OUR GLORIOUS WASHINGTON.

In the Center of Which is the Peerless Jewel Yakima.

What We Have and What is Wanted—A Few Words to Those Seeking Homes.

If there is a State in the Union where investors and homeseekers can do well, it is Washington.

There is nothing weak nor lacking in the proposition. The state has plains, mountains, timber, minerals, agriculture, and rivers, seacoast, railroads and ranches.

If there is a spot in the state of Washington better than another just now, it is North Yakima.

Why? Mind your own business, and look to your own best interests long enough to read this, and you will find out.

In the first place it has the best climate in the country.

In the second place, it is Garden Spot which even now supplies the coast cities with farm and garden produce of all kinds. The coast also gets its meat from the Yakima Valley.

These are the principal reasons. Given agriculture, you may have everything else with it.

When people want to invest money they generally go to a town or city that is the center of an agricultural region. A capitalist who will not do this thing will not be a capitalist for any great length of time.

In the Yakima Valley the farmers and gardeners depend upon irrigation for their moisture, and they never meet with disappointment. They can in this way place the water at the roots. The sun is constantly on hand to pump it into the tops.

Market gardening is the best thing for small families without any capital except labor. A family may be well supported on five acres well worked.

The market gardener can raise two crops of potatoes averaging five hundred bushels to the acre. He can raise two hundred dollars' worth of melons on half an acre. He can raise sweet potatoes as well as in Georgia.

He can raise grapes as well as in California.

He can grow fruit of all kinds to perfection. In fact, there are more good bearing orchards on the old ranches hereabouts than anywhere else in the Northwest.

If the large farmer wants many acres to profitably cultivate he can go into hops and never fail for want of pickers. The Yakima Indians are always ready at pickling time.

He can go into tobacco and do as well as the Virginian or the Kentuckian in this line, (come and see the tobacco fields and the cigar-makers working all the year round on home-grown leaf.)

He can put his land in alfalfa and cut five crops a year, and sell it either in the bale or in leaf.

He can raise perfect wheat, but he will do much better to raise the more profitable crops. The land is too well suited to garden crops to be wasted on wheat.

He can raise all the potatoes and corn he wants.

Perhaps the capitalist is in league with the manufacturer to make money.

Very well. This new state is using everything that is manufactured and making comparatively nothing but lumber and lime. With the water power here to run the machinery and the raw wool, hides, beef to can, and other things which enter into the world's work, why not come here to make it.

Why has all this not been known before?

Because the City of North Yakima is but five years of age and has had railroad communication with the Sound for only three years.

What is land worth?

From five dollars to five hundred per acre; as you desire to be near town or on the outside.

What are town lots worth?

From one hundred to five thousand dollars, as you desire, the best corner or a lot in the outer rim.

What do you burn for fuel?

Coal and wood, of which there is plenty in the country.

What are rents?

From ten dollars for cottages to seventy-five for stores, with takers as fast as either are ready.

What kind of employment may be found?

Carpenters and masons are all busy. So are gardeners.

How can we verify all these statements?

By stopping off and looking the place over.

Whenever people go out from their old habitations and push forward for something better, they generally look for a place where privs and opportunities offer something for the future. The time is coming when such spots will be hard to find on this continent, and it is well for everybody now on his travels to recognize this and make his beginning this season, and as early as he can. This can never be done without personal investigation, so the suggestion follows: Investigate. And while you are about it investigate the Valley of the Yakima, and especially that lying about and in the City.

You will find there everything that is mentioned above and more. The most that a healthy mind requires or expects

SAVAGE SIGN LANGUAGE.

The Long Distance Talk of the Esquimaux.

The System of Signals of the Indians Almost as Perfect as a Military Code.

With two Esquimaux hunters, says a writer in the Cosmopolitan, I was once standing upon the top of a rocky hill, about two days' journey inland from the north shore of Hudson's bay. We had been looking for reindeer, but had seen none. Already we had walked a long distance and crossed many hills en route, for it is the custom with the Esquimaux, as with the Indians, to go over the top of a hill rather than around it. This is not only to have a fine lookout from an elevation, but because it is impossible to convince a savage that it is not the shorter route. It was about noon, and we were tired, so we stopped to rest a few minutes and to smoke a pipe. We had not been in the enjoyment of these luxuries long before I heard the faint sound of a human voice borne upon the stiff wind that was blowing from the northward. I called the attention of my companions to this sound, and brushing their long black locks over their ears, they threw themselves down in the lee of a great rock and listened. They, too, heard the voice, and said the person calling was so far off that they could not understand what he said. In the meantime I swept the crest of a range of hills in the direction of the voice with my field glass, and finally made out the figure of some one who was waving what looked like a huge piece of cloth. I passed the glass to Sobocuckalee, one of my guides, and he at once recognized a hunter named Aluktaq, and said he signaled us to come over where he was; that there were reindeer there. The hills did not appear far off, but it was a full hour before we reached the man who had signaled us to come. He then told us that there were plenty of reindeer beyond that line of hills, and that his tent and that of two other hunters were pitched within easy reach of the hunting grounds. He gave my two friends some raw venison, and to me, as an especial favor, a nice raw tongue, from which he first, very politely, bit off the hard outside skin. It was the first raw meat I had eaten; but, having fasted since the previous noon, I had too keen an appetite to be particular about trifles. During this little luncheon Aluktaq told of the quantity of reindeer near his camp and invited us to go over there with him. It was nearly dark when we reached the camp and during the walk I had ample time to wonder how he had succeeded in informing my companions that they were reindeer around when so far away to be heard. I could understand that he might beckon to them to come to him, but the more I thought about it the more I was puzzled over the method of communicating the fact of their being good hunting grounds where he was.

