young man with a joyful face.

'And you, Weston, I shall love as a son; for a young man who loves and cares for his mother as you have done, will, I am sure, make a good and affectionate husband. For this cause if for no other I can freely commit my Laura to your hands, with the assurance that she will be beloved and assurance that she will be beloved assurance watched over by you with a care as tender as my own.

A few weeks after, a double wedding took

A few weeks after, a double wedding took place at Mr. Dayton's maneion, and soon after a sign went up over a certain store, bearing the inscription of 'Dayton & Companya. Young man, you may learn from this that it is not fine clothes that would win for you the esteem of those around you.'

Ir is a blessed thing for a poor man to have a contented wife; one who will not wish to live in a style beyond her husband's income, just because her next door neighbor does; one who can be happy in the love of her husband, her home, and its beautiful duties, without asking the world for its smiles or its favor.

EXTENUATING CIRCUMSTANCES.—French juries have a curious habit of declaring criminals guilty, "with extenuating circumstances," and they do this sometimes under very odd circumstances, as the following instances, collected from a number of French reports, show:

reports, show:

In 1848 a man killed his mother, and then reduced the body to ashes in the fireplace. He was found guilty, but with 'extenuating circumstances.' A bare verdict of guilty was doubtlessly reserved in case any other man should advise himself to burn his mother before she was absolutely murdered. In 1843' a servant girl committed several roberies on her master and mistress, who unwilling to prosecute her, contented themselves with giving her notice to leave. The girl profited by her short stay to poison them both. The jury found her guilty; but considering how much she must have been irritated at the prospect of being discharged, added that it was under 'extenuating circumstances.'

anded that it was under extenuating ciraumatances.

About the same period a young woman, of eighteen, who had not been married many months, happening to have had some little disagreement with her husband, was guilty of the horrible cruelty of pouring moulteu lead into his ear as he lay asleep. He did not die, but his sufferings were intense and prolonged. The girl was tried for the offence; her counsel did not venture to affirm that his client had not committed the deed imputed to her, but suggested that it might have been the unhappy result of a mental aberration to which pregnant women are occasionally liable. The jury found this conceit so excellent that it extremuted the circumstances, up to the point, of de-are occasionally liable. The jury found this conceit so execulent that is extenuated the circumstances, up to the point, of depriving them of the simblance of guilt.—

They returned a vertice recording the innocence of the interesting criminal.

"A poor woman named Rosalle, unable to support her illegitimate child, and not having the courage to take it herself to the hospice les enfans trouves, agreed with a neighbor that he should convey it thither for a certain monetary consideration, to procure which the poor woman gave her last sou, and sold the remnant of a scenty wardrobe. When the day came the man expended the money in drink, and then coolly threw the child ou the ground, crushed its head with the heel of his wooden sabot, and digging a hole buried it out of his sight. It will hardly be believed that any jury could find extenuating circumstances. A widow in the department of Vancluse, in 1846, was proved to have buried alive three illegitimate children in as many years. The same verdict was recorded.

"Another woman, married to a bricklayer, and who, it is to be presumed. had at least

"Another woman, married to a bricklayer, and who, it is to be presumed, had at least some sentiment of hostility towards her husband, took the opportunity, when he was working at the bottom of a well, to kill him by literally stoning him to death with her own hands. The same verdict was returned. At Isere, a man set fire to the loft where his father (a paralytic man of upwards of eighty years of age) slept, and fairly roasted him to death. It was remembered by witnesses that the accused had threatened his father in these words: 'I would like to see thee roasted like a toad on a shove!' And he had, to the best of his ability, redeemed his promise. The jury, struck with admiration at the scrupulous fidelity with which the prisoner kept his word, returned a verdict of guilty, but with 'extenuating circumstances.' "Another woman, married to a bricklayer,

"It is rather sudden; but I am an old man ind wish to see her have a protector before die. I am glad you can stay to the wedding."

Indeed, sir, I cannot stay, 'said Weston, orgetting what he had just said.

You cannot! Why you just now said you can stay to the west on would."

Yes sir; but my business requires my presence, and I must go.'

'But you said you would with pleasure.'

'Command me in anything else, sir; but in this I cannot oblige you.'

'Weaton, tell me frankly, do you love my girl?'

'Weston, tell me frankly, do you love my girl?'

'I' Weston seemed like one waking from a dream.

'Do you love my girl!'

