FATEFUL "THIRTEEN."

It is an Unlucky Number--Wrecks in Which It Has Played Part.

A St. Paul Switchman Tells a Somewhat Remarkable Story Illustrating the Point.

RAILROAD MEN "down east," according to some New England papers, are being controlled by superstition in the matter of running on engines whose numbers are 13, or say combination which amounts to that unlucky sum.

No railroad terminating in Chicago has engines numbered as high as 1313, with the exception, perhaps, of the Washab.

But with a view of ascertaining the amount of superstition among the Chicago railroaders an Evening News reporter spent a few hours in a "switch shanty" at Western avenue, where the knights of the link and pin of several roads congregate and swap stories with the engineers and trainmen.

The crowd was much the same as one would meet in most any switch shanty. Some were shining up their "glims," others were making out their time and switching blanks, others were playing "Peggy," and in general the recent wrecks and "lung-pulling" exploits were the subjects of conversation. The minute the reporter mentioned the number 13, one man, who is at present tending the cross-over switches, but who had an arm and a portion of a leg taken off several years ago, while switching, poked up the fire, shivered, and said:

"Boys, you uns have alters been a telling yer thirteen yarns, an' kinder b'lieve in 'em. You had better jest sit round here and tell the reporter what yer have been deamin' on."

"Oh, yes. Some folks says we are foolish for b'lavin' in this thirteen business, but I do just the same," chimed in a fireman. "To begin with, I knew a fireman who fired 313, a switch engine in the North La Cross yards. While he had that engine he had three fainting spells. At the last one he fell dead at his doorstep, while hurrying home from the engine. Now, I think that was an unlucky engine. She's down here in the Chicago yards now."

"My cousin ran No. 13 on the old Wisconsin from Tomah to Warsaw some years ago, and he never made a trip without some accident happening. One day she slipped an eccentric, and while repairing her two drunken Indians nearly killed him. His wife had such a horror of that big-stacked wood-burner that she dreamed of it. One day she kept her husband home, and made him promise he would give up No. 13. He did. He is now on the Chippewa Valley & Meno division, and feels better, as he pulls the throttle of the 295," said a young engineer.

"Well," said a St. Paul switchman, "I never did believe much in this thirteen business until one night three winters ago. You remember Charley Marsh had just bought his engine (364) in on Council Bluffs four, and it was nearly dark when he reached the roundhouse. He was to go back on No. 3 that night, and he hurried home, leaving the engine so she would not quit clear the passenger yard lead. She was steamed up to 130, and had sixty pounds of air. That green switchman from the Central tried to move her, and she got away from him before he could shove in the throttle. The yard had thirteen crews in that evening, and most of them were coming in. Everybody knows how 364 went through that stretch of yard. Post the transfer house she flew at sixty miles an hour. Switch engines just barely out of her way were black with switchmen anxiously thinking of their brothers at the "top end." Would they get out of the way of 364 as she sped on? Messages were sent to Pacific Junction to ditch her, but she never reached there. At the top end a "Cragin" pile was just taking a string out onto the main line, when 364 struck the train. Well, boys, you know it was just under the Boulevard bridge, and my! wasn't the wreck piled up? Old 364 was always causing trouble, and when the superintendent came to order the wreckers around the first thing he done was to pick up pieces of the old number plate. First he fished out the six, then the three and after a hunt he found the four. "Three, six, four; well, that is thirteen, as I live," I heard him say. Since that time I have sort of thought that 364 was built to pile up cars and people."

Just then an extra from the Pacific rolled in. She had besides her regular stock cars, wrecking train and a lot of demolished freight car trucks on the flats. "Say, there is nothing in the thirteen business; oh, no!" said the veteran switch tender. "See that wrecked box car, C. M. & St. P., 'Red Line,' 1129? She is the one that jumped at Kirkland, Tuesday night, and piled the red cars up like cordwood. Section 1129. Isn't that thirteen? Oh, the thirteen combinations always meet with some accident."

"Hang it, if I don't believe a little in that myself," replied a passenger brakeman. "One morning we were coming down the Chicago division No. 2, with thirteen cars, by the way, and engine No. 724 was pulling us. At Pacific Junction a switch tender let us into the ditch, and blocked everything for three hours. No 724 was not injured very badly, but the switch tender was fired. There is that thirteen again--7, 2, 4. Seems to me there's some-

ODD VERMONT EPIGRAMS.

Some of the Queer Inscriptions Found By a Party of Visitors.

