YAKIMA AND THE STATE.

Interesting Items of News from Yakima and its Suburbs.

Bits of Gossip, Facts, Fancies, Personalities, and a Hedge-Fodge of Paragraphs of Every Description.

Born, Yakima county, Aug. 4th, to the wife of Alonzo Cook, a daughter.

John Yenson suffered a severe cut on the wrist, while butchering, last week. Dr. McCormack dressed the wound.

Dr. O. M. Graves has gone to the Okanogan mining country, to look after his interests there, and expects to be absent until the 25th inst.

John Thompson and family, of Thompson, Okanogan county, are in the city on a visit. Mrs. Thompson is a sister of Edward Whitson.

F. A. O'Farrell, the well known scribe and politician of Tacoma, was in Yakima on Saturday last endeavoring to perfect his desert land entry.

The state irrigation association, that was organized in this city last year, will meet at Ellensburg on the 15th inst. It is said that an incident of the meeting will be the breaking of the sod for the projected big ditch.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Martin managed to get hold of a bottle of ammonia the other day resulting in her mouth being terribly burned. Dr. Hill was summoned and brought relief to the little sufferer.

The Episcopal church of the state have purchased a 20-acre tract near the beach south of Utopia. This tract will be laid out in park fashion, and is to be used by that denomination as a place of recreation for ministers and members.

Watermelons and muskmelons have been quite plentiful in the home market for the past week, and it will be but a short time before they are shipped to the Spokane, Tacoma and Seattle markets at the rate of several car loads a day.

Spokane Review: At Yakima the thermometer has been ranging between 100 and 106 degrees for week or so past. While this is slightly tropical residents do not complain as it helps the fruit, for which that section is so justly famed.

A year ago Henry Villard sent to Prince Bismarck several cases of Yakima apples which were so highly appreciated that the ex-chancellor of Germany has expressed a desire that he may again be favored with the "unequaled fruits of the irrigated lands of Yakima."

J. J. Carpenter has a full stock of the handsome silk campaign handkerchiefs. Mr. Preasey, who represents that popular house, presented one of the souvenirs bearing the winning features of Cleveland and Stevenson to THE HERALD editor, for which we bow our acknowledgments.

B. C. VanHoughton, of Spokane, stopped over at Yakima Sunday on his way to attend the republican convention at Olympia. It is not known what office Mr. VanHoughton wants, but as he is always wanting something he will probably make his wishes known when the time comes.

John Dooley, of Prosser, who is in the employ of the Irrigation company, was suffering from pain, one night recently, and got out of bed to get medicine, but by mistake he caught up the wrong bottle and took a deep swallow of acornite had nearly landed him on the opposite shore of the river Jordan.

Mr. Edward Parker, a brother of Fred Parker, arrived here from Kentucky on Saturday last, with the intention of remaining some time. He is a member of the senate of his state and being conscious of learning how politics are conducted in Washington he accompanied the Yakima delegation to Olympia.

THE HERALD is in receipt of the newspaper Among the Clouds, published on Mount Washington, 6,300 feet above the sea level, which chronicles the visit there of W. H. Chapman, of North Yakima, who was among a large number of other pharmacists who made the journey to the highest peak in the White-mountain group.

The business men of Olympia have formed an association for mutual protection against dead beats that could be patterned after by Yakima merchants with profitable result. It is called the Merchants Protective Association, and the members obligate themselves not to extend credit to anyone who is on the black list.

Anacortes American: Captain Clements has arranged for a shipment to this city, twice a week, of watermelons and peaches direct from the Yakima country. The first shipment arrived this week and was quickly appreciated by the public. Yakima is credited with producing better melons and peaches and in greater quantities than any other section of Washington.

Have we any truly great men at the present day? Some doubt it, and ask to be shown the modern Washington, Franklin or Webster. However that may be, of one thing we are sure, there never was a greater blood purifier than Ayer's sarsaparilla.

THE MARVELOUS PHONOPHONE.

A Combined Telegraph and Telephone of Wonderful Power in Use by English Railroads.

London Times: It is difficult to convey to the lay mind an accurate comprehension of a process so exceedingly technical, but it may briefly be said that Mr. Langdon-Davies in the "phonophone" utilizes not the electric current, but the noises caused by induction. The signals are transmitted by a series of induced electric impulses, and the success of the system is found in the ability of the inductive force to pass through insulations which electric currents cannot penetrate. A wire may be blown down and in contact with the earth, yet so long as it is not broken it will carry a phonophoric message.

