A Bill to Meet the Supreme Court Decisions.

The decision of the United States su-The decision of the United States sup-preme court in the suit known as the "Original Package" case seems likely to exert an important influence on the future of prohibition. The decision affirms that an inhabitant of any state may, under the constituen of the interestic some laws, and without license or supervision of any public authority, carry or send into of any public authority, carry or send into and sell in the other states any intoxicat-ing liquors, in cases or kegs, or even in single bottles or flasks, despite any legis-lation of those states on the subject, and although his own state should be the only one which had not enacted similar laws. This will have a bearing not only on states where prohibition prevails, but throughout the country.

throughout the country.

The editor of Bonfort's Wine and Spirit Circular, Mr. Sadler, said: "This decision is a very sweeping one, and will have the effect of nullifying prohibition. I will kill all such laws as are in force in Iowa, Maine, Vermont and Kansas, and will have the effect of preventing the people of Kansas from voting for prohibi-tion. The authorities of the state will tion. The authorities of the state will not attempt to enforce the prohibition law after this decision. Self preservation will lead those states to adopt license. But a good, active, friendly bout, two or three times a week, is better than all the medicine in the world. It gives a young man confidence, strength, activity, manliness, grace, a clear skin and a good digestion. The woods are full of so-called "pro-fessors" of the manly art of self-defense essors" of the manly art of self-defer who make the innocent youth believe it wonderfully difficult to become a good wonderfully difficult to become a good boxer, when the fact is really it is very simple. There is also a large number of pretentious books published here and in England on boxing that generally tire or confuse the ambitious reader so thoroughly at the start that he soon becomes discouraged and gives up the sport in utter disgust. It may seem a little bold to say, but I will guarantee to teach any well put-up young fellow of ordinary intelligence the rudiments of boxing in half an hour, so that he will be able to continue on without further instruction and become a clever boxer if he devotes the proper time and attention to the art.

I don't mean by this to make him a professional or ring general in half an hour, but simply to give him sufficient knowledge to start out just as I did thirteen years ago, and work his way up to the top of the art. Of course I expect the young fellow to learn the remainder by close observation and hard practice. No "professor" or master of sparring can be considered to the professor of the professor ever claim me as a pupil. What I know time by hard experience and intelligent observation. I belong to no school of boxers, and have copied no special master's style, and I always fight according to my own judgment. I have always considered it very necessary that a young man in order to become an accomplished boxer should have being as well as medium. boxer should have brains as well as musboxer should have brains as well as mus-cie. I never knew a thick-headed fellow yet to become skillful in the manly art. A good hoxer must he clear and cool headed, quick to decide, with a keen per-ception, always able to size up his man at all stages of the game, and know exactly what he's doing, even when he's punched into a duzed condition.

I generally box with my body, from I generally book with my body, rom the waist up, extended somewhat forward. Perhaps at times my body is straight up. I seldom lean back. Of course a good deal depends upon whom I am fighting and under what rules. Learn how to stop a blow before you attempt to deliver one. Two novices of equal size, weight, and knowledge will generally find it more difficult to avoid a nunch than to give one. The first thing generally find it more difficult to avoid a punch than to give one. The first thing a "professor" will teach a pupil is to stand in position. He will show him how to turn his toes out, spread his feet so many inches apart, and will try and convince the young man that his style and position is really the only correct one in the world. I have seen in my time a great many athletes jump, and I don't remember of ever seeing two jumping the same way. So with boxing, the position that suits you best is certainly the proper one for you to assume. If your opponent leads with his right at your head throw it off with your left. If he leads with his left do the same with your right. If he sends his right at your body ward it off with your left. Do likewise with your right if he leads with the left for the body. These really the four principal and simple are really the four principal and simple points in boxing, in fact the very rudi-

BUTTER MAKING.

The principles involved in making goo The principles involved in making good butter may be classed among the exact sciences. The actual making of good butter is a fine art. It is wenderful how few the people are who know how to make butter of the first-class. "Many are called, but few are chosen." Almost every farmer's wife flatters herself that her butter is an good as can be made. She would feel insulted if anyone should doubt the correctness of her opinions. But that her butter is not as good as in might be is not always her fault. A par might be is not always her fault. A part of the difficulty is often chargeable to the "head of the family" for not providing proper appliances.

The fact stands boldly forth, however, that tons of butter are made in every county in the United States that no one ought to feel proud of. "It is an obomi nation unto the Lord." "The beauty of an old man is his gray hairs and the glory of a young man is his strength;" but neither hairs nor strength add any but neither hairs nor strength add any to the value of butter. Will Make Her Debut at the Opera House Monday Evening With a Hevy of Shapely Songsters.

Rice's beautiful Evangeline will be at ason's opera house on Monday evening. Mason's opera house on Monday evening. It is a decidedly elever production, and for an attraction that has been on the road the length of time it has, its success has been marvelous. Vangy has been before the public the past seventeen years, and still it achieves a magnificent triumph. It is full of uproarious fun, constant merriment, the essence of pantonime and the acme of all that is amusing and brilliant.

With such good people as Garren.

With such good people as George Fortesque as Catherine or "Love's Young Dream," and James S. Maffit as the Lone Fortesque as Catherine or "Love's Young Dream," and James S. Maffit as the Lone Fisherman, the originals in the cast, Evangeline never grows old, because those two are incomparable; and another black. those two are incomparable; and another reason that the play does not grow old is that Evangeline is now in the hands of a young woman in the person of Miss Yolande Wallace. She is aweet-faced, modest and winning, has a sweet voice and a beautiful figure.

Bessic Tannehill, who takes the part of Gabriel, is a shapely bit of femininity, dashing and has a voice as clear as the tones of a bell. Ella Rock, as Eulalie, is winsome, and Catherine McLaen has a dred horses of all grades leaves to-day for ussuing and has a voice as clear as the tones of a bell. Ella Rock, as Edalle, is winsome, and Catherine McLaen has a form as symmetrical as a statue. Her enunciation is perfect, a rare thing to find in a burlesque artist. Peter F. Daly, as LeBlanc, is the best seen in the west, and much is expected of his performance here.

As a whole the company is very good.

As a whole the company is very good, and the chorus in voice, figure and cos-tume are excellent. This may especially be said of the march in the second act, in which twenty gorgeously attired young ladies take part.