The following day my guides Sobocuckalee and Koomana went back to bring their tent and the old folks up to the new camp, and I went out to hunt with Aluktaq. During that day he explained to me the interesting at the time, and later on its usefulness was demonstrated almost daily during my residence with these people. Aluktaq described to me that when an Esquimaux wished to talk with those at a distance he would take a position on an eminence where his body could be plainly seen against the sky or a snow-covered hillside. With his body placed as a directly face those with whom he wished to communicate, he extends his right arm and moves it up and down like a pump-handle. This signal means "Come here."

"You are not," said one of his captives; "look at your embroidered vest. You are an officer."

"The Mexican, in his embarrassment, drew his fingers into his jacket pocket and ran out an elegant gold snuff-box. This more than ever caused the Americans to believe him an officer. He offered them a large sum of money to release him, but they refused and started with him to Houston's tent. As they passed a large group of Mexican prisoners those men cried out that Santa Anna was captured.

"The Mexican general, thus exposed, urged his captives to take him at once to General Houston's tent. He remembered the affair of the Alamo, and was afraid that he would be summarily dealt with by the Texan soldiers who began to crowd around. Santa Anna was by General Houston's order transferred to Washington, and from there, after he had made a treaty acknowledging the independence of Texas, sent to Mexico.

"The action of General Houston in bringing on the battle of San Jacinto was daring. He had the bridge across Buffalo Bay destroyed during the night so that all avenue of escape for the Mexican army was cut off. The morning of the battle General Houston said that as he was awakened by the sun shining in his face, and thought he beheld the sun of Anauetilla. The Mexicans were encamped east of his position. Houston waited until the sun had crossed the heavens and was shining in the faces of the Mexicans before he made a movement to assault their position.

"These sense-loving people, about the hour of 1 in the afternoon, began to take their usual siesta, and in this unfortunate pleasure they were engaged when Houston attacked them."—Nashville American.

TOLD OF SAN HOUSTON.

Pride in His Good Looks—Santa Anna's Capture The Time to Attack Mexicans.

"General Sam Houston was a handsome and graceful man," said Judge Thomas Berry of Gallatin. He was discussing the characteristics of celebrated Tennesseans with whom he had been intimately acquainted.

"He was proud of his fine personal appearance, too," the aged speaker continued, "and there is told of him a story which, if true, will serve to illustrate his youthful vanity. When a young man, so the story runs, Houston was in Nashville one day, and was posing on a prominent street corner, when two or three sidly young ladies passed by. They were attracted by the handsome man in his showy uniform, and after passing him turned their heads to get another glance.

"I wonder who that man is," one of them exclaimed to her companions.

"I am, ladies, Lieutenant Houston of the United States Army," said the young soldier, as he made a step forward and lifted his cap as he addressed them.

"General Houston told me once how he captured General Santa Anna. Just after the battle of Santa Jacinto two of Houston's men, who were searching for prisoners, scared up a deer, which ran through the tall grass. The frightened animal passed near to a Mexican, who was concealed in the herbage and who jumped up in evident alarm. The two immediately secured the stranger, who asserted that he was a common soldier.

"You are not," said one of his captives; "look at your embroidered vest. You are an officer."

"The Mexican, in his embarrassment, drew his fingers into his jacket pocket and ran out an elegant gold snuff-box. This more than ever caused the Americans to believe him an officer. He offered them a large sum of money to release him, but they refused and started with him to Houston's tent. As they passed a large group of Mexican prisoners those men cried out that Santa Anna was captured.

COAL OIL JOHNNY AGAIN.

Some New Facts About the Famous Spendthrift.

Where He Got His Coin and How He Came Out When the Bubble Burst.

Pittsburg Commercial: The visitor to the oil region asks first about Coal-Oil Johnny and next about John D. Rockefeller.

The statement is often published that Coal-Oil Johnny has died, or that he has regained his squandered fortune. There is as much truth in one as in the other. He is still alive at the age of 53 years, and his address is Ashland, Saunders Co., Neb., where he has lived for the past twelve years. He is at present employed as station agent at Ashland. He has not recovered his fortune, or any part of it, but makes a comfortable living and has apparently forgotten the princely days of his youth.

Coal-Oil Johnny was about three years running through with his fortune. It was at Roseville where Johnny began to throw away his money, but that town, although one of the red hot oil towns, was soon too small for him. Erie, Buffalo and Pittsburg knew him next, but it was at Philadelphia that he distinguished himself most. How much money he squandered in three years is a matter of conjecture, even in the oil country. There is, however, a wide misapprehension as to the amount. His fortune did not reach into the millions, as has so often been stated. The best judgment here places it not above $250,000. He was the adopted son of Widow McCloskey, and at her death her oil farm and its accumulated earnings passed to him. Perhaps $100,000 was turned over to Johnny on the settling of her estate, and his share of the product of the farm after that time is supposed to have been $200,000. He therefore squandered about $1,000,000 a year for the three years, that the money lasted. At the end of this time the old bonanza farm had ceased to yield and his money was spent.