Some of the Couplets Provoke a Smile, Notwithstanding the Gloomy Surroundings.

Brattleborough (Vt.) Corr. New York Sun: A party summering here has made a search of neighboring graveyards for odd epigrams, and report many interesting finds.

An ancient little cemetery at Vernon proved a perfect bonanza, at Grafton was found another, and at Londonderry, Dunmerstown and other places, as well as at this place, there were several good finds. Most of the older stones are slate. Within a few miles, sometimes within a stone's throw, were stores of granite that were inexhaustible, yet the old time Vermonters ignored that time defying stone and put their trust in slate.

Here is one we found in Grafton cemetery:

Good-bye Home.

The hand was probably carved with the fingers downward to point to the remains, but the inference drawn is often other than that. Near the stone was another which marked the grave of a man who had been murdered by an enemy. The epitaph was:

I'm Shot.

It was in the Grafton cemetery that we found one of the very oddest of our stones. It was in three sections, two large stones with a smaller one in the middle. On one of the large stones was an angel's head, with slits for the eyes, nose and mouth, and two enormous feathered wings growing from the side of its head, at the place where the ears should have been. On the small stone was an exact copy of this in miniature, and on the other large stone was a weeping willow tree, with twelve branches, at the end of each branch, hanging like a great, round apple, being a cherub's head, in the typical unadorned and unconnected style of the very early pioneers in the art of carving tombstones. The small stone was sacred to the memory of Thomas Parke, Jr.; one of the larger stones was in memory of Mrs. Thomas Parke, Sr., and the other was sacred to the memory of her twelve infant children. The inscription read:

Stranger, pause at you pass by; My thirteen children with me lie. See their faces how they shine Like blossoms on a fruitful vine.

The story runs that an old slave of Thomas Parke, Sr., had been promised his freedom, and not obtaining it, died crying his then youthful master, and praying that his children might die before they were grown. All died in infancy, and only Thomas, Jr., reached his second year; but whether the slave's curse had anything to do with their sad deaths is matter of opinion rather than history.

In a sunny corner of the Vernon cemetery lie the three wives of Mr. Abijah Rogers. The first died in 1784, and her tombstone bore the following epitaph:

Look down on me I slumber here; The grave becomes my bed. And think of death, that's always near. For life may quickly fade.

Five years later the second Mrs. Rogers died, and the widow buried her in friendly neighborhood to the first, and, to avoid all appearance of partiality, placed on her tombstone precisely the same stanza, though dignifying the personal pronoun in the first line with a capital letter. The third Mrs. Rogers has a more touching epitaph than the others.

In another graveyard was found this ungrammatical statement carved in stone:

My staff and stay is took away, And I am left alone. My husband dear, who was so near, Is took away and gone.

It was in a New Hampshire burying ground that were found the graves of eleven children, over each of which was a marble slab. The father of the eleven had, after the death of the seventh, it was alleged, purchased the lambs at wholesale. There was still one left of the dozen he bought, so the story went.

One of the Grafton epigrams reads as follows:

His languishing head is at rest, His thinking and acting are over; His calm, immovable breast Will have to suffer no more.

It is strange to see how some one mortuary stanza would have a run, so to speak, in the neighborhood. Here is a favorite one:

Sickness sore long time I bore, Physician's skill was vain; Till God did send death as a friend, To ease me of my pain.

For modesty this is irreproachable. It was not seen by this party, but was vouchered for by one of the villagers:

O God, do Thou to Allen Ellen Reed As Allen Ellen Reed would do to God Wee God but Allen Ellen Reed And Allen Ellen Reed were God.

A favorite couplet is that which closes an inscription found in a cemetery at Vernon:

When living men my bones do view, Remember well: Here's room for you.

Here is an epitaph that adorns the tombstone of a wife and mother:

WONDERFUL WASHINGTON.

She Has the Conditions and Products to Make Her Peerless.

Minerals People Some States; Cereals Some, and Timber Others, and Washington Has Them All.

