THE TARIFF NOT A TAX.

Foreigners Pay the Duty Even When We Do Not Import.

How Enormous Fortunes are Made—Cargoes Dumped Overboard—A Statement of Facts.

"The tariff is not a tax. The foreigner pays the duty." So many republican editors and speakers are saying this, and so many republicans believe them, that it may be true. It cannot be possible that Mr. McKinley, Mr. Reed, President Harrison and all the leaders of the grand old party are lying—deliberately lying—to the voters to deceive them and delude them into accepting measures intended to enrich a few protected mill-owners.

An examination of the report of the bureau of statistics of the treasury department of 1889 shows that on hundreds and thousands of the entries at our custom houses the duty imposed is over 100 per cent.—that the custom house fine is sometimes eight times the price paid for the foreigner, and that on all our really protected industries the duty imposed at the custom house is very nearly the actual amount paid abroad for the foreign article. Turn to page 641 and glance down the columns giving the total importations under each subdivision of the tariff law. Here are a few of them:

Was ever Yankee shrewdness so exemplified! Was ever the imbecility of the foreigner so plainly shown!

The foreigner who sold to an American $300 worth of pure alcohol received only the $300 for it, not one cent more. But he willingly, and gladly, Mr. McKinley says, sent back that $300, and $2,152.92 more in gold to pay the duty. What a fool he must have been!

Another American sent abroad $252, with which he bought foreign compounds and essences. The foreign seller sent him back the $252, and with it $1,110.50 more in foreign gold to enable the American to pay the tariff duty.

Do not ask these foreigners' names and where they live. This list is not for you. Like Sergius, the high pontiff, Mr. McKinley knows, but he will not tell their names, because he and the other republican leaders propose to work this tariff gold mine for all it is worth, to pay their election expenses and make themselves comfortable in their old age.

The Chinese merchants who gave us our fire-crackers, telling us to keep the $276,591.13, which was the price abroad, to pay the 100 per cent. duty imposed at our custom house, showed the narrow commercial spirit that might have been expected from such a barbaric race; but the French manufacturers who made a present to American importers of $2,962.90 worth of playing cards, contributing the money which should have been paid them, to help defray the expenses of our government, were limited in their gift to us by the amount we would accept. If we would take more they would give more. This is clearly proven by the generous and free-handed foreign sellers of castor oil, who sent over here $2,955.20 in foreign gold when they sent the castor oil, for which we paid them only $1474; and by the action of the French sellers of perfumes and essences, who, receiving from us only $5,255.81, not only sent goods back valued at that amount, but also sent to the American buyers $21,145.88 in French gold that the purchasers might be able to pay the duty without inconvenience.

There is one item on page 663 which is worth stopping to look at in running over this report of the treasury department for 1889. A ship captain (whose name is suppressed) bought in a foreign port (not named) 1000 lemons, for which he paid $1.25. The foreign seller (whose name and address are concealed) then presented the American captain with two long-boarded American silver dollars "with which to pay the duty." He lost 75 cents by the transaction, but this he could not help. He may have thanked his patron saint that the loss was no greater. The captain took the $2, promising to pay the duty on what he had left when he came into port, and he had 600 lemons, worth exactly 75 cents. On these he paid $1.20 duty. (The statistician of the treasury department seems very proud of this $1.20.) By eating 400 lemons worth 50 cents the Yankee skipper had actually saved 80 cents of the duty and netted 30 cents.

By throwing overboard the 600 left he might have made a net profit of 45 cents more. But in spite of all temptation he remained an honest man and paid the duty. The report shows that a similar transaction took place the year before.

Commerce of this kind cannot fail to be profitable, and what I am wondering

THE LOVE THAT ENDURES.

Wives Who Warmly Praise Their Husbands—Models of Devotion.

Glimpses of Human Nature That Will Catch Your Fancy and Admiration.

The New York World offers a Christmas prize of $100 to the wife who will write the most graphic and picturesque description of her husband's devotion to her. Here are a few of the tributes:

NOT ALWAYS KISSING.

