HOSPITAL
Port Townsend, W. T.
The above institution having been placed on a permanent footing, as the United States Hospital for Marine Patients on Puget Sound, the proprietor takes pleasure in announcing that no pains or expense will be spared in maintaining it the comfort and convenience of patient patronage.
This is the largest General Hospital north of San Francisco, and by far the most complete in equipment. It has been fitted up entirely regardless of cost. Its spacious wards have accommodations for about one hundred patients and are peculiarly adapted for cases requiring the most careful treatment and constant supervision at the hands of experts. Those who desire them will be furnished with private rooms, eminently airy and cheerful, at a slight additional cost.
☞ The attention of Mill owners, et al. is respectfully invited to shipping & is called to the fact that sufferers from contagious diseases will be treated outside the Hospital without expense to the vessel.

PUGET SOUND ARGUS.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF JEFFERSON CO

FRIDAY, AUGUST 5, 1881.

GOVERNOR Newell and family are expected here to day. They will go to Alaska on the steamer Los Angeles, for a brief visit. Miss Lizzie Ferry will accompany them.

THE fall term of the Territorial University at Seattle will begin in a few weeks. Intending patrons should bear this in mind. We have a review of this institution which will appear next week.

DIED—Bishop E. O. Haven, of the M. E. Church, died on the 2d inst., at Salem, Ogn., aged 60 years. He had been confined to his bed for some weeks with typhoid fever, and was thought to be recovering, when a sudden relapse carried him off.

OUR friend of the Olympia "Standard" is quite unnecessarily distressed about the stampede of discord he professes to see in the republican ranks of the Territory. The members of the party he hopes to see disrupted are of the sensible kind who can express independent views and yet tolerate one another.

PRESIDENT Gardield's case continues to progress favorably. The bullet has been located by means of electric apparatus, and found to be lodged in the wall of the abdomen, about five inches or so below and to the right of the navel. It is expected that with proper care the president can be removed in a week or two more.

ON Tuesday evening next, Prof. Tramner, the world renowned performer on that delicate instrument, the zither, will give a performance at Good Templars' Hall, assisted by Miss Sedia Galliher and Prof. Roberts, of this place. Prof. Tramner has gained fame in Europe and other parts of the world, as an artistic musician, and a rare treat is expected here next Tuesday. Let all lovers of music turn out. He will perform at Port Gamble to morrow.

THE Seattle papers, in commenting upon the recent small-pox case that came up on the Dakota, have spoken somewhat harshly of health officer Minor and Capt. Morse, commander of the steamer. It is a fact that Dr. Minor detained the vessel at the wharf here long enough to make a thorough inspection of her, diving around into every nook and cranny on board, before allowing passengers to land, and finishing by mustering all hands on deck. He was satisfied that there was no such sickness on board, and was so assured by Capt. Morse. The latter, we learn, still maintains that he knew absolutely nothing of the case until after the man was taken to New Castle. Certain it is that the health officer took every possible precaution, and he ought to be exonorated of all blame.

THE Olympia "Transcript" man wouldn't be happy in heaven if he couldn't grumble at somebody. He would pronounce St. Peter the boss of a "ring" to control the admission of candidates, if nothing else. Sensible enough on some other matters, he is keenly alive to anything that promises a chance to stab at ex Gov. Ferry, ex Collector Webster and others who have creditably filled official positions in this territory heretofore. In his blind zeal to growl at them, he favors political distribution that he could not be hired to advocate under any other circumstances. It is to be hoped, however, that his mumbling has the redeeming feature of gratifying himself. It certainly does not harm anyone else.

AT the last presidential election, 9,297,000 votes were cast in the United States. Of this number over twenty per cent, or one in every five, according to the last census, were cast by illiterate persons. Sixteen southern states contain one-third of the vote, and over one half of the illiterate population. People think that our illiterate population comes from foreign countries in immigration, but such is not the case. In the north and west, where the largest proportion of immigrants settle, there is the smallest proportion of illiterate voters. The Oregonian, in discussing the subject of compulsory education, maintains the sensible ground that the country has as much right to compel a man to school his children as it has to compel him to pay taxes to support schools.

BY the pilot commissioners' proceedings, inserted by us this week, it will be seen that a new pilot bill has been drawn and accepted by the board. There has always been trouble between the pilot commissioners and the mill owners on the Sound, by reason of what the latter have considered hardships and impositions on their vessels in the matter of pilotage. It is hoped that an amicable understanding has at last been arrived at, as the new bill among other changes of the old law, provides that captains of coasting vessels may take out branch licenses at a nominal sum each, and pilot their own vessels in and out of the straits. This bill was drawn by Messrs. J. G. Swan and G. M. Haller. It has been submitted to various persons' inspection, for the discovery of defects that might interfere with its workings, among whom are: Hon. Elwood Evans, Prosecuting Attorney, Hon. J. A. Kuhn, member elect of the legislature, who will be expected to introduce it, and Hon. S. Hovey, member elect of the council, for this district, who has also as a representative of the milling interest indicated its acceptability. We hope to give a synopsis of it next week.