Snobish Sun: Now is the time to settle this country with a class of citizens that will make her the grandest state in the Union. If she is not settled at this time, while all eyes are turned to her as a new state, the plan of Senator Bruce to colonize the negroes of the south here may be carried out. We want the good people of the northern and eastern states here, men of industry and capital to develop the many diversified resources of the country. The gold mines made California; the silver mines made Colorado and the wheat fields have made Dakota what she is; grain and stock raising have made Illinois; copper has made Michigan; famous the world over; ship building has made Maine, and granite quarries have made New Hampshire. Ohio may rank first in wool, New York in potatoes and hay, Texas in cattle and Pennsylvania in iron and coal, but where is the state, in all the Union, that has all these resources combined like Washington? She will yet rival California in her gold mines, Colorado in her silver mines, Dakota in her wheat fields, Michigan in her copper and Pennsylvania in her coal and iron, New Hampshire in her granite and Maine in her ship building. Where is there a better country for stock raising, fruit growing and fishing than Washington? Not only does she rival all other states in their chief productions but she possesses advantages which many of them do not. We will, in a short time surpass all other countries in the world in hop raising. We possess the greatest proportionate extent of navigable waters, have the finest harbors, the most fertile soil of any state in the Union. And above all other advantages is our salubrious, healthful climate. Good health is the one great requirement, without it all else would amount to naught. Here there is no ague, no plagues, no long cold winters, no hot summers, but a cool, invigorating breeze from the briny deep from one end of the year to the other. In inducing your friends to come here you can have nothing to regret. There is no danger of Kansas hot winds, Nebraska's hail storms, Alabama's yellow fever, Missouri's ague, Dakota's blizzards or Mississippi's negroes.

The Alleged Humors.

Sympathetic female (gazing at the murderer)--Isn't he sweet! Unsympathetic Warden--Yes, mum; he's too sweet to live.--Epoch.

Clara--Did you notice how beautifully my dress sat at the Harvard assembly? Beattie--Yes, I noticed it at most of the time.--Harvard Lampoon.

Bagley--I understand your wife is sick. Bailey--Yes, she hasn't spoken a word for three days. Bagley--By gracious! she must be a pretty sick woman.--Epoch.

Miss Nell--I hear you're engaged to Mr. Tamillon, Kate? Miss Kate (laughingly)--I am. Miss Nell--Well, do tell me which one of you proposed.--New York Sun.

"How is it, you have so few deaths on your hands, doctor?" "That's easy enough. When I find I have a bad case I order the patient to take a trip abroad.--Judge.

Visitor (to butler, who is showing him through the picture gallery of the old mansion)--That's a fine portrait. Is it an old master? Butler--No. That's the old missus.--Boston Courier.

There is only one bigger boat than the man who is always talking about the days when he was rich, and that is the man who continually brags about how poor he used to be.--Terre Haute Express.

Guest (at a swell Wisconsin reception)--Where is the hostess? I haven't seen her for twenty minutes. Another guest--I believe the cow got out of the back gate. She'll be back in a moment.--Epoch.

Waiter (in all-night restaurant, at 2:30 a. m.)--Gentlemen lamb-chop, and there ain't no yeast. Proprietor (glancing at clock)--Well, give him an oyster stew, an' say nothin'--Puck.

Mr. Bloomingdale Ward (desperately, after being "stuck" for the last half-hour)--Er--will you excuse me, Miss Autumn? Miss Autumn (slightly deaf)--With pleasure! What is it, a wait?--Life.

Mrs. Parvenu--What do you think of our statue of Venus? Miss Winko--I must confess that the face seems to me rather hard. Mrs. Parvenu--Perhaps you forget that it is done in marble.--Harper's Bazar.

Uncle Tom--Got anything to do to-morrow, Jack? Jack--Yes; I've got to go down town to try a case. Uncle Tom--Then you've got a client at last? Jack--Oh, this case isn't in court; it's at a wine merchant's.--Life.

"What made you cut Lombard, Harry?" "Heard something about him, y'know. He sells things, y'know. Actually earns his own living." "Aw, naw, that won't do, y'know. I'll cut him myself to-morrow, I'll cut him badly.--Harper's Bazar.

E. M. REED, Editor and Business Manager.

Born the state senate and house, after long debate and much contention have concluded to be good and employ chaplains.

EMPEROR WILLIAM has prohibited the use of the word "cigar" on account of its French origin. In future the fragrant weed is to be known in Germany by the execrably Teutonic word of "Glimmstengel."

The National W. C. T. U. in convention at Chicago have split on the rock of prohibition and the Iowa contingent, under Mrs. Foster, has seceded from the parent organization and formed a new one.

The republican papers are finding all sorts of excuses for their defeat in Ohio, Iowa, Virginia and New York. They lay it at the door of whisky, prohibition, fraud, intimidation and innumerable other things. It is wonderful the purity of the ballot box and the voter when that side wins and the iniquity that dwells in these two factors when the other party is successful.

