"The editor of the Statesman, from his promincipe, is very well known; but vern in, his case, we believe his cetemporaries would think better of him had they the pleasure of meeting him is coicalintercourse. Of the balance of newspaper men, who knews anything?"

"a standard of editorial etiquette," and give the editor of the Mountaineer a rule of speech that he may not transgress the bounds of propriety, and then settle for him the question, "Of the balance of ne paper men, who knows anything?"

"His Satanic Majesty is said not to be half so black as he is painted, and we doubt not that the editors of the State, in Convention assumbled, would be bound to be very far removed from a group of Kilkenny cats."

No doubt they would, by several thousand miles; and wouldn't they exhibit a proper appreciation of the "lower order of music" by getting as far away from the cats

liam Purvine, dated, Grimes' Creek, Octo-

"I find the mines both good and extensive-not so good as the diggings at Flor-ence was, but more extensive; eighty dollars to the pan being the greatest amount taken out at any one time. The mines may be set down at about $18 diggiegs.— They are situated about seventy miles a little north-east of Fort Boise. About $2,000 in dust has been panned out by the prospectors since my arrival here. There is a good extent of mining ground and abundance of timber, water and grass, in and about the diggings. I have not prospected enough to be positive, but am of the opinion that those coming with a six month's supply of provisions, would lose It will be necessary to come well armed, as the Indians exhibit the most de-termined hostility to our party—forcing us to always move in strong bodies. They have never but once come in speaking distance, and then in an attitude that left us no doubt of their intentions. Small par-

Gold From THE North.—Well, there must be some gold up North after all, for the last arrival from there brings, $2100,000, nearly all of which was shipped at Bornland.—Son Francisco Herold, Oct. 15th.

That is right. "Confession," it is said, "is good for the soul." It is only a few weeks since the California papers were publishing the mines of Oregon and Washington Territory as a great humbug, notwithstanding the evidences to the contrary which were every week carried into their State. But the next senson will open their eyes, wider to the fact that our mines are far as perior to any now worked in that State. Take it easy, gentlemen; for if you do dislike the idea of having your mining population thinned out, of having your mining population thinned out, you can take consolation in the reflection that as our mines are developed they will contribute millions to your shipments of treasure from San Princisco to the Atlantic States and Europe.

parties just down from Florence, that the principal part of the mining operations in the diggings will, the coming winter, be confined to the river bars. It is thought that mining can be successfully carried on in those deep warm canons all winter.— Many are already at work on the bars be low the mouth of Slate creek, making, it is likely seek the low bars in preference to remaining in the i-solated diggings at Florence, where scarcely any work can be done in the way of mining for several months of

THE NEXT NEW TOWN SITE. embryo Eldorado to the north of Snake river when hatched out, proves to be what is predicted for it, there will be one more chance for town-builders to erect a city on Snake river. Geography fixes upon the mouth of Pelouse as the place possessing all the "natural advantages;" for it is from that point that all the travel north and north-east in the direction of the new min ing country must leave Snake river.

THE "ROAD AGENTS."-Billy Peebles, Nels. In default of bail they were turned over to the Sheriff of Idaho, who will take them to Florence for imprisonment.

it was dull enough when I left. People were leaving if at and trains of merchandise and provisions were pouring in, as the merchants expect great markets from Warren's diggings next season. There was some talk of the Indians being hostile in that region and along the Salmon, on account of which several of the miners on the Salmon had left. But on the whole, the white roffines that infect the diggings are a great deal use than the Indians. However, the white roffines that indians. stealing through the twilight haze oud of slumber droppeth o'er me; in tonight of other days many a fool has done before me. I dream to night of other days
As many a fool has done before me,
And from the crowd of phantoms there,
One sweet pale face looks out above meAlas, the flower I used to wear!
Alas the heart that used to love me.

Your eyes were gray when last wo met1 wonder if they're any grayer!
1 used to pray to them, my pet;
2 used to pray to them, my pet;
Your voice I think was very sweet"Pwould sound to-night a great deal av
And als, the hours were very fleet,
Told gently off by Love's repeater.

Your heart was very true, my pet, I cannot say that mine was truer; For I who used to woo, forget Sometimes that e'er I've been a w But you forgot your vow, my pet,
Even in the moment when you gave it!
So it were idle to regret
The sorry chance that did not save it.

