FROM YAKIMA TO THE SEA.

The Nearest Route From the Great Inland Empire to Tide Water is Via North Yakima.

Indianapolis, Ind., Sentinel: Our American people are making diligent inquiry about the west, as the social maladjustments in the country have developed a deep and widespread discontent. Upon investigation they have found the Willapa harbor to be the best on the Pacific coast, save that of San Francisco; they saw that there was but three or four even reasonably good harbors on the nearly thousand miles of Pacific sea coast, and that naturally there must be great cities on all of these harbors. They learned that from the tributaries of the Willapa river there are very extensive bodies of magnificent timber; that the richest coal fields in the west are in the Cowlitz valley; that from North Yakima through these valleys to South Bend is the nearest outlet from the great interior to the sea; and that the strongest railroad corporation in America had determined to push this hundred and forty miles line through as fast as money and men can build it, and persuaded by these wonderful advantages the people have been guided, not by the land boomers, but by their own good sense; not by the obtrusive advertiser, but by a knowledge gleaned from investigation.

"TOTTED SQUAR."

Didn't Propose to Obtain Refrainments Under False Pretenses.

A short time ago one of St. Paul's prominent dealers in musical instruments gave an opening, embracing an attractive entertainment, to the public, says the Globe of that city. The succeeding day a young man denominated in circus patois as a "Reub" walked leisurely into the establishment and said: "Got any ice cream on draught?" "This is not a refreshment bazar," replied a salesman, softly. "I knowed that; but yer had some in here yesterday."

"Oh, yes; that was an opening day, and we did entertain a large number of our friends with cream. You should have been around."

"I warn't, though, but I kinder reckoned you might have some left over. Couldn't you manage to give away some if a man was ter buy a musical instrument?" and the youth picked up a $40 guitar, thumped it carelessly, at the same time resting his basilisk eye on a $500 upright piano.

"I think we could, Charlie, see if there isn't some cream in the back room for this gentleman. Please walk right in, sir."

The prospective customer walked in as directed and was handed a nut-brown chocolate ice cream. "Yer give some cake, too, yesterday, I understand."

A plate of macaroons, jelly cake and lady's fingers was promptly placed beside him, after which he demanded a glass of ice water. The repeat over, he re-entered the saleroom, wiping his mouth on the back of his hand.

"Wall, I'm through," he said. "Yes, sir; now what can I do for you?" "Of course I don't propose to eat your cream under false pretenses. You've totted squar with me an' I'll tote squar with you. You may give me one of them nickel-apiece cakoes I need in the winter."

THE OLDEST WILL.

A Recent Discovery of a Document of Ancient Egypt.

The discovery of the earliest known will is an event which possesses an interest for others besides lawyers, and there seems no reason to question either the authenticity or antiquity of the unique document which Mr. Filander Petrie has unearthed at Kahun or, as the town was known 4500 years ago, Illahun. The document is so curiously modern in form that it might almost be granted probate today. But, in any case, it may be assumed that it marks one of the earliest epochs of legal history, and curiously illustrates the continuity of legal methods. It is, however, needless to label the will socially, legally and historically of a date that dates back to patriarchal times.

It consists of a settlement made by Sekhmen in the year 44, second month of Pert, day 19—that is, it is estimated at the 44th of Amenemhat III., or 2550 B. C.—in favor of his brother, a priest of Isis, of all his property and goods; and another document, which bears date from the time of Amenemhat IV., or 2568 B. C. This latter instrument is, in form, being more or less than a will, by which the testator settles upon his brother for life, but forbids in certain terms to pull down the houses of his brother built for me," although it empowers her to give them to any children that she pleases. A "son," it is to act as guardian of infant children.

This remarkable instrument was discovered by two scribes, with an air of haste that might almost have been yesterday. The papyrus is a valuable contribution to the study of ancient law and shows with a graphic realism a picture of civilization the ancient Egyptian had reached at least from a legal ## point of view. It has hitherto been believed that in the infancy of the human race wills were practically unknown. There probably never was a time when testaments, in some form or other, did not exist; but, in the earliest ages, it has so far been assumed that they were never written, but were unreciprocated, or delivered orally, probably at the death bed of the testator.