GOOD TEMPLARY.—For the benefit of those who may be led to believe that Good Templars are doing little or nothing, we have compiled the following from the report of proceedings of the R. W. G. Lodge of that order, recently in session at Topeka, Kansas: A Grand Lodge is in existence in each of the states and territories of the Union, excepting Arizona, New Mexico, Utah, Wyoming and the Indian Territory. These grand lodges are 50 in number, with a membership of 233,723. In Florida and the territories named there are 22 flourishing subordinate lodges with a membership of 947, making a total membership in the United State of 234,370. New York leads all other grand lodges in point of membership, numbering 24,000 members and 500 lodges. Missouri follows close behind with 23,000 members and 423 lodges. Illinois reports the greatest net gain in membership, that of 3,000 during the past year. Besides this, other countries are reported as follows, Ireland 96 lodges and 4,050 members; Scotland, 43 lodges and 1,684 members; England, 172 lodges and 4,802 members; Isle of Man, 5 lodges and 200 members; South Wales, 3 lodges and 100 members; Sweeden, 1,150 members; Australasia, 19,586; South Africa, 1,720; Central South Africa, 1,000; Western South Africa, 1,022; Bermuda, 200; Dominion of Canada, 5 grand lodges and 21,888 members. In Jamaica, Barbadoes, Norway, Gibralter, Cyprus and many other parts flourishing lodges have been planted giving promise of rapid increase. The grand lodge of California, which reports a gain of nearly 2,000 members during the past year in the state, has established subordinate lodges in China, Japan and the Sandwich Islands. During the last fiscal year R. W. G. Templar, Col. J. J. Hickman, of N. Y., instituted seven new grand lodges and built up the order greatly. In his last annual report he recommends a beneficiary system in connection with the order, to induce more permanence and stability to membership. The order was first started in Utica, New York, thirty years ago, and was first known under the name of the "Knights of Jericho." Of one of the first three lodges first started, Hon. T. L. James, our present Postmaster General, L. E. Coon, now of California, and J. N. E. Bachus, now of Minnesota, were members. Becoming dissatisfied with the order, these three headed a movement to change the name of the order to that of "Good Templars," which was successful. The 17th day of July has been fixed upon as the anniversary of the starting of the order under its present name, and all lodges are recommended to observe this day with appropriate celebration wherever practicable. As a result of the start in 1851, the order now has a foothold in nearly every nation, land and country on the face of the globe; and, as a result largely of Good Templar effort, the following states and territories have passed temperance laws more or less stringent: Maine, Iowa, Kansas, Vermont, Arkansas, Alabama, Wisconsin, South Carolina, Nebraska, Missouri, Minnesota, Michigan and Washington, with growing public sentiment tending toward the ultimate carrying out of the Good Templar motto: "Total abstinence for the individual and prohibition for the nation." Of course other temperance organizations have THEIR creditable showings to make; this must be understood simply as a review of the work of but one branch of the great temperance family.

THE following is a synopsis of the eleventh report of the Peabody Education Fund in the United States, just made: Gross receipts, $113,823; cash balance from last year, $9,352; working capital, $126,264; number of Churches aided in erection, 178, located in 24 states and territories and under the care of 88 presbyteries. Average aid to each Church, $530. About 300 more Churches are waiting for aid at the present time, without buildings wherein to meet. The report is very encouraging and shows that real, earnest work has been accomplished by our Presbyterian friends during the past year.

THE new iron steamer Mississippi arrived at Victoria on the 16th en route from New York to Portland. She will be employed in the Seattle coal trade in connection with the Willamette. A third steamer under the name of the Umatilla has just arrived in New York from the ship yard in Pennsylvania, and will soon sail for the Pacific Coast.

THE "Churchman" publishes the call for the first Episcopal Convocation of the Washington Territory Diocese, to be held in Vancouver. It says that the first service will be held on Wednesday evening, August 24th.

PILOT COMMISSIONERS' MEETING.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Pilot Commissioners was held at their office on Monday the 1st inst.

Present—Charles C. Bartlett, chairman, Capt. J. H. Wolfe, Capt. B. S. Hoxie, James G. Swan, secretary.

Reports from Pilots E. H. McAlmond, James Delgardon, and W. H. Stevens were read, accepted and filed.

The committee consisting of Commissioners Bartlett, Hoxie and Swan, appointed at the last meeting of the board to prepare a bill for a new pilot law, reported that they had attended to that duty and submitted a bill which after being carefully examined and discussed by the board was upon motion of Commissioner Swift, unanimously adopted.

Pilot W. H. Stevens reported that he has chartered the sloop Frances and asked leave to enter her as pilot boat No. 3, and was so ordered.

The pilot boats are: Champion, No. 1, Capt. E. H. McAlmond, Jennie, No. 2, Capt. James Delgardon, and Frances, No. 3, Capt. W. H. Stevens.

Capt. Delgardon reported that the repairs on his schooner Jennie not being completed, he is attached to the Champion, with Pilot McAlmond for the present.

Board adjourned.

JAMES G. SWAN,
Secretary.

THE Portland "Standard" arrogates whole mountains of credit to the democratic newspapers of the country because they generally expressed sorrow over the recent attempted assassination of President Garfield. According to that paper, it was a pleasant and gratifying surprise to find that the assailed democratic newspaper press did not manifest ghoulish instinct enough to glory in the attempt to murder our president—something for which democrats ought to receive the lasting gratitude of their countrymen. We do not judge our democratic brethren so harshly as some of their own rank and file seem to.