In commenting on the admission of Washington the San Francisco Chronicle says editorially: "Of the four new states none have brighter prospects than Washington. It is receiving almost unparalleled immigration, and the new settlers are the best class of men with means to develop ranches, start factories and build up cities. By the time another census is taken Washington will be able to make a showing in population and wealth which will leave far behind many old settled states in the east."

A TELEGRAM from St. Paul says that the engineers of the Manitoba claim that road will be completed across country from Butte to Puget Sound before the end of twelve months. As Yakima commands the mountain passes it is bound to come through this city. This statement is right in line with the claim of Chester A. Congdon, who says that the road from Gray's Harbor through Chehalis to North Yakima will be built this coming year. Mr. Congdon is closely connected with the Manitoba people and has invested hundreds of thousands of dollars in this city and on Gray's Harbor.

We are now a state and our name is Washington, with the abbreviation of Wash. The transition took place at 5:27 o'clock Monday afternoon, November 11, 1889. The emancipation from territorial vassalage was received in some giddy cities with the burning of powder, patriotic speeches and champagne for the rich—whisky and beer for the poor. Here in dignified Yakima we smiled a smile of satisfaction and moved along the even tenor of our way, building three story brick business blocks, handsome residences and projecting new and greater enterprises for the coming year.

ONE of the celebrated base ball cranks of the country is the distinguished United States senator from Maryland, Mr. Arthur P. Gorman. When by a little messenger boy and page to the senate he was always restless until adjournment, so that he could go and tour or bet a ball. He helped to organize the National Base Ball Club, which is now the National League Club. He never misses a game when he can possibly attend one. His son Arthur has inherited his love of the game and has learned the art of curving. Very frequently he induces his father (the Senator) to go out into the great back yard and catch for him. The Senator does so with a great deal of pleasure and relish, and takes pride in being able to hold any sort of a curved ball which may be pitched to him.

MONTANA was admitted to statehood on Friday, November 8, and Governor-elect Joseph K. Toole was inaugurated at 2 o'clock that afternoon. By the throwing out of democratic votes the legislature was made republican. The democrats of course protested and carried the matter to the courts, and, pending the hearing of the contest, the republican canvassing board met, counted the votes, leaving out an entire precinct that was strongly democratic, sent the returns to the president and adjourned sine die. Two days afterward the court rendered a decision that the votes of the condemned precinct should be counted, but there was then no territorial board to make the returns to, President Harrison, knowing the situation, admitted the territory and thus it came into the Union a republican state by gross fraud.

Mr. J. A. RICKER, of Denver, Colorado, is in the city with plans for illustrating North Yakima in conjunction with the HERALD. Mr. Ricker is an artist of acknowledged ability and so feasible and excellent is his project that a number of our foremost and most enterprising citizens readily interested themselves in the matter and are encouraging others to do the same. Mr. Ricker proposes to take pen and ink sketches of public buildings, business blocks and private residences, from which cuts will be made. These will become the property of the individual upon the payment of a moderate amount, and the cuts will be utilized in a mammoth edition of the HERALD, without further cost to the purchaser. They can also be used in various ways when occasions arise. The work will take until spring and Mr. Ricker makes no charge until the cuts are done and accepted as satisfactory. The project, when told in detail, strikes all most favorably and Mr. Ricker will endeavor to meet our leading citizens and lay his plans before them.

ONE of the wittiest men in the senate is Mr. Vance, of North Carolina, father of T. M. Vance, the receiver of the U. S. land office for this district. He delights in playing practical jokes upon his colleagues and when they can get even with him they unhesitatingly do so. Senator Vest came into the chamber early one morning and found a beautiful basket of flowers upon Vance's desk. He picked it up, carried it over to the desk of Senator Beck, of Kentucky, and placed it there. Shortly afterward Vance entered the chamber and walked over to the bouquet, saying to his fellow senators: "These are beauties; I wonder where Beck bought them. He is constantly buying flowers and sending them here to his desk to create the impression that he has lots of friends to send them to him." After getting off his joke Senator Vance picked up the card which was attached to the bouquet and read the inscription, which was: "To Senator Vance, with the compliments of Mrs. Blank." The laugh was on Vance and it was a hearty and spontaneous one, but he was equal to the emergency, for he picked up the bouquet and marched off in triumph to his own desk, saying: "The exception only proved the rule, after all."