His career as a spendthrift came to an end on Thursday, February 12, 1888, when he filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the United States district court at Pittsburg. His indebtedness at the time was thus scheduled:

H. W. Kanga, Grand House, Philadelphia $10,000
Wm. E. Galbraith, 410 Market, Erie, Pa. 10,000
Ashland & Co., general, Philadelphia 10,000
John D. Jones, harness 1,000
W. S. Horn, cigars 500
E. H. Conkley, Philadelphia, liquor 2,000
Friesen a colesider, oilskins trades 1,000
Tax-drawn creditor, oil painting 2,000
For hats 200

Total $62,700

This schedule tells its own story of a royal spree extending over a period of three years. The indebtedness at the Girard House was for board, liquors, etc. Rooms at the hotel he occupied a suite of rooms on the parlor floor, and usually had from one to three kindred sports with him, whose board and expenses he paid for the sake of their company. The amount of his unpaid bill at the Girard House, nearly $20,000, is an indication that he and his companions lived tolerably high. How much money he paid to the Girard House is not known, but it is thought to have been as much as he left unpaid.

It is a curious fact that the old played-out Steel fair has been revived and is making another man rich. This man is John W. Waits, of Oil City, who bought the old place a few years ago for $7,000. He has since been offered $8,000 for it. Waits was a street gambler about Roseville when Johnny Steele was cutting his wide swath there, and frequently held the young oil prince's team while the latter went into a saloon to get a drink.

Death of A. R. Leeper, of Passo.

Passo Headlight: A. R. Leeper, who so long has been one of our most esteemed citizens, died at Wallula, April 13, aged 33 years. He leaves a wife, children, relatives and many friends to mourn his loss. Mr. Leeper has been a sufferer for ten years, but never gave up until the last, believing all the time that he could get well. He bore his sufferings without a murmur, but now the noble man has gone to try the beyond, awaiting to meet the loved ones he has left behind. The sorrowing family and relatives have our deepest sympathy in this sad moment; but with a faith looking across the dark river, we trust they may meet to part no more in the bright realms of eternal glory.

"VENGEANCE OF HEAVEN."

A Jersey Canal Boatman Neglected to rescue his drowning child when he could easily have done so. Shortly afterward an express train ran over and mangled him to death. The San Francisco Chronicle calls this "the vengeance of heaven."

On which the Alta thus comments:

While we heartily approve the killing of the heartless canal-boatman, we object to this confident assertion that heaven did it. Consider for a moment, if heaven can throw an express train at a man who can save an innocent child who deserves to live. We are quite tired of a heaven that seems to be incorporated merely for the purpose of acting as executioner for the wicked, while it never is credited with lifting a finger to help the good in extremity. This hangman notion of heaven is fatiguing. This wrath and vengeance business should not be transacted at that place at all. It should turn in and find Charley Rose, and if it is in the killing business, it should assist in behalf of the wicked, while it never is credited with lifting a finger to help the good in extremity. IN WONDERLAND.

I was in a good humor as I approached Yakima, for Yakima, so I had heard, was a very determined and pugilistic young city.

It was as the train pulled into Yakima that I met with a young man who has since become one of my warmest friends.

Permit me to refer to him as the young poet. I suspected his avocation at once, for, though the poets of the present day do not wear Byronic collars, or indulge in hyacinthine locks, the trade marks are the same as they were in the early part of the century.

"This," said he, "is where the south and the north are married." I was not in a mood to be sympathetic, and I regarded this enthusiastic youth with a cold stare.

"Really," I said, "what may that mean?" "It means," said he, "that the products of the north and of the south grow equally well in the valley of the Yakima."

"Oh," I said, "I suppose you mean to say they have sorghum and yams up here?" "Precisely," said he; "the tobacco flower blooms here beside the bearded grain—I have written a few lines upon the subject."

"Thank you," I said, "I should be delighted to hear them, but unfortunately I got off here."

"Ah," cried he, joyfully, "so do I. Come with me, and we will go to the Hotel Yakima together, and as we go I will read you my 'Apocalypse' to the twelve valleys which pay tribute to the Yakima."

By keeping up a supply of well directed conversation, I managed to avert this evil, as we drove up the broad and tidy streets of Yakima to the hospitable inn which bears the name of the town.

Notwithstanding my utmost efforts to avoid the young poet, I found myself sitting opposite him at dinner, and, after completing my inspection of the menu, was obliged to peruse the following— a tribute to the young man's recently adopted town, and the principal river which flows through it:

Brown are the hills by the Yakima. Brown through the blue of the evening mist. And the sturdy peaks of the topmost peaks by the clouds of the brooding sky are lit.

Clear is the flow of the Yakima. And cool is the snows that feed its source. And wherever it flows through the wholesome plains, Unhastily leads from its splendid force.

