"I went straight to the selectmen sitting there in the town hall," said Miss Ruby severely, "and laid the case before them, and I saked them if this was a civilized, enlightened, Christian country and if there wasn't any redress. I told them, too, how the boys come nights and mewed round our house like sick cats, dressed up in white sheets to pretend they're ghosts, and I asked for protend they're ghosts, and I asked for protend they're ghosts, and I aked for protend they're ghosts, and I alseed for grown and I them they seemed suddenly to be taken with a counting fit, and I thought they were all coming down with the grip.
"And that fat old Dr. Buskirk was more polite, but, says he, Miss Ruby we haven't any jurisdiction in these cases unless you can bring witnesses. So I walked home without getting any satisfaction, and I found," asid Ruby, with a faction, and I found," and Ruby, with a an old maid's notion with you, this love of dumb creatures." "It was always my way," said Ruby, "to take up with the weakest, and there aint anything weaker or more unprotected than a cat, unless it's the bird that fights with the squirrels when that fights with the squirrels when they're tryin' to drive the birds away from my cherries that they may gobble all the fruit themselves. The Bible, Hannah, don't have a word to say about cats, though it tells us not to muzzle the oz when he treads out the corn. But there's not a word about overloading horses, except it be that a merciful man is merciful to his beast; but that most likely refers to the ass or donkey."

"If I was you," said Hannah, "I wouldn't leave my property to the cats. When you're dead and gone there won't be nobody left in this town to feel about won't be acrised out. I should rather leave the place for a lodging homes for tramps, where they could get a bath and a meal and work it out sawing wood, or i would make it into a hospital for sick bables."

I would make it into a hospital for sich bablea."
"Dunno," said Ruby, nursing her chin ther hand. "There'll be always them that'll take care of the bables, and as for the tramps I haven't the horror of dirt you have. Dirt is the poor man's undershirt, and I can's see as it does him much good to souse him in a tub of water and then let him go and wallow in the next puddle he comes to. Strange, ain't it, yon never came across that receipt for the money. It seems as though there was some witch work about it."

"So it does," said Hannah, laying down the shears and turning her dark, anxious face and clear eyes on Ruby; 'I can see before me now the little tin box he kep' his choice papers in, and somehow it has disappeared. I've searched the house from attic to cellar in vain for that box."

Eint there was no remark made, though Hannah watched with her mother's eye that nothing ever eccaped. Dick came in whistling to his supper and enjoyed the chicken with a boy's healthy appetite. He told some jokes the hands had got off at the chemical works, and how he had "stumped" the foreman with a problem, but Sybil was too listless and languid to listen and only pretended to eat. Hannah remembered what Ruby had said about the pretty typewriters, and a heavy stone seemed weighing on her heart as she stealthily watched Sybil, who excused herself before supper was half over and went to her little room up stairs on the pretext of a bad headache. There was still an hour of daylight, and the sun lay dreamily on the budding trees in Miss Ruby's garden and across the misty, pale green fields of which abe canght a glimpes from her one small window. It touched, too, the coarse plastered wall and the little girlish belongings of the toilet table, so white and clean in maiden purity. But Sybil closed the shutters and pulled down the shade and put here self on the narrow bed with her head caught you in one in all my life."

"I won't, mother," said Sybil, just parting her white lips in a whisper. "Mr. Dinsmore is angry with me, and I guess he's more angry with Ned. He's a hard man, and proud and passionate and unreasonable when once aroused, and perhaps he thought Ned, his son, had been paying me too much attention. And now he threatens to send Ned to Californis; and oh, mother, I can't go back there any more to work, and I know you need the money I earn," and the girl buried her face on her mother's breast and burst into a passion of tears.

"Ned's been foolin' with you," said Hannah sharply, "and you let him. Haven't I always kep' a-tellin' you to re-believe be was true in what he said to me."

"I was afraid it would turn out just so," moaned Hannah, still holding the girl in her arms, "when you took them prizes in the high school and was so much above us in appearing—as genteel as any girl in this town if I do say it. I don't say you're blameless, but I dig we my heart's blood to save you from suffering. I would in a minute if it would do any good. But we must all carry our own load. I've had trouble and so had your father, and there never was a harder working man, yet see how he was trick-well and the same and the was tricked and cheated. And Mr. Rand, just look at him and see how he bears his losees, mebbet it will help you to bear yours. You are young, dear, and will get over it in time."