CHANGES.—Capt. Dan. Morrison has resigned his position as captain of the Geo. E. Starr and accepted a position as pilot to British Columbia waters. Capt. Wilson, of the Otter, is in command of Starr, and Capt. Sprague has charge of the Otter. Capt. Tom. Quayle, formerly of the steamer Alida, mate of the Annie Stewart.

Cathartic Pills
Combine the choicest cathartic principles in medicine, in proportions accurately adjusted to secure certainty, safety and uniformity of effect. They are the result of years of careful study and practical experiment, and are the most effectual remedy yet discovered for diseases caused by derangements of the stomach, liver, and bowels, which require prompt and effectual treatment. AYER'S PILLS are specially applicable to this class of diseases. They act directly on the digestive and assimilative functions, and restore regular healthy action to them. Their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, is one of the best proofs of their value as a safe, sure, and perfectly reliable purgative medicine. Being compounded of the concentrated virtues of purely vegetable substances, they are positively free from calomel, or any form of mercury. Coated with sugar, they are pleasant to take, and are safe to administered to children with perfect safety.

AYER'S PILLS are an effectual cure for Constipation or Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach and Breath, Dizziness, Headache, Loss of Memory, Sinkings, Biliousness, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Dropsy, Tumors, Erysipelas, Neuralgia, Colic, Gripes, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Gout, Piles, Disorders of the Liver, and all other diseases resulting from a disordered state of the digestive apparatus.

As a Dinner Pill they have no equal.

While gentle in their action, these PILLS are the most thorough and searching cathartic that can be employed, and never give pain unless the bowels are inflamed, and then their influence is healing. They stimulate the appetite and digestive organs; they operate to purify and enrich the blood, and impart renewed health and vigor to the whole system.

Sheriff's Sale.

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of a decree and order of sale, duly issued out of the District Court of the 3d Judicial District of the Territory of Washington holding terms at Port Townsend, and to me directed, I will sell at public auction at the door of the Court House at Coupeville, in Island county, Washington Territory, on the 6th DAY OF AUGUST, A. D. 1881, at the hour of 2 o'clock in the afternoon, the south east quarter of the north west quarter of section 22 and the south half of the south west quarter and the south west quarter of the south west quarter of section 23 in township 33 north of range 1 east Willamette meridian, situated in the county of Island aforesaid. Said property is sold to satisfy a judgment ealing for the sum of seventeen hundred and thirty-five 50-100 dollars with interest from and after the 20th day of September A. D. 1880, at the rate of 1½ per cent per month and an attorney's fee of seventy-five dollars, together with costs amounting to nineteen 5-100 dollars, and accrued interest and increased costs, which judgment was rendered in the suit of Henry C. Williams vs Rhoda E. Garrett, administratrix of the estate of Augustus S. Garrett, deceased, et al.

Mrs. James Smith, of Port Discovery, has been visiting friends in this place.

The pilot schooner Champion came into port a few days ago, and left again on Monday.

Messrs. Stratton and Norman B. Smith, of Port Angeles, were in town this week.

Miss Lottie Harmon, of Seattle, was a passenger to San Francisco on the Dakota this week.

Capt. W. H. Stevens, of the pilot force, brought the back Glimpse to Royal Roads a few days ago.

A fine black walnut, marble top bed room set eastern manufacture, for sale at Bartlett's furniture store.

See if you haven't lost a valise full of clothing. Mr. D. M. Littlefield advertises one in the Argus to-day.

The captain of the Annie Stewart is a son of Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, the eminent Brooklyn divine.

President Garfield doesn't patronize Mr. Clinger's cheap store; but it is doubtless because he lives so far away.

Mr. George Jones, a young lawyer from Indiana, is to succeed Mr. E. H. Brown as clerk in the Custom House.

The first installment of the McPherson colony is announced to start down to Whatcom county in about thirty days.

If you want good cigars, nice fruit, or fresh candies, go to James Jones, head of Union wharf, opposite Central Hotel. *

The county commissioners met here last Monday, since which time they have had their hands full of Jefferson county business.

Judge Swan advertises himself this week as an attorney at law, proctor in admiralty, &c. The Judge will pay particular attention to maritime cases.

Some little curiosity is manifest this week in Port Townsend over the identity of the busybody who wrote of Custom House affairs to the Olympia "Standard."

During the absence of the pastor at conference, Rev. A. Loubach, of Port Discovery, will fill the pulpit of the M. E. Church here regularly, morning and evening.

Quite a number of our citizens have recently been investing in pianos and organs. Prof. Roberts has a very fine new upright piano which we understand he offers for sale at exceedingly reasonable figures.

Rev. A. Atwood, M. E. presiding elder, came down on Wednesday and held the fourth quarterly conference for the conference year, on the Port Townsend charge, at the church on Wednesday evening.

Hon. H. A. Webster and family will soon start for Paso Robles Springs, Cal., in hopes that the medicinal qualities of the water there will have a beneficial effect on his health which has been poor for some time.

The Dispatch arrived from Neah Bay and way ports on Wednesday. Among her passengers were: Mrs. F. Tucker, of the Dungeness light house, Judge Swan, ex-Inspector at Neah Bay, and Mr. D. S. Layman, his successor.

The letter of inquiry in our last issue, concerning fire-proof, potter's clay, has induced investigation, Judge Swan has sent a specimen of clay found in abundance on his land at Smallwater Bay, which he thinks is just the thing wanted.

During the last week those who have had hay and grain crops out in the weather after being cut have been wishing for a great deal less rain, while those who had empty cisterns to fill, or late growing crops on dry land have rejoiced in the favors of heaven.

