Puget Sound Dispatch.

Why Tacoma was Chosen.

The Northern Pacific Railroad Land Ring, finding their action condemned by every American newspaper upon this coast not under subsidy, resort to a British paper in Victoria for explanation and defence. In a communication to the British Colonist, the location of the terminus at Tacoma is sought to be justified on the following grounds:
1st. That the Railroad Company had determined upon the route by the Columbia river valley, because the increase of distance is more than compensated by decrease of grade.
2d. That the interests and the necessities of the Company demanded connection with the Sound at the nearest practicable point.
3d. Because it has all the advantages of a large and well protected bay, abundant anchorage ground, a beautiful view, springs and lakes and rivers of cold water, extensive forests and a productive soil.
4th. The R. R. Co., we are informed, owns about 14,000 acres of land along and near the bay, including the present mill and site.
Now it is perfectly demonstrable that there is not a single truth set forth in these pretended reasons.
1st. The Company has no more expectation of constructing a railroad between Vancouver and the head of navigation on the Columbia river within the time specified by their charter, than they have of building to the moon.— Three instrumental surveys by competent engineers have demonstrated the impracticability of the route. Two hundred miles of railroad upon the Columbia river could not be built for less than $20,000,000, and with all the money in hand it could not be completed in less time than the Hoosic Tunnel, which has been fifteen or twenty years in the course of construction. The Company has a monopoly of steam transportation on the river and have no idea of constructing a competing line at an expense of $20,000,000.
2d. If the object had been to connect with the navigable waters of the Sound at the nearest practicable point, the building of about thirty miles of road would have been saved by connecting at Olympia, and no advantage of navigation lost thereby. Or, by continuing to Seattle, the subsidy offered would more than cover the additional expense of construction, and given to the railroad much better harbor facilities and a large established trade.
3d. It has not the advantages of a well protected harbor, or abundant anchorage ground, as every Director of the N. P.
Railroad knows from their own official reports. Surveys show that the bay is 100 fathoms deep up to within a ship's length of the shore, and in front of the present town plat is a lee shore, exposed for nearly fifty miles to a heavy norther. As a harbor, there is no occupied place upon Puget Sound which has a worse, and if Thomas H. Canfield will tell the truth he will endorse this statement.
4th. The Railroad Co. does not own a foot of land, mill or site along and near the bay where the terminus is located. The new town plat is owned exclusively by the Land Ring, and will serve only to the benefit of that delectable gang of cormorants.

MADAME ANNA BISHOP.—This talented lady, assisted by Messrs. Gilder, Wilkie and Gottschalk, gave a Grand Concert at the Pavilion last evening to a large and appreciative audience. Mr.
Gilder as a pianist never had a superior on the Sound. His "America; with variations" was loudly encored as were also several of his other pieces. Mr.
Wilkie has a very good tenor voice and rendered finely several extracts from operas and ballads. The duet "Sunset" by Madame Anna Bishop and Mr.
Wilkie was beautifully sung and loudly encored. Mr. Gottschalk has a very powerful baritone voice and was also encored several times. Madame Bishop sang exquisitely "Ah come rapida," "Home sweet home," and "Coming thru' the rye." The duet by Madame Bishop and Mr. Gottschalk "Quanto Amore" was encored twice. The concert closed with the laughing trio, Madame Bishop, Messrs. Wilkie and Gottschalk, Mr. Gilder presiding at the piano, which brought down the house.
Another Concert will be given to-night with an entire change of programme.
Every man, woman and child should be present for this is the last chance of ever hearing Madame Anna Bishop.

Prof. Cheney will lecture at Ly-

BERIAH BROWN, EDITOR. Seattle, W. T., August 28 1873.

Olympia Railroad.

While at Olympia the latter part of last week, we improved the opportunity by becoming fully informed in regard to the project and prospects of a railroad from Olympia to the coal mines, connecting with the N. P. Railroad at Tenino, 15 miles south of Olympia. Our information is derived from several interviews with Col. Bee and Gov. Salmon, Trustees and representatives of the Company organized for the prosecution of that enterprise, and also by attending a meeting for consultation between those gentlemen and a committee representing the principal property-holders of Thurston county.