"I must, mother," sobbed Sybli; "I must, mother," sobbed Sybli; "I must, mother," sobbed Sybli; "I must, drown myself before I injured him."

you ain't a-comin' any more to the office. He won't have the privilege of dischagin' you, Sybil."

"I guess you had better, mother," said Sybil, who had ceased sobbing, but looked piteously white and wan. "Maybe then he will make it up with Ned, for I can't bear to think of his suffering."

"No, you don't want him to suffer," returned Hannah grimly, "but he's made you suffer, like the selfals fellow he is. He mustn't come round here, Sybil, or he will get a fies in his ear. I s'pose he's been amusing himself with the pretity typewriter, as such rich young chaps are apt to. It won't hurthim. Don't you be afraid."

She put Sybil down on the bed again, and covered her feet with the shawl; but the girl put up her arms and convulsively clasped her mother's neck. "Oh, mother, mother," she whispered passionately, "try not to feel bitterly toward him. If you only knew how good he is!"

Hannah could not give the promise. She kissed Sybil, a rare caress with her, and went down stains with her face

The doctor didn't answer at once, but glanced away. "Have you noticed a slight impediment in his speech?"
"You don't think"— and she took hold of his arm with a nervous grasp.
"I am afraid, Hannah, it's another light stroke. But he'll come out of it, never fear, though he may not again be quite the man he was."

He hurried away out of the door, leaving Hannah standing with the lamp in her hand, but he had not laid the fee, as he was accustomed to call it, on the table. In a moment he was back again, and had tucked a five dollar bill in Hannah's apron pocket and said brusquely, "You will want money to fill the prescriptions thave left and to buy the old man a few dainties—a little fruit now and then, Hannah."

"But you sin's a 'rich man, doctor. You jractice too much among the poor and forget to send in bills."

The doctor hated to be reminded of his good deeds, and his temper was apt to be a little nasty after a night on the road with one or two bad cases on his hands. "Do as I tell you," said he roughly. "I'd rather wear my old overcoat another three years than have the old man want for anything."

As Hannah was getting breakfast the early morning ray shone cheerily between the houses and lit up the newly made gardens and the elim tree boughs, thick now with dasky brown buds and the delicate tops of the maples turning a pale pink and yellow. She paused a moment in her work and looked at the rosymorning clouds, and it came over her suddenly that she had two sick people on her hands, that Sybil's salary had cased, and a great pile of custom work lay unfinished by her sewing machine. Hannah's heart was full of trouble for the old man, whose bright mind was a lite overclouded; for her girl, who had recived a stunning blow on the heart, but she was still undaunted. The more demanded of a woman of Hannah's heroid mold the more her resources are multiplied; and though she had alept but little ceived a stunning blow on the heart, but she was still undaunted. The more demanded of a woman of Hannah's heroic mold the more her resources are multiplied; and though she had slept but little during the night she girded herself to do a great day's work, and now as she stood and looked at the rosy sky out of her window she caught a moment for silent prayer. It was by such inward exercise she lived through the hard times—the terrible agonies of her life—by a childile leaning of her strong soul out heinfinite heart of love and pity.

Two days had passed and the old man was no better. His bright intelect had gone into partial eclipse. He dozed a great deal, and it was sometimes difficult to arouse him when the time came to administer his medicine. But he was always patient, and his native courtesy did not desert him in his pathetic feebleness. The second day when Hannah came to give him his beef tea he tried to rouse himself and to contend with the thigkness of his tongue.

"I'm afraid I give you a great deal of rouble," he said, "but perhaps it won't be for long. I want you to have all I leave, Hannah. My watch and my old books—Dick may come to prize them some day—and you will find a will in my early edition of Shakespeare—the 1938, Hannah. That book is valuable, and might bring you money if there is need of it to pay for my "——"Don't say that," cried Hannah, with a catching sob in her throat. "I love to wait on you, Mr. Rand, and would gladly if there was twenty times as much to do; but you're just like a lamb to take care of," and the warm tears splashed down on the old patchwork quilt.