I think my husband is devoted to me. He is not one of the kind who is always kissing and hugging one, but he is good, kind and thoughtful. He takes care of my widowed mother and invalid sister. Broadway, Brooklyn. Mrs. F. F. PATENT, WITH A SICK WIFE.

I have been married for twenty-eight years and have a model husband. I am constantly sick and he shows me many little attentions. He is as kind to me as on the day I was married. I receive all his wages every Saturday and he never asks where the money goes to. Mrs. L. E. Chancey street, Brooklyn.

WENT HUNGRY FOR HER.

I have a husband who would sacrifice his own life rather than to see me suffer in any way. I have seen him go without his own food rather than see me hungry. Although we are comfortable now I have known what it was to want. It was in those days that I knew what true devotion in a husband meant. Mrs. J. P. L. HOW HE AVOIDS A QUARREL.

I am a happy wife and will have been married thirty years this Christmas. We have had our ups and downs. We have been poor, and we have also been blessed with plenty of the world's goods. We have always made it a point to try and pull together. My husband is a good man; he is not one of that kind that is always telling you what he thinks of you, but shows it in a hundred different ways. He always consults me on all business matters and thinks my advice is good. When there is a subject brought up when he thinks we are not apt to agree he just drops it. M. E. E. Seventeenth street, Brooklyn.

WILLING TO MAKE HER A WIDOW.

There never was such a husband as mine. When we were first married he gave me all the ready money he had on hand, because he had heard that it was a great trial for a wife to have to ask for it. He made his will, leaving me everything, because he said he could trust me, and a year after our marriage he came to me, asking me to tell him candidly if I was happy, if he fulfilled all the requirements of my nature. When answered in the affirmative his face lighted up with joy, for in the event of the least hesitation on my part he had determined to take advantage of the unhappy war, then going on, to make me a widow. West Thirty-ninth street. A. S. FORTY YEARS WITHOUT FALLING OUT.

We have lived together for forty years without any disturbances or falling out. My husband has been good to his wife and children by night and day. We came from England fifteen years ago with six small children with only $100, and he has made a 105-acre farm since he has been here. He has been a good husband, never gets drunk or chews tobacco or gets mad and slams things around; never grumbles when I ask him for a dollar or two. Mrs. A. S. Turney Station, Clinton county, Mo.

AN OLD WIFE'S STORY.

My lover and I are 60 and 67 years old; we are ancient sweethearts. As the years roll on the affection born in our youth is condensed—stronger, deeper, higher, wider, more sanctified. We married thirty-eight years ago. Now, with my hand on my heart, I swear my dear husband has never failed in fidelity and devotion to me; in our married life no doubt has ever assailed either; our trust is infinite. In youth children came, gladdening our life and home—sweet, precious children, cementing our affection. Age gives strength to wise; why not to love? Though our eyes are dim and hair gray our hearts are as loving and tender as when bride and bridegroom. "He brought me to the banquetting house and his banner over me was love." West Point, Miss. OLD WIFE.

BETTER NOT MENTION HIS FAULTS.

My husband is a true gentleman, highly educated, traveled and refined. Never interchanges with other people's business, always peaceable and never takes offense where none is meant. Retiring and modest, he never pushes himself into notice, but is satisfied and contented with his little family, and only finds rest and happiness in their society. I will not say that he is faultless. No one is. We all have our faults, but no one would dare mention one of his to me. Stanton, Va. Mrs. C. A. D. BEHIND HER HOUSE OUTSIDE.

I have been married to my husband over seventeen years. He has been devoted to me all this time and has my confidence. Although we could get rooms or a house in the outskirts of the city for much less than we now pay, my husband will not consent to this, because he wishes to live near his office so that he can visit me several times daily during his office hours. When out at night he always remembers me either by a package of

JAY GOULD'S GOLDEN GRIP.

His Millions Jeopardize the Financial Safety of the Government.

His Combination With Standard Oil Signifies—Control of New York Banks—Food for Thought.