By means of the phonophone messages can be transmitted with extraordinary rapidity, and there is practically no limit to the number of telegrams that can be sent simultaneously upon the same wire. And, as we have hinted, Mr. Langdon-Davies' system is as useful telephonically as it is telegraphically. A wire which is conveying electric signals can at the same time be used for telephonic conversation without either the message or conversation suffering in the least.

Three of the principal railway companies have already adopted the phonophone; and it must be obvious, even to the unscientific mind, that telephonic telegraphy and telephony, in so vastly increasing the electrician's power over the wires, has before it a very great future. The phonophone, indeed, increases almost to infinity the number of words that can be transmitted in a given time.

Women in Proverbs.

ENGLISH.
Women's jars make men's wars.
A change of wives makes men bold.
A woman's tears are a fountain of craft.
Where women and geese are there is no lack of noise.

IRISH.
The best of women is never at a loss for words.
A bag of fleas is easier to watch than one woman.
Where the devil cannot go himself he sends an old woman.

FRENCH.
What women wills God wills.
He who takes a wife finds a master.
A woman conceals what she does not know.
Never a looking glass told a woman she was ugly.

ITALIAN.
The born beauty is born betrothed.
Women and hens are lost by gadding.
When woman reigns the devil governs.
In craft women can give points to the devil.

DANISH.
Judge a maiden at the kneading pan, not at the dance.
Give your wife the short knife, keep the long one yourself.
One hair of a maiden's head pulls harder than ten yoke of oxen.

A Mithing Machine.

Prairie Farmer: The custom house at Chicago has received a machine from Glasgow, Scotland, that the inventor thinks will revolutionize the present hand system of milking. The machine, it is claimed, will milk thirty cows in one hour. It is constructed on the vacuum principle, and when adjusted to the cow the milk is said to flow in a continuous stream. It is said to be largely used in Scotland and the first ever brought to the United States. The machine is said to cost $55 in Scotland, and the proprietors had to pay into the treasury of Uncle Sam $45 additional to get it into this country for trial, the appraisers having difficulty in finding the proper duty to levy on a machine not in the schedule of duties.

Plate Glass Bricks.

Plate glass bricks are made from the sand formed in the glass. The great expense in the manufacture of plate glass is the lengthy process of grinding, this being affected by a reciprocating movement of damp quartz sand over its surface. The sand rests upon iron plates having an oscillating motion. The quartz cuts into the glass and iron, and becomes mixed with both, and when sharp edges and particles of sand are worn away, it is piled up as worthless. The sand is said to contain about 15 per cent. of pulverized glass and 2 per cent. of iron particles. They are stated to be much superior to others, not only in point of durability, but in appearance.

Wooding by Electricity.

A great source of annoyance and expense to railway companies is the encroachments of the grass which grows around the rails of their lines. An effective mode of getting rid of this nuisance has just been devised in the shape of an electrical vegetation destroyer. This is connected by a wire with a dynamo in the nearest available electric station. A powerful current is turned on and an operator draws the fully charged brush, which is supplied with a wooden handle, over the grass, killing it instantly.

FRICK'S STRANGE CAREER.

The Destruction of Labor Unions is the Work of His Life.

He Has a Domineering Spirit, and Wants to Dictate to the Producer as Well as the Consumer.

Into the forty-two years of his life H. C. Frick has crowded a multitude of incidents. In money making he has been marvellously successful, and yet in business and in the relations thereto he has been to a large extent an Ishmael. He makes no friends save such as money makes and success commands, nor does he in the very slightest seem to care to make them. He is self-willed, aggressive, secretive. The ambition to conquer is the ruling passion of his life, not that by conquest he may make money, for of it he is not fond, but that he may assert himself.

It is hard to account for this trait. He did not inherit it from either father or mother, for both were quiet, lovable people, nor does there appear upon the surface of his life any cause that would lead him to it through revenge for early wrong or disappointment. His father was a well-to-do farmer, and on the old homestead at West Overton, Pa., he was born. He was fond of mathematics at school, and a model lad when he bade his parents good by and started off to begin life as the keeper of a small dry goods store at Mount Pleasant.