It waters the waste, does the Yakima. And the desert bursts in bloom like the rose; It sings as it turns the miller's wheel, And it washes the gold from the dross as it flows.

"I am the sorriest Yakima," sings the stream, while the ages run; "I am the servant of plenty and peace, born of the love of the snow and the sun."

Faithful and true is the Yakima. And flows in the valley it flows to bless, And the moon also drinks in their cups of snow. An eternal feast to its desolation.

This might have widened the breach between us, but I knew that I was not free from faults myself, and promised to be friendly with him if he would not talk shop—poetry being, of course, the "shop" of poets.

"What I want to know about," I told him, "is the resources of the country." The young poet sniffed the air disdainfully.

"I dare say the hotel clerk can instruct you," he said. But I went out and gathered information from other sources. I found that every preparation had been made there for a desirable city. On each side of the wide streets were planted rows of trees, and the mountain streams have been coaxed to run through ditches by the roadway.

The population is about 250. It has tasteful churches, a remarkably imposing school building, sixty-five business houses, and two banks, each of which claim a daily deposit of $6500.

privilege to smoke. From 3.00 to 4.00 head of stock are raised on the Moore farm, and not far from there I visited the excellent dairy of Mr. Henry B. Scudder, who manufactures butter and cheese enough to satisfy the local market.

Before long it is probable that systematic irrigation will be undertaken, thus putting in cultivation 500,000 acres of land immediately around Yakima.

The young orchards will also be greatly benefited by this, and in the near future the Yakima basin may become one of the best fruit countries in the west.

I was advised by the young poet to visit the Tietan basin, thirty-five miles west of Yakima, where, according to his description, exquisite falls break from glacial rivers into a green valley of wonderful loveliness.

They told me, too, of the soda springs, where the people of Yakima resort in summer to breathe the air of the Pacific as it sweeps across the mountains; but I determined to hasten on, after having made elaborate notes in my memorandum book concerning watermelons which weighed fifty-four pounds apiece, squashes which weighed eighty-six, sorghum which grew ten feet high, corn which went one foot better, hop vines which presented solid clusters of fruit forty feet long, and oats which grew six feet high and rustled a bearded head two feet in length.—From "In Wonderland."

CHANGES in land department rulings respecting lands within the Northern Pacific grant are causing much disturbance throughout the state.

Lands that have been held and improved for years as railroad lands are now held by the department at Washington to be government lands.

Land jumpers, hoping to profit by the changed rulings, are in many instances applying to enter these improved lands under the government land laws.

This is working serious injury to property rights acquired in good faith under the old rulings, and an urgent appeal is being made for the passage of a law that will prevent the retroactive effect of changes made in land office rulings and that will fully recognize and protect the rights of persons who have been holding lands which under former rulings were deemed to be a part of the railroad grant.

Tax horse exhibition on Yakima avenue, on Saturday last, was a surprise to many, showing as it did the large number of imported and blooded stallions.

There are few counties in the northwest where such a creditable exhibit could be made, and it speaks well for our progress that it is so.

The proposition of bonding the city for $3,000 for the purpose of putting in a complete system of sewerage will be voted upon May 17th.

Every one who values the health and life of kindred, friend and self above a light tax will vote "Yes."

THE eight hour "strike" will be inaugurated in both hemispheres on May 1st, and it is expected the confederated trades will make a determined stand for this standard of a day's work.

The matter has been carefully considered by labor leaders in the new and old world, and the plans have been long maturing.

President Harrison and Secretary Proctor hold that sentences for desertion from the U. S. army in times of peace shall not be for a period exceeding two years, and that deserters who have not been brought to trial on or before the expiration of two years after the commission of their offense, shall go scot free.

The Presbyterian confession of faith will be revised, a large majority of the presbyteries having declared themselves in favor of a modification. It is not surprising that the advanced thought of to-day finds it necessary to improve on the lesser understanding of centuries past.

The district court of Philadelphia last Monday granted 1173 retail liquor licenses out of 1221 applications. This is just thirty-one less than last year, and nearly 600 less than five years ago, before the Brooks' high license law went into effect.

That the law is a success is very evident. From March 15 to April 8, 21 days, it is estimated 120 persons have been killed and 400 wounded by torpedoes.

The amount of property destroyed is not given, but, as is well known, it is very great, running up in value to hundreds of millions of dollars.

It has cost $40,000,000 in interest for the luxury of keeping $100,000,000 of gold lying idle and useless in the treasury on the pretext that some one might want the old treasury notes redeemed.

What ought we to call such a financial policy? The California Athletic club has offered a purse of $2,000 for a fight to the finish between John L. Sullivan and Peter Jackson, the contest to take place in the club rooms in San Francisco in September next.

The house committee on public lands had decided to recommend the removal of the capital of Alaska from Sitka to Juneau and the establishment of a land office at the latter place.

A young fellow named Hudson, who has been employed on Capt. Dunn's ranch, skipped the country Wednesday, leaving many sorrowful creditors behind, and some who would not remain behind, but are now on the track of the delinquent.

A RUNAWAY FREIGHT.

Collision of a Caboose and Passenger Engine—One Man Killed.