Jay Gould will—Jay Gould has—Jay Gould says—Jay Gould wants—these have been the overtures to a mass of telegraphic announcements which, says the Chicago Herald, following each other in rapid succession, have astounded the financial and railroad worlds for weeks. It has been Gould in every other line, and when Gould was not the magic name that tickled from the telegraph instrument it was Standard Oil. Gould and Standard Oil have together made the greatest monetary manipulation in the history of the world. To accomplish their ends they have jeopardized the financial safety of governments, not to speak of individuals. At the close of the fiscal year of American railroads, 1889, these corporations had a total debt of $9,931,453,146, about seven times the amount of the national debt of the United States, and considerably more than the aggregated federal, state, municipal, county and town debts of the entire nation. The monster indebtedness is divided as follows:

Capital stock $4,200,000,000

Paired debt 4,200,000,000

Unpaired debt 1,531,453,146

Current debt 200,000,000

Total $10,331,453,146

This debt is secured by about 161,000 miles of railroad. Upon this debt was paid an interest on funded debt the enormous sum of $219,877,150, while $31,264,029 was disbursed as dividends upon the stock. More interest fell due than ever before in the history of American railroading and less dividends were paid than in any previous year since 1880, except 1888. Upon this pile of American railroad securities American credit is largely based. Place the value of these securities in jeopardy and a financial panic is precipitated. To attain their ends Gould and Standard Oil have risked the value of these securities and at the eleventh hour averted the panic only to save themselves.

It may be asked how a combination of one man and a single corporation could do all this. It is very simple. American railroad systems are so inter-locked and competition is so close that reckless rate cutting by one disturbs all. Cut the passenger rate between St. Paul and Chicago to $5 and it will affect rates between Chicago and Omaha and Kansas City, St. Louis and Kansas City, Omaha and St. Louis, St. Paul and Kansas City, and then the rates between the Missouri river and Denver will follow. Let this situation stand a year and, as under the operation of the long and short haul clause of the interstate commerce law a local rate cannot be higher than a through rate, all passenger rates between Lake Michigan and the Rocky mountains will be in chaos, and the roads in that region will sacrifice from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 in revenue. A cut in freight rates precipitates more disastrous consequences, because it compels roads in a large section of territory to meet it, spreads faster and wiper out revenue in hundred thousand-dollar chunks. An act was also passed absolutely prohibiting the manufacture or sale of ardent spirits in the territory under heavy penalties. (This act is not now in force.) An editorial prescription is given in this issue: "If your cost is comfortable, wear it a few months longer, even if the glass is off. If you have no wife, get one; if you have, God bless her, stay home with her instead of spending your evenings in expensive frolics." * * * If your circumstances are now embarrassed, they may soon become easy, no matter who is editor or what may be the price of flour."

The editorial page is filled with a declaration of principles which are to govern the paper; an advertisement sets forth that "John Travers and William Glasser" are prepared to make hats for Oregonians at a small profit, and adds, "Wool, beaver, racoon, wildcat, muskrat and mink skins will be taken in exchange for hats." This postoffice intelligence sets forth in a striking manner the latest utter isolation of Oregon at that time:

The postmaster general has contracted with Mr. H. Burns to carry the mail from Oregon City to Weston, in Missouri, for one trip only. Letters mailed at any of the offices, post-paid, will be forwarded to any part of the United States. As the mail goes east by Mr. Burns will reach Weston early in the season, it would be advisable for those wishing to correspond with their friends in the east to avail themselves of this opportunity. Postage only 50 cents on a single sheet.

It is hard to realize that so few years have passed since "only fifty cents" was considered cheap postage on a single sheet letter in the bounds of the United States government.

A postoffice law was passed by the infant legislature in which occur some interesting bits of history. One clause provides that any free male, descendant of a white man, is eligible to carry the mails, and any mail contractor hiring any other person than a "free male descendant of a white man" to carry letters shall be subject to a fine for each offense.

Elegant Holiday Novelties.

Mrs. Cady has just received a fine line of holiday goods—the latest novelties in fancy work materials and made-up goods and an elegant line of muffs and boas.

E. M. REED, Editor and Business Manager.

WINDOM'S ANXIETY.

The dispatches report Secretary Windom of the national treasury as appearing deeply concerned over the monetary affairs of the country and as being exceedingly anxious to render any aid in the present emergency that may lawfully be rendered by the government.