This business was too slow for him. About that time western Pennsylvania was giving up its wealth of coal and iron to the enterprising, and in it he saw a magnificent future. He sought out some means of accumulating money enough to become interested in these mines, yielding phenomenal profits, and with the few hundred dollars he had saved purchased a small interest and became the confidential clerk of his father in a distillery. In this he prospered, but still chafed under drudgery, so that in a few years and before he was 20 he succeeded in forming a syndicate of young men. Together they purchased a number of coke ovens.

In 1873 the panic came. Markets were depressed, iron went down, and with it coke as a necessary consequence. Capitalists began selling out at almost any figure, and in this unnatural excitement Frick saw the opportunity of his life. He purchased valuable properties for a trifle, and before the market resumed its normal condition he was practically in control of the coke regions. The original syndicate held the ovens originally purchased, but the ones acquired during the panic were Frick's.

He was not much over 24 years of age at the time, and set about a policy which in less than three years made him a millionaire. He was able to dictate terms to the iron manufacturers, and could buy or bear the market at his will. He was absolute in all its conditions and relations except one, and that was on the price of labor. The workmen were organized, and insisted on certain rates. He could not brook that. He had money, more than he could spend, and resolved to break down organized labor at any cost. The story of the Conellville coke strike and riots is contemporary history. With the aid of the national guard Pennsylvania triumphed. It did not mean much money to him. In fact, it is extremely doubtful if he considered that point at all. It was simply that he had an unrelenting hatred of anybody or anything that might or could interfere with any plan of his own.

The triumph made him sigh for new conquests, and the opportunity was presented when Mr. Carnegie offered him a partnership in return for an interest in the coke properties. When Mr. Carnegie retired from the active management of the works Frick succeeded him, assuming first the presidency of the Edgar Thomson Steel company, the largest of the Carnegie properties. Soon after he became the head of the Carnegie Steel association, and his first work was mammoth works at Braddock as the test of his strength, and Braddock is to-day a non-union mill.

With Braddock settled he shifted operations to Homestead. His arrival was taken as an intimation that the association must go. The question of wages was simply an excuse offered. It meant little to the men and much to the company. The real attack was on the existence of the association, and it is so recognized now both by the men and the company. He has a hatred as bitter as it is unexplainable against organized labor. He cannot brook the idea that anyone but himself shall have anything to say in the management of the mills as to the hire of labor, its pay, its rights or its duties.

It is this bitter, unrelenting opposition to labor that has made him hated. The men will tell you that he is not personally inimical, nor is he unapproachable. In his office he is pleasant in address, in his home a charming host, in his intercourse with business men firm but cautious. His only foe is organized labor. He has sometimes paid men more than union wages to get them to leave their union.

He is rugged in speech as in physique, a well built, stocky man. His face is in wondrous control, but there is a gleam in his eye and a setting of thin bloodless lips that make a man instinctively feel that he must yield to Frick or Frick will conquer him. He is the most hated man in western Pennsylvania, and all because of his efforts against organized labor. It is a remarkable fact that on the three occasions in which the national guard of Pennsylvania was called out because of riots, it was to aid Mr. Frick in his opposition to organized labor.

Bradford Hayes and "Frenchy," the three fellows who were arrested last week for selling liquor to Indians, were taken to McNeil's Island Monday by Sheriff Simmons and Deputy Wiley.

THE PARTY OF REFORM IS SOLID.

Democratic Primaries are Largely Attended and Much Enthusiasm is Shown.

The democratic primaries, which were held on Saturday last were largely attended, as shown by the reports from every precinct received here, and evidence was given that the party was vigorous, enthusiastic, and confident of success in the coming political struggle.

In Wide Hollow there was not only a large attendance but a campaign club, of strong membership, was organized that will make itself felt in the November election. The North Yakima primaries were held in the court house and old campaigners say that there has never been so general and representative turnout of democrats since the city was incorporated.

The North Yakima primaries were called to order by the selection of Col. A. H. Reynolds for chairman, and W. H. James for secretary. The vote for delegates resulted in the choice falling on the following gentlemen: A. F. Snelling S. J. Lowe, Dr. G. J. Hill, Samuel Vinson, J. M. Baxter, E. M. Reed, W. A. Cox, T. F. Maher, Frank Bartholet, M. G. Willis, Dr. W. G. Coe, Ed. Mulligan, C. W. Legg, J. T. Eshleman, Fred Mebler, A. L. Fix and J. T. Kingsbury.