THE uncertainties of the senatorial race are still with us. With the president's proclamation of admission, issued Monday, the legislature met, and, after clerical appointments and the transaction of other duties incident to organization, adjournment was made until the coming Tuesday, when balloting for senators will begin. The adjournment is said to have militated against the interests of Squire and Allen but the friends of these gentlemen say that their situation is impregnable and that they have votes enough assured to make their election certain. With the withdrawal of Hyde, of Spokane Falls, from the contest the Spokane delegation was said to be sold for Turner, but a caucus showed five for Turner and five for Allen. Turner is hopeful, however, and estimates his strength at thirty-six votes. Brents, Thompson and Sprague are still in the race, but to what extent it is difficult to say. The fight promises to be a long and interesting one.

TACOMA News: Several states have holidays which are not national ones, being purely local in their observance, and commemorative of some event distinctively their own. Of such is the occasion of their admission to statehood, the anniversary of their birthday, in which other states are not especially interested. Admission day is celebrated in many states and it should be made a holiday in Washington. Probably the measure will be introduced into the present legislature, and to make the observance of the 11th day of November a feature in the history of this state would be to engraft a spirit of patriotism among our people for all time for the country, and for the great father after whom this magnificent commonwealth is named.

The Hops Got There.

Assistant General Freight Agent Fulton of the Northern Pacific, has received a telegram from J. T. Siskle, general western agent of the Atlantic transport line, Chicago, advising him of the arrival in London on Saturday last, November 9, of the steamship Maine, with 1250 bales of hops, shipped by special train from Puyallup by E. Mosker & Co. on the 9th of October, routed via the Northern Pacific, Wisconsin Central, the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne & Chicago, care of the Atlantic transportation to Baltimore, and thence to London direct. The hops, therefore, arrived in London just thirty days after their departure from Puyallup. This is the second trainload shipment of hops ever made from the Pacific coast to Europe via the Atlantic seaboard, the first instance being that of the Montana last month.

HOW ABOUT YAKIMA?

Listen to the Story as it is Told by Careful

Observers from Abroad.

(San Francisco Examiner.)

The new State Capital will probably be at North Yakima.

(Spokane Falls Review.)

The best and most extensive agricultural region in the Yakima Land District, and in the Territory, lies about the City of North Yakima and is known as the Yakima Valley.

(Seattle Post-Intelligencer.)

To-day, where four years ago were uncultivated prairies, the home of great herds of unrestrained wild cattle and vicious bands of cayuse ponies who knew no halter, now stands the City of North Yakima, the Queen of Eastern Washington.

(Northwest Magazine.)

The knot of valleys which meet at the new town of North Yakima seems a bit of Southern California here in the north. Public opinion in all parts of Washington has settled upon this place as the Capital of the new State.

(Portland Oregonian.)

There is no just reason why this city and county, when they shall have reached their maximum in population, should not have in the city from 15,000 to 25,000, and the county 40,000 to 50,000. Neither is there any good reason why they should not be eventually among the very wealthiest towns and counties in Washington Territory. All the material elements that go to make a big and prosperous city are here. The total taxation of the county is only 1 1/2 mills which includes the total tax, territorial added. There is not a pauper in the county. The taxation is heralded to the world as the lowest known from and including Minnesota to and including California. If there is another county in a new country that can show as low a taxation the public would like to know it.

(Tacoma Ledger.)

The valley in which the city of North Yakima is situated in the center of a series of very fertile valleys which open into it and have grown famous for their products. With a splendid agricultural country surrounding it and the peculiar advantages of its location for railroad approaches North Yakima cannot but figure in the future brilliantly.

(Spokane Falls Review.)

Although less than forty miles apart the difference in climate between Yakima in Yakima county and Ellensburg in Kittitas county is almost as great as that between a northern and southern latitude. The valley surrounding Ellensburg is excellent for producing grain, while in the valleys near Yakima the farmers are devoting more attention to fruits, vegetables, hops, tobacco and similar crops, which can only be grown in a warm climate.

Interview with Judge J. R. Lewis on his return from attending the Mechanics Fair in California, Published in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

It was a great exhibition of the wealth of California, but I found no better specimens of vegetables and many varieties of fruit than Washington Territory produces. I can go over into the Yakima country and in two days collect finer products in those lines than I saw in California. The Yakima peaches are of better quality and flavor than any raised in California, the apples are superior and the prunes are away ahead of anything I ever saw. Then, too, they raise finer melons, squashes and all kinds of vegetables in the Yakima country than any produced in California.