The "Mirror of Ireland" show gave one of their excellent performances here last Friday night. Their panorama views were splendid. The acting was all of the light mirth-provoking kind. It was quite passable; but the singing was hardly first-class. On the whole, the entertainment was voted a success. The hall was crowded.

It has been suggested, and with strong grounds of probability, that any enterprising individual who would start a first-class boarding house at this place on the hill could make it a paying venture. Besides accommodating professional men or officers with their wives, it would bring many here from abroad to spend the summer months among us.

Mesier, the murderer, now confined in our jail, came near effecting another escape on Tuesday evening. He had succeeded in filing or sawing the sliding bolt in two that fastens his cell door and was out of the cell when jailer Stone discovered and recaptured him. As the September term of court draws near the pleasure of a residence in British Columbia increases in attractiveness for him.

The schooner Jennie is again afloat, "clothed in her right mind," so to speak. Capt. Dalgardno, who is in town, will doubtless get her back to duty again soon.

Mistake.—Last Sunday the steam collier Willamette passed up the Sound without stopping at this place for inspection by the health officer. We are informed that her captain, though misrepresentations of busybodies in this place, passed by as nearly because he was afraid that it was not safe to dock his vessel at Union wharf. A man in his position ought to know that larger vessels than the Willamette have been safely docked here, including the Alaska, the Constitution, the China and others. In fact the largest steam-ships in the world, except the Great Eastern, have made fast to Union wharf with perfect security. Experienced navigators say that the Willamette need not pass us on account of wharf accommodations. Seattle papers have made great ado about the intention of the company owning the Willamette to carry freight for All Sound ports to Seattle, and have it reshipped from there. If they expect any Port Townsend patronage they had better limit freight here as other steamers do. At least my fears as to the capacity of the wharf are founded on a mistaken assumption.

Teachers.—At a recent meeting of the school directors in Port Townsend precinct, teachers for the public school were elected for the ensuing year, as follows: Prof. R. C. Kerr, Principal; Miss Eva Bigelow, teacher of intermediate department; Miss Dollie Roberts, teacher of the primary department. As they are all instructors whose fitness and general qualifications have been amply demonstrated by practical experience in our midst, no fears need be entertained as to the efficiency of our public school service during the coming year. During the last year Prof. Kerr and Miss Bigelow especially distinguished themselves, and Miss Roberts has frequently taught here and heretofore with perfect satisfaction.

Interest in the Gunnes Island copper mines is reviving again. The owners, principal among whom are, Mr. H. P. O'Bryant, of Gunnes, and Mr. James Jones, of this place, have had an offer from California capitalists to boost the mine three months with a privileged purchase price of $30,000. It is to be hoped that the venture may yet prove successful. A great deal of labor has been expended in tunneling to find a supposed "chimney" or rich deposit of ore. The owners have faith that it exists somewhere on the island, because they have found so many small "leads," and because loose ore is so plentiful.

Mr. E. H. Brown, for a long time employed as a clerk and inspector in the Custom House at this place, is to take his place soon, we learn, as Deputy Collector under Major Morris, at Alaska. Mr. Brown has been an efficient officer from the first, and can hardly fail to give continued satisfaction in his new role. With clerical ability of a high order, and several years' experience in the routine duties of the customs department, he will be a valuable aid to the Alaskan collector.

Last Sunday was Rev. W. I. Cooper's farewell occasion here, unless the conference which meets soon in East Portland should return him another year. The attendance was liberal, both morning and evening, and the sermons were quite interesting. During the pastor's two years stay here he has done a good work, both financially and spiritually, and leaves the charge materially improved. The members and the public generally would be pleased to have him returned another year.

Died.—Near Coupeville, Island county, July 29, 1881, Howard Cook, aged 21 yrs. 8 months and 24 sdys. Deceased was a highly respected young man, a nephew of Mrs. A. Briggs, of this place. He was buried on Sunday last, a large number of sorrowful friends following the remains to their last resting place.

We learn that Mr. Chas. P. Dyer, recently of the Smith's Island light house, intends opening a saloon at Irondale. This will be the third one there, and will indicate at, abnormal development in that direction.

The P. C. S. S. Co. have cut down wages and reduced working force on their Alaska steamboat route till the business in that direction is a paying one instead of a loss every month as latterly under the former contractors. It is hoped that they may get the mail service increased to twice a month and then make Port Townsend the southern terminus of the route, instead of Portland as heretofore. They expect to do this, we are told on good authority.

COMMUNICATED.

SALOONS.

Port Townsend, Aug. 3, 1881.

Dear Mr. Editor.—Would you be good enough to inform me what hour P. M. or A. M. the saloons in this place close? And if there is no law for lawabiding saloon keepers to abide by and lawless ones to break? It is said that the saloons at a certain place are a "disgrace to humanity" to the gambling that goes on and the hours that they keep. Is this Port Townsend? If saloon keepers allow such things, they are their own worst enemies and must suffer ultimate loss, for such conduct must sound up after being down upon them the utter contempt of all moral men and the determined opposition of every true heart. "Men love darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil."—John. I, 19, will be true to the end. "A stitch in time," &c.