Col. A. H. Reynolds and Thomas J. Redfield were nominated as justices of the peace and two of the delegates were nominated constables, but they vigorously declined and the vacancies are to be filled by the North Yakima delegates at the convention.

Previous to adjournment J. M. Baxter introduced the following resolution which was unanimously adopted after a vigorous speech by Hon. H. J. Solvley. Resolved, That it is the sense of this convention that James Hamilton Lewis is the strongest candidate that the democracy can nominate at the state convention for the high office of governor of this state.

The delegations from the other precincts of the county as far as heard from are as follows: Lone Tree—William Paulhamm, H. W. Creason, E. W. R. Taylor and Mr. Weston.

Kiona—Samuel Thurber, John Chisholm and Charles T. Givens. Wide Hollow—J. L. Morrison, Dr. B. M. Sava, Joseph Stephenson, J. W. Beck, T. M. Vance, O. Beck, Thomas J. Chambers.

G. H. Love, of Malone, N. Y., is a recent arrival who is now in the employ of the First National bank. W. L. Steinweg and wife and Engle Steiwage are camped at Soda Springs.

A Sensational Case wherein a Sheep Herder Wins the Heart of a Wife and Mother.

There has transpired, in this vicinity, during the past week a domestic eruption that for moral obliquity, marital infidelity and an absence of philoprogenitiveness is seldom equaled by anything appearing above the surface of social disorder.

The broken-hearted husband followed, and to obviate the additional disgrace to all concerned of a life of illicit cohabitation, consented to a legal separation after receiving from her own hands a written acknowledgment that exonerated him from any and all unbecoming a kind and faithful husband.

The Selah Irrigation company is in process of formation, the object being to undertake farming on a large scale. An advertisement appears in the columns of THE HERALD to-day for the clearing and breaking of 1,000 acres of land for this company, in the Selah valley.

A portion of the Spokane delegation to the Olympia convention will stop over in Yakima Saturday to be present at the republican ratification meeting. One of the speakers on this occasion will be Mr. Ed. Parker, of Kentucky.

Sherman Edlin, of Tampico, while working in the timber, Wednesday, getting into hop poles, suffered the loss of one of the fingers of his left hand in a log jam.

Miss Jennie Wright, the efficient accountant of Crippa, Lawrence & Co., left for Tacoma, Wednesday, on a short vacation. The amateur minstrel entertainment has been abandoned, owing to the star performers failing to get around to the rehearsal.

G. H. Love, of Malone, N. Y., is a recent arrival who is now in the employ of the First National bank. W. L. Steinweg and wife and Engle Steiwage are camped at Soda Springs. Born, to the wife of Dan E. Stout, Aug. 10th, 1922, a ten pound girl.

The Sham and the Real

Every good thing has its imitators, every genuine article its counterfeits. The Ammonia and Alum Baking Powder sold over the counters are no more like Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder...

Dr. Price, a conscientious physician, has spent a lifetime in perfecting and popularizing his Cream Baking Powder, the only Pure Cream Tartar Powder now to be obtained. Multitudes of imitators all over the land have sprung up...

Some use Ammonia and others Alum, but all these shams cry in chorus, "Buy this, its just as good as Dr. Price's and much cheaper." Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder is the standard for purity and perfection the world over, and is beyond comparison.

San Mateo, Cal., October, 1920. It is very wonderful to me that I have not seen written how much good Pastor Koeng's Nerve Tonic has done me. THE Northern Pacific, Yakima & Kittitas Irrigation Company in its great work of reclaiming 200,000 acres of arid land by building immense canals and irrigating the same has placed Yakima County in the front rank as the great Hop, Fruit, Vegetable and Hay producing section of Washington. In the center of this magnificent agricultural and horticultural country the Northern Pacific, Yakima & Kittitas Irrigation Company has plotted and laid out the TOWN OF ZILLAH and on Monday, June 27th, 1892, the town market. Zillah is 25 miles south of North Yakima on the river of that name and is the official terminus of the Motor Railroad to be built to North Yakima. Zillah is the headquarters of the company and handsome quarters are being erected to be occupied by the officials as soon as completed. Situated as this town is there are legitimate reasons why it should be prosperous, progressive and healthy. Investigate Zillah.

YAKIMA COUNTY IRRIGATION

The Government Makes Its Report Regarding This Section.