Among the Hindus to this day the law of succession hinges upon the due solemnization of fixed ceremonies at the dead man's funeral, not upon any written will. And it is because early wills were verbal only that their history is so obscure. It has been asserted that among the barbarian races the bare conception of a will was unknown; that we must search for the infancy of testamentary dispositions in the early Roman law. Indeed, until the ecclesiastical power assumed the prerogative of intervening at every break in the succession of the family, wills did not come into vogue in the west. But Mr. Petrie's papyrus seems to show that the system of settlement or disposition by deed or will was long antecedently practiced in the east.

THE MANCHESTER CANAL.

One of the Most Important Engineering Enterprises of Modern Times.

Within a year the great Manchester canal, which is to make England's cotton city a seaport, will be completed. As the purpose of the canal is to reduce the cost of transportation to Manchester, it is not improbable that it construction will have a beneficial effect on the price of cotton and other American products consumed by that city.

The capital for this great enterprise, $50,000,000, was subscribed before a spadeful of earth was dug. It will be remembered that when the question of its practicability was first discussed, Captain Keads was summoned to England, as one of the world's greatest engineers, to give his opinion, when he declared in its favor, as practicable and advantageous.

It is calculated that the canal will reduce at least 50 per cent. the cost of transportation on all articles brought to Manchester as compared with the rates prevailing at the time the canal was begun, the reduction averaging from $1 to $2.50 per ton.

The canal will be nearly twice the width of the Suez canal, the minimum width at the bottom being 120 feet, while that of the Suez canal is but 72. Its minimum depth is the same, viz.: 26 feet. Where it is not cut through rock or where the soil is soft and requires protection from the wash of steamers, its sides are "pitched" with stone. Four sets of locks, the largest of each set being 60x65 feet, will lift vessels sixty feet six inches from the ordinary water level at the entrance to the locks at Manchester. The total length of the canal will be thirty-five and one-half miles, and including the time consumed in passing the locks, it will be traversed in about ten hours. The width adopted will allow large steamers to pass each other at any part. The fact that the sills at the entrance of the canal are in sufficiently deep water to permit the passage of vessels at all stages of the tide will often enable a steamer entering the Mersey to be berthed at Manchester before she could be at Liverpool.

The canal will open the way into the very heart of England, and at Manchester it will meet a network of canals and railways which will facilitate the distribution of produce in all parts of the country. Manchester is the center of the most populous district in England. Within a radius of twelve miles of the Manchester Royal Exchange dwells a population of 2,000,000; within a radius of forty miles the population is greater than that in a similar radius about London, and the same radius within forty-eight miles, for instance, as London.

The contents of the envelopes are quite as amusing. Demands for office and begging letters are the most numerous. A tin box came to the president a few days ago from a church in Forth Worth, Tex. It was labelled "100 lines before August 2," and the president was expected to drop ten-cent pieces in at stated intervals for the good of the cause. Cranks send the president a great many letters. One Philadelphia addresses the president on an average twice a day. His letters are always from "Godhead king to the Godhead president of the United States," and they contain minute instructions about the conduct of executive affairs. The writer was at one time a well known attorney, but his brain has been turned, and he imagines now that he has a mission to govern the United States and to contain minute instructions about the conduct of executive affairs. ## MAN'S FIRST DWELLING.

Perhaps the Giant Armadillo's Shell Was the First Human Habitation.

Long ago some men traveling in the new countries of South America came upon a remarkable dwelling. Only a little one-story habitation, seven feet by nine, left by its owner neat and clean. A cot of one room, just large enough to hold a whole family of five ones, provided they did not need too much room for running and jumping. Such a beautiful decorated little dwelling! None but a master in the art could

THE WHITE HOUSE MAIL.

Queer Specimens of Letters Addressed to President Harrison.

A Missourian Calls the Chief Executive "His Royal Jigs"—a Philadelphia Crank Directs the Affairs of Government.

These are unworthy specimens of the way the casual correspondent abuses the spelling of the president's name. Mr. Tibbott has made a collection of strange envelopes received at the executive mansion. They fill a large drawer in his desk. Here are some specimens:

Mr. president hairson, Washington. Mr. onerble president hairson Washington, J. C."

That letter, which was mailed at Cairo, Ill., strayed about for a time, and came to the executive mansion with "missent" stamped all over it.