[Our friend seems to be stirring up some things that many would prefer kept quiet. However, for his information we say that there is no Artificial law, we believe, requiring saloons to close at any fixed hour. At the last session of the Legislature, Gov. Ferry, then chief executive, expressed a desire to have such a law passed, but nothing decisive was done. The city government has authority to close saloons at fixed hours, by ordinance, but has never done so. There is a law against gambling; a stringent one at that. It was passed in 1879; but has never been tested, mainly because it is a little in advance of public sentiment and does not receive hearty moral sanction. One fashion, evidently overlooked by our fault-finding correspondent, and which, we are sorry to say, is allowed in at least one Port Townsend saloon, is that of permitting quite young boys to enter and participate in games of chance &c., thus initiating them early into the mysteries of vice. We are glad that most of our saloon keepers are commendably careful in this respect. Boys learn quite soon enough to dissipate their health and the teachings of bad parents, and to help them to form vicious habits before their judgment is developed into any sort of a guide is very wrong. Most cities enact ordinances to prevent them from running at large after certain hours at night, and Port Townsend could profitably imitate such example.—Ed.]

Referring to the recent Presbyterian Sunday School excursion to Irondale, the pastor, teachers and scholars desire to tender their thanks to the agent and Captain Spargo, of the Annie Stewart, for their liberality in allowing a free passage. One bit each was levied on those who went, for what the pastor calls "blackmail," for the Sunday School and to pay a moity of the amusement fund. The amount raised was $10.45; balance in favor of school, about $6. It has been mooted that we should have a general picnic and excursion entertainment for all the Sunday Schools of the town. If there is a desire for such a demonstration let superintendents communicate the fact speedily. Now is the weather for it, and dull winter comes apace.

THE GRUMBLER.

He grumbles in the morning
On rising from the bed,
He grumbles at his breakfast
While spreading butter on his bread,
He grumbles at his supper,
He grumbles at his knife,
He grumbles at the tablecloth,
He grumbles at his wife,
He grumbles at the cobler
When he buys a pair of shoes,
He grumbles at the paper
When he's reading the news,
He grumbles at the clock
When it strikes out the hour,
And he grumbles at the "ologys"
When there comes a little shower,
He grumbles at the children
When they're playing in the street,
He grumbles at the butcher
At the way he cuts the meat,
He grumbles at his little dog
If it don't wag its tail,
And when the wind gently blows,
He grumbles at the "gale,"
He grumbles when a bill comes in,
No matter how very small,
He grumbles at the servants,
He grumbles at us all,
He grumbles at the darkness
When he has to light the gas
And he grumbles at the matches,
The unhappy grumbling ass.
He grumbles at the prayer,
He grumbles at his seeks,
He grumbles at the Summer
When the sun is rather warm,
And he grumbles at the "Winter"
Every time we have a storm.
He grumbles at a question,
He grumbles at a smile,
At church he grumbles at the people
Who are standing in the aisle,
He grumbles at his daughter
When she wants a little money,
And he grumbles when she laughs
At anything very funny,
He grumbles at the rich man,
He grumbles at the poor,
He grumbles at the beggars
When they knock at his door.
He grumbles at the next day
When the landlord's to be paid,
He grumbles in the sunshine,
He grumbles in the shade,
He grumbles at his neighbor
When he's getting in his coal,
He grumbles at the cartman
Who dumps it down the hole.
He grumbles at a wagon
If it stands before the door,
And he grumbles at a crumb of bread
If it falls upon the floor.
He grumbles in his little room,
He grumbles on the stairs,
He grumbles all the way to church,
He grumbles after prayers,
He grumbles in his sleep
While he's lying in his bed,
And I often hear to myself
He'll grumble when he's dead.

ANDRE'S QUEST.

BY MARY E. MOFFAT.

Andre Perrinot was the only son of a widowed mother, and the object of her fondest and most solicitous care, notwithstanding there was a peculiarity about the boy which caused the neighbors to say, pityingly:

"How sad that the lad is deficient in sense when he is so sturdy and handsome that he might make his way in the world on the strength of his good looks alone, had he been better balanced. But now——" and usually a deprecating shake of the head supplemented the unfinished sentence.

He was cast in a large yet graceful mold, and had a finely shaped head, covered with masses of dark curls. His straight nose, with its thin, dilated nostrils, and his curving red lips, his large, stag like eyes, the rich coloring of his complexion, formed a "taut ensemble" which invariably attracted a stranger's admiring notice. But upon addressing this "rara avis" of nature's handiwork, as surely would a feeling of disappointment follow. Vague, unsatisfactory answers would fall from the crude lips and vacant, unintelligent glances from the great, dark eyes. He was like an exquisite statute endowed with life, but without a spark of Promethean fire which was to enkindle the soul. A veil seemed drawn over his mental faculties. But whatever else was undeveloped in the boy's nature, one thing existed in full force—a passionate love of the beautiful.

His large eyes would kindle into animation at the sight of a delicately-tinted flower, or of a landscape; and he would watch with keen delight those sunsets where masses of crimson and gold canopy the glowing west.

Then it was that his mother's heart would leap with a new emotion was evoked within the heart hitherto so quiet. One day the daughter of a rich, landed proprietor came athwart his vision. She had just returned from her "pensionaire" for a short vacation. As mounted on her white Arabian, and attended by an aged servant, she flew past Andre, he caught his breath in astonished ecstacy.

He was in the midst of a group of young men. Turning to the one nearest at hand, he asked stammering:

"Tell me, Henri Leclere, is it an angel from skies, who flitted past? Ah, was she not beautiful!"