"There, there, don't agitate yourself," he said, feebly pressing her hand, and in a moment he had dozed off again, with he daylight that came in from the little window where the roblin was simpling.

"Did Sybii say that?" no asked snarp-ly. "Did she say I was playing with her for my own amusement because I am a base, tile, worthless fellow?" "No, she didn't say it," returned Han-nah, with some compunction for her harshness. "She didn't blame it on you nor accuse anybody. She just took to her bod like a poor thing that's been struck with death, and there she is now and no knowing when she will get up." There was a moment's pause in which the young fellow strove to collect him-self. In the shadow of the thunder storm it seemed to Hannah that there were tears in his even.

"But won t you ten ner want a ve same to you?"
"No, no," said Hannah hastily, as she opened the door just as the sun broke out from behind a black cloud. "She must learn to live on somethin' besides hope that's mixed up with wind and Whinstone.

Richard Whinstone had done a good day's work. He had made one or two profitable bargains; he had sold up the Widow Marten, and turned her and her six children out of doors for nonpayment of rent; and, finally, had read a little boy, with a pinched and pitiful face, who had besought the price of a loaf of bread and who said he had a sick mother at home, a lecture on the sinfulness of begging, that evidently touched the little wretch's conscience, for he turned aside wretch's conscience, for he turned aside and wept bitterly.
"You're a good citisen, Diok," he said, as he sat down to dinner, "and deserve to be rewarded."
The dinner was one after his own heart. It was a treat he had promised himself if things went right, and they had gone right. He ate, drank and was merry. If his appetite lost its edge, the bottle of burgundy was there to whet ti, and he fell to again, till the last morsel, like Macbeth's amen, stuck in his throat.

"How do you know that?" it was on the tip of Richard's tongue to ask, but he was too much amazed to speak.

"How do I know it?" broke in the stranger, as if reading his thoughts; "why I smell them; so bring them out." Richard would have demurred, but his guest made a movement which convinced him delay might be dangerous, and the required articles were produced. Without changing his seat the little man draw up to the table and began to eat. And how he did eat! A chunk of ham big enough for a shark bait was stuck on the point of a carving knife and thrust down his throat with the andacity of a sword swallower. Another and anter followed, till nothing remained

"And now, Dick, it's your turn," he

THE LAND OF HOPS.

Olympian Tribune: Ex-Representative Mead of Pierce county who has been over to Yakima county looking after the interests of Allen C. Mason says: "I saw there some of the finest hops I ever looked on, and 2500 lbs. to the acre is a fair average." He brought back from the Sinclair farm some apples, all large than hen's eggs, which constitute a second crop for this season and one branch had blessoms on it in preparation for a third crop. Alfalfa grows to perfection. A forty-acre tract will produce from 300 to 400 tons per year. After it has been cropped the cattle are turned out on the land and become fat on the feed they find. THE HOP INDUSTRY.

Some very interesting facts are contained is the bulletin recently issued by the United States census department, showing the production of hops in this country. The statisties show that hops are grown for commercial purposes in seventeen states. In the year 1889 30,202 acres of land were cultivated in hops, producing 39,162,170 pounds. New York heads the list with 36,670 acres, yielding 50,063.

2029 pounds. Washington has 5,113 acres, with a crop of 3,313,280 pounds; California, 3,397 acree, producing 6,547.

328 pounds Oregon, 3,130 acres, and 3,613,726 pounds; and Wisconsin,967 acres, and 3,613,726 pounds. The five states named, which are known as the hop producing states, produce 99½ per cent of the california horse Direct.

WHERE IS that long talked of road up the Natices? There is a good road part way, and there has been an expensive bridge built, but the bridge named, which are known as the hop producing states, produce 99½ per cent of the entire crop of the United States. New York, with 75 per cent. of the hops grown in the United States. The highest and produced $1½ per cent. of the hops grown in the United States. The highest are specially per acre was in California, 1,649 pounds, but Washington comes up close with 1,255 per acre; Oregon nest target by gifts, prizes and lottery pounds, and poor Wisconsin with but 443 pounds. How rapidly the three Pacific coast states have increased in importance in hop production is shown by the fact that in 1869 but 640,971 pounds were raised, while in 1889 the crop amounted to 18,474,344 pounds.