As our readers are already aware, this Company is composed of San Francisco capitalists of unquestionable responsibility. This Company has purchased for $20,000, 1,000 acres of coal lands near Tenino, and proposes to work the mines and transport the coal to market. The proposition of the Company to the citizens of Thurston county is, that if responsible parties will guarantee the issuance to them of $200,000 currency bonds of the county, as soon as necessary legislation can be had, they will proceed at once to the construction of a narrow gauge road, to be completed from Tenino to Olympia, with wharves extending to deep water, and then put on two first class ocean steam propellers to make semi-monthly trips between San Francisco and Puget Sound ports. The citizens seem fully alive to the importance of this project, and we have no doubt the proposition will be accepted, giving to Olympia the shortest railroad connection with the Columbia river on one hand, and regular communication by ocean steamer with San Francisco on the other. It is such an opportunity as Olympians are too shrewd to forego.

California Correspondence.

EDITOR DISPATCH.—In a late number of your sprightly journal I noticed the mention of a prospecting expedition then soon to be started and prosecuted the present season in the Olympic mountains, for mineral of any sort which might be therein contained, and I allude to the matter for the purpose, mainly, of saying that I have great faith in the success of the enterprise, providing it be faithfully and skillfully prosecuted. That rich deposits of gold were contained in said mountains, was an opinion of mine when on the Sound a few years ago, and I entertain the same opinion still. Had I been where I could have conveniently done so, nothing would have pleased me more than to have joined the expedition aforesaid. Having a mineral eye—acquired by many year's experience in mining in California—I would like an opportunity to apply my mineral vision and veritable old nose to some of the "gulches" issuing out at the base of the Olympics. That there is gold in them, or some of them, I will wager a mug of Crichton's best, if you dare. Once upon a time while sojourning in the Sound country, I took passage on the little steamer "James Mortie," with some half dozen ladies and gentlemen, for a logging camp on a spur of the Olympic range, some forty miles or so up Hood's Canal, where the indefatigable and terrible Ben Turner was operating, by running logs down the side of the mountain through a chute half a mile or more in length, into the briny waters of the placid canal. Ben, with his charming young wife in camp, a good team and able hands at his command, stood upon the apex of his logging renown. Upon the occasion of this visit to the said logging camp, noticed gravel along the borders of the canal where we landed, which bore a perfect resemblance to much of the auriferous alluvium in California, and to use a common expression of miners here from the Western and Southwestern States of the Union, "looked like it ought to pay." But I had neither tools or time for prospecting, and so my fortune lies concealed in the gravel of Hood's Canal at the place mentioned, or thereabouts, until the present time. But if I live and grow well, Mr. Editor, I am coming up, some of the coming days, to pan out the entire Olympic range, and then somebody'll find out "what's thar."

According to the newspaper accounts of its transactions, the N. P. Railroad Company, like all of its brothers of the railroad persuasion, is exhibiting its swinish principles. Why did it not establish its terminus at Seattle? Because you did not donate the entire town to it. One half of your beautiful city wouldn't do for it. No half part of a loaf can satisfy the insatiable maw of a railroad company. When you think that such an institution is going to play anything but hog in its business transactions, you will find yourself egregiously mistaken. Call an angel down from heaven and make him a member of a railroad company, and in the course of a few months he will be as good a thief as any of them. He couldn't help it. Contumacious is extremely contagious, and propagation of humanity, either in the singular or plural, can impart it with greater force and effect than a railroad corporation. The angel would either have to steal, or spread his wings and go back "where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt and where thieves do not break through."

property owners in general, of Seattle, I would say, let the rotten, thieving N. P. R. R. alone. Don't give it a dollar. If you want a railroad, build it and own yourselves as far as your means will enable you so to do, and let the N. P. humbug fight "muskeeters" in the Tacoma swamps and drown itself in the unfathomable depths of its harbor. Its "Mobilier" ring operations, its insatiable avarice and greed, deserve the utter contempt of every honest philanthropist in the land.