Honory Pres. of the United States. Washington City

P'ReserDent of united states Washing ton D C

Wishing to D C to the Presaden Epephe!!

Wichiton J. C. To Pres a dent Harison

That letter was sent to Philadelphia by the postmaster of a small Pennsylvania town who could not decipher the address. The Philadelphia office added "Washington, D. C.," and forwarded the letter to the capital.

Mr. beej Mon harson president Washington D. C.

That letter, which came from Arkadelphia, Ark., got through without delay because the city address was plain.

Presen Dend Harry of D C Washington

The letter was from Richmond, Ind., where Mr. Harrison should be well known. Clymer, N. J., furnished the following gem. It has few equals in the collection:

president Hears Wasaphetona D C

Not quite satisfied with his spelling of the president's name, the Clymer correspondent wrote "Hears" across the end of the envelope as an alternative. Lansdale, Pa., sent the following:

Mr. President Hars Washington D C

From Kansas City, Kas., came a contribution originally addressed to "Mr. Hiron," but the address was altered to read:

Mr. Hiron, P. R. White house Washington city

[What "P. R." stood for was not developed even by the contents of the letter. Possibly it was an Americanization of the queen of England's "V. R."—"Presidents Rex."]

One irreverent correspondent, in a small town in Missouri, addressed a letter to "His Royal Jigs, the President," and another Missourian addressed a communication, intended for the chief executive, simply, "Washington, D. C., the White House."

The contents of the envelopes are quite as amusing. Demands for office and begging letters are the most numerous. A tin box came to the president a few days ago from a church in Forth Worth, Tex. It was labelled "100 lines before August 2," and the president was expected to drop ten-cent pieces in at stated intervals for the good of the cause. Cranks send the president a great many letters. ## THE SOUTHERN PACIFIC.

Theories Regarding the Building of a Line to Portland—North Yakima Embraced in Every Project.

Oregonian: The question is not so much now, "Will the Northern Pacific build into Portland from Eastern Washington?" but "When will it do so?" When the sale of the Hunt system to C. B. Wright was made public, people said, "That settles it. The Northern will haul all the inland Empire wheat to the Sound." Since then they have been thinking over the importance of Portland, and by encouraging each other have made themselves believe that Portland is too big and strong now for the Northern or any other road to carry out a successful warfare against it. It is thought that Portland is going to get its share, and that a good big one, of the Empire wheat, and if the Northern wants to haul it in, as well as handle the increasing local business between here and there, it must build into Portland.

A prominent railroad officer said yesterday: "It is only a question of time when the main road of the Northern Pacific will be shortened by using the present narrow-gauge division, having it widened to standard with the possibility that the line will be utilized via Davenport to North Yakima, across to Chehalis, thence into Portland. In case the route from North Yakima into Portland is adopted, this would enable the line from Hunt's Junction, already projected as a part of the Hunt system, by being extended west to Centralia, to make connections that would give it a short cut into Portland points south of the Snake river."

The above comes from a source which gives the stamp of great probability. Other theories are, however, indulged in.

"The Northern will build into Portland," said a man who is familiar with the physical contour of the whole Northwest, "and it will follow the Columbia river from Wallula. The north side of the river is the side for a railroad, anyway. There is no snow and no sand there, and operating will be conducted with less danger and delay than the U. S. Pacific is obliged to get-up with. Indeed, the prospects of the N. P. coming down the Columbia, is a menace to the future earnings of R. & N.'s line."

Others incline to think that the era will elect to build in from Yakima, or at least some point south of it, utilizing the Kilkittat into Vancouver.

It is maintained by some that V. H. has never abandoned his project of building down the Columbia, and that he will carry it into execution before long.

DAUGHTER'S IMMIGRATION.

The great danger to the United States from the present large foreign immigration lies in the fact that the mass of the immigrants come from the most ignorant and superstitious elements of other lands.

Self-protection, the first instinct in individuals and nations, dictates that something must be done to restrict the admission to this republic of elements not only undesirable, but dangerous, and of no appreciable value in adding to the material or intellectual wealth or military strength of the United States.