The youth addressed was of a humorous turn, and seeing a chance of sport, answered Andre in a way which was to transform his whole life. So it often chances that the scales of destiny are made to incline in a direction hitherto unthought of.

"The young miss is no angel, Andre; she is flesh and blood like you and me. Knowest thou not Pierre Lemoine, who lives in the great house on the hill? it is his daughter. A thought strikes me! She is just the wife for you, Andre, and it is time that you should marry."

Addressed to a different person, these words would have been taken as they were meant, and laughed at. The very idea of one of Andre's class looking up so high as to an alliance with the heiress of the most important man in the village would have been so preposterous as not to occasion even a second thought. But falling upon the ears of one of Andre's peculiar temperament, they had a far-reaching effect. He went gloomily home pondering upon the meaning of Henri's laughing remark.

"Mother," he asked, "what is it to have a wife?"

Now, Andre's mother had much the same nature as her son, with the exception that there was no cloud over her mental faculties. She regarded with pitying tenderness at her only son, who had come to her a few mouths after her young husband had been brought home to her killed by a kick from a vicious young colt he had been training. It was owing to the shock she had then received that her poor Andre was so different from other boys.

It was with a startled feeling that she heard him now ask this question. What had such as he to do with love or marriage?

She put her arms about him with motherly affection and gazed into his velvety dark eyes. There was a troubled wistfulness in them. The angel had descended into the depths of the pool to stir the troubled waters so that health might come with the healing presence.

"My boy," she said, "a wife is to her husband a fountain of rest and peace. She soothes his cares and lightens his burdens. She loves him above all others. She is his good angel."

"Yes, mother, that is true. The young girl I saw made me think of an angel, and Henri said she was the wife for me. He is a good lad to put me in the right about it."

"What do you mean, Andre? what in the world has the son of Leclere been saying to you?"

The dark eyes of Andre brightened, and a glad light came over his face.

"Those the forest that lie on the hill all made of gray like the granite rocks on the way to the great dark mountain yonder," pointing as he spoke to a distant purple peak, whose summit seemed lost amid misty clouds, "and where the posies in the garden are so bright as the many-colored quilt on the bed-lounge? Those she knew." Henri said she was to be my wife; and she has cheeks like this," plucking a maiden-blush rose from its stem and holding it toward his mother, "and eyes like what you shut morning-glory was this morning."

"You are talking nonsense, Andre; and Henri did wrong to put such ideas into your head. Think no more about it, and we will go into the the fields together to pick flowers as soon as I get the cows milked, and the butter made, to-morrow morning."

It was Andre's chief pleasure to take those quiet walks with his mother, to whom his society was ever a joy, for strange as he was, he had quaint thoughts, oftentimes as quaintly expressed, and the boy was her earthly all. So she said this, hoping to take his mind from the idea which for the first time had now entered it.

Andre was ever docile, so he said no more, although unusual seriousness brooded over his face for the rest of the day, and indeed for many days. Then her took action upon the matter so near to his heart. He went to the house where Geraldine Lemoine lived, and asked to see the master.

Every one in the village knew him by sight, and felt an interest in the "innocent," as he was called. So the servant showed him into the room where Monsieur Pierre Lemoine was making out his accounts.

He was seated before a table covered with papers, and beside him stood Geraldine, looking over his shoulder with an expression of interest upon her pretty face. A canary bird was perched upon her shoulder, and it would occasionally peck at the lump of sugar held toward it by its mistress, but its chief pleasure seemed to consist in catching some of the shiny threads of Geraldine's golden hair, and pulling them between its tiny bill with a petulant motion, which was amusing in such a dot of a creature as this.

Andre pulled the early forelock which hung down over his forehead.

"I am come to tell you that I love your girl," pointing to Geraldine, "and that the sight of her is better than the sunshine or the flowers. I want her for my wife."

Had Andre been in full possession of his wits, his words would have occasioned anger, and he would surely have been put from the room. But innocents are privileged in all countries. They are considered as especially under the Heavenly Father's protection. So Pierre Lemoine conquered the look of astonishment which had come into his sharp eyes.

"My lad," he said seriously, "he who weds my Geraldine must bring her a dower in coins of gold which would cover this whole table."

Andre looked sorrowfully at Geraldine, who was gazing curiously at him as her cheeks red with blushes called forth by his words.

"Is it true that he who marries you must have you, even as a store keeper buys his fine goods?" he asked.

The father interrupted him hastily. A shade of anger was in his voice, though he tried to speak unconcernedly:

"It is not meet to have this talk before you, my girl. Go to your room until my outspoken visitor has gone."

Geraldine obeyed. Then her father said to Andre:

"That is about the truth of it, though we don't usually express it in that way. If you would bring me a bag of gold to-morrow, 'innocent' though you are of more than a modicum of brains, I would give you my girl. Now go."

Andre left the house in a daze. Upon the window quickly; give me air!"

Terrified beyond measure, the other jumped out of bed. But the room was pitch dark; he had no matches, and he had forgotten the position of the window.

"For heaven's sake, be quick!" gasped the man. "Give me more air, or I shall choke!"

At length, by dint of groping wildly and upsetting half the furniture in the apartment, the window was found; but it was an old-fashioned casement and no hasp or catch was to be discovered.