When the venerable Emperor of Dutch dom awarded to the United States the San Juan and other islands, there was some excitement down this way about the Emperor's decision and a considerable San Juan fever engendered by it. Many inquiries were made of your correspondent concerning the grazing and agricultural qualities of the islands, and especially by the stock raisers. Some of our stock and sheep men were strongly inclined to emigrate, but the report of awful murders in that direction soon cured the emigration fever. I hear nothing said here now about the islands.

UNITED PEOPLE.—The action of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company for the last three years upon this coast, culminating in the location of the terminus of the road upon Puget Sound, has had the effect of uniting our people in common interest and for common defence against an organization in manifest hostility to the settlers and all the established centres of trade and routes of travel. From Olympia to Port Townsend is now but one community, actuated by a common sentiment; all party divisions, local rivalries and personal differences are merged in common public interests—the welfare of the whole; which cannot but have the most beneficial effects upon the future growth and prosperity of this section of our common country. At Olympia we found the people, with scarcely an exception, deeply interested in the success of our project for a railroad to Walla Walla. Here we find an equal interest manifested in the Olympia project for a railroad to Tenino. At all the ports below here, on either side of the Sound, we find the people, with scarcely an exception, enthusiastically seconding both projects without exhibiting the least sign of jealousy towards either, while not a disinterested settler can be found who does not regard the attempt to build up a town at Tacoma by the railroad interest, as a fraud and a swindle, hostile to the best interests of the country and certain to end in a disgraceful failure to the projectors of the scheme, and ruin to the prospects of the railroad. This conclusion has been forced upon the people, against their will and their hopes, by a long series of acts tending to the same end.

For years every settler upon the borders of Puget Sound was a partisan of the Northern Pacific railroad; it was looked forward to as the great end aim of all endeavor, the consummation of all their hopes for the growth and prosperity of the country; nearly all enterprise and public improvements were held in abeyance awaiting the determination of its route, connections and terminal point; the commencement of construction upon this end was anticipated as the opening of an era of prosperity and productive industry. But, alas for their hopes! The advent of the railroad was preceded and accompanied by an invading army of its retainers, more greedy, aviracious and unscrupulous than the army of carpet-beggars and scallawags who invaded the South after the war, all intent on schemes of spoliation and plunder, regardless alike of the rights of the citizens and the interests of the railroad. The affairs of the railroad have been under the exclusive management of these nomadic adventurers from the beginning, who have carried on a truck-and-dicker business on their own hook which would be disgraceful to the keeper of a rat-pit.

The railroad thus far has only been a curse to the country, and under its present management no one expects any thing better for it in the future. The disappointment of the people, however, has worked for them a material good: it has aroused their dormant energies and determined them to improve their great natural advantages by their own energy and enterprise; to be a free people, not the serfs of a soulless monopoly under the direction of a hostile power. In this they present a united front and command the sympathies of the people throughout the country and commend themselves to the aid of capitalists who do not use their money for purposes of speculation. That it will be better for the people and better for the country in the end, there can be no reasonable doubt.

The Fair.

In a little over one month the third annual exhibition of the Western Washington Industrial Association will be held on the University grounds, in this city, commencing on October 1st, and continuing over the 2nd and 3rd days. This is the most interesting public event of the year, and appeals to the local pride and public spirit of every citizen of Western Washington for cooperation and support. Especially is this appeal made to King county; which heretofore with the largest resources for such an exhibition has contributed least. There is no time to lose for preparation. Begin now to prepare articles for exhibition, and if the matter is taken hold of with proper zeal and followed up with perseverance, an exhibition of products will be had which will astonish the world. With the resources which we have to draw upon, it would be disgraceful not to beat any other community of equal numbers in every department of agriculture and horticulture, and give to the world a better knowledge of the productiveness of our soil than is now had by strangers.