'I' Weston spoke carnestly.

'My mother! what do you know of her?'

Mr. Dayton repeated the incident already related, and in conclusion said:

'And now key. A STORY WITH A MORAL.—A goat in Webster, which was noted for its combativeness, was walking on a pond in that town, says the Times, when he same to a hole in the ice made by some fishermen, and espled his face in the water. Thinking that he saw one of his fellows, he concluded that this was our of his fellows, he concluded that this was an opportunity not to be lost, and at once prepared for his naual attack. Drawing back a few feet, he lowered his head, shook his caudal appendage spasmodically, and at a tremendous pace rushed upon his shadow. But the old fellow went into the hole out of sight under the ice in a twinkling, nor has be since been seen.

Moral: Never rush into anything without giving the subject due consideration.

JACK'S LETTER.—An English writer says:
One day when I came home from visiting,
my old landlady told me that some one had been down begging me to go up to old Will's house as soon as over I could—he was in great trouble. I started off at once, and found him and his old woman both in tears.
I asked him what was the matter.

"O! Sir, we've had such a letter from our Jack in Africa!
His letter was in a high-flown strain. Ho had been evidently reading Moore and other poots; and he had written when the news of the threatened Chartist riot on the famous 10th of April had just geached the eimbi1 cannot remember all of his letter, but the passage occurs to me:— JACK'S LETTER.—An English writer says: One day when I came home from visiting,

I cannot remember all of his letter, but this passage occurs to me:—
"Beloved Parents.—I have heard of the terrible dangers that threaten my native land. Perhaps ere now it has been devastated by lawless bands of unprincipled miscreants; perhaps ere now the humble cot in which I first drew nurture has been committed to the ruthless flames. Would I were with you, to protect my ancestral hearth! I cannot be with you; but, beloved parents my soul hovers over you, as the fabled Houri of the Mohammedan; and I do all I can, by wish and supplication, to cast eggs around you."

Of course I burstout laughing at this high-flown letter and their grief. They started at my laugh.

flown letter and their grief. They started at my laugh.

"What, Sir, is all right? We thought summit terrible had surely happened; we never heard such words afore."

I assured them all was right, and translated the letter for them, to their amazing comfort; but I can assure you that letter was shown to every neighbor as "what our Jack could do," and doubly treasured because they could not comprehend it.—[English pa.

A YANKEE DEVICE.—One of the peculiar slab-sided, gaunt Yankees lately emigrated and settled down in the West. He was the very picture of a mean man, but as he put himself to work in good earnest to get his house to rights, the neighbors willingly lent him a hand. After he had got everything fixed to his notion, a thought struck him that he had no chickens, and he was powerful fond of sucking raw eggs. He was too honest to steal them, and too mean to buy them. At last a thought struck him, he could borrow. He went to a neighbor, and thus accosted him:

'Wal, I reckon yer hain't got an old hen nor nothin,' you'd lend me for a few weeks have you reighbor?'

'I will lend you one with pleasure,' replied the gentleman, picking out the very finest in his coop. The Yankee took the hen home, and then went to another neighbor and borrowed a dozen eggs. He then set the hen and in due course of time she hatched out swelve chickens. The Yankee was again puzzled, he could roturn the hen, but how was he to return the eggs? Another idea.—and who ever saw a live Yankee was again puzzled, he could roturn the hen, but how was he to return the eggs? Another idea.—and who ever saw a live Yankee was again puzzled, he could roturn the hen, but how was he to return the eggs? Another idea.—and who ever saw a live Yankee was again curred the hen and eggs to their respective owners, remarking as he did, and then returned the hen and eggs to their respective owners, remarking as he did so:

'Wal, I reckon I've got as fine a dozen of ohickeps as ever you laid eyes on, and they didn't cost me a cent nuther.'

VAST WEALTH OF OF CREESUS.—In our jottings of millionaires, it would seem as though these pages were incomplete without some data concerning him whose name has for centuries and generations—fresh down to the present day—farnished the standard representative of vast wealth. Crossus flourished about the middle of the sixth century B. C. The prodigious wealth which he had inherited had been increased by the tribute of conquered nations, by the confiscation of great estates, and by the golden sands of Pactolus. Perhaps some idea of the extent of his wealth may be formed from the rich votive offerings which he has known to have deposited in the temples of the gods. Herodous himself saw the ingots of solid gold, six palms long, three broad, and one deep, which to the number of one hundred and seventeen, were laid up in the treasury at Delphi. He also saw parts of Greece the following offerings all in gold, which had been deposited in the temples by the same opulent man: a figure of a lion, probably of the natural size; a lustral vase; a statute of a female said to be Crossus' baking woman, four and one-half feet high; a wine bowl of about the same weight as the lion; a shield and a spear; a tripod; some figures of cows; and a number of pillars; a second shield in a different place from the, and of greater size.