I think I never saw you rad—
They tell me that you still are merry;
With yes that rowthe gay and glad,
And lips that have the tint of cherry;
Hat all your pretty, winning ways,
So aren and wayward, wiid and wiirol,
Remain as in the golden days—

Sunday in Religious Switzerland. It happened to me once to be wandering with some companions through the highly orthodox Canton of Vaud on a Sunday afternoon. If the reader turn up the whites of his eyes, I tell him he has no right to presume that my journey was not one of necessity and mercy. We selected for our night's resting place a small house of en-tertainment—the equivalent of the village ale-house at home. It was crammed to the throat with the Protestant peasantry of the district, smoking, drinking, and recreating themselves with billiards and other house games—a strange preference, I thought it, to out-door sauntering in that sultry evening, but that was their affair. Desirous to walk in the cool of the morning to Yverpared for us so early as four o'clock. good woman of the house-a model of good woman of the house—a model of clean respectability and civility—bade us observe that it was Sunday evening, and that, in consequence, she would be engaged her guests until a late hour, which early rising would be incompati-ble. But she would do her best for us.— Breakfast would be made ready for us; we would find it in the guest-chamber, and we could rise and proceed as we thought fit. So we paid our bill before going to bed.— Through my sleep I heard the click of the billiard-balls far on in the night. When we rose we found silence everywhere, and nfortable breakfast awaiting us, and se sallied forth in the fresh morning air, through the dewy fields and woods, reflecting pleasantly on that primitive simplicity and on the faith of mankind which prompted our hostess thus to deal with a set of travel-worn strangers of uncouth speech and queer manners, and that, too, in the district where the British tourist was an unknown phenomenon. I have sometimes doubted if the concentrated force of all Forbes Mackenzyism and teetoalism will ever produce a like faith that knows no guile among our own publicans. The incident became, by the way, oddly mixed up in my mind with an anecdote current at the time, relating to a visit by an eminent pastor of this same Canton de Vaud, to a distinguished Presbyterian di-vine in Edinburgh. Rising, according to the custom of his district, about six o'clock on a Sunday morning, and wandering through the deserted rooms, he found in one of them a piano, whereat he sat down and was enabled to solace himself for so minutes with the performance of the Chantons tous le Canton de Vand

A STEAMBOAT VOYAGE OF NINE THOU-SAMD MILES .- The steamboat Shreveport, arrived at St. Louis on the 26th Septem ber, having successfully terminated a trip to the head waters of the Missouri River, to convey a company of gold seekers as near as possible to certain reported fields of the auriferous metal. She sailed from St. Louis the 30th of last April. The first part of her performance was a run of three thousand three hundred miles, to Fort La Barge, a recently created post .-She returned to near Omaha, two thousand miles more; then back to the mouth of Milk river, sixteen hundred miles, and conother property in the extraordinary number of nine thousand four hundred miles. Her last stepping place was named Fort La Barge after her Captain, who reports that those who have visited Deer Lodge, and prospected a circuit of two hundred miles around Fort La Barge, state the prospects good, and that the pursuit of gold will pay.—Alta California.

"AND WHAT DID PETER SAY?"—A had been in the heart."

"AND WHAT DID PETER SAY?"—A clergyman had been in the habit of getting ale from a certain saloon keeper named Peter—and one Sunday morning, just before sermon, he had sent his man for a quart of the beverage; the man did not return until the parson had chosen his text from the pathetic Scriptures where Christ reproves the pathetic Scriptures where Christ reproves the Peter for betraying him. "And what did Peter say?" asked the clergyman; aud he repeated the question, "And what did Peter say?"
The man-who had just entered the church or in time to hear these two questions put, with vehemence—naturally thought was directed to him concerning the thought the question corning the beer, and as was directed to him concerning the beer; and as the eye of the paron seemed to demand a cate-gorical answer, he cried out at the top of his voice to the amazement of the preacher and congre-gation. "He says, sir that you can have no more ale until you have paid up the last score!" Here was a clincher, and the roar of the congregation proclaimed the triumph of the proverb—that great is the power of truth, and it will prevail.