G. A. R. and Auxiliary Organizations to Give a Novel Entertainment for the Benefit of the Charity Fund.

The G. A. R., Woman's Relief Corps and Sons of Veterans, assisted by citizens, will give a camp-fire, supper and entertainment at the opera house, Thursday evening, March 26th, for the benefit of the charity fund of these organizations.

The program will begin at 6 o'clock, when a supper will be served by Mesdames Thomas, Chambers, Prosser, Ward, Scott, Clark, Henton and other members of the Relief Corps. At 8 o'clock there will be a five minute address by W. L. Jones, followed by a musical entertainment, participated in by Miss Dora Allen, Miss Isabel Harte, Messrs. Geo. Vance, C. H. Lombard, H. B. Voorhees, E. T. Willson, E. P. Greene and Nye Taggard.

Next the milking stool drill by a corps of young ladies, commanded by Miss Hattie Sawyer.

The booths will be an attractive feature of the entertainment.

"Rehearsal at the wall," in the person of Miss Cornett, will be assisted by Miss Mattison and Miss Fulkerson in supplying the thirsty with Yakima soda lemonade and ice.

The fishing pond will be in charge of Mrs. R. B. Milroy, assisted by Miss Wheeler, where you can fish to your heart's content and always "make a catch."

The refreshment booth will be in charge of Miss Minnie Mansfield, assisted by several young ladies, where ice, cakes and coffee will be found.

The postoffice, museum, flower booth and other special features will be attractive.

All who desire to dance will be given an opportunity to trip the light fantastic from 11 o'clock until the "wee sma' hours."

In order to insure the success of this entertainment the prices have been made exceedingly low. The tickets of admission, which includes supper, have been placed at 50 cents. The dancing tickets will also be 50 cents.

REGISTER KRUTZ WOULDN'T ALLOW FILINGS

The Sunnyside Settlers on Overlapping Railroad Lands Balked—A Night of Waiting in the Land Office Hall.

Pursuant to announcement that the overlapping lands in the Sunnyside section, restored to the public domain by the failure of the Northern Pacific to build the Columbia river road, would be opened to homestead settlement on the 17th inst., an anxious crowd of filers began to gather at the land office as early as 4 o'clock in the afternoon of the preceding day. Jerry Rochford, the prosecuting attorney of the county, was the first man to put in an appearance, and he was soon joined by Harry Spinning, W. C. Calhoun, R. I. Watson, W. L. Jones and many others.

By 8 o'clock the hall was well filled, and the waiters and waitresses began to arrange matters as comfortable as possible for spending a long night. A couple of tables, some chairs, a few boxes and other improvised seats were secured and every one tried to make himself easy. The best of feeling prevailed, and where two or more parties were after the same piece of land new papers were drawn up and an amicable apportionment made. The applicants evidently did not hall from Kemstock, for there was a noticeable absence of bottles, but at midnight a substantial lunch was served, at which a great big pot full of hot coffee, furnished by Mrs. G. W. Rodman, was a very satisfactory factor. Some musically inclined individual had brought along his harmonium, and he regaled the audience with choice selections from "Audience with McGinty" and "Little Annie Rooney." Cards were produced and what assisted in keeping the watchers awake. An early breakfast was served, and at 9 o'clock the office doors were opened.

The only unpleasant incident of the long wait was in the morning, when Jack Morgan, who had enjoyed a good night's sleep in his bed, came around and tried to steal a march on the boys and get to the head of the column, but Register Krutz informed him that he would have to wait his turn.

When the doors were opened and Mr. Rochford presented his application to file, Register Krutz refused to accept the same, basing his refusal on a letter received from Paul Schulze, of the Northern Pacific land department, which stated, in substance, that the lands in question had, by a resolution of the board of directors of the N. P. R., passed April 17, 1890, been sold to the N. P., Yakima & Kittitas Irrigation Co., and that through some inadvertence notification of such sale and selection had not been filed at the land office. Mr. Schulze stated that the Irrigation company was now constructing, at a cost of over $400,000, a large canal to make possible the irrigation of 60,000 acres of land, and that the operations of the company would be seriously interfered with should failure be made to obtain title to said lands, and in fact, in his judgment, it would be impossible to complete the ditch without having undisputed ownership of the lands in question. He asked that the lands be not opened to entry, but to have the applications, with the register's recommendation, forwarded to the general land office for further action.