ELLENBURGH, April 23.—Last night as freight train No. 13 was cutting off to put the helper on at Easton, the rear brakeman, M. S. Kelly, failed to put on brakes, as he and another man were in the caboose asleep.

Six cars and the caboose ran back to Cle-Elum and met passenger train No. 1 about a quarter of a mile this side of Cle-Elum, smashing the front end of one car, making a total wreck. Kelly was injured, and one Sam Lawless was killed. No one was injured on the passenger. It was about stopped when the runaway cars struck them.

The man who was killed was dead-heading or riding with the trainmen, for he had no transportation and had left the employ of the road the day before. It was rumored on the streets the day before that he was somewhat drunk. Mr. Kelly states that after the cut off he put the brake on the caboose and then got out on the top and that the first brake ratchet slipped on the staff.

A New Snake Lark.

Ellenburgh Register: Mr. Clarence Grimes of Moses Coulee informs us of the discovery of a rare and curious species of reptile in Jas. Burden's Lake, near the big lake of Janieson Bros.

The reptile (or fish as it resembles both, is thought to be the Axo-lotl, which, according to Webster, is related to the salamander, but differs from the ordinary species in retaining the gills. All the information we are able to gather on the subject of Axo-lotls is that they are supposed to be found only in the Lake of Mexico and other lakes in the Mexican Cordilleras.

Mr. Grimes says there are innumerable numbers of them and many have been caught through the ice. They are a curiosity and will be a "feature" of interest to tourist and naturalist.

All for the Heavens.

New York Herald: "My wife's family," said John, "is a very straight-laced one. If they had ever had a notion that I knew the difference between two pair and three of a kind I shouldn't have had the ghost of a chance of winning the wife I had the good luck to capture."

"One evening I had been playing a quiet game with a few of the boys, just to keep my hand in, and was rather late in getting around to see Clara. I told her that the prayer meeting was a mighty interesting one and broke up somewhat late. I found it rather warm work throttling my conscience, and pulled out my handkerchief to help me cool off a bit."

"But the temperature went up to boiling point when I yanked out a roll of chips and they went rolling over the floor in all directions. I thought the theological professor would have the field all to himself, when the old man picked up one of them."

"What are these queer things for, John?" he said. "I tumbled at once to the fact that the old man didn't know poker chips when he saw 'em. I saw that I had a fighting chance to let out of it, and old Nick, bless him, put the right sort of me into my head at once."

"Why," said I with a regular, Sunday school smile, "that's a little idea of my own; I got those things to put scriptural texts on to distribute among the heathen. I think it is an improvement on the pocket handkerchief idea. I got 'em in different colors to suit the tastes of the heathen; some of them, you know, prefer white, and some blue, and some are death on red. I brought 'em with me to-night to get you to help me select texts to put on 'em."

"Clara and the old man were both tickled to death over the idea, and as true as I'm a sinner we all staid up till midnight picking texts out of the Bible to engrave on them."

"But the rub came in when I had to pay $50 to get the texts engraved. I guess it was the first and last time that scriptural texts were ever put on poker chips."

"What became of them?" asked some one.

"They all disappeared mysteriously as soon as I got married."

A Great Editor.

Pittsburg Dispatch: One would hardly look for enterprise in a Hungarian newspaper, but it is the editor of a Pesth contemporary who announces that notices of betrothals, marriages and births will be inserted free if the parties interested will agree to buy the garments, etc., required in each case of tradesmen advertising in his columns.

"George!" It wasn't what she said so much as the way in which she said it. She took the word and drew it out until it was a long, tremulous filament of sweetness.

"George!" the only said it once in reality, but it is customary with story writers to say George twice under these circumstances.

"What is it?" "You have been squeezing my hand with regularity and emphasis for some time."

"I know it," he replied, with the frankness that was characteristic of his manly nature.

"Please don't do it any more," and her voice dropped almost to a whisper.

"No more?" This sounded like heart-throbs of anguish (whatever they are), and his form shook with emotion.

"Because," she faltered. "Go on."

"Because I'm getting a corn on my little finger."—Washington Post.

Mrs. Blackstone—John, what is aggravated assault and battery?

Blackstone—It is a legal name for an offense, my dear.

Mrs. Blackstone—Oh, I know that, but what does it mean?

Blackstone—Well, I'll give you an illustration. If I should hit you with an ax, that would be assault and battery; but if you should hit me with one of those blacut, it would be aggravated assault and battery.

PHOTOGRAPH FROM LIFE AS SHE NOW APPEARS.

"Look on this picture and then on that." The above faces are exact reproductions of photographs taken from life of Mrs. Norton D. Haran, who resides at No. 25 West 25th Street, New York City.

The first one was taken in November, 1907, while in the last stages of consumption, abandoned by physicians and incurable by friends. The other was taken in December, 1908, when completely recovered, and entirely through the use of Dr. Acker's French Broussard's Consumption Cure.

The above pictures are accurate, but they are true to life and the original photographs taken from life can be seen at the "Cure" store, Mrs. Haran's consumption cure, at 25 West 25th Street, New York City.

Tinware, Sheet Ironware, Graniteware, Guns, Pistols and Farm Implements.

