Another Interesting Sketch From the Pen of M. G. Wills.

The Campaign of '56--A Number Close Calis--Death of Captain Hembrey--A Ride for Life.

Gen. Geo. L. Curry made the second call for volunteers Feb. 22, 1856. I started out again under Capt. Wm. A. Cason, company E, Clackamas county, with W. G. Moore, first lieutenant; Wm. Mitchell, second lieutenant; Geo. Reynolds, first sergeant, and A. Holcomb, second sergeant. Leaving Portland March 3, 1856, we reached the Cascades on the 6th, and on the 8th we were ordered to The Dalles, arriving there late in the afternoon.
On the morning previous to our arrival quite a number of freight teams started to Fort Walla Walla, laden with provious for the troops, and seventeen of our ions for the troops, and seventeen of our company, including myself, under Sergt. Reynolds were detailed to overtake and guard them to Fort Henrietta. We did we camped about half way between the John Day river and Willow creek. Early John Day river and Willow creek. Early next morning some Indians made a rush on the guards and cut off about eighteen head of our horses, stampeding them. About twenty of us gave chase, following the Indians almost to the mouth of Willow creek and came on to them in camp. The boys fired on them at long range, and Mr. Depew shot and crippled a squaw, who fell, then jumped up, picked up her baby playing near the fire, and ran into the willows along the creek. Part of our the willows along the creek. Part of our crowd went down the creek and some to crowd went down the creek and some to the Indians' camp, while others waited on the hill to pick off the Indians as they ran. I was looking after the horses, and a comrade named Groshon asked me to look after the animals in his charge, as he saw a siwash in the brush. He then crawled up 'and hid behind some grease-wood within twenty paces of the willows, and had not got settled in his position be-fore an Indian, about thirty wards away.

fore an Indian, about thirty yards away, fired point-blank at my head. The ball, fired point-blank at my head. The ball, or slug of iron, shaved off a lock of hair fired point-blank at my head. The ball, or slig of iron, shaved off a lock of hair just above my right ear, and that member has been, though perhaps ornamental, a useless appendage ever since. Just as the Indian let drive at me, Mr. Groshon fired at him, and his aim was good, for the blood spurted all over the brush. We looked for him, but the Indian jumped into a pool of water, dyeing it with his blood, and disappeared.

We recaptured some of the horses and next morning visited the Indians' camp, burning all their outfit, but no savages were visible to the naked eye. We then went to Fort Henrietts, on the Umatilla river, where now stands the town of Echo, and thence to old Fort Walls Walls.

I think it was April 15th, 1856, our company was camped on the Walla Walla river, when some seventeen of our boys went to the neighborhood of Wild Horse creek and found thirteen head of cattle, two of which were very unruly bulls. We willed the receptly and the two of which were very unruly bulls. We killed the two bulls that evening, and the same night a messenger came into camp and startled us by the announcement that the commands under Col. Cornelius and the commands under Col. Cornelius and Col. James K. Kelly, then camped in the forks of the Snake and Columbia rivers, were in a starving condition—that if we could send beef cattle to them to do so at once. Capt. Cason ordered us to cast lots and seven men were elected to drive the eleven head of cattle to the starving commands. The only way to reach them commands. The only way to reach them was to swim the Snake river and drive the cattle through the Indian country. On the morning of April 16th a number of us the morning of April 16th a number of us went down to the river, which was about half a mile across and almost mush-ice, where the Northern Pacific R. R. Co.'s iron bridge now crosses at Ainsworth. We started the cattle and the seven men after them, and our brave captain and I followed them. The captain and I got across safely with the cattle, but the I followed them. The captain and a got across safely with the cattle, but the cheer men landed on the side from which they had started. We got on our horses and started for the suffering commands. Returning to my command, I was detailed with twelve or fourteen of my con panions-in-arms to convey Samuel Price (now a brother-in-law of Senator Mitchell (now a brother-in-law of Senator Mitchell of Oregon), to The Dalles for medical treatment, as he was suffering from the mountain fever. Reaching the John Day river we found that stream very much swollen, and having no means of crossing, we camped for the night. The rain descended in torrents, and we bent willows and spread our blankets over them for protection from the storm. The ensure morning we began construction of a for protection from the storm. The ensuing morning we began construction of a raft on which to convey the sick man to the opposite side of the river, which was deep, wide and swift as a milt-tail. On coming out of our impromptu tent a man named Geer caught his gun-lock on one discharged, the ball striking him in the left groin, and coming out at the hip. We thus had two invalids on eur hands, and our raft would not hold them. Seeing Flunging into the stream with our horses, after some diffi-culty we were fortunate enough to make the other side, and started rapidly to The Dalles, some 60 miles distant. We had gone but a short distance, when looking at a hill near us I observed some-thing resembling a bear or other wild animal apparently sitting on its haunches, watching us. With bovish spirit, I told without further incident, we endeavored to pursuade different doctors to go to the relief of our disabled comrades, but the gentlemen refused to endanger their lives by making the trip. Fortunately for the sick men, a waxon train, guarded by troops, passed in the vicinity of their camp, and they were brought into The Dalles, where, I am happy to state, they both finally recovered.