"Quick, quick; air, air!" implored the agonized man at last; but when Andre did his love story was told in Eden.

He met a neighbor of his mother's—a merry soul who was ever full of quips and jests.

Andre stopped him.

"Tell me Jean," he asked earnestly, "where could I find a bag of gold? I must c'n buy my wife when I get her for my own."

Jean opened his eyes wide in astonishment at first; but when Andre told his visit to the rich man of the village, he took his pipe from his mouth, and laughed long and loud.

Andre stood patiently until his merriment had subsided, then he repeated his question, and Jean answered just ingly:

"Go to the mountains and ask the gnomes that make their homes there. They will tell you. As for me, it is beyond my knowledge, else why should I be a poor workman instead of keeping my coach-and-four?"

Then he went whistling on toward a group of acquaintances with whom he was wont to pass his idle hours.

Not another thought of Andre entered his mind for hours. Then a rumor came that the boy had disappeared. It was an unusual thing for him to stay away from his home for any length of time, so that when the darkness of midnight had settled down over the earth and Andre was still away, his poor mother was almost frantic. Morning came without bringing him, and the new day dragged slowly on without his coming. Then the villagers turned out in a body to search for him. Not far distant was a forest, which had been kept intact for a royal hunting-ground. Jean had heard of Andre's continued absence, and as he thought of what the boy had said to him, and of the reply he had made, he at once came to the conclusion that he must have taken him in earnest and so had set out for the mountains that raised their purple peaks toward the sky at a distance so far away as to make them dim and indistinct. The road to them lay through that forest, and was a long and dreary one even to those accustomed to traverse its gloomy solitudes.

God help the poor boy if he had become entangled in the thickets!

The party in search of him had pressed on at first cheerfully, then more doubtfully, as one day merged into another and still there came no trace of him they sought. One looked at another, hesitating to propose to return without finding Andre, and still each feeling in his heart that the quest was a fruitless one. At last one spoke out:

"We will go but another league. Then, if we come not across him we will turn back."

"You are right, we will do as you say. If the lad is not found by that time he must have met with harm and search will be useless."

With this undertaking they pressed on until their way was stopped by a dark ravine through whose gloomy depths flowed a rapid stream.

Its sides were precipitous, and were so thickly clothed with verdure that one could scarcely see down to its bottom. One man, more venturesome than the rest, caught hold of a slender young sapling and swung himself forward so as to peer over the dizzy verge. A cry of dismay arose from his mates, and expostulating voices were raised against his rash action.

But he gazed and gazed as though fascinated before he swung himself back again.

"Mates," he said, with a white face and an awed voice, "he is down there! caught on some shrubs that are growing on a kind of rocky shelf that projects out from the water. He is so white and still that I think he is already past help; but if it is only a swoon the least motion would dislodge him, so what can we do?"

Various plans were suggested and discarded as unfeasible. At last a youth who was almost as lithe and flexible of limb as the sapling proposed to try the swing himself down by the shrubs and see if life was still in Andre. If so, he would take measures to keep him from falling into the ravine in addition until the others could find a safer way to descend.

After a short interval the cheering cry came up to the anxious listener.

"He is alive! make haste!"

Jean was among the first to reach the spot. His dark face worked with emotion at sight of Andre, who lay white as snow-drift from exhaustion, with a ghastly cut upon his head which had colored his tangled curls with its telltale stain. He was huddled and crushed from his face to the bush which his hands had evidently clasped in a convulsive grip as he had felt himself falling out of shock. And he uttered an exclamation of surprise.

"Surely the boy has found what he was in quest of," he said, pointing to a bag of gold which had come out about the roots of the up-torn bush.

It was even so. Andre's quest had been rewarded even at the moment when life seemed slipping forever away from his tired frame. It was one of those occurrences which are ever proving that truth is stranger than fiction. For, although the boy did not own an inch of the valuable soil which hid from view the stray vein of virgin gold, his discovery of it attracted the notice of the king, who was much interested in his romantic story, and made him a valuable present in golden coins, so that he was able to claim the fair maiden's pretties.

But, best of all, either the shock of his fall or the blow upon his head scattered the mists which had clouded his bewildered brain, and made him a problem's poer in understanding as well as cometimes.

People came from far and near to witness their wedding, and "Andre's Search for the Ghomes" is one of the folk-tales handed down from father to son in the neighborhood where it took place.

A Cure by Imagination.

At a large hotel the not uncommon dilemma arose one of there being only one room in the house vacant when two visitors required accommodation for the night. It was a double bedded chamber, or so the servants said, and the fact of the two guests—who were both commercial travelers—agreed to share it. One of these gentlemen was a confirmed hypochondriac, and greatly annoyed his companion by waking him up in the middle of the night, gasping for breath.

"Asthma," he panted out; "I am subject to those agonizing attacks. Open the window quickly; give me air!"

Terrified beyond measure, the other jumped out of bed. But the room was pitch dark; he had no matches, and he had forgotten the position of the window.

"For heaven's sake, be quick!" gasped the man. "Give me more air, or I shall choke!"

At length, by dint of groping wildly and upsetting half the furniture in the apartment, the window was found; but it was an old-fashioned casement and no hasp or catch was to be discovered.

"Quick, quick; air, air!" implored the agonized man at last; but when Andre did it, or I shall be suffocated!"