Etc., which he is prepared to offer at remarkably low prices. Also a fine stock of HARDWARE.

NATCHEES, SELAH AND WENAS MELANGE.—Crops in the Rosa neighborhood are looking well and the farmers expect a big yield. Fruit was uninjured by the winter and peaches and plums are now in bloom. The range is excellent and sheep and cattle are getting in prime condition. Cameron Bros. will shear next week. Settlers are fast covering the vacant land. The loss of stock is much less than reported. Rosa is to have a produce store. The Wenas people are putting in large acreage and will have no reason to complain of the scarcity of water this season, and the prospects are for the best crops raised in years. Mr. Gled's crop is nearly in and Cliff Cleman has finished sowing, while the Nelson brothers are still busy at the lower end of the valley. Chills and fever are prevalent, the Misses Cleman and Gled being among the sufferers. A large party of prospectors are now on the way to Hanging Rock, and the probabilities for the diggings are encouraging. The miners hope to have a good road completed to the camp this summer. It is claimed that a stamp mill will be erected there this year by Yakoma parties, who are interested in the mine. Gold Hill is still snow-bound, and no work will be done there for some time.

CENSUS ENUMERATION DISTRICTS.—J. M. Hill, supervisor of census for the second district of Washington, was in the city Monday and Tuesday choosing his enumerators and dividing the county into districts. The first district includes the city of North Yakima; second district, all of the county east and north of the Yakima river; third district, that portion of the county bounded on the north by the Yakima river and the township line dividing townships 10 and 11, to west boundary of the county; fourth district, all of the county bounded on the east by the Yakima river and on the south by the line dividing townships 10 and 11, to the west boundary line of the county not included in the limits of North Yakima.

RAILWAY COLLISION NEAR ELLENBURGH.—A section of the freight train going up a steep grade in the vicinity of Cle Elum broke away Tuesday night and ran nearly down to Ellensburg, where it collided with the west-bound passenger, wrecking the freight engine and disabling the passenger engine. Sam Lawler, who was on the runaway, was killed and the fireman of the passenger seriously injured.

LOOKS LIKE LIFE.—The iron mains for the waterworks are being daily received and distributed about the city, and it now looks as though Superintendent Woodward will make his work good of having the waterworks in operation by the middle of July. The contract for laying the pipe has been awarded to John A. Stone, and the contract for building the brick power-house to Robert Scott.

THE YAKIMA CLUB.—The billiard and pool tables of the Yakima club were received Monday and immediately set up. The club, while open and the members are entertained, is still lacking in all of its fittings and furnishings, but everything is expected to be here and in place by the close of the week, in which event a reception will be given on Friday evening, May 22.

A GRAND BLOW-OUT.—At the meeting of the fire department on Thursday last committees were appointed to draft a program and solicit subscriptions for a grand celebration on the Fourth of July. All other organizations and societies are requested to co-operate with the firemen to make the celebration the greatest ever held in central Washington.

THE HERALD HEADS THE LIST.—Hazel Scrip, one of the most delicate and attractive letters for calling and business cards and for high art job-work, just received at The Herald office. Our receipt of job type and papers within the past two weeks invoices over $1200. No office in the inland state is so well equipped.

MARTIAL MUSIC.—The militia band, under the leadership of A. C. Anderson, is doing excellent work. The band, which will make its debut at the entertainment to be given by the pupils of the public schools at the opera house on Friday evening, April 25th, is composed of four snare drums, one bass and five piccolos.

A school entertainment, consisting of songs, declamations, recitations, a three-act farce and a farce, will be given at the opera house Friday evening, April 25th. It is for the purpose of swelling the school library and piano fund, and the entertainment should be generally attended and well received.

S. Schreiner, the Altatum dairyman, subscribed for four copies of THE HERALD this week, to send to friends and relatives in the east. THE HERALD is a good immigration document, and others should follow Mr. Schreiner's example if they want to induce friends to come to the Yakima valley.

Thomas J. Conroy, assistant manager of the Pacific Insurance Union, of San Francisco, was in the city this week looking over the situation and investigating complaints regarding ratings. Insurance rates, he says, will be largely reduced as soon as the waterworks is in operation.

Mrs. Boyers, who returned last week from California, has an announcement this week which will remind grocery buyers—and who is not a grocery buyer?—that the store in Howlett's block is freshly stocked, and also that the proprietor will personally attend to customers.

Receiver T. M. Vance has had his little sorrel horse completely changed in appearance. The animal has been clipped, his mane reached and his tail docked, and strangers might now take him for a thoroughbred steeple-chaser.

S. Aron is fitting up the Elite cigar store in a very handsome manner. He expects to be able to throw open his doors about the first of May.

LOCAL BRIEVITIES.

—Company A has ordered a flag which will cost $44.

—Col. Prosser has purchased a new Surry wagon.

—Einner is now served at noon at the Hotel Yakima.

—Nelson Rich, of Prosser, has been investing in Yakima dirt.

—Edward Whitson's two children are afflicted with the whooping cough.

A CANAL 110 MILES LONG.

Arrangements Completed to Push the Sunnyside Ditch.

BONDS PLACED ON FAVORABLE TERMS.