These incidents, and those recorded in my first paper a short time since, will be recalled by many of my old comrades, several of whom now reside in Yakima county, and members of Multnomah Camp No. 2, Indian War Veterans.

HOW JOCKEYS TRAIN.

Down Their Weight.

Jock Who Could Not Ride in Important Race on Account of Eating Dinner.

New York Sun: Of the thousands of racegoers who wildly applaud a successful jockey after a brilliant piece of work in the saddle there are very few who understand, or, understanding, realise fully the great privation and self-denial a successful jockey of the middle-weight class must practice in order to keep at the weight which will secure for him the greatest amount of patronage. This battle of the flesh is incessant and lasts for almost eight months of every year, and those who imagine that men like Mo-Laughlin, Fitzpatrick, Hayward, Murphy and Garrison do not earn their money should try reducing their natural weight from twenty to thirty pounds, and keeping it there for a period of six months or so. James McLaughlin, who is now about through ridding, this being his last season in the saddle, and who does not ride less than 125 pounds at present, has had a greater struggle than any of the other jockeys, during late years. When in the oneploy of the Dwyer Brothers, in whose red and blue colors he achieved his greatst rimupbe. Le was under contract to

Gentlemen and ladies in every walk of life are troubled by the dread and burden of adipose, and one often hears the query:

"How shall I reduce my weight?" Matrons sigh for the waist of their girlhood, and the man of middle age would give a good deal if he could run upstairs without becoming very warm and out of breath. They know that the kind of food they eat and the drinking they do are not conducive to leanness, and there are few who have not tried at least one remedy for their bugaboo. Listen to the way for their bugaboo. Listen to the way

When asked how he kept himself at weight, McLaughlin, whose face is now round and ruddy, and whose eyes have the snap and brilliancy that go with health, replied:

low and Where a Bense Pepulation Will Have to Look For Its Food Supply.

That is but a short time. The aged men and women of the present day look at the passage of the last half-century as a dream that is past. And yet what changes have been made in the political and domestic economy of the United States. But what are to be the lessons and results of the next fifty years? The population of the United States will then be at least 150,000,000. Where are they to live and what are they to eat? At present it takes about six bushels of wheat per capita to feed the innabitants, requiring now about 300,000,000 bushels. Fifty years hence, with a population of 150,000. ing now about 300,000,000 bushels. Fifty years hence, with a population of 150,000, 000, at the same rate, it will take 900,000, at the same rate, it will take 900,000,000 bushels. Where is it to come from and where is it to be raised? Wheat is a desolator, and leaves barrenness in its track. While the wheat area is being pushed northwest and into the valleys of the mountains the area behind it is being closed up. The Genesee country, the western reserve, the Wabash valley and the grand prairies of Illiois, so celebrated in their several periods as prolific of wheat, have long sincs been abandoned as feasible fields for wheat raising. Illinois, lows.

Then where are the 900,000,000 bushels to come from annually to feed 150,000,000 inhabitants? There are no new worlds to discover. The entire face of the world is known. But the United States has nothing to dread. It has the great corn field of the world, which produces the most nutritious human food. Its roots do not desolate the soil. By proper care and wise farming equal crops can be raised for 1000 years in succession, and the human race may never feel a lack of food.