Mrs. S visited her neighbor's ouse, with the benevolent intent of reconciling the differences existing there, and ad-dressed the better half something in this style: "Now you know," said she, "how much pleasanter it would be if you and your avie: "Now you know, said sine, "now much pleasanter it would be if you and your husband would live together without quarreling; both you and your children would be happier; and, instead of being a reproach to the neighborhood you might become honored members of society. And it may be," she continued, "you are not altegether blameless in this matter. Suppose you try and see what the law of kindness will do in effecting a reconciliation. It certainly can do no harm, and you may succeed in touching the tender cords of his heart and he may renew his old affection. Try it," she urged, "and if you do not succeed, you will at least heap coals of fire on his head," and so on.—All this was listened to, when this reply was made: "I dont know about your coals of fire; Tee tried billn' hot water, and it didn't do a bit of good!

More News from Kootenai.
We have this week later, and reliable news from the New Eldorado of the North.
Mr. George Gigey, well known to many persons here as a reliable gentleman arrived here direct from the mines on Tucsday evening. He has been for several years in the upper country, and in all the mining camps, and expresses the opinion that the Kootenai diggings are the best that have ever been discovered—far ahead of either "Salmon" or "Boise."
Mr. Gigey came down after supplies More News from Kootenai.

"Boise."
Mr. Gigey came down after supplies, bringing a few onnees of the dust with him, and will return in about ten days. The mines are about four hundred miles from here, on the tributaries of the Kootenai, and on both sides of the main river. An extent of about fifty miles of country has been prospected, with about the same result on all the small streams. The water is too high yet for thorough prospecting and an accurate idea of the true richness of the mines can not now be given. There are but all the small streams. The water is too high yet for thorough prospecting and an accurate idea of the true richness of the mines can not now be given. There are but few claims properly opened and but few companies have got regularly at work. They, so far as Mr. Gigey was able to learn, were averaging from $15 to $20 per day to the hand. The gold is mostly coarse scale gold, and the dirt, which is from two to six feet deep, pays from the top down to the bed rock. He caw pieces taken from the bedrock weighing from $2 to $7, but only one piece weighing as high as $7, which was taken out by Antoine Plante. Pieces weighing as much as $2 were quite numerous.—The gulches have not yet been prospected and the mining thus far has been entirely confined to the bars.

The first diggings discovered this spring are on a small stream about ten miles from Joseph's Plain, and from thence the mines extend fifty miles, to the South fork of the Columbia, on which paying diggings have been found. Beyond this no prospecting has been done; but Mr. G. states that the country, all round about, looks quite as favorable as a gold-bearing region as the country that has been prospected.

Joseph's Prairie is a beautiful farming country, about 1½ miles wide and 20 miles in length, interspersed here and there with timber. The Indians have small patches of land under cultivation, and manifest a very friendly and peaceable disposition.

There are about 200 men in the mines, most of whom are prospecting, looking out for a big thing," though all could get claims at the prospects stated above. There was plenty of provisions in the mines for those now there, but a "big rush" would soon exhaust the supply. The miners generally think they will not be able to thoroughly prospect the country or get into the best pay on the bars before the latter part of July, by which time the water will be down so as to uncover the low bars.

July, by which time the water will be down so as to uncover the low bars.

The miners had got down to the bed-rock in but few places. The most of the gold has been obtained in the top dirt, or under the coarse gravel on the surface of the bars, which overlies a strata of fine sand. In this respect the mines are very similar to the Columbia and Pen d'Oreille diggings.

ROUTE TO THE MINES.

ROUTE TO THE MINES.