THE PEOPLE'S RAILROAD.—The Port Townsend Argus concludes an able argument in favor of the Seattle and Walla Walla Railroad as follows:

It may be argued that the same benefit will be derived from the Northern Pacific Railroad, but such is not the case, at least, for years to come. The line of the road now being built does not tap the country in question, save by the expensive route already enjoyed by Portland—the river, and this mode of transit will be employed by the Northern Pacific Company until the other parts of their trunk line is finished. The branch line of that company which has been already located with so much flourish, with its terminus at Tacoma, is an uncertain matter that is altogether in the distant future. The road from the Sound across the Cascade Mountains is a need of to-day, and the only way that it can be obtained is by and through the Seattle and Walla Walla Railroad and Transportation Company. We hope business men will give this subject their earnest consideration, and lend their aid to the important enterprise.

LET DOWN A PEG.—General John W. Sprague, the agent of the Land Ring, who for the past three years has assumed the prerogatives of the President, Directors and Company of the Northern Pacific Railroad, and lorded it over the unsophisticated people of this country as if he held it in fief; exercising rights of eminent domain by selling privileges to cut timber upon Government lands; ordering off settlers or compelling them to pay him tribute; exacting loyalty and exercising secret surveillance over all the officers and employees of the Company, including both the engineer and land departments, and aspiring to civil positions in the Government commensurate with these pretensions, and scattering railroad passes among the small politicians and subsidizing low-priced editors to that end; it now appears derives all his importance from his position as co-agent with "Skokum" Smith for the swindling Land Ring, and has found his level in the Railroad as superintendent of 65 miles of railroad without any authority whatever over any other department of the road. He is only a cotton General after all! Mr. Jacobs has the sole custody of the land department, and Col. Thomas B. Morris of the engineer department, for the Pacific Division of the N. P. Railroad, and any interference by Gen. Sprague with either is unauthorized and impertinent.

The following communication is published by special request, its publication having been refused, some time ago, by the editor to whom it is addressed:

EDITOR COURIER.—In your weekly issue of the 28th of June I notice the communication of "Olympia" in answer to the proposed Railroad meeting. You are well aware of the influence, and effects of that influence upon the citizens of this Territory, brought to bear by the servants of the N. P. R. R. Co. Those who had not the moral courage to stand by the good principles instilled into them by those who acted their part in guarding against corruption, that the institutions of their country might fall into their hands unimpaired, are now, together with the better portion, suffering for their folly at the hands of monopolies, of which the N. P. R. R. Co. at present stands coequal with all, if not a little ahead in corruption. It is admitted that the receiver is as guilty as the thief, and so long as the N. P. R. R. Co. retain a single soul in any position that his influence can be used or his voice heard in the management of its affairs, who is connected with that accursed ring styled the "Lake Superior and Puget Sound Land Co.," so long will all be sufferers by their nefarious practices, and the N. P. R. R. Co. proper doubtful. Sir, "Olympia" has barely entered upon their powers in controlling our political institutions. Why, sir, they assume to control the Government and make their boast of it. They do not stop at the controlling of Territorial politics but tell us that the U. S. Mail, the Express and the people must go where and when they say so, and stay where and when they say so.

Sir, I deplore a mob, but if we cannot depend upon our courts of justice (so-called), or upon our Legislature, or upon our Country's Congress; if this branch of "Upas" has so poisoned all in power as to make us but the victims to plunder; if we cannot receive other satisfaction then the assurance that nothing can save us but to join the ring, or in other words, to enter this charnel-house and become one of its occupants against our will, or suffer by contributing to their demands, however exorbitant; then, sir, I am for a Vigilance Committee, or a publication of every act, however insignificant to the world pertaining to the injustice and mismanagement of this accursed ring. I have watched with interest their movements on this Sound, and I have been gratified to see this place stand unspotted, while other places succumbed to the fawning words and false promises, to their sorrow. But, sir, Seattle has swallowed the bitter pill at last, and on Thursday, the 26th of June, at that every citizen of Seattle will remember with sorrow, the N. P. R. R. Co.'s tools left with the glorious satisfaction of having demoralized the place at last and swindled the greater part of its citizens out of their hard earned possessions. I use the words "tool" and "swindle" for I know no other to apply to men who can stoop so low as to take from those they have demoralized for the purpose of robbing without. They will take all of Seattle they can get, and the next result they will make will be for the citizens to move out and let them move in. "Olympia" thinks that some one may object to the movement proposed, on account of the injury to the company, and seems to delight at the thought of its bringing them to bankruptcy, as the quickest course of justice. I concur with "Olympia" nay, I admire his spunk. If we decline acting because the criminal will suffer for his wickedness and folly by our acts, and wink at corruption in its most obnoxious form (ah! putrid); when or how can we hope to reform our land and purge the country of its refuse. If we wish to do unto others as we would be done by; if we hope to be warned against the practices of the untrustworthy and deceitful; we must send forth our warning to all, and especially to those who slumber in foreign lands unconscious of the wholesale robbery going on in our midst. Scatter the pamphlets broadcast; publish them fairly and correctly to the world; and God grant that they may arouse the people to a sense of the duty they owe the world, reclaim our Government, and rid the community of monopolies and all bad-privileged men in power.