The population of the world may be three times larger than at present, and the corn area of the United States can produce enough of this rich and nutritious cereal to feed the world.—Des Moines Register.

Ellensburgh Register: Two of Ellensburgh's "Four Hundred," who were out selebrating the admission of the state burgh's "Four Hundred," who were out celebrating the admission of the state Monday night and who had tarried long at the abrine of Bacchus, wound up in front of the Horton in the early hours of the morning. They were tired and weary, and after a few minutes of beated debate as to the number of moons that were just then occupying the starry firmsment, they loving embraced and laid down on the sidewalk. "Lesh hav annoser drink," said one of the gallant but somewhat disfigured society leaders. "No shir," said the other, with righteous indignation, as he made another effort to crawl under the sidewalk, "I've (hic) got a reputsahun (hic) at stake; I wash (hic) never drunk in my life (hic)." The future statemen then smiled sweetly on each other, grasped frantically at a passing zephyr, arose to their feet, and wandered homeward, the wind playing joyfully with their tangled locks. Two men walked rapidly down Wall street yesterday afternoon, says a New York letter to the Philadelphia Press, and York letter to the Philadelphia Press, and entered one of the prominent banking institutions. They were sturdy, heavy-set men. Both kept their eyes roaming from side to side. I followed them into the bank. The man with the satched set down and dropped the bag on the floor. The other went to the receiving teller's inclosure, reached down in his bresst pocket and extracted a package of bills. These were hastily counted, and the strangers left. The teller jammed the bills into an envelope, sealed it and piched it into the safe, afterwards closing the door in a perfunctory manner. The entire transaction occupied less than two minutes. Then the teller turned to me and said: and said:

"Why, about $500."

"Yes, and a little more. It contained one million, four hundred and forty odd thousand."

IN SEARCH OF A HUSBAND.

A certain rich Washington City woman went to Europe to buy a titled husband. She had read of one American girl who had bought into the Hatzfeldt nobility, and another who purchased a stray prince of the house of Colonna, and she wished to be as titted as any other girl. So she struck up a bargain with a very needy Frenchman bearing the illustrious name of Napoleon's most illustrious marshal; but when she came to sign the contract, A certain rich Washington City women she was unwilling to pay the descendant of the king of Naples over $10,000 a year. He "kicked." The best blood of the "Old Empire" coursed through his veins. He was no ordinary colt, but a thoroughbred. He would not trot in harness with an American caving ally for control of the course.

The wife-hunter of Europe, with nothing but a lengthened patronymic to recommend him, may sometimes "beg" a "sucker," but our American girls—pure, industrious, honest, beautiful—are as unapproachable by the foreign titled matchmakers as the icz peak of Mount Blanc to the denizen of a Neapolitan lazaretto.

An important factor to the successful conduct of business, which should be observed by our merchants, is the dressing of the show windows. North Yakima has as good stores and as fine stocks as any city of its size in the northwest and when a merchant falls to appreciate the benefits of advertising he neglects to dress his show window. An instance of the advantages which arise from this dress his show window. An instance of the advantages which arise from this source was observed the other day when a lady member of the McKee Rankin troup, attracted by the handsome dis-play made by Kuechler, the jeweler, stopped, looked at the handsome window exhibit, entered the store and before leaving purchased a costly pair of dia-mond ear-rings. Merchants, this lesson should bear its fruits.

The new State Capital will probably be at North Yakima. (Spokane Falls Review.)

The best and most extensive agricultural region in the Yakima Land District, in the Territory, lies about the City of North Yakima and is known as the kima Valley.

(Northwest Magazine.)

The knot of valleys which meet at the new town of North Yakima seems a bit Southern California here in the north. Public opinion in all parts of Washinghas settled upon this place as the Capital of the new State.

(Portland Oregonian.)

(Porlland Oregonian.)