—The appearance of Liberati and his famous military band at Mason's opera house, Tuesday evening was greeted by a fair-sized and very enthusiastic audience. The program, which was of good length and varied, was executed most admirably, and the liberal applause which each number was accorded by the pleased listeners, was a just tribute to the merit of the entertainment.

—J. E. Christie and other residents of Yakima propose to explore the 2500 square acres of unexplored country enclosed by the Olympic range, of which the HERALD published an article a short time ago. PERSONAL.

Harry Moran is down with the fever.

W. W. Chandler is back from Grays Harbor.

Captain C. M. Holton returned from the Sound to-day.

George S. Vance after an illness of several weeks is again around.

W. Z. York is again on the street after being down with the fever for six weeks.

Joseph Chapman, after a siege with typhoid fever, is again able to be about.

Miss Gussie Harris, of San Francisco, is visiting her brothers, Hyman, Morris and Lou Harris.

George B. Ferguson, formerly of this city but now a resident of San Francisco, arrived on the east bound train to-day.

Joseph Bartholet, sr., and Mr. and Mrs. Matt Bartholet left Tuesday evening for an extended trip over the Sound country.

Walter J. Reed and wife, of Cle-Elum, spent several days in the city this week. Mr. Reed reports the work of drilling for natural gas has been recommenced.

State Senator J. M. Snow, in addition to having his leg broken, is also seriously ill with pleurisy, and will be unable to attend to legislative duties for several weeks at least.

G. W. Jones, of the firm of MacLean, Reed & Co., returned from Wisconsin on Saturday last, accompanied by his young son Roy and his sister-in-law Miss Maude Sackett, of Clintonville, Wis.

Mr. and Mrs. Fulton, brother-in-law and sister of the late Mr. Foss, arrived in the city last week in time to minister to the wants of Mr. Foss. Mrs. Fulton had not seen her brother since he was a little boy, and did not know of his illness until she arrived here.

F. R. Reed, North Yakima's popular mayor, has been confined to his residence for some days past with fever and a low state of health in general. Mr. Reed's condition is due mainly to overwork, and he is already greatly improved with his rest, and hopes to be again around in a few days.

Samuel Foss, a well known and popular resident of North Yakima, died on Saturday, Nov. 9th, of pneumonia. Mr. Foss was a carpenter, and after a season of indoor work had taken a job in the open air, and becoming heated from work he failed to take the necessary precautions and caught cold, which resulted in pneumonia and his death. He left a wife and three children in needy circumstances. Mrs. Foss has a mother residing in Klickitat county, and she left for that place, accompanied by her children, last Wednesday.

ELECTRIC ROAD PROJECT.—F. H. Osgood, who was here a short time since, writes that he will return in a few days and if he receives sufficient encouragement will build and operate an electric road from this city either to the bench lands to the west or to Yakima City, or in both directions. The encouragement he wants is in the shape of property bonus. He figures that the road will increase property valuations along the line to such an extent that the holders can give him the bonus required and still be materially benefited in pocket as well as in comfort and convenience.

PETITION FOR A POST OFFICE.—A petition has been circulated and numerous signed asking for the establishment of a post office at Toppenish. There are about three hundred people on the reservation who would get their mail there, besides about fifty farmers and cattlemen who reside in the neighborhood. This number should certainly entitle them to the accommodation requested, for as the situation now is these people have to travel many miles and lose much time or get their mail very irregularly and infrequently.

BOXY.—At North Yakima, November 12, to Sarah May Walker, a son; weight 12 pounds. The Rev. Dr. John A. says he has received an excellent Xmas gift.

—Where is the best place to buy nice fresh groceries for the least money? Why, at Griffin Bros.' Vining Block. Give them a trial.

—Messrs. Lombard & Horsley, the furniture dealers, have ordered a hearse from Rochester, N. Y., at a cost of $1000. A hearse has been very much needed here and this firm merit much credit for their enterprise as they do not look forward to its being a profitable venture.

—Messrs. Shriver Bros. have had hard luck in the painting of the Lewis-Engle block. Tuesday they finished penciling the front of the building and that night a rain storm of half an hour's duration spoiled the entire job, even to the ground work, as the fresh black penciling ran and streaked the bright red.

—The property valuations, on which the city assessment for 1890 was made, aggregate over a million and a quarter of dollars, being double the valuations of the year previous. This is a most creditable showing and is one more fact corroborative of the claim that North Yakima's population has doubled within a year.