He recognizes as fully as anyone that there exists a great stringency in financial circles, and that a little further toppling over on the part of New York banking institutions would be likely to bring on a general panic, through which the business of the whole country would be seriously affected.

Mr. Windom is one of those who conscientiously fear that free coinage of silver might lead to disastrous results. He is a western man, however, with broad views as to the extent and needs of a great country. He is thoughtful in his disposition and is always willing to listen. He is in no sense pig-headed and is not afraid to change his views if he finds they ought to be changed.

Those who know Mr. Windom personally regard him as one of the most conscientious of public officials and as a man possessed of a strong and able mind.

He moves with great caution rather than with high confidence, and it is apparent just now that he is anxiously seeking some safe remedy for existing trouble. It is also apparent from expressions recently made by Mr. Windom that he realizes that the money volume is not sufficiently large with which to transact the country's growing business and that in some way more silver must be placed in circulation.

Sooner or later Mr. Windom is likely to reach the conclusion that, after all, free coinage (or something equivalent thereto) will have to be resorted to as an experiment at least. He is said to favor legislation that would permit him to purchase through the treasury department all of the silver in sight of American production. This is a proposition almost equal to free coinage and might prove to be even better. It would perhaps not satisfy the most radical silver men, who will accept of nothing short of free coinage, but with additional legislation that would provide for its coinage under the supervision of the treasury and for its immediate addition in some manner to the circulating volume of the country, it may be that such measures would afford quite as much relief as would absolute free coinage.

In any event, it is gratifying to observe that the head of the national treasury department, occupying as he does a position of such great power for good or evil, is personally awake to the depressed condition of the country. William Windom has for many years occupied a conspicuous place in the nation's affairs. He entered congress as a very young man from the growing state of Minnesota, and throughout a long series of years he has maintained his cautious career with much credit. In the various public stations he has occupied he has enjoyed more than the usual degree of public confidence. If he should now prove of great service in relieving the country out of threatening financial disasters he would not only merit the public thanks, but would stand conspicuously in the line of political promotion. Mr. Windom's course in this great emergency will be observed with much interest.

The apportionment bill has passed the house and Washington is to have another congressman, to be elected this fall. The state will doubtless be divided into two districts by the line of the Cascades, although some one has suggested that the division be made between the north and south halves of the state. As eastern Washington has the present congressman, it will devolve on western Washington to elect the second member, and the republicans are already canvassing the names of Allen Weir, of Port Townsend, State Senator J. W. Parkinson, of Whatcom, and John F. Govey, of Olympia. If Tacoma misses getting the next U. S. senator, she will without question have the strong pull for the coming congressman.

The net earnings of 139 western railroads for the first nine months of this year have exceeded those for the corresponding period of last year by nearly $12,000,000. And yet active efforts are making for an advance of rates. It is thought that a few more millions can be got out of the people by judicious squeezing.

William J. Gavigan, a member of the Seattle bar, has prepared a bill to be presented to the members of the legislature at their next meeting in January, regulating freight and fares and providing against abuses by railroad corporations, and to compel railroad corporations or individuals to operate their roads in the state of Washington. The bill also provides for the creation of a railroad and transportation commission.

The Spokane National bank, of which W. H. Taylor is president and Warren Hunsay cashier, closed its doors Wednesday. The other banks of Spokane Falls tried to pull it through, but an examination showed the undertaking to be too great. The difficulty was precipitated by the failure of its three branches in the Coser d'Alene mining district, namely, the bank of Wallace, the bank of Wardner and the bank of Murray.

Chief Engineer Bogue has received instructions from headquarters to abandon construction work on all of the Union Pacific branches along the Sound. This will throw 2500 men out of employment; but as it is feared that trouble will result if all are discharged at once, the closing up of work will be gradual up to the end of the month, when all will cease. The Union Pacific has already expended $1,500,000 on its Portland-Seattle extension.