On the basis of this letter Mr. Krutz rejected all applications, with the exceptions of those of Thomas Sanders, Frederick Sharp and W. H. Wright, so that in case of decision of the general land office favorable to the settler the filings will be received in the order the latter was made.

The following is the list of applicants: Jerry Rochford, David H. Gulliland, Harry Spinning, Jno C. McGlothlen, Wm. C. Calhoun, Amos J. Allen, Robt. L. Watson, Thomas Sanders, Frederick Sharp, W. L. Jones, Sam. J. Neelands, Geo. W. Rodman, Wm. H. Wright, Frank L. Rodman, Eugene C. Lynn, Chas. E. Whitely, Wm. H. Skoels, Wm. W. McCarty, Jock Morgan, Andrew E. Kuns, Robt. J. Wylie, N. J. Beckner.

BOOTS SEIZED BY BOLD BURGLARS.

Three Yakima Ladies Relieved of Their Jewelry. No Clue to the Perpetrators of the Robbery.

Yakima has been remarkably free from burglaries of all descriptions until the latter part of last week, when a series of them occurred and started the community into looking a little closer after the fastenings to their dwellings and to the security of their valuables. The first burglary reported to the police was that of Miss Cornett, who resides with her brother, Rev. W. H. Cornett, in the larger of the Cadwell blocks. At 11 o'clock Friday morning Miss Cornett left the rooms for a drive, and as has been her custom, left the key hanging to the frame of the door for the convenience of her brother. When she returned, about 1 o'clock, she discovered that some one had entered her room and stolen jewelry valued at $300. Marshal McMurry was notified, but up to the present has no definite clue upon which to work. The jewelry taken consisted of four rings, two bracelets, two brooches and a necklace and eocket. A valuable necklace of garnets was overlooked by the thief.

When Mrs. W. H. Chapman heard of Miss Cornett's loss she recalled that she had not seen her watch in its customary place on the bureau of her room, in the smaller of the Cadwell buildings, and hurrying home her fears were realized. Not only was her watch gone, but a valuable gold chain. Mrs. Chapman has been peculiarly unfortunate, as she lost a watch a year ago in the fire that burned her brother-in-law's house.

The third burglary occurred at the Gulliland house, the thief entering the room of Miss Matilda Gulliland and taking jewelry, the intrinsic value of which was $75, but which was mainly prized on account of association.

Descriptions of the stolen property have been sent to the authorities of the neighboring towns and cities, but nothing has as yet been heard from them.

JOHN DILLON.

The Eminent Comedian Will Appear Here Friday, March 26th.

Probably in the history of amusements in this city there has never been any star or attraction quite up to John Dillon. The following from the Chicago Herald says: "The man who can succeed in making the public laugh is a public benefactor and should be recognized as such. Mr. Dillon has been engaged in this laudable purpose for a great many years and has, beyond a doubt, produced more genuine laughter than any man on the American stage. At no time does he resort to low comedy to provoke a smile, nor indulge in coarse stage gymnastics to bring about the result. Years of experience has taught him the grade of comedy most appreciated, and he has endeavored, by hard work, coupled with wonderful natural ability, to reach the highest plane. In this he has succeeded admirably. As he advances in age he improves in the delineation of the characters he assumes. The person who cannot enjoy a laugh at Mr. Dillon has no appreciation of genuine humor in his soul, for he is a great comedian, graceful, polished and dignified."

Novelties in Millinery.

Mrs. G. W. Cary has returned from Portland, where she has been attending the spring openings of the wholesale millinery houses. Mrs. Cary has determined to remain here, and in consequence purchased a large and attractive stock of the latest novelties in millinery goods. An Historic Old Town.
Borgo is an old town about forty miles from Helsinki, and certainly the most characteristic of the small towns of Finland. By the side of the old town, with its quaint, irregular houses and its tortuous streets, there are squares and picturesque quarters with houses painted with yellow ochre, and reminding one by their shape of cigar boxes. Situated at the mouth of a little river, and prettily set in a frame of hills and ancient fortifications, covered with venerable pine trees, Borgo presents a most curious aspect.