Thus adjured, his friend lost no more time, but seizing a boot, smashed every pane, and suffered immediately experienced great relief. "Oh, thank you; a thousand thanks. "Ha!" he exclaimed, "there is a fine cool breeze, and I feel much better already. I think in another moment I should have been dead!" And when he had sufficiently recovered his self-possession he expressed his heartfelt gratitude, he described the intense distress of those attacks and the length of time he had suffered from them. After a while he fell asleep quite decently thankful for the result. It was a warm summer night and they felt no inconveniences from the broken window; but when daylight dispelled the ghastly darkness of the night the window was found to be still entire! But invisible glaziers been at work busily, or was the episode of the past night only a dream? No; for the floor was still strewn with the broken glass. Then, as they looked round the room in astonishment at the solution of the mystery presented itself in the shape of an antiquated book-case, whose latticed glass doors were a shattered wreck. The imagination of the attacked one was cured from that moment. So much for imagination.—[Chambers' Journal.

BERLIN'S SEWERAGE.—Berlin has the sewerage system in succession of past Dantzic, under which the city is divided into sewer districts leading to points beyond the limits of the city where, the sewer contents are pumped out, mixed with water and spread over a sandy soil which absorbs all the deleterious matters, water reasonably pure being drained off. As a necessary part of the system, each house is directly connected with the sewers and a plentiful supply of water is used to flush the sewers and house drains. At Dantzic a field of 400 acres of sandy soil is large enough to purify the sewage of a town of 100,000 inhabitants. Since the adoption of this system, which, it will be observed, does away with the population of river and streams, the death rate of Dantzic has dropped from 36 per 1000 to 28; the annual cost of pumping the sewage, the only point at which the system is more costly than ordinary sewers, is $7000, and is met by the crop from the irrigated lands.

FOURTH ANNUAL VICTORY

For D. M. Osborne & Co. Harvesting Machinery at the Oregon State Fair for 1881.

SALEM, Or., July 11, 1881.

This certifies that D. M. Osborne & Co. was awarded first premiums on their Twine-Binding Harvester, No. 2; on Combined Reaper and Mower, No. Three Independent Reaper, No. Two Front Cut Mower, and No. Five Rear Cut Mower, at the Fair of 1881.

E. M. WAITE, Sec'y.

The above speaks for itself. The competition was between the "Osborne" and "Woods" Twine Binders. T. and McCormick's and Marsh Brother acknowledged defeat, and did not enter for premiums; but found time to exhibit at the Fair Grounds, but attracted no attention whatever. The Osborne was put to a very severe test, elevating and binding green wheat, successfully repeating the operation until the committee expressed perfect satisfaction. The defeat of the Woods binder was rough and hard to bear, but the following from No. 3 H. A. Isaacs, of Harrisburg, Linn county, Oregon, is a much grander victory for the "Osborne:"

HARRISBURG, Or., July 16, 1881.

MESSRS. D. M. Osborne & Co., Portland, Or.: Gentlemen—After two days' hard labor and extensive examination with a "Wood Twine Binder" (having the assistance of an expert), I have failed to make it go. The machine is not to be depended on. I am happy to say that from its entrance into the grain up to this writing it has not failed for one moment to do perfect work, cutting, binding and elevating. And before the reaches you my order will be filled with one of your twine binders, and I promise you that not any machine on which we farmers can fully depend. My men will all cheerfully sign with me as true friends to the Osborne.

Yours truly, H. A. ISAACS.

SPINNEY will guarantee a perfect cure for every case of Seminal Weakness or private diseases of any kind or character which he undertakes and fails to cure.

MIDDLE-AGED MEN.

There are many at the age of thirty to sixty who are troubled with too frequent evacuations of the bladder, often times accompanied by a slight smarting or burning sensation and a weakness of the parts, in a manner the patient cannot account for. On account of having the urinary deposits a copy sediment will often be found, and sometimes small particles of gravel will appear, or the color will be of a thin, milky hue, again changing to a dark and highly sedimentary. There are many men who die of this trouble, ignorant of the cause of their malady. If not contracted in early life, it often originates from the use of patent nostrums of the day, composed of cheap whiskey, cubebs and copaiba, the ingredients of all KIDNEY AND BLADDER COMplaints. To those suffering from the effects of youthful indiscretion, I would say, DON'T DESPAIR. A perfect and permanent CURE is GUARANTEED in every case that I undertake. Medicines sent to any part of the country. Those living at a distance can have medicines sent by express, C. O. D., to be examined before paying for the same. PERUVIAN BITTERS.

(CINCHONA RUBRA.)

THE COUNT CINCHON WAS THE SPANISH Viceroy in Peru, in 1630. The Countess, his wife, was prostrated by an intermittent fever, from which she was freed by the use of the native remedy, the PERUVIAN BARK, or, as it was called in the language of the country, "Quinquina." Grateful for her recovery, on her return to Europe in 1752, she introduced the remedy in Spain, where it was known under various names, until Linnæus called it CINCHONA, in honor of the lady who had brought them that which was more precious than the gold of the Incas. To this day, after a lapse of two hundred and fifty years, science has given us nothing to take its place. It effectually cures a morbid appetite for stimulants by restoring the natural tone of the stomach. It attacks excessive love of liquor as it does a fever, and destroys both alike. The powerful tonic virtue of the Cinchona is preserved in the

PERUVIAN BITTERS

which are as effective against malarial fever to-day as they were in the days of the old Spanish Viceroys