Dirt Throwing to Begin in 30 Days—500,000 Acres of Arid Land to Be Watered.

TACOMA, April 21, '08. YAKIMA HERALD—Paul Schulze has negotiated the bonds for the big Yakima irrigation canal, and it is now a sure go. Work will be commenced in thirty days.

This telegram was received on Monday and was hailed with joy by those who had not seen the dispatch to the same effect received by Wm. Ker direct from Paul Schulze. In order to learn more about this canal, on which the people of Yakima have set so much store, THE HERALD representative applied the pumping process to Engineer McIntyre, with the following result:

As soon as the legislature delegated to the Northern Pacific the power to guarantee irrigation bonds, Paul Schulze took the matter of the big Yakima irrigation canal in hand, and while in New York pushed it forward with all his energy. President Oakes guaranteed the bonds, which, to the amount of half a million dollars, found ready takers, and were duly signed and placed early this month. Half of the stock of the company will be held by Oakes, Schulze and other Northern Pacific people and half by J. D. McIntyre and his Montana associates. Mr. Oranger, a representative of the company, is now in Washington for the purpose of securing the right of way through a corner of the Yakima reserve, and as soon as this is fixed, work will be commenced. Should Engineer McIntyre find a way to avoid going on the reservation—and he is now working to that end—the company will commence throwing dirt in two weeks, and in no event will this be postponed longer than thirty days, as the engineering corps, which has been in the field since the first of the month, has about completed its labors of running the line of definite location.

Water will be taken from the Nathees and will be carried around this basin on a grade twenty feet lower than the Hubbard ditch. The canal will be 110 miles long, and the dimensions will be twenty feet wide on the bottom, thirty feet on top and have a depth of four and one-half feet. With this it is expected to cover two hundred thousand acres of arid land, which will be mainly tributary to Yakima and wholly within the county. Yakima will be the headquarters of operations and thousands of men and teams will be employed on the work.

WATER'S NAME.

Is it Buckskin or Jacob or Charles?

The statement is made, on the authority of John H. Miller, that Charles Miller—best known as "Buckskin"—fraudulently made entry of his homestead about five miles from town. John H. is Buckskin's brother, and he alleges that Jacob C. Miller made a homestead entry in the Susanville, California, land district some years before coming to the then territory of Washington and making a homestead entry under the name of Charles Miller in section 4, township 13, north range 18 east. The brother appeared at the land office and wanted to institute a contest, when it transpired that patent has been issued, and that the investigation will have to be ordered from Washington.

The matter has caused quite a flutter hereabouts, as Buckskin Miller is known to all the old-timers. It is said that he has "skipped," and it is known that his wife, who is also a familiar figure on the street, is trying to have the ranch deeded to the young woman who lives with her, and who has been a member of the family from childhood.

Another interesting development is that a local agent for a loan company has let two thousand dollars go, with the Miller ranch as security, and so is made an interested watcher of events in connection with the discovery.

Buckskin acquired his nickname from the fact that he used to paddle buckskin gloves made by his wife, and perhaps the fact that he approached toughness has helped the name to stick these many years. Some of the neighbors say they have heard the story of his alias before, coupled with a rumor that he had killed a man in California—but nothing is known to warrant this statement. When he arrived here, his brother's children greeted him as "Uncle Jake," but they were "hushed up," and the "Jake" was dropped until now. Whether it is a romance, or tragedy, or a mistake, Buckskin knows better than anybody else.

The council committee located the electric lights for the streets as follows: One at the corner of Yakima avenue and Third street; the second at the corner of Second and Chestnut streets; third at the corner of Second and A streets; fourth, corner Yakima avenue and First street; fifth, corner of Front and A streets; sixth, corner West Yakima avenue and Selah street.

Judge Carroll B. Graves was in the city Tuesday and held a short session of court, which was occupied with the Morrison will case. Judge Graves left in the afternoon for Walla Walla, where he will open Judge Upton's court, these two judicial gentlemen having temporarily exchanged, so as not to hear cases in which they had been connected as counsel.

Everybody who can appreciate an evening of rare enjoyment should attend the calico ball at the Hotel Yakima Friday evening. The committeemen are working like Trojans to see that nothing is omitted which would contribute to the pleasure of the occasion. From the assurances given the attendance promises to be the largest of the season.

PERSONAL.

E. F. Young is home from a trip to the Sound.

Paul W. Law returned from the Sound Monday.

E. R. Mills, of this city, left on Wednesday for a trip through Idaho.

A. E. McCalley, of Walla Walla, is registered at the Hotel Yakima.

H. J. Kilgour and family left for the east Thursday on a visit to relatives.

Agent H. C. Humphrey returned from a trip to Tacoma and Seattle Wednesday.

J. L. Bounds arrived this week from Douglas county, Oregon, to look after his Altatum farm.

Mrs. J. F. Hodges returned on Sunday from Oregon City, where she sold her farm for $18,000.

N. Hartung, manager for the Fawcett Bros' implement house, returned from Tacoma Tuesday.

Dr. B. L. Baker, of Walla Walla, will arrive here on Saturday and take quarters at the Hotel Yakima. His announcement appears elsewhere.

