broke forth Robin. "Much obliged for the compliment, my good fellow. To return to business, I will relieve you of this money - my presence together - you understand. We shall never meet again - on this side Jordan at least!"

Robin stood speechless. Brockleworth went on in an easy tone: "Your mistress puts such faith in your word you can easily cheat her into the belief that you've been robbed! Don't stand there like a fool, my friend, and your face, frowning and muttering, and your voice, rattling like a millstone in the city every week!"

"You won't do it!" in a low determined voice. "You won't do it? Then I shall consider if my painful duty to inform your mistress and her friends generally what kind of a man 'honest Robin' really is. Oh! it's no empty threat - I have papers in my pocket that'll prove it!"

"Will ye drive me mad?" broke forth Robin wildly. "What was it led me astray, a pair, thoughtless of old often

Mass Meeting!

There will be a mass meeting of the citizens of Spokane Falls this Saturday evening, in Cannon's Hall, for the purpose of discussing the project of opening a road into the mines. Let the people turn out. Show your public spirit by being present and taking part in the proceedings. Everybody is interested, or should be. Let there be a full attendance, and a liberal spirit shown. With an activity and keenness worthy of a better cause our neighbors at Cheney took advantage of the antics of one or two persons and attempted to make capital out of it. We refer to the hanging of Stitzel in effigy. The stuffed figure was the work of only a few boys and some person, with a perfect disregard to the truth, telegraphed from Cheney to Olympia that the citizens of Spokane Falls had assembled and burned Stitzel in effigy. There is not a shadow of fact in any such statement. The performance was done on the sly and the people are ignorant of the perpetrators, who are not even upheld in the act. Jake may succeed in awakening sympathy by parading a statement of this kind, but if the legislators are biased in their votes by a report of that kind, without investigating its truth, we will be led to believe that the legislature is made up of no better material than are most of such political bodies.

CHARLES BESSERER, formerly proprietor of the Walla Walla Waterman, now serving the dear people in the Territorial Legislature, is out in the Legion in a card in which he defends legislators for accepting free passes on the railroad. The communication was aroused by some comments indulged in on the practice by papers on the Sound, and Charles seems quite worked up. The fact is that the acceptance of passes from railroads by public servants in the capacity of legislators, is reprehensible and in bad taste. We care not who the party may be, whether he is the Hon. Charles Besserer or the Hon. the Lord Knows Who, and he is just as palpable. The railroad is not so big hearted, generous and kind that it gives passes to such men because of the love it has for them. As common citizens the same men did not enjoy the privilege of dead-head tickets. We do not pretend to say that a man can be corrupted by a free pass, but there are persons who may have their opinions biased by such favors. The Territory is taxed to pay the fare of legislators to and from Olympia, and the pay is much more than the actual expense of the trip. We don't blame men for trying to make money out of a public office, as the time for serving the public for honor is wrapped up in the obsequies of the far distant past. Even in California, where railroad rule has been notorious, the legislators themselves passed a law making it a misdemeanor for persons in official capacities accepting passes. The law may be "more honored in the breach than in the observance," yet it nevertheless shows that even those men, who, at the time they voted against the acceptance of railroad favors may have had passes in their pockets, felt it necessary to put an end to a system out of which could grow no good for the public weal.

WHILE the chief excitement, attraction and topic of conversation now-a-days is the wonderfully rich gold mines at our very door, in the Coeur d'Alene mountains, the sturdy immigrant should not forget that there are thousands of acres of as productive farming land within Spokane county and Eastern Washington as exist anywhere in the world, and that it is as free to the actual settler as the air we breathe. It may be true that that day is almost past when "Uncle Sam was rich enough to give us all a farm," as the rapid diminution of the public domain has curtailed the extent of real estate in the gift of the old gentleman, yet there are many acres still remaining awaiting the coming of the husbandman. There may not be the strained hopes and expectations about farming that there is in connection with mining, but in the long run the results are more satisfactory. Mines may be rich, and a favored few may make fortunes, and the existence of gold may hasten the growth of a country, but for stability, permanence, and solidity, a county relies upon its agricultural resources. Attention has been drawn from the farming advantages of the Territory recently by the said mineral discovery, but as soon as the first fever subsides the new comer will direct his attention to those portions of the northwest wherein he may take up land, proceed to cultivate the same and calmly settle down to the slower yet surer mode of acquiring wealth, happy in his free and untrammelled life, under the shadow of his own vine and wheat bias.