There is no just reason why this city and country, when they shall have reached their maximum in population, should not have in the city from 15,000 to 25,000, and the country 40,000 to 50,000. Neither is there any good reason why they should the country 40,000 to 50,000. Neither is there any good reason why they should Territory. All the masternal elements that go to make a big and prosperous city are here. The total taxation of the country is only 13½ mills which includes the total tax, territorial added. There is not a pauper in the country. The taxation is heralded to the world as the lowest known from and including Minnesota to and including California. If there is another country in a new country that can show as low a taxation the public would like to know it.

(Tacoma Ledger.)

The valley in which the city of North Yakima is situated in the center of a series of very fertile valleys which open into it and have grown famous for their products. With a splendid agricultural country surrounding it and the peculiar advantages of its location for railroad approaches North Yakima cannot but figure

(Spokane Falls Review.)

Although less than forty miles apart the difference in climate between Yakima in Yakima county and Ellensburgh in Kititias county is almost as great as that between a northern and southern latitude. The valley surrounding Ellensburgh is excellent for producing grain, while in the valleys near Yakima the farmers are devoting more attention to fruits, vegetables, hops, tobacco and similar crops, which can only be grown in a warm climate.

nterview with Judge J. R. Lewis on his return from attending the Mechanics Fair in California, Published in the Seattle Fost-Intelligencer.

It was a great exhibition of the wealth of California, but I found no better pecimens of vegetables and many varieties of fruit than Washington Territory prouces. I can go over into the Yakima country and in two days collect finer prouces in those lines than I saw in California, Th. Yakima peaches are of better uslity and flavor than any raised in California, the apples are superior and the runes are away ahead of anything I ever saw. Then, too, they raise finer melons, quashes and all kinds of vegetables in the Yakima country than any produced in faifornia.

THE CODE COMMISSIONERS' WORK.—H.
J. Snivelv left a week ago for Olympia to attend a meeting of the code commission, attend a meeting of the code commission, of which he is a member, and to submit the work, which has been revised for the state, to the legislature. The commission was organized in February, 1888, and the members have been engaged largely since that time in codifying the laws. Their labor has been a great one, and involved an analysis of all general laws in proper principal divisions, subdivisions, chapprincipal divisions, subdivisions, chap-ters and sections as harmonious parts of the whole, and the correction and addition to various parts, making a clear analytical collation. The code is divided into four principal parts, to-wit—penal, reme-dial, civil and political; and those who have had an opportunity to judge of the work accomplished pronounce it well

AMONG THE CANNIBALS.

A Graphic Statement by a White Tray eler Who Has Been There.

The Men Are a Lazy Lot, Who ? Principally of Wemen and Human Flesh.

Mr. Lumboltz, a Norwegian naturali who has braved the perils of traveli among the cannibal tribes of Queensland has returned home and related something among the cannibal tribes of Queensland, has returned home and related something concerning these depraved members of the human family. "To begin with," said he, "don't imagine that because the tribes are cannibals they are, therefore, loathsome or repulsive in appearance. On the contrary, many of the men are physically fine fellows, and some of the women have pleasing features. Thus, when you call them cannibals, you must remember that human flesh is a very rare luxury, for they only eat foreign tribes. Native tribes, I mean, for the flesh of the white man is masty to their palate. He has a salty flavor, which is very disagreeable to them. Still, being quite without morals, and absolutely indifferent to human life, they would have killed me if they had dared for the sake of the tobacco and the few odds and ends I had with me.

"When I kinned them of the sake of the contract of the sak with me.

"When I joined them at first they were friendly enough. They were a good bit alraid of the white man, and for an inch of tobacco apiece were willing to serve me. Then they respected what they called my baby-gun—my revolves—which I fired off every night. But in time their fears were off, and there were several at tempts to toinahawk me, but I was lucky. I had a splendid hunter with me woot twice tried. I would have shot him dead, but I was a little loath to do so, as he was very keen about getting that specimen of the tiger marsupial, so I tolerated him. Might is right among them. If I had had a faw of them my dangers would have shot my dangers would have shot my dangers would have shot my dangers would have and the demon Dyspepsia and lineases of liver, stomach and kidneys. Might is right among them. If I had shot a few of them my dangers would have been considerably lessened. "To resume about the man-eging, I never saw a cannibal feast, but every night in their huts the talk was of women and human fash. These were the stock.