The long heralded meeting of representatives of western railroads was held in New York on the 15th and Jay Gould's plan of co-operation was accepted. All of the leading companies were represented, including the Northern Pacific, Great Northern, Union Pacific and Southern Pacific. The scheme provides for the formation of a new association between the several companies west of Chicago and St. Louis, to be under the management and direction of an advisory board, to consist of the president and one member of the board of directors of each company. It shall have power to establish and maintain uniform rates between competitive points and decide all questions of common interest between members. It shall have entire charge of all outside agencies for securing traffic at competitive points. If any officer or representative of any company shall authorize or promise, directly or indirectly, any variation from the established tariff, he shall be discharged. The rates and policy adopted by the advisory board shall continue in force and be binding until altered by the board, and the vote of at least four-fifths of the members shall be required to make its action binding upon all. The board shall appoint proper arbitrators, commissioners and other representatives and adopt by-laws to carry out the purposes of the association.

A Handsome and Useful Gift.

S. J. Lowe, at a great expense, has arranged to present to his customers copies of the New Standard Atlas of the World. This work is a handsomely bound volume of 200 pages replete with colored maps of all countries and contains chronological tables of discoveries, explorations and important events; areas of bodies of land and water, heights of mountains and monuments, description and illustrations of chief cities, productions of various countries, portraits and data of all of the presidents of the United States, and other matters of valuable information and reference. The book is one which should be found in every library and would adorn any center table. It is not an advertising scheme, but a splendid work of reference which retails in all bookstores at $4.50. Mr. Lowe gives this atlas to every customer who purchases $25 worth of goods. The goods do not have to be bought all at once, for Mr. Lowe has an ingeniously arranged credit card by which all purchases are recorded and when the requisite amount has been traded out the book is turned over to the customer. To state it concisely, a handsome and valuable work, sold at bookstores for $4.50, is given to every customer buying $25 worth of goods at regular prices.

SITTING BULL GIVES UP THE GHOST.

He is Killed While Resisting the Indian Police. His Son and Others Accompany Him to the Bad Lands.

Sitting Bull, his son, and four other Indians of his band were killed on the 15th inst by the Indian police, while resisting arrest. It had been reported that the willey old medicine man was about to join the hostiles, who were pillaging along White river. The police were sent out to make arrests, should the reports prove true, and when the camp was reached it was found that the Indians had struck their tepees, painted their ponies and stripped for war. The police made a dash into the camp and seized Sitting Bull. Headed by Black Bird, the son of the captured chief, the Indians attempted a rescue. A struggle ensued and Sitting Bull, who was not pinioned, gave his orders to the braves. In the confusion that followed, the old chief, his son, four of his band and an equal number of Indian police were killed. The cavalry coming up at this time, the hostiles were put to rout, abandoning their women, children and camp equipage, and striking out for the bad lands, followed by the cavalry.

Sitting Bull was born about 1837. He was the principal medicine man of the Dakota Sioux, who were driven from their reservation in the Black Hills by miners in 1876, and took up arms against the whites and friendly Indians, refusing to be transported to the Indian territory. In June, 1876, they defeated Gen. George A. Custer's advance party of Gen. Alfred H. Terry's column, which was sent out against them on the Little Big Horn river and were pursued northward by General Terry. Sitting Bull, with a part of his band, made his escape into British territory, and through the mediation of Dominion officials surrendered on a promise of pardon in 1880.

It is somewhat of a coincidence that Gen. Terry only survived his old foe, Sitting Bull, by one day.

All parties owing me for the last five years or less will please come forward and buy more goods for 1891.

There was an explosion of a big lamp in Janek's pharmacy Saturday night, but the flames were quickly extinguished.

The marriage of Leroy H. Stark and Miss Olive Harper was celebrated in this city Sunday, December 14th. Rev. J. T. Ebelman officiated.

Remember, the Swedish ladies will appear at the opera house Monday evening in their national picturesque costumes. Seats on sale at Janek's.

There will be a Christmas tree and literary exercises at the Christian church on Christmas eve. An invitation is extended to the public to be present.

Rev. Dr. Nevius will spend Christmas at North Yakima and will hold communion service at St. Michael's Episcopal church at 11 o'clock a. m. on that day.

E. P. Cadwell, of Ellensburg, has assigned. A judgment amounting to nearly eight thousand dollars has just been secured by the First National bank of this city.