We should not lose sight of our agricultural resources, and feeling thus we desire to call the attention of those wishing to secure good land to the inducements held out by the unsettled sections of Washington

THE CENTER OF ATTRACTION

A Few Items About the Mines

Saturday last J. H. Curtis, a gentleman well and favorably known in this city, arrived directly from the Coeur d'Alene gold fields. Mr. Curtis was up at the camp in the interests of David Small, of Walla Walla, arranging to put in a saw mill at the earliest opportunity. Mr. Curtis had in his possession two fine nuggets, one weighing over $25, and a quantity of the finer gold. While here he started on foot the project of constructing a wagon road into the mines, a highway that connects directly with roads leading to the Falls. It is hardly necessary to point out to our people, and more especially our business men, the great advantages to be derived from such a road. It would be the means of throwing a trade into the city the extent of which is beyond calculation. We regret to say that a lukewarmness in contributing to this scheme has been apparent. Those who aid in the building of the road will have the amount returned ten thousand fold, and if we are not very careful some more enterprising community will take hold and turn the current of trade out of its natural channel. It may be that the subscription paper has not been generally circulated. Anyhow all the contributions are as follows: Geo. Henderson, $100; David Small, $100; Chas. Sweeney & Co., $100; Geo. T. Crane & Co., $100; F. M. Moore, $50; Scheeline Bros., $50; J. N. Squier, $50; C. B. King & Co., $100; Bank of Spokane Falls, $50; R. W. Forrest, $25; C. H. Duncan & Co., $25; J. J. Irwin, $25. The road is but $170 from the Falls, when that amount was raised in a few minutes at Rathdrum. The construction of the road is to be under the charge of Mr. Curtis, which is a sufficient guarantee that the work will be well done. The road will start in at a point on the Mullen road fourteen miles from the Mission, the distance to be traversed being twenty-one miles. The road will be known as the Irwin trail, named after an old timer, Thos. Irwin, who has been a conspicuous operator in the mines, and who is now working a good claim on Prichard Creek. According to this route the distance from Spokane Falls, over good roads, will be to Post Coeur d'Alene 28 miles, to the Mission 30 miles, to the mines 35 miles. To make traveling and freighting much easier Clem B. King, at the Post, is now engaged building a good commodious steamer that will ply between the Post and the Mission, carrying outfits, men and stock at low rates, and saving a wagon trip of 30 miles. The building of this road is of vital importance to this city, and it is to be hoped our people will not allow the chance to slip their grasp. Our merchants are so favorably situated that they will be able to supply the mining camps, no matter how large they may grow, and if the trade can be held the mines will contribute to the growth of Spokane as the same source has so materially added to the development of Denver. Don't lose sight of this project, gentlemen.

LOCAL.

Browne's Block.

Among the numerous brick blocks in course of construction in this city there is none that will surpass in exterior decorations and interior finish that of the one now almost completed at the corner of Post street and Riverside avenue. In speaking of this block heretofore the block has been reported as the joint property of J. J. Browne and George Brandt. This is an error. The building is owned exclusively by Mr. Browne. Mr. Brandt's lot joining on the west, and it will be a business proposition, equally as attractive, next summer. The size of the block is fifty feet front on Riverside avenue, with a frontage of eighty-two feet on Post street. It is finished on the outside in East Lake style, a modern mode of structure that lends great beauty to an edifice wherever applied. The block covers a fine brick wall basement in three compartments that is seven and a half feet in the clear, the first floor being sixteen, close together, and double-bread. The first floor consists of three elegant store rooms, the two on the avenue being twenty-five by sixty-eight feet, and one on Post street twenty-two by forty-two feet. The rooms have a sixteen-foot ceiling, the show-windows being of French polished plate-glass, each pane sixty by one hundred and four inches. The upper story is reached from the avenue by a six-foot stairway, with a three-foot central landing, while another approach exists on Post street. The upper floor is divided into offices, single and en suite. There are five single offices in the rear, seventeen by seventeen and fifteen by fifteen, with fourteen-foot ceilings and large windows. Most of the offices have roomy closets. The front stairs lead one into a commodious hall, lighted by a sky-light ten by thirteen feet. The suite of two offices on the west side, to be occupied by A. C. Absalom, are eighteen by eighteen feet, connected by folding doors, swung on Warren's patent hinges. On the east and south sides are four offices, connected with double doors, three eighteen by eighteen feet, and one twelve by eighteen feet, that Mr. Browne will occupy himself. They will be luxurious quarters when the proprietor has them furnished. The rooms are airy, open on the hall, the windows to have inside blinds. The entire block is one that will always attract notice for its beautiful architecture. It stands thirty-eight feet high from the ground to the top of the fire-wall, and is covered with artistic stucco work. The ornaments are of galvanized iron, sanded a light slate. The keystones, pilasters, architraves, and all trimmings are to be cemented, giving a handsome finished appearance to the exterior. The hall, the windows, and panels of iron castings used in the building. The architect who furnished the designs for the block is Wm. Stokes, of Portland, formerly of Oakland, Cal., where many elegant bricks, built on plans furnished by him, are evidence of his ability. He is considered to be one of the best architects on the coast, and Browne's Block will not detract from that reputation. H. H. Leslie, the contractor, and the builder, has had years of experience, and is thoroughly conversant with all the secrets of the craft. He is doing a fine piece of work in this instance. He, like other builders, has labored under the great disadvantage of procuring material at a distance, and the drawbacks thus entailed have seriously interfered with the progress of the work. He expects to have the entire job completed by the 1st of December, if he can escape any further setbacks.