night in their huts the talk was of women and human flesh. Those were the stock subjects of conversation. I was able to understand them, for I had learned the language, and I gathered that white man was no good—too salty. Chisaasan was not half bad. He fed on rice and had a was no good—too salty. Chinanan was not half bad. He fed on rice and hal a tender vegetable flavor about him, like a mealy cashiflower. But of all varieties there was nothing so sweet as a native baby—so sweet, so juicy, so fat, so tender. Old men and woman were naturally lough and sinewy. And the favorite parts were the thigh and the flesh of the hand. The cannibal blacks have no religion, no ceremonial, no idols, and the only approach to a charm was a bit of human fat wrapped up in grass and the only approach to a charm was a bit of human fat wrapped up in grass and the only approach to a charm was a bit of human fat wrapped up in grass and the only approach to a charm was a bit of human fat wrapped up in grass and the only approach to a charm was a bit of human fat wrapped up in grass and the only approach to a charm was a bit of human fat wrapped up in grass and the only approach to a charm was a bit of human fat wrapped up in grass and the only approach to a charm was a bit of human fat wrapped up in grass and the only approach to a charm was a bit of human fat wrapped up in grass and the only approach to a charm was a bit of human fat wrapped up in grass and the only approach to a charm was a bit of human fat wrapped up in grass and the only approach to a charm was a bit of human fat wrapped up in grass and the only approach to a charm was a bit of human fat wrapped up in grass and the only approach to a charm was a bit of human fat wrapped up in grass and the only approach to a charm was a bit of human fat wrapped up in grass and the only approach to a charm was a bit of human fat wrapped up in grass and the only approach to a charm was a bit of human fat wrapped up in grass and the only approach to a charm was a bit of human fat wrapped up in grass and the only approach to a charm was a bit of human fat wrapped up in grass and the only approach to a charm was a bit of human fat wrapped up in grass and the only approach to a charm was a bit of human fat wrapped up in grass and the only approach to a char you walk into a but and take the lady. Then there is a row and you have to fight a duel with a wooden broadsword, and and the women. come down to the fight and how! and acreech and back their men, and there is a terrible to-do. It is the women who cause all the rows, all the wars, all the feeds. It is always some chocolate Helen and some revishing Paris. The mean research the wormen and howl and acreech and back their nees, and there is a terrible to-do. It is the women who cause all the rows, all the feuds. It is always some chocolate Helen and some ravishing Paris. The men regard the women as useful dradges, to do all the work and make them comfortable. The more women a man has the bigger swell he is. The black fellow hates work. He only carse for hunting. He hates to rise until the sun is well up in the heavens and the dew is off the grass. Then he and his riends depart into the forest and hunt, seldom bringing home the food, but devouring it in the bunh. It is ouse of the remarkable things that the old men have always the prettiest wives. There are no chiefs. One man is as good as another, but when a political crisis arises the old men are consulted, and that is why the lold men are the most influential. As for the young fellow, he frequently has to do without a wite until he is 30."

a Swiss journal has the following:
A celebrated specialist for diseases of the throat, nose and ear asserts that tu-berculosis is making alarming progress among cigar smokers. He does not attribute this to the use of tobacco, but to the manner in which cigars are manufactured. Rolling the tobacco leaf is a craft that requires neither strength nor intelligence, consequently in this harmonic progress. female operatives who are wens made eased, and who, in consequence of their infirmities, are economical employes. Most of these suffer from scrotla or tuberculosis. They cough, and often give the finishing touch to a cigar with their lips. "For a second I thought of my rights. I had hired out to be entry clerk and bookkeeper, and here I was expected to go down to the residence of the proprietor and beat carpets! I was troubled with as much pride as the average young man of 20 possesses, and that is no small amount. I don't remember of anything more distasteful ever offering itself to me, but I said: 'All right; I am ready when Bill is,' and we went to our task. 'I didn't nout or suit, or assume any had every evidence afterwards that my work that day was a stepping-stone in my career, and I might almost call it one of the turning points in my life."