C. A. Malloy, of Spokane Falls, is in the city. Mr. Malloy is the Spokane attorney of the Northern Pacific, and he is highly delighted with North Yakima.

J. Curran, who recently purchased Dr. Wheelock's property on First street, has arrived from Pendleton with his family, and will make North Yakima his home.

Mrs. Wm. Ker and Miss Charlotte Ker left for Victoria, B. C., Thursday. Miss Ker is en route to her old home in Scotland, which she has not seen for seven years.

Dr. G. W. Carey has under consideration a proposition to remove to Spokane Falls, and is inclined to accept, in which event Dr. Chapman will remain here to look after Biochemic interests.

EFFECTS OF LOSS OF SLEEP.

Some of the Causes and Cures of Insomnia.

Unpleasant Thoughts Presented to the Wakeful Brain—Best For Body and Brain.

Emerson says in his essay on behavior: "If you have not slept or have slept, or if you have headache, or sciatic, or leprosy, or thunderstroke, I beseech by all angels to hold your peace and not pollute the morning by corruptions and groans."

It isn't the lying awake, but the ineffectual and expiring attempt to sleep which some power within you seems to compel you to continually make, that brings you to the verge of insanity and thoughts of suicide.

And then comes the kindly friend who suggests the particular narcotic that puts him to sleep. You take it. It works like a charm. Presently you can't sleep without it. It has worn itself out, and the last state of that man is worse than the first.

Dr. Eccleston advocates the food treatment for insomnia, on the ground that animals and babies always eat and then sleep, and concludes that not only does the process of digestion aid sleep, but vice versa sleep aids digestion, because during digestion the stomach requires more blood, and what is more natural than that the supply be furnished by the dormant brain, which is the most muscular organ of the body?

Insomnia may be distressing, but not at all dangerous. You frequently hear people say that they have not slept a wink all night, which statement, if literally true, would indicate serious conditions, but the fact of the matter usually is that such a person has snored three hours to lying awake one.

Dr. William B. Wood, who has some advanced and original theories on this subject, says: "Insomnia is almost invariably a symptom of some functional or organic disorder and implies the existence of causes that have been operative for some considerable time."

As for the number of hours of sleep required, that is a question which each individual must answer for himself. One man finds he can do more work in a day by sleeping nine hours than by sleeping only seven and working during the other two.

of daily being. In the life of our cities, great numbers of people are daily expending more nervous energy than their vital forces can replace. They are expending more than their income and making inroads upon their capital.

Dr. William A. Hammond recommends as therapeutic measures of relief for insomnia, first, "those by which their tendency to soothe the nervous system or distract attention diminish the action of the heart and blood vessels or correct irregularities of function and lessen the amount of blood to the brain."

The individuals who by excessive mental exertion have lessened the contractibility of the cerebral vessels almost always experience great difficulty in getting to sleep while lying down, because the position has a tendency to send more blood into the head and increase the concentration and general functional activity.

Dr. Eccleston advocates the food treatment for insomnia, on the ground that animals and babies always eat and then sleep, and concludes that not only does the process of digestion aid sleep, but vice versa sleep aids digestion, because during digestion the stomach requires more blood, and what is more natural than that the supply be furnished by the dormant brain, which is the most muscular organ of the body?

A Step Forward.

President Blackstone of the Chicago & Alton railroad has treated the country to a genuine surprise in his annual report, recently published. He asserts that all railroad property has been greatly oppressed by state and government legislation, and then, after saying that no one should complain unless prepared to offer a remedy, proposes that the United States shall acquire the ownership of all railroads now used in interstate traffic, such railroads to be acquired by the exercise of the right of eminent domain or by purchase.

He suggests the issue of government bonds at 3 per cent, to be redeemed by an annual application to a sinking fund equal in amount to 1 per cent of the bonds issued, the annual interest and sinking fund to be paid out of the net earnings, and rates reduced from year to year so as to provide no more money than is actually needed.

Is Saul, then, among the prophets? Is there a railroad president in the United States who advocates in good faith government ownership of railroads, and who—more a wonder still—recommends substituting a new rule as to freight and fares for the time-honored one of all the traffic will bear?

We have no right to question the sincerity of President Blackstone, and no man credit him with more presence than is possessed by his fellow-presidents. He must have seen that the railroad corporations, themselves have educated the people up to understanding what can be accomplished by combination and consolidation, and he sees that the people cannot fail to draw the necessary deduction that the one agency which can manage inland transportation economically and efficiently and in the interests of the people of the United States is the government.

He also sees that when this idea is firmly impressed upon the people it will be but a short and easy step to the governmental assumption of railway control, and he probably prefers to be a pioneer in the movement to bringing up the rear of the procession. His road is not a bankrupt road, not even an alleged bankrupt, and so his opinions on this subject are entitled to weight.

Small Fruits. CURRANTS AND GOOSEBERRIES.—They should be planted in good rich soil and heavily manured; four feet apart in the rows and row a five feet apart. They like a cool moist soil and should be heavily manured every year.

GRAPE.—This subject is a large one and it would be presumptions for me to give explicit directions for their care or to name the best varieties. Cultivation and varieties vary with climate and soil. All kinds seem to do well here that are hardy enough to stand our occasional severe weather.