Mr. Gigey wishes us to correct the statements published in the Lewiston Age, to the effect that the nearest and most direct route to the Kootenai, is via Lewiston. He was connected with Capt. Mullan's Wagon Road Expedition for two years, as expressman and has traveled over nearly all the country between here and the mines and knows whereof he affirms. He says to start from Lewiston it would be nearer to go from there direct; but in going from here or from the lower country it would be justeighty miles out of the road to go by Lewiston, or about the distance that it is from here to that place. The direct route from here is by either of the Snake river ferries to Antoine Plant's; thence to the upperferry on the Spokane; thence to the Semi-yakation; thence 75 miles to the first crossing of the Kootenai; thence about 100 miles to Joseph's Prairie; thence 10 miles into the first diggings. The road is now badly overflowed between the Semi-yakation and the first crossing of the Kootenai and the rivers between there and the mines are also very high, but the waters will subside so that the road will be in good traveling condition in about two weeks from this date.

The Age also publishes a statement about

The Age also publishes a statement about stagnant water on the Mullan road, which is also incorrect. The water is good, and good camping-places can be found every 12 miles on the road. The most direct water eamping-places can be found every 12 miles on the road. The most direct route, and the only route that can be traveled at all, with wagons is by the Mullan road from here to Antoine Plante's, as every one knows who has traveled over the country. Wagons, by traveling this road, and clearing it of obstructions, can go within eighty miles of the mines. Pack trains will find little or no trouble in getting into the mines. Mr. G. saw Mr. Sherwood (who had been sent up by the citizens of Lewiston) encamped upon the banks of the Kootenai.

FROM COLVILLE.—Lieut. Eagan and Mr. John Hofstetter give us the following items from Colville:

The Indian Stanislaus, who was tried here at the recent term of Court for the murder of a white man at Kettle Falls, was hung at Colville on the 20th lut. On the scaffold he stated that the other Indian who was tried with him had no hand in the murder. Just before he was hung, he requested the sheriff to leave his blankets in the prison where he had been confined, stating that he expected to come back that night and occupy them. He then bid the crowd who had assembled to witness the execution, "Cla-Raism," and manifested no fear at the fate that awaited him. He acknowledged the murder, and said that his punishment was deserved.

Parties had arrived from the Kootenni deserved.

Parties had arrived from the Kootenai country, bringing favorable reports from the mines. Mr. McDonald, Agent for the Hudson Bay Company at old Fort Colville, had about $2,000 worth of gold from that country, which he had received in trade.

The new trail via Salmon river is by this time completed, and small parties had started by that route to the Kootenai before these gentlemen left.

THE HARDING RESOLUTION.-Under date of Washington, May 2d, 1864, the fol-lowing telegraphic dispatch was published in the Sacramento Union:

The House took up the resolution of Mr. Harding which was made last December, declaring that the Union is not dissolved, and whenever rebellion in any of the seceded States shall be put down, either by force or voluntary submission to the authority of the Constitution and laws, such State shall be restored to all its rights under the Constitution, including the right to regulate its own domestic institutions.

Mr. Harding claimed that whoever voted against the resolution, placed himself in the position of saying the Union was dissolved, as none but a revolutionist, disunionist and secessionist would oppose it. The resolution was tabled by 67 to 55.

The sixty-seven voting to kill off the Harding resolution are the Republicans, and the fifty-six favoring the declaration that the "Union is not dissolved" and repudiating the doctrine of secession, are the Conservatives and Democrats. The House took up the resolution of Mr

Two months later, on the 4th of July, Wendell Phillips made a speech at Farmington, Massachusetts, which was fully reported in the Tribune, and in which he said:

Amalgamation! Remember this, the youngest of you: that on the 4th of July, 1853, you heard a man say in the light of all history, in virtue of every page he ever read, he was an amalgamationist to the utmost extent.

STAGE LINE,

Express Ranch.

THE undersigned has purchased and is now sole proprietor of the above Rauch, situated on Burnt River, half-way between Walla Wallar and Idaho City. He is prepared to entertain travelers in the most comfortable manner. The Boise stages top at this house, and passengers can find ample accommodations.

O. W. DURKEE. June 3, 1864.

NEW FIRM .- Wa Shing & Iro Ning, from the Celestial Empire, have opened a house on Third Street, in this city, just 'forninst' our printing office. The firm appear to be engaged, as a general thing, in the delightful exercise afforded from making a vigorous onslaught upon the wearing apparel of our 'melican' population, rubbing the unclean articles with great velocity up and down on the inside of a wash-tub. The Johns are becoming quite plenty in this much fa-vored locality. The half-moon-eyed creatures, with their gutteral chow-wow chitchat, make anything else but dulcet sounds, 'music low and sweet' in their frequent pd prolonged conversations. The further acy get away from you when they talk, the ter it sounds. China chat might sound well enough through a Chinese wall; but close 'onto' one-deliver us.