Harry Haste, who presided for several months over the bar of the Hotel Yakima, has turned granger, having taken up a claim and built a house on a quarter section under the proposed big ditch.

The Episcopal Sunday school will have a Christmas tree and accompanying exercises at the church, December 24th, at 4 o'clock p. m. The general public is invited to be present on this occasion.

The county commissioners met Monday and Tuesday and, after transacting some routine work, adjourned to meet on the 29th inst., at which time the treasurer is instructed to make settlement of his accounts.

Sacraments of baptism and the Lord's supper will be administered in the Presbyterian church on Sabbath morning. In the evening there will be a service of song and responsive readings and an exposition of the 23rd psalm.

Mrs. Barrimore objects to being called a "grass widow." She proposes to devote her life to Theopis, and has adopted the stage name of Nellie Howe. She is at present out of an engagement, but has the promise of a call in the near future from a Portland manager.

Rev. J. T. Ebelman, chaplain of the 2nd regiment, is now entitled to be addressed as captain, as late official orders give him that rank. Between the titles of Senator, Reverend Chaplain, and Captain, we hope our worthy fellow-citizen will not become unduly vain.

The Swedish Octette, accompanied by Day, the Boston humorist, will appear before the footlights at Mason's opera house Monday evening. The Swedish ladies who compose the Octette are said to have the sweetest voices of any troupe of vocalists now on the road.

Do not forget that John Fielding's Comedy Ideals will appear at the opera house this, Thursday, evening. The names of John and Maggie Fielding are household words among the music loving people of the east, and their entertainment is one of fun from beginning to end.

Both school buildings are now crowded, and the high school department is being maintained in the basement of the Columbia school house. It looks very probable that much time will not elapse before another building will be required, and at least one of the school directors is in favor of the erection of a building for the higher grades, this coming summer, to cost in the neighborhood of $25,000.

On Saturday evening last C. V. Fowler left his team in front of Carpenter Bros. for a minute, as he claims, but they failed to remain that long, preferring to take a spin down Yakima avenue on their own responsibility. Arriving at Third street the horses had separate ideas as to the direction to go, so they hastily commenced on a middle course, which hung them up on an electric light pole. Damages moderate.

Charles Ruffner's First street restaurant was closed on Monday. The cause of the suspension is unknown to THE HERALD, but is probably due to the financial stringency and the attempt of a certain class of customers to do without eating by drawing in their clench-straps one hole at every meal time. Just previous to the closing Ruffner and a young fellow known as "the Kid" indulged in a free-for-all fight over a disputed board bill. Ruffner was slightly out in the fracas.

THE CITY DUNS IN SESSION.

Much Business Transacted, But All Was Not Harmony—Charges Preferred Against St. Commissioner McCaffery.

A regular meeting of the city council was held Monday evening, and a lively session it was. The spectators were numerous, called together, no doubt, by the rumors that "fun" was brewing. All the councilmen were present, and the mayor wore wrinkles in his usually placid brow, as he realized that the session was to be one notable for the absence of harmony.

Mayor Nichols opened the ball with a message, in which he cited the action taken at the proposed sale of bonds, at which time the highest bid was 90 per cent., which was rejected. He recommended that ordinance number 148, section 2, be amended to change the date of sale and providing for re-advertising. He also recommended the amendment of the ordinance establishing the salary of the city attorney, and urged the necessity of electing such officer.

The petition of M. G. Wills, asking permission to conduct his saloon business in the Beck building under his present license, was granted.

On petition an arc light was ordered placed at the corner of First and D streets. A petition was read asking for the location of additional arc lights. Councilman Chambers moved that the number of new lights be six, and that four be located on the east side of the track and two on the west side. An amendment was carried referring the matter to the committee on public improvements, with authority to act.

The petition of R. Strobach and others asking for a sidewalk on Selah street from west Yakima avenue to D street was read, but no action taken.

A communication was read from H. J. Snively with reference to the Ricker bill. The clerk was directed to notify Mr. Snively that the city refused to pay the claim.

Officer Ed Kramer presented his resignation, which, on motion of Young and Cox, was accepted.