—The Congregational association is holding its annual convocation at the church in this city. Among those present are Rev. T. W. Walters, general missionary for eastern Washington; Deacon Andrus, Rev. Samuel Green, Rev. R. A. Beard, Rev. R. J. Mooney, Rev. R. M. Toms and Rev. Chesdale.

—The city has been on it bad behavior this week. Nine "drunk and disorderly" occupy the municipal jail. Five men were arrested to-day for fighting. As the last batch have up, under the wing of the marshal, before the city jail, one of the incarcerated, a poor, mean-faced drunk, poked his nose through the bars and plaintively asked: "What is getting into this town of Yakima?" Others have asked the same question. The marshal says the prisoners shall work on the streets under ball and chain.

THE EFFECT OF A VOTE.

How a Pig Caused the Loss of a Vote for the Country.

Indianapolis Sentinel: Forty years ago Colonel Seaton, then mayor of the city of Washington, as was his custom, gave a large dinner party, at which I was present. During the entertainment the importance of one vote and its consequences and good results was, among other things, the subject of conversation, and Governor Corwin (then United States senator) narrated in his inimitable manner the following, to show, as he said, the bad results as well as the importance of one vote, and how a pig, from whom the devil had not been cast out, nearly, in his estimation, ruined the country, to-wit: "In the spring of 1811, at the annual election in Rhode Island, in one of the towns or precincts the voting between the federal and republican (or democratic, peace or war) parties had for years very close, with not more than a majority of one or two votes. The polls closed at 6 o'clock, and a federal farmer, living a mile or so distant from the voting place, having been busy all day, allowed himself just barely time to reach the polls in the evening. He hurriedly crossed his fields on foot, and reaching his last or division fence found one of his valuable pigs fast between the planks and stopped to get it out, which he found more difficult than he expected, but he worked with all his strength to pull the pig out and falling in that tried to pry off a plank from the fence, which, after some time, he succeeded in doing, and then started on a run for the voting place. Just as he got within 100 feet of it, the town clock struck 6 and the polls closed without his vote. The result was that a democrat or war representative from that town was elected by one vote. When the general assembly met a few weeks afterward a democratic or war United States senator was chosen on joint ballot by one majority. In 1812 the declaration of war with England was carried in the United States senate by one vote. General Jackson was nominated as a major-general and confirmed by one vote on January 8, 1815. He commanded the army at the battle of New Orleans, gained a great victory, became a popular military hero, and as his reward was elected and re-elected president of the United States, turned all the widgets out of office, removed the deposits, vetoed the national bank bill, and played the devil generally, and all because that pig way up in Rhode Island got fast in a plank fence.

Dr. Physik—Your blood appears to be a little out of order. I will send you something which will purify it. Mrs. Murray Hill (indignantly)—Purify my blood, sir? Are you not aware that I am one of the Four Hundred?—Town Topics.

Mr. Brown (proudly, to his friend, an attorney)—By Jove, Henry, my wife can sing the entire score of all of Wagner's operas. The Attorney (absent-mindedly)—Well, I'll try to get a divorce for you, old fellow, but I'm afraid we can't make it.—Washington Critic.

Bangs—In the divorce case of Morris vs. Morris—you remember how bitter she was—a most happy reconciliation was effected yesterday. Bangs—You don't say so. Were the charges disproved? Bangs—Disproved nothing! Morris's father died two days ago and left him one hundred thousand dollars a year.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Pinny Poole (chalking his cue)—Did yer get that place in the down town store, Ally? Ally Rounder—Naw, Pinny Poole—What's the matter? Didn't yer have references? Ally Rounder—I had nine of 'em from places I've worked at in the last two years, 'n' the old bloke wasn't satisfied. He wouldn't be satisfied with nothin', he wouldn't. But 'em, Pinny.—Puck.

Suspiciously Poor. Editor of a Daily Newspaper—Is this poem original? Post—It is; why? "Nothing, only it doesn't seem to mean anything. (Suspiciously.) You aren't trying to palm off an old monthly magazine poem on me, are you?"—Time.

MORTIS DIGNITAS.

Here lies a common man. His horny hands, crossed modestly as a model's upon his breast, show marks of toil, and by his general dress you judge him to have been an artisan. Doubtless, could all his life be written out. The story would not thrill nor start a hair. He worked, laughed, loved and suffered in his time. And now rests peacefully, with upturned face whose look betrays all struggle in the past. A homely tale; yet, trust me, I have seen the greatest of the earth go stately by, while shouting multitudes beset the way, with less of awe. The gray between a king and me, a nameless gasp to the crowd, seemed not so wide as that which stretches now betwixt us two—this dead one and myself. Uttered, dumb and dead, yet he is transfigured by a touch from out the skies until he wears, with all-unconscious grace, this strange and sudden Dignity of Death. —Richard E. Barton, in Scribner.