ELECTION .- But little interest is manited by the people of this county in the ction, which takes place on Monday.— candidates, at least some of them, on tickets, have been "stumping" arou valley the past week, but have failed stir up much interest. To-morrow seveal of the candidates will address the citizens of this city at Ball & Stone's Hall, on the political questions of the day. We suppose the voters generally have their minds made up as to who they will vote for, and it is not our purpose to offer any suggestions in favor of or against any of the candidates. Go and hear the speaking, and then be sure and go to the polls.

Horse Therves .- On Thursday two men arrived in this city from Boise. They come in on horse-back and hitched the animals at the upper part of town. Soon afterwards a gentleman arrived here stating that the horses the two men had brought in were stolen from him and that he had been in hot pursuit of them for 150 miles. A warrant was issued for the thieves' arrest and officers put upon the lookout, but they, no doubt, had discovered that they were pursued, and cleared out. They have probably taken the road toward Kootenai.

The hearest and best route to the Kootenai mines, according to all reliable information on the subject, and as the maps of the country will show, is by way of the Snake river ferries at the mouth of the Palouse, and thence by the Mullan road to Antoin Plante's on the Spokane. The routes by Lewiston or Priest's rapids, are "abstrac questions and side issues," and will not be taken into account in the long run.

The medical faculty of Portland state through the columns of the Oregonian, that there are no cases of small pox in that city at the present time and that there have been none there within the past year.

"No WELLY GOOD."-Accounts fro the Wood and South Salmon rivers, say that no paying gold diggings have as yet been discovered on those streams. The country is reported to look favorable for gold and the "color" found-only this, and nothing more.

The measles have been prevalent in Idaho tity for some time. The small-pox has not yet reached that place, but the Boiseites fear the disease has an upward tendency and are urging precautionary measures to prevent its spread, should it get amongst them.

GEN. JAS. MCAULIFF, everybody's candidate for County Treasurer, has erected : new two story building upon his lot, on the The new building is a decided improvement on the "Pea-nut stand" which formerly pied the site;

TLE FOR KOOTENAL -A small drove ttle passed through this city on Monday ute to the Kootenai mines.

w Church.-Rev. P. B. Chamberlain gregationalist) has purchased the building known as Ryan's Hall, at the upper end the City and intends to fit it up us as a mrch. ith him and intends to locate permaly here.

PEAKING .- The Speaking on Saturday will be at Ball & Stone's Hall, commencing at 2 o'clock, P. M. The appointment is made by Messrs, Boswell and Langford; but other candidates will be present and address other candidates will be present and address the meeting.

THE Polls will be opened on Monday at Ball & Stone's Hall Judges of election G. W. Shoemaker, Geo. McCully and Henry McKern.

WARM:-The mercury stood at 103 in the shade on Saturday last and reached 106 on Sunday. Hot enough for anybody or any climate.

MILITARY .- Co. H. W. T. Inft., Capt. Mason left this post on Tuesday for Vancouver. son lett this post on Lucsday for vancouver.
Co. B., Cape. Shuloch, now at Colville, has been ordered to this post. Licut. Bagan, is relieved of the Quartermaster's position at Colville, and comes here with his company.

Hearing of your Panacea and Dr. Hall's Baisam for the lungs, I procured à bottle of each, which she commenced using, but though with little faith as to their efficacy. She had not used two bottles, however, beforeashe began to mend. She has since used several bottles of the Pain Panacea, and has entrely recovered, bot having the slightest indication of any rheumatism in her system, or any pain in the region of the heart. I have since recommended it to many others, who used it with the happiest result. If this will be of any service to you, I can cheerfully give it from under my hand, believing there is no medicine equal to this. With Maggie by my Side The Bowers bloom in forest green;
The wild binds sweetly sing;
The wildows wave beside the stream
Densath the breath of spring.
Los sweet thethought through scenes like this
My heart would ever gible,
Sill, consing or from bless to bilas

Il jeaming on from bliss to bliss with Maggie by my side.
Then jug along. Old Time, I say, Life's morning soon will pass;
The hairs of youth be turning gray, As evening comes at last.

dy Maggle, though 'tis morning's prime,
And all seems bright and fair,
some shadows may advance with time,
And dark the 'mid-day air.
Sat haud in hand we'll press along,
Whatever fate bettle;
Whatever fate bettle;
With Maggle by my side.
Then jog along, &c.