An Interesting Document, Which is Full of Information Regarding Topography and Our Ditches.

Yakima county is south of Kittitas and north of Klickitat, these three counties extending from the summit of the Cascade mountains eastward to the Columbia river. The Yakima river rises in the county to the north and flows in a general southeasterly course into Yakima county, where it receives numerous tributaries from the mountains on the west. The agricultural settlements are along these streams, the most prosperous being at places where water can be taken out to cover large areas of the fertile bench and valley lands. As a general rule nothing can be raised without irrigation, although there are a few favored spots, as, for example, near Cowychee, where wheat has been successful without the artificial application of water. In the eastern end of the county, out toward the plains of the Columbia, there are localities where farming without irrigation is attempted, but the yield is so small as barely to repay the efforts of the cultivator.

The Yakima river and its principal tributary, the Natchez, rise among the high peaks of the Cascade range, and thus have a large perennial supply of water. Other streams of the county, as, for example, Wenatchee and Abatanum rivers, derive most of their water from snows of the range, on which, the altitude being less, the snows melt earlier in the spring, giving a diminished summer flow. Along streams of this latter character the area under cultivation has already exceeded the amount which can be irrigated by present means, and as a result there is a scarcity of water during the latter part of the crop season, especially among the irrigators on the lower part of the stream. It is evident that water storage must be resorted to in order to save some of the surplus water of early spring, which usually comes in a flood of short duration, so short in fact that the irrigators have barely time to give their lands one thorough watering.

In many of the streams there are often two decided floods, the earlier resulting from the melting of the snows on the lower foothills, following a warm wind or rain. Later in the spring the snows on the higher mountains begin to melt, sometimes keeping up the height of the water, and at other times giving rise to a second well-marked flood. The creeks which do not receive this second supply shrink during June, so that by the first of July there is hardly enough water for gardens and stock. Some of the lower grounds along the creeks receive sufficient moisture by seepage from the streams or from the ditches on the benches to raise crops without application of water to the surface, but the higher lands must be irrigated, except perhaps in the case of those at an elevation of from 1,500 to 2,000 feet or more above the sea level.

The topography of this county is shown by maps made by the northern transcontinental survey in 1883. The area surveyed includes the Kittitas valley and the southern portion of Kittitas county, as well as the greater part of Yakima county. Besides the topography, which is shown by contoured lines, the forest areas have been outlined and the soils detailed, the results in each case being shown by colored maps. This area is characterized by mountain ranges running in a general easterly and westerly direction, many of them being cut by the Yakima river. Between these ranges are fertile valleys, the soil of which yields large crops wherever water can be brought upon it.

The first of these valleys is the Kittitas valley, lying in the county of that name. After leaving this area the river passes through the Untanum range and enters a valley region, the portion on the west or right bank of the river being known as the Wenatchee valley, from the creek of that name, and that on the east as the Selah valley. South of this latter valley is the narrow Yakima range, separating it from the Moses valley. On the opposite side of the stream and south of the Wenatchee valley, from which it is separated by the Natchez river, is the Abatanum prairie, these two valleys, Abatanum and Moses, being in all about 25 miles long and 5 miles wide. South of these the Yakima river cuts through Rattlesnake range into the broad Yakima prairie, 60 miles or more in length and from 10 to 15 miles in width. Here the river gradually turns towards the east and flows along the Sijmoo range, which bounds the prairie region on the south. It is in this great prairie region that there appear to be remarkable opportunities for irrigation development, some of which are being utilized.

According to the report of the northern transcontinental survey, this whole region in former times consisted of four great lakes inclosed by mountain ranges now cut by the Yakima river. The soil of the valleys has been deposited from these lakes and is highly productive, containing usually but a small proportion of alkali. The geological structure is in some respects similar to that of the ancient lake basins in the states further to the east, where artesian wells have been found. East of the town of Yakima, in the Moses valley, are two wells 285 and 225 feet deep, respectively, having a combined flow of 1.35 second feet, the waters of which are of great value for household use, for stock and for irrigation. An unsuccessful well has been drilled near Pasco, Franklin county, to a depth of 527 feet, mainly in basalt.

