MAY THE WOMEN PREACH?

Various Views of Ministers of New York—Difference of Opinion.

Some are in Favor of Women in the Pulpit, While Others Oppose It.

New York Mail and Express: Should women preach?

This is the question which 274 women in this country have answered in the affirmative, and straightway gone to preaching from the pulpit. A slanderer of the sex says that neither ordination nor a pulpit is necessary to constitute some women preachers; it is natural for them to exercise their rights in this direction upon many occasions.

The subject, however, under present consideration is women in the ministry. Have they any right there and in what light do clergymen, who may possibly consider that their territory has been invaded, regard the matter?

To gather some ideas upon this subject for the benefit or entertainment of the reader I started out armed with this question, "Should women preach?" to present it to representative ministers of many different denominations in the city. These replies form the sum and substance of this article, together with those of Grace Greenwood, Margaret E. Sangster, Kate Sanborn and other women well able to express opinions upon the subject.

The first person to give an opinion regarding preaching as a creation for women was the Rev. Dr. Charles H. Easton, of the Church of the Divine Paternity.

"Every person," he said, after some deliberation, "male or female, who feels called to preach has a perfect right to do so, provided he can get anybody to listen. The decision as to whether it is desirable to do so must be left to the individual. I would place no obstacles in the way of a woman's ministry." On the other hand I would not specially encourage it. There are certain physical reasons which render it impossible or undesirable for women to accept pastorates. Motherhood and priest-hood are incompatible. But if there are women, as certainly there are, who by nature, attainment and circumstances are adapted to the work of the ministry, the door to it should be open. I do not think, however, that at any time or in any church there will be a large force of women preachers, and there will be still fewer women pastors."

The Rev. John Hall, of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church, was seen in his study. He seemed to be somewhat amused that anyone should refer to the question of women preaching to him. "I am afraid I must leave that for others to settle," he replied rather aloofly as if the matter were a weighty one, demanding much time and deliberation, and then he added, "the Presbyterian church does not ordain women as preachers, for it believes that there is work enough to be done in this field as Sunday school teachers, Bible readers and missionaries. In regard to St. Paul's exhortation to the Corinthian women, to keep silence in the churches, we take a non-preaching view of the text, believing that he did not approve of their speaking in public assemblies."

The Rev. Dr. MacArthur was just about to address a missionary meeting at his new and beautiful church in west Fifty-seventh street, when the question of women in the pulpit was put to him. He, however, had something to say upon the subject:

"Ought women to preach? This question at this moment is decidedly a practical one. In more than one denomination, women have been ordained and thus set apart to the work of the gospel ministry. The subject is, therefore, before us, and may properly claim the attention of the pulpit and the press. If the word preach be used in a broad sense, we unhesitatingly answer this question in the affirmative. All the Lord's people are to be in the sense of prophets; all who know the truth are to make the truth known. The possession of the truth is itself a reason of its declaration. Whoever has a gospel of any sort is called by the fact of possession to the duty of declaration. There are many passages of scripture which look in the direction of the recognition of women as preachers in this broad sense."

Kate Sanborn gave her opinion upon the subject under consideration. She said she was suffering from a "revised edition of the gripe" and was hardly in a mood for thinking. "I believe that women should both preach and practice if they feel called upon to do so. Women are more apt to be original than men, who are, as a rule, all inclined to keep in the 'same groove of thought,' and, if more original, more likely to arouse interest. Once at Chautauqua I remember hearing Mr. Vincent say that two of the most eloquent preachers he had ever heard were Frances Willard and Mrs. Livermore. In this age of controversy about creeds it behooves women to be very spiritual—in fact to be a living gospel, bearing witness always in her life to truth, purity and nobility of thought and action."

Alice Wellington Rollins, charming as a writer of stories and essays, and equally as delightful as a conversationalist, had this much to say after some meditation upon the subject:

"I think there should be no restriction on a woman's doing what she wishes to do and can do well, and what there may be people who wish to hear her. It is a matter of temperament, ability and audience. If there are those who wish to speak and those who wish to hear silence should not be imperative. There are some things, however, which it is a surprise that she cares to do. As for myself, if I have anything to say to the world I prefer to do it through the medium of the press, but I have no objections to any other woman preaching from a pulpit if she wishes to do so, and I think the door will be open for her in this particular line of work as soon as she is fitted for it. I never, however, should care to bear a woman preacher."

Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster poised her pen in hand over an editorial for the Bazar, when the matter was presented to her, and replied without a moment's hesitation: "You may put me down as squarely against the question, 'Ought Women to Preach?' Very good, however, has been accomplished by women like Mrs. Smilie and Mrs. Botome, and women certainly very often have great gifts of eloquence and are capable of inspiring and arousing great feeling. But I do not approve of their assisting in the ministry. They may very properly be deaconesses, and it seems to be chiefly women who are carrying on the great religious movements in the world; in the foreign mission fields they are doing a great work. But there are plenty avenues of usefulness open to women without her invading the pulpit."

Grace Greenwood expresses the following opinion upon the subject of woman's preaching: "I have always held that women should be allowed to do whatever they can do thoroughly and well, from the promptings of the heart and by the force of intellect and will. Some women will always preach. By all means let them do it in the pulpit, if they like the place. I don't. It is too isolated. As a lecturer I prefer the platform, where the magnetic currents can play on you from all sides and you have not to talk down. All great moral and even political reforms have had their women preachers, as well as leaders. I do not base my belief in the fitness of women for spiritual or judicial offices on the Bible. Our scriptural foundation is not over strong. I notice that special pleaders make much of Judge Deborah and steer clear of St. Paul. I simply claim for my sex freedom—a fair chance, a clear track. It has always seemed to me a peculiar injustice and inconsistency that women, whatever her gifts and her godliness, should be considered not good or great enough to serve with men her ministry of that Christ who, according to orthodox Christian belief, was only human through woman, man having originally no part nor lot in the divine child—the Messiah."

The Rev. Dr. Ducey himself, in cassock and biretta, opened the door of St. Leo's rectory in response to my ring at the bell. He ushered me into the reception room at the left, and soon disposed of the question, "Did our Lord ordain a body of men or a body of women, saying 'Go ye out into the world and preach the gospel?' He ordained men and not women; therefore the latter can not feel that they have any vocation for the ministry."

Dr. Morgan Dix is never at home to callers on business at this handsome house in west Twenty-fifth street, but he can be seen nearly every afternoon at his study in the Trinity church building, Vesey street. His reply to the present question, here given, is in effect a repetition of portions of his famous Lenten lectures on "The Calling of a Christian Woman": "As teachers, nurses of the sick, visitors of the poor and the prisoner, mothers to the orphan, helpers to the clergy, ministering angels in half-broken-up households, women may find worthy missions without seeking to be preachers. There are a thousand spheres in which women can work for God and humanity more properly; there are vast realms in which she reigns as queen. In the domestic circle her influence is practically unlimited, and if used for God may be of unspeakable blessing."

Francis Smith.

Yakima's Baldrigan Strides.

Ellensburg Register: Like all towns in the northwest, Yakima is making strides in advancement and in improvements. The pipe for their waterworks are on the ground and their electric light plant is at the depot. They expect to have both in operation by August 1st. The people of North Yakima take great pride in their homes and in planting out elduberry and shade trees, and there is no question but that the long beautiful avenues skirted on either side by shade trees and their handsome embowered homes make a very favorable impression upon strangers. Like Ellensburg, she is favorably located with regard to water for irrigation purposes. There is no doubt but if the city council of Ellensburg would take pains to run ditches over the city and the people would plant trees along the ditches in front of their homes it would add thousands of dollars to the appearance of the city.