Thus, when the frosts of winter come
And settle on my brow,
We'll live again in summer's bloom,
Though buried in the snow,
The wrinkled cheek and sunken eye
Why should I wish to hide,
For sweet will glow the sunset sky
With Margie by my side.
Then jog along, &c.

Freedom of the Press

The editor of a western paper offered his hat for the best poem on the "Freedom of the Press." The beaver was awarded to his own "devil," for the fol-lowing spirited effusion:

Around her waist I put my arm,
She felt as soft as cake;
''(0), dear ''s said she, 'what liberties
You printer men do take !'
''Why, yes, my Sal, my charming sal;
(I squeezed her some, I guess,)
Can you say sught, my chick, against
The Freedom of the Press?''

I kissed her some—I did, by gum— She colored like a heet; Upon my living soul she looked Just sweet enough to eat. I gave another buss, and then She said! "I do confess, I rather kinder sorter like The Freedom of the Press."

AN ARKANSAS FARMER'S ADVICE TO

An Arransas Farmer's Advice to His Son.—There is genuine humor in the idea that an Arkansas man finds the most natural expression, even of parting advice to his son, in the language of the eard table, and the manner in which the terms of the game of "ceuchre" are there fitted to the game of life is ingenious:

"Bob, you are about leaving home for strange parts. You're going to throw me out of the game, and go it alone. The odds is against you, Bob, but remember always that industry and perseverance are the winning cards, they are the 'bowers.' Book larning and all that sort of thing will do to fill up, like small turnips, but you must have the bowers to back 'cm, clse they ain't worth shucks. If luck runs again you pretty strong, don't cave in and look like a sick chicken on a rainy day, but hold your head up and and make 'cm haliage wow'. sick chicken on a rainy day, but hold your head up and and make 'em believe you're flush of trumps, they won't play so hard agin you.

"I've lived and traveled around some agin you.

"I've lived and traveled around some, Bob, and I've found out that if folks thought you held out a weak hand, they buck again you strong. When you're sorter weak, keep, on a hold front, but play cantious—be satisfied with a pint! "Many's the hand I've seen persons cuchered because they played for too much. Keep your eyes well skinned, Bob; don't let 'em' 'mig' on' you; recollect the game lays as much with the head as with the hands. Be, temperate; never get drunk, for then, no matter how good your hand, you won't know how to play it; both bowers and the ace won't save you, for there's certain to be a misdeal or something wrong. And another thing, Bob, this was spoken in a low tone, don't go too much on women; queens is kinder, poor cards, the more you have of them the worse. I don't say dispard on all; if you get hold of one that is a training, they all good, and there's sartiful to be one que of feour. And above all, be bounds, page a trick that don't below the line of the player thing. honcet; perag uncers man's trick that don't belong to you; nor slip cards, nor 'nig,' for then you cap't look a man in the face, and when that's the case there's no fun in the game; it's regular 'cut throat.' So now Bob, farewell, remember what I tell you and you'll be sure to win, and if you don't sarves you right if you get 'skunked.'"

Good.-Innocent people have often bee surprised at public meetings to see with what enthusiasm and unanimity persons scattered in all quarters of an audience shout scattered in all quarters of an audience shout for particular speakers. They regard such manifestations as unspeakable evidence of the popularity of the persons called for.—At a political meeting in Indiana once, a speaker, named Long responding to a loud call, took the stand; but a big, strapping fellow persisted in crying out, in a steatorian voice, 'Long!' This caused a little confusion, but after some difficulty in making himself heard, the President succeeded in steine that Mr. Long the contlemen ing himself heard, the President succeeded in stating that Mr. Long, the gentleman honored with the call, was now addressing them. 'Oh: he be d—d!' replied the fellow; 'he's the little skezcick that told me to call for Long!' This brought down the house.

common expression, implying that one has no choice, or that he must take this or none. The origin of the assuments of the content of the cont common expression, implying that one has mochoice, or that he must 'take this or none.' The origin of the expression will interest our readers. Tobias Hobson kept the first livery stable in England, near Cambridge University. He had forty horses for hire, some of them very fine, but he made in an invariable rule that every successive eustomer should take the horse standing nearest door or none. He so arranged the successive that each horse should come in ormimals that each horse should come