This sewerage question still hangs fire. The council met with Mr. Schmidt during two evenings this week, but could come to no agreement, and adjourned to metagain to-night. Mr. Schmidt has submitted a couple of propositions, but several of the members seem to think that there is a colored gentleman in the woodpile somewhere and are disposed to hold out. That the city has been played with by N. W. Harris & Co. there is little doubt, and some even assert that there is a strong probability that their successors. Seymour, Barto & Co., and Contractor Schmidt are in the deal to extract more money from the city. Councilmen Reed, Bartholet and Miller favor the acceptance of Mr. Schmidt's proposition the city treasurer would be knocked out of his percentage of $1,083 for handling the bonds, but this amount, instead of being retained in the treasury, would go to the contractor. Councilman Reed figures that the city would gain $11,90 by accepting Mr. Schmidt's bid while Councilman Carpenter thinks it would be out of pocket $4990.

Military Notes.

It is currently reported in military cir-cles, that if any regiment of the National Guard of Washington attends the world's fair at Chicago in 1803, it will be the Second regiment. This report has created new interest in military affairs, which was very plainly demonstrated by the large attendance last Monday night at drill, which was very satisfactory to the offic-ers.

The company will practice inspection drill next Monday night, commencing a 7:30 p. m. sharp. Visitors and especial ladies and escorts, cordially invited.

August Flower"

The Hon. J. W. Fennimore is the Sheriff of Kent Co., Del., and lives at Dover, the County Seat and Capital of the State. The sheriff is a gentleman fifty-nine years of age, and this is what he says: "I have "used your August Flower for several years in my family and for my "own use, and found it does me more good than any other remedy." I have been troubled with what I "call Sick Headache. A pain comes in the back part of my head first, and then soon a general headache until I become sick and vomit. "At times, too, I have a fullness after eating, a pressure after eating, a pressure after eating. "At times, too, I have a fullness after eating, a pressure after eating at the pit of the stomach, and sourness, when food seemed to rise up in my throat and mouth. When I feel this coming on if I take a little August Flower it relieves me, and is the best remedy I have ever taken for it. For this reason "I take it and recommend it to others as a great remedy for Dysever and the seemed of the seemed with the se others as a great remedy for Dys-pepsia, &c.'' G. G. VILLARD VISITS YAKIMA.-On Saturday morning Henry Villard and wife arrived in the city from the east, and their ca vas side-tracked at the depot. They wer joined here by Paul Schulze, and, in pany of Wm. Ker, visited the Moxet plantation and were driven about the city. It was on the program to inspect the big ditch, in which Mr. Villard is financially ditch, in which Mr. Villard is financially interested, but the demands upon his time would not admit of this trip. Mr. Villard has aged somewhat since he first inaugurated his enterprises in the northwest, more than ten years ago, but his financial ups and downs and his huge undertakings have not told on him as much as would have the second of the settlement of the second of the settlement. naturally be supposed, and he is still physically a vigorous man. The coming physically a vigorous man. The coming of Villard was first known here but a few of Villard was first known here but a few hours previous, but with Yakima's won-derful store of products to draw from field and orchard a magnificent display of fruit, vegetables and hops was soon ready in one of the rooms of the N. P., Yakima & K. Irrigation Co. for the distinguished visit-ors to feast their eyes upon. That they were pleased and astonished at what they was was not only avidenced by their exsaw was not only evidenced by their ex , but they were not charry of thei words of praise and wonder, and they not words of praise and woulder, and they not only gased and marveled at the bountifulness of our soil, but they carried away much fruit that no other section of the world can surpass in size, flavor or other favorable characteristics. Mr. Villard and party left early in the afternoon for

A FRIGHTFUL CASUALTY.—A horrible accident occurred at Union gap on Friday evening last, the particulars of which THE HERALD gathers from Edgar T. Stone. Some Indians were bringing in a couple of loads of hay from the reservation, and when moving along the narrow road in the gap a freight train passed with so much clatter and blowing of the whistle that the horses became frightened and running up the side of the hill one of the running up the side of the hill one of the wagons was overturned and a squaw thrown to the ground with such force that one of her legs was breken in a frightful manner and the naked and detached bones driven into the ground. Mr. Stone rendered all of the assistance in his power, and a messenger was sent to the fort for medical aid. It is the opinion of our informant that the squaw was so bedly in jured that death would result, but This Herald has been unable to lears further details.