I recollect a remark of Daniel Webster in regard to the principles of men. He said that a man was either possessed, to a greater or less degree, of good or bad principles and that a man who was notoriously wicked was not unprincipled, but possessed of a large amount of bad principle. Would to God that some one-to-day could fill his place on the floor of the Senate and imitate his example, set in his reply to Haynes, by telling that body what composed that set. If he could return and taken his glance at its acts to-day, he would find, not a body of men of individual honor for mutual discussion, a Senate; but an exchange for the manipulation of railroad and steamboat monopolies; an assembly of men, in the majority for the discussion of individual interest, not national affairs. I say the majority and I do not exaggerate. But, sir, I will submit this, my poor attempt to give you my views on a subject and proposition in which I fully concur. SEATTLE.

CHOLERA.—The following recipe for the cure of cholera, cholera morbus or summer complaint in any of its forms is furnished us by an old sea-faring man who vouches for its efficacy: Take equal parts tincture of opium, red pepper, rhubarb, peppermint, and camphor and mix them for use. In case of diarrhoea take a dose of ten or twenty drops in three or four teaspoonfuls of water. No one who has this by him and takes it in time will have the cholera. We commend it to our Western friends, and hope that the receipt will be widely published. Even when no cholera is anticipated it is an excellent remedy for ordinary summer complaint.

The Boston Globe states that Col. Geo. H. Butler, the nephew of Gen. Ben. Butler, and for some time consul general in Egypt, is now employed in Europe as a writer in behalf of Don Carlos, in whose army he holds a commission as general, with the expectation of being made captain-general of Cuba when Don Carlos obtains the throne of Spain.

The Lafayette Wisconsin Democrat says: "A terrible accident is reported from Lafayette. It appears that a little girl was standing in the wheat field, and was not seen by the driver of the reaper until her body was seen on platform of the machine with both legs cut off."

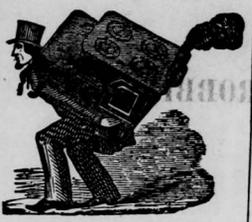

Chicago is willing to be amused. In a season of ten months the receipts at McVicker's theatre averaged $7,000 a week or $1,000 for each performance.

It is said that the inscription "for sale," or "for rent" is posted on more than six thousand houses and stores in New Orleans.

From one tribe alone 14,000 men have left the pepper plantations and gone to the assistance of the Sultan. The pepper trade is temporarily suspended by the war.

Great fears were entertained by the Dutch regarding the success of their contemplated second attack. The Dutch were at Padang, their base of operations had on the way 1,800 men, reinforcements from Holland. It was designed to attack the Acheens about the middle of September.

The Sultan in response to an overture by the Dutch to make a treaty said that before he would do so every man in arms under his hand should perish.

The Sultan of Acheen expressed a desire to the American Consul for close relations with this country and said that, if the United States would give him protection, he would grant extensive commercial privileges, naval store houses, and the use of the best timber for ship building. The Sultan was informed that the better way to present his proposition was to send a special envoy to the U. S. government.