LA MERVILLEUSE AMERICAINE.

1793-1868. Ah, who is she I see advance? Is this a dream of elder France? She wears a quaintly-faded gown: Her hat is pointed in the crown. Her close-cut coat has long lapels That point where either shoulder swells. Over her hips it falls away, And to her jobe gives due display. And down the robe a panel goes, Brocaded with many a golden rose. A silver charm-holder, that hangs Along the panel, swings and clangs. And in the charm-holder is set A dainty silver vinaigrette. Black hose and high-heeled shoes she wears, And in her hand a staff she bears. Delicate ribbon blands it where It crosses on her bosom's side: She raises to her eyes of blue Her longon, as she looks at you. Who is she? What mysterious chance Brings here this ghost of elder France? What wondrous scenes have those sweet eyes Beheld beyond their native skies? What deeds in old Parisian days? Her blood bedabbled all the way? It may be, from her country high, She came on her wedding morn'g by: Or washed, in evening's gathering shade, The battle at the barricade. Who was she then? Some noble dame Who shuddered at her country's shame? Or one who went, at Freedom's call, To slaugher's prison carnival? Perhaps she saw that fair head fall Where the red sunset yawned for all. Who loved her then? What man of blood Held her in his arms? It may be she was Denton's dear, Or else sweetheart of Robespierre. It may be that at her command Blood drenched the town, same dred the land. May, one so sweet in youthful bloom Could scarce have caused another's doom. May, then in Paris had she been, She might have felt the guillotine. Not all her grace and nonchalance Would have protected her in France. But here along Broadway she goes, And not a fear or care she knows. The stare of man or woman's glance Ne'er put her out of countenance. She moves in sweet oblivion Of everything and every one: A modern maid, with modern wiles, Tricked out in old Revolutio styles. "Who is she?" do you ask again? La Mervilleuse Americaine. —Atlantic Monthly.

AT THE STATION.

A Lady Ticket Agent Who Wanted to Commit Matrimony.

"Give me a ticket to Arlington, O.," he said to the female ticket agent in a New York village. "One?" she asked. "Yes, one." "Travelling alone?" "Yes, entirely alone." "Why don't you take your family along?" "Madam, I have no family." "You don't say? Married?" "No, never married." "My! how many single men there are nowadays. Don't you find life a burden?" "No, not much of a burden." "I should think everybody who isn't married would find it so. I do." "I'm very sorry to learn it, miss. My ticket?" "Say, you don't know of anybody who wants to marry a girl from this village, do you?" "Well, to tell the truth, I don't just now, but if I hear of any such I'll let you know." "I'd be ever so much obliged to you if you would. Just direct to Miss Zenobia Waldron, this village, and I'll be sure to get it; will you?" "Yes, I'll bear it in mind." "And, I say, if you want to correspond with me I can make arrangements to write to you Tuesdays and Fridays of every week." "You are very kind; I'll consider it. Will you kindly give me my ticket?" "Let's see, where do you want to go?" "Arlington, O." "Say, you don't consider me forward, do you?" "O not in the least." "Well, a good many folks say I am, but I'd rather have your opinion; you've seen so much of the world. By the way, what do you call me?" "Charles F. Leslie is my name. But you are forgetting my ticket." "You said Cincinnati, didn't you?" "No, Arlington, O."

"We don't sell tickets to Arlington; that's on the other road. Guess you'll have to hurry to catch the train. I hear the whistle now. Don't forget what I told you, will you, Charley? Good-bye!" —Puck.

THE STATE EXPENSES.

Estimated Expenses of the State Government for the Coming Year--Probability of an Increased Rate of Taxation.

The estimated expenses of the state government for the first year of statehood and until the legislature meets in January, 1907, as was prepared by the territorial auditor and submitted to Governor Moore, in his bi-annual report, including the deficiency in appropriations for the current year, are as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Item and Amount. Includes salary of governor, incidental expenses of executive departments, salary of lieutenant governor, etc.

The available funds for this payment, unless the law is changed regarding the time of collection of the levy of 1906, will be drawn from this year's assessment. If all this is collected, it will aggregate $312,500, from which, if a deduction of 15 per cent is made for the delinquent tax and commission, leaves a balance of about $265,000.