The old white cathedral, the strange houses of the old town, painted red, ochre and orange; the sheds and warehouses built along the river, with their foundations in the water itself, and everywhere in the intervals between these odd wooden buildings the fresh greenery of the gardens—such are some of the features which make this little town so characteristic. The cathedral is a large square monument built of blocks of granite, whitewashed, and with pointed gables. The steeple is separate from the church at a distance of about fifty paces. It is the type of almost all our churches of the Catholic era—that is to say, before Gustavus Vasa.

It was in this church of Borgo that Alexander I in 1809 opened the Finnish diet, by which he promised to preserve and to respect forever the religion, the laws and the Swedish constitution of the country, thus, according to his own words, "raising Finland to a place among nations."—Albert Edelheit in Harper's.

She Talked Him Into It.
I heard a characteristic bit of dialogue on a Sixth avenue train a couple of days ago. The speakers were two well dressed women under the middle age.

"What a goose a man is!" chirped one of the women in a high keyed voice that could be heard all over the car.

"Why, Mame?"

"Why, about my earrings, you know. I took them to a jeweler and told him how I wanted them fixed. 'Oh, it couldn't be done,' he said. I told him it would have to be done. I couldn't wear them if it wasn't done, and I wanted to wear them. Now, if it had been a woman she would have fixed them in some way, and that would have been the end of it; but, do you know, I had to talk to that man an hour and fifteen minutes, and then he said he'd fix them, and he did."

They left the car at this point, and a gray bearded old man remarked, "I don't wonder that the jeweler was ready to promise to fix anything for you, if she talked an hour and fifteen minutes to him."—New York Star.

Curious Advice.
I am reminded of a serious bit of advice I heard a shrewd elderly man give to a young acquaintance who was about to start in business.

"Have you any cash, Harry?" asked he.

The youth named a respectable sum.

"Have you any credit?"

The young man replied again in the affirmative, going over a promising list of his advantageous connections.

"Then let me give you a hint gratis," said the old republican. "Use your credit first, my boy; your cash is good any time."—Kate Field's Washington.

An Aerial Messenger.
Captain Smith, of the ship Kistka, bound from Sydney, N. S. W., to San Francisco, caught an albatross around the neck of which was a piece of brass bearing the following inscription: "O'Brien, July 5, '98, lat. 37 degs. 20 min. north, long. 143 degs. west." Capt. Smith took possession of the message and released the aerial messenger.—Chambers' Journal.

Beehive.
The question is often asked by amateurs "Do bees make wax?" The answer is Yes. Wax is a natural secretion of the honey bee, formed in delicate scales on the under side of the abdomen. While it is formed to some extent in activity, it is formed in largest quantities in repose, while the bees are quietly clustering inside the hive. Wax is used by the bees for comb building. The production of each pound requires in the neighborhood of twenty pounds of honey.

Another thing that puzzles beginners is how to render old combs without an extractor. We give a plan recommended by Root in his work on bee culture. It is simply a large honey barrel having a ladder made of perforated zinc suspended in it by a hoop that rests on the top of the barrel. A steam pipe throws a strong jet of steam into the barrel, and all one has to do is to shovel on the old comb in any quantity. The wax is found in the basket.

A Ministerial Conductor.
"We have had some curious men on this line," said a Third avenue car conductor, "but I think about as strange as any was one who had formerly been a Methodist minister. Now he came to get on a street car I don't know, but he was a wholesome, manly sort of man, and he did his work well, though he had at first a singular way of doing things. He had been on the front platform one day collecting some fares, and when he got back to the rear platform a passenger told him a man had got on at Houston street and was sitting inside. The conductor stood in the doorway and looked in, but he couldn't locate him. Then he said with perfect calmness, 'Will the gentleman who got on at Houston street please rise?' The gentleman who got on at Houston street stood up like a man and paid his fare."—New York Sun.

They Can't Do It.
There are two things a full blooded Indian cannot learn to do—box or wrestle. He is all right as a runner, jumper and rough and tumble, but anything like science gets him out. His way is to bite and kick and pull hair, and he can't be broken in to stand up and take one on the nose.—Detroit Free Press.

It is said that Daniel Webster was the first editor of the first college paper published in this country, the initial number appearing at Dartmouth in 1800. These journals now number 150 in the United States, while but 1 is issued in England.