The committee on fire and fire limits reported adversely to establishing telephonic communication with the water-works at the expense of the city. Report adopted.

The council ordered the purchase of 1000 feet of 2 1/2 inch hose, two light hose carts, four nozzles and six rubber coats for nozzlemen; also ordered the location of hydrants at the corner of Front and Yakima avenue, Second and Yakima avenue, First and A streets and First and Chestnut streets.

The city engineer made to report as to street grades on the west side, and the city attorney was directed to draft an ordinance adopting such grades.

Claims amounting to $2050.93 were favorably reported upon and warrants ordered drawn.

An ordinance amending ordinance 35 was passed prescribing the duties of city attorney and fixing his salary at $10 per month, with a fee of $5 for each ordinance drafted.

The ordinance regarding the sale of funding bonds, by resolution, ordered amended extending date of sale to the earliest time possible at which such sale would be legal.

Sidewalk was ordered laid on block 10 from Lowe's building to the city hall. The interesting part of the session then commenced, when Councilman Chambers moved that the city council resolve sealed bids for lumber for city use for the ensuing six months. This was seconded by Young, and quite a wordy warfare ensued, participated in by Chambers and Young on one side and North and Stanton on the other. The motion was lost, Nevin, Stanton, Cox and Tucker voting against.

A motion was taken from the table dispensing with the services of two policemen and amended by cutting off one of the policemen.

F. H. Rudkins was elected city attorney, receiving five votes to two for A. P. Fulkerson.

Councilmen Young, Chambers and Reed preferred charges against Street Commissioner McCaffery and asked for his removal from office, alleging neglect of duty; striking a councilman, giving poll-tax receipts for less than two days' work; refusal to work a prisoner on the streets when work was to be done; by giving patronage to personal friends from personal motives; by evading payment of poll-tax by misstating his age; and for creating dissension among members of the council.

There was considerable wrangling over these charges, and the council seems to be in danger of dividing into two factions, which would be detrimental to the interests of the city. The clerk was instructed to notify Mr. McCaffery that he would have an opportunity to answer the charges at the next regular meeting.

Under and by virtue of a writ of execution, decree and order of sale issued out of said court on the 15th day of December, A. D. 1890, I am commanded to sell that certain promissory note of Goodwin & Pugsley for $500, dated July 10th, 1888, payable to the order of E. P. Cadwell, and payable at the First National Bank of North Yakima, Washington, also all the rights, title and interest of the defendants, E. P. Cadwell and John C. Lloyd, in and to the following described real estate, situate in Yakima county, state of Washington, to-wit: Lots seven (7), eight (8), nine (9), ten (10) and eleven (11) in block thirty-two (32) in the city of North Yakima, to satisfy the judgment in said action, amounting to seven thousand, six hundred and fifty-six and 10/100ths dollars and costs of suit, amounting to four hundred and eighty-three and 10/100ths dollars and increased costs.

Notice is hereby given that on Tuesday, January 22d, at 10 o'clock in the afternoon of that day, at the front door of the court house in the city of North Yakima, Yakima county, state of Washington, I will, in obedience to said execution, decree and order of sale, sell the above described real estate, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to satisfy plaintiff's judgment, with interest, in cash in gold coin of the United States.

Dated this 15th day of December, A. D. 1890. D. E. LESH, Sheriff of Yakima county, Washington.

NOTICE.

Sheriff's Sale of Real Estate.

In the Superior Court of Yakima County, holding terms at North Yakima in and for Yakima County, Washington.

Leah R. Freeman, PLAINTIFF,

vs. Laughlin McLean and Laura G. McLean, his wife, Fred R. Reed and Carrie M. Reed, his wife, and George W. Jones, DEFENDANTS.

By virtue of an order of sale and decree of foreclosure, issued out of said court in the above entitled action on the 15th day of December, 1890, in favor of the above named plaintiff, and against the said defendants, for the principal sum of $1,000, interest, costs and expenses, and commanding me to levy upon and make sale thereof of the following described real estate, to-wit: Lots one (1) and two (2) in block number one (1) in the city of North Yakima, according to the plat thereof on file in the office of the county auditor of Yakima county.