The greater portion of the center of the county west of the Yakima river is occupied by the Indian reservation, which thus includes a large part of Yakima prairie. Northwest of this prairie are rolling hills and plateaus, generally covered with nutritious bunch grass so valuable for stock raising. The soil is rich, and with an abundant rainfall good crops could be raised. In some localities large areas of government land have been taken up, and settlers have raised from 10 to 20 bushels of wheat to the acre. The majority, however, have not been able to secure a crop, and many homesteads have been abandoned.

In the eastern part of the county, away from the river, it is exceedingly difficult to obtain water even for domestic purposes, and it is necessary to haul it long distances. A deep well has been drilled at the expense of the state in section 36, township 8 north, range 26 east. This reached a depth of about 500 feet, and cost $3,400. Water was struck at a depth of 225 feet, but did not rise to a higher level. The lava or basaltic rock through which the well was drilled is extremely hard, and progress was very slow. At a few places along the Yakima river steam pumps with a capacity of from 500 to 1,000 gallons per minute have been located for the purpose of raising water for gardens, orchards and stock. The expense of operating them is large, and it is still doubtful whether, as a rule, they are successful.

A large part of the irrigation in this county is carried on by means of ditches built by the farmers, either individually or in partnership. The men, as a rule, have had little money to invest in the development of the water supply, but they have contributed freely of their labor. The short crops of the census year diminished their resources, so that generally they could not, unaided, undertake large enterprises, such as the building of long canal systems. In 1880 and the following years outside capital was attracted by the apparent opportunities for profitable investment in works of this character, and corporations began to increase in number. Many of the irrigators, however, perhaps the majority, have a strongly expressed fear of powerful companies obtaining control of the running water of the county, and view with apprehension the extension of systems under corporate management.

As examples of some of the ditches of the county, there may be given the following: The Abatanum and Wide Hollow ditch takes water from the north side of Abatanum creek, carrying it out on the prairie toward North Yakima. Its length is ten miles, and its average width five feet. It was built in 1879. About 250 acres were irrigated in 1889, the crops being small grain, alfalfa, corn, potatoes and wheat in these orchards and gardens. It is reported that a large amount of water is required by the land under this ditch, and that, on the average, one second-foot is used for 50 acres. The supply of water in the creek is not sufficient for all the demands upon it. The K-out ditch takes water from the Natchez river about 12 miles northwest of North Yakima, running out on the south side of the stream. It is about three miles long, nearly three feet wide, and one foot deep, and cost $1,000. It is owned by private parties, and irrigates 60 acres of alfalfa, clover, hops, potatoes, sorghum and wheat. Union ditch takes water from the Natchez river at a point two miles northwest of North Yakima, bringing it out upon the south side through the city. The total length of the ditch is six miles; the average width, seven feet; the depth, one and a half feet, and the cost was $2,000. The ditch was first used in 1874. It is now owned by an incorporated company of farmers. There is a large amount of water in the river, and the supply has been ample for all demands. The Fowler ditch takes water from the Yakima near the town of North Yakima, and runs on the east side of the river into Moses valley. The length is eight miles; the depth about one foot, and the cost was $3,000. No dam is used in the river, and the fall of the stream is sufficient to bring water into the ditch. About 1,500 acres are irrigated, the crops raised being small grain, alfalfa, hops, corn and tobacco. The ditches of the Yakima Irrigating & Improvement company take water from the north side of the Yakima river and carry it out upon the bottom lands below the town of Kiona, extending from that point down to the lands at the junction with the Columbia river above the town of Pasco. The upper ditch known as the Kiona is nine miles long and follows the general course of the Yakima river. In 1890 about 300 acres of corn, alfalfa, millet, rye, potatoes, beets, etc., were watered, the alfalfa being cut five times. The lower or Yakima ditch heads on the river near the lower end of the upper ditch, and follows the course of the stream for a short distance. The total length of this system when completed will be upward of 60 miles. The ditches are from nine to ten feet in width and three feet in depth. They were first used in 1891, and are being extended each year, the water supply being ample.

Besides these ditches, and others of similar character which are already in operation, there are many large projects on foot for constructing canals to take the water of the Yakima river and its tributaries out at various points, and many of these will undoubtedly be successfully constructed, as there appears to be an ample supply of water in the river, and there are thousands of acres of fertile lands on the Yakima prairie.

The reports of the San Francisco board of health, and the Tacoma, Seattle and Spokane boards of health, are unusual tributes to be paid even to an article of an high character as the Royal baking powder. These boards say, in their judgment, "It is impossible to make a purer or stronger baking powder than the Royal."