THE BIG DITCH.-Contractors J. I Smith and Al Katz came in from the ditch Tuesday and report work moving along in a manner most satisfactory They will have the first seventeen miles of the canal completed by the end of November, and the water will then be turned in if the dam now under construction is finished. The contract of Measers. Katz & Smith calls for twenty-five miles, but it is a question whether work will be decided upon within the next few days. The contractors are anxious for it to go ahead, as their men are now in good condition and working effectively. will have the first seventeen mile

> THE BAPTISTS WILL BUILD.-The Baptists of this city have purchased two lots on Fourth street, in the rear of the Christian church, and will at once begin the construction of a church building. The structure will be architecturally attractive and its estimated cost is $2,000. The Baptist society had but ten members a few months ago, but it now numbers seventeen, and the recent location here of several families of this persuasion will increase the membership to twesty-four. The encasement of Rev. Dayls at Ellenstists of this city have purchased two lots increase the membership to twenty-four. The engagement of Rev. Davis at Ellenburgh will expire with the close of this month, and he will then move to Yakims to take charge of the congregation

RUNAWAY ON THE MOXES.—On Sunday last, as Mr. Wm. Ker and Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Vance were driving behind the former's team on the Moxee, Mr. Ker lost control of the horses in crossing a miry place and was thrown under the animal's heels. The frightened horses then started off at full speed. Mr. Vance jumped in safety, but his wife in cessaying to do the same caught her dress in the carriage and was dragged some distance and is now was dragged some distance and is now laid up with a sprained ankle. Neither Mr. Ker nor Mr. Vance were hurt, and the team, after running several miles, was caught without having done any damage further the related.

O CATTLE TO EAST OUR ALFALFA.—On Fri-day of last week Messrs. Splawn, Bounds and Meyer received 206 head of fine stock cattle from the Frineville country. They are probably the best lot of cattle ever ction, and some of the as high as eighteen hundred They were taken to the Moxee, weighed as high as eight ted pasturage and have over 600 tons of alfalfa stacked. If the hard winter comes, as is predicted by old-timers, these gentlemen will have fat beef cattle to sell to those who have shekels in quantity sufficient to pay for such luxuries.

Well Borers Puzzled.—The artesian well on the P. S. Wood place is exhibit-ing most singular characteristics. The drill was sent down about 290 feet when owing to a phenomenon which cannot be accounted for. Sometimes there is a suc-tion and sometimes a blast of air from the tion and sometimes a class of ar from the well. One day a paper placed over the hole would be drawn down, while the next it would be sent flying into the air. That an air chamber has been struck there is little question, but the varying moods of the wind is what is puzzling those who are interested.

WINTER TRAIN SERVICE .- On Sunday Nov. 1, the winter time schedule of the n Pacific will go into effect. Trains Northern Pacific will go into effect. Trains No.'s 2 and 3 will be withdrawn and the st bound express, No. 4, will leave Ta-ma at 8:30 a. m., arriving at Yakima 4:20 p. m. Train No. 1, west bound, at 4:20 p. m. Train No. 1, west bound, will leave Yakima at 10:15 p. m, arriving at Tacoma at 7:35 a. m. Arrangements have been made for the carrying of passengers by the local freight, which will leave Yakima for Ellensburgh at 2 p. m. and for Pasco at 9:30 a. m. LOCAL BREVITIES.

—Ex-County Commissioner D. Sinclair and F. S. Woodward returned Tuesday from viewing the proposed road up the Natcheez to the mines. Their estimates place the cost of the road at $22,000, of which amount $6,000 will be required to build four bridges in the vicinity of Edga Rock. They are of the opinion that, owing to the lateness of the season and the inclement weather prevailing in the mountains at this time of the year, that the cost of putting in the road now would be very materially in excess of what it would in the summer season.