LOVE OF THE MOXEE BRIDGE.—About 6 o'clock last Saturday evening Chairman Stevenson, of the board of county commissioners, was informed that one of the piles of the Moxee bridge had washed loose. Taking an assistant, Mr. Stephenson visited the bridge to see if anything could be done. He found the bridge apparently in no danger. The water had fallen about six inches that day, and the only circumstance that gave rise to forebodings was that the channel of the stream appeared to be changing. By 10 o'clock that night the main span of the bridge was carried out and shortly afterward a 63-foot approach was added to the wreck. The bridge was built two years ago by the Pacific Bridge company, of San Francisco, and cost ten thousand dollars. A difference of opinion existed at the time as to the advisability of locating it at the point selected, owing to the width of the river bottom and the low character of the banks. The county commissioners have taken no action as yet in the matter, and it is questionable if the bridge will be rebuilt at the old site. Commissioner Stephenson favors a suspension bridge and, above all things, will insist upon employing competent engineers to pass upon the location and the plans to be adopted.

LAPOINTE SUFFERS IN POCKET.—On Saturday last the jury in the case of L. M. LaPointe, charged with producing an abortion on 16-year-old Minnie Fox, brought in a verdict of guilty after being out an hour. The arguments pro and con consumed nine hours, and are spoken of as being among the best efforts of both Mr. Solvrey and Mr. Beavis. Judge Graves then took the case under advisement until Wednesday, and came to the conclusion that the best ends would be served by a fine of $10.00 which he imposed upon the defendant. While there is no question but what LaPointe has sinned the general belief is that he has paid dearly for it, as it is said to have cost him, first and last, between ten and fifteen thousand dollars. The court costs at this last trial, which he was obliged to pay, amounted to as much as the fine. All those who attended the trial have slight sympathy to express for the girl, as she exhibited little, if any, modesty, and skipped through her disgusting story with a glibness and looseness that would rarely be equaled by the scarlet woman who had been buffeted about this world for twice the years of this girl.

APPROPRIATING WATER OF THE NATCHES.—A notice has been filed with the county auditor by Walter N. Granger, Albert Klimeschmidt and John D. McIntyre claiming and appropriating the running water of the Natches river to the extent of 100 cubic feet per second to be diverted from said stream for the purposes of irrigation, and the creation of water power for manufacturing, mining and milling, at a point on the south or right bank of the river, in the south half of the southeast quarter of section 10, township 13, north of range 18 east. The means by which they will divert the water will be by canals, flumes, pipelines and tunnels, along the grade in a southeasterly direction around the Ahntann basin, across the Ahntann creek and thence in a southeasterly direction to a point in Union gap opposite the county bridge; thence across the Yakima river at this point to the northeast side of the Yakima river; thence in a southeasterly direction along the grade; thence to a point northerly and northeasterly of Prosser, a distance of 100 miles or less.

THE AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE COMMISSIONERS PLEASED.—The commissioners appointed by Governor Ferry to locate the Agricultural College and School of Science met at North Yakima Tuesday. E. C. Ferguson, of Snohomish county, T. J. Smith, of Whitman, and Edward Whitson, of Yakima, were present. Mr. Ferguson was chosen president of the commission and Mr. Whitson secretary. An adjournment was then taken until the 21st, when the commissioners will come together at Walla Walla and start on a tour of the state receiving the propositions offered by the various sections for the location of the college. Mr. Ferguson and Mr. Smith were driven about the city while here and expressed themselves as most favorably impressed with the people they met and the indications of thrift, prosperity and enterprise to be seen on all sides.

THE CITY ELECTION.—The election Monday did not attract any great amount of interest, although a number of workers showed considerable activity in behalf of their friends, but were unable to poll a full vote. This was due somewhat to the fact that there was no contest over councilmen, and that either of the candidates for mayor would have given faithful service at the head of the city government. R. K. Nichols was elected mayor, receiving 193 votes to 75 cast for A. H. Reynolds. The councilmen-elect are B. F. Young, W. A. Cox, H. L. Tucker, G. W. Jones, S. J. Love, G. O. Nevin and John Reed. The nominations were well made, and the retiring board will leave the affairs of the city in good hands.

THEY ARE COMING FORTH SINGERS.—Rive's Evangeline comic opera troupe will appear at Mason's opera house on the 25th inst. They number forty people, have a special car of scenery and costumes, and are among the most celebrated troupes now on the road. Agent John F. Harvey writes from the Marquam Grand opera house of Portland that the company will give the strongest and best performance ever witnessed in this city.