Organized.

Last Saturday evening H. E. Holmes, Grand Representative of this district, installed North Star Encampment, No. 6, I. O. O. E., in this city. The occasion was one that will be long remembered by the participants, not only on account of the establishment of a higher degree of the Order, but also for the pleasure attending upon the rites of organization. The lodge was formed by the election and installment of the following officers: J. B. Krienbuhl, C. P.; Frank Ziegler, H. P.; J. F. C. Abel, Senior Warden; James Baird, Junior Warden; Charles Wilson, Scribe; G. Palmatag, Treasurer. The following is a list of the charter members: J. J. Piper, J. B. Krienbuhl, G. Palmatag, J. F. C. Abel, Frank Ziegler, J. E. Silpe, M. R. Doty, J. L. Miller, James Baird, Charles Wilson. After the ceremony of installation the members adjourned to Still's Restaurant, where that prime eatery had spread a bountiful and elegant repast, to which the boys did ample justice. After the supper the party returned to the hall and did not complete their labors until early the next morning.

The Holland Comedy Company.

Our people are promised a rare treat next week when the Holland Comedy Company will occupy the boards in Cannon's Hall for five consecutive evenings, commencing next Tuesday night. Our city never before enjoyed so long a season of stage performances, and it is a question in our mind how it will succeed, but if the same liberal patronage is extended to the Hollands as has heretofore been given to troupes of lesser merit why the result will assuredly be satisfactory to the manager. The fact that the company performs more than one night is proof that it is capable of pleasing, and is ready and willing to travel on its merits. The press of the interior speaks well of the company, each member of which strives to please, and do so under all circumstances. The repertoire will include the celebrated plays "Our American Cousin," "Lead Astray," "Pink Dominoes," "Unequal Match," and "Serious Family," with "40 and 50" as an after piece. There will be a change of programme every evening. May the auspice be welcomed with crowded houses.

New Firm.

We call attention to the card of the White Brothers in another column. These gentlemen have just opened an agency for the celebrated White sewing machines, Weber pianos, Sherman & Clay pianos, Estey, New England and Sterling organs. They are located at the corner of Stevens street, on Riverside avenue. They have been rushed with orders since opening, and have been compelled to send for a large number of machines. Persons desiring anything in their line should give them a call.

SCRAPINGS.

November 30. See the Hollands.

Look out for food!

The wood market is lively.

Ice dealers take a back seat.

Amusements growing thick.

Now across the visionary turkey.

People still trot toward the mines.

Steady stream of strangers arriving.

Domestic corner Main and Howard.

The skating rink is now under canvas.

The Workmen Lodge is now progressing finely.

The Union Block will be occupied within ten days.

Spokane is to have a run on comedy next week.

Feather beds and pillows at the second-hand store.

The wagon road project into the mines will make a go.

Pictorial posters are making radiant the dead walls about town.

If you want your carpets stretched go to the Second Hand Store.

Builders can thank Providence for the fine weather dotted out this fall.

If you want your stoves polished leave orders at the Second Hand Store.

The passenger trains have again been running short of time this week.

The mountain summit look tasty in their night-gowns, but, oh, so cold.

Ham is quoted at twenty-five cents per pound. Ham if we want any at that price.

The office recently occupied by A. C. Absolon has been changed to a dwelling.

Be sure and see the Holland Comedy Company, there is no better on the road.

Rima has had the front of his brick mortared over, giving it an appearance of stone.

The frame work for still another building on the flat west of town was elevated this week.

A stiff breeze stirred things up Sunday night. Little or no wind resulted from Boreas' spree.

John Glover is now living on venison. He killed the deer with his little gun one day this week.

Bible reading next Thursday evening at the Congregational Church. Come, and bring your Bible.

If you know anything about the estrayed horse advertised in another column bring in your information.

The shelving in French's block is about finished, and the young men will be moving in before long.

SHAKE!

There is a class of traveling theatrical companies that have an idea that the people living in a town re-note from large cities know little or nothing about the drama, or stage performance, and so when billed for such places make it a practice to palm off the merest trash upon the public;

no matter how large may be the audience. Even organizations that are pronounced good by experienced critics, consider it proper to cut down, mangle and cut off in interior stands.

Among those that can be numbered under this head is the Jay Rial Company. That there are some fine artists in the troupe we do not deny, but the manager's idea, and with a very short-sighted policy put in force that system of carelessness and indifference to country (?) audiences that we complain of. The company was billed for Wednesday night, at Cannon's Hall, in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and if the play has ever been more poorly rendered, taken as a whole, the actors participating ought to have been executed. It would seem that Jay Rial would have taken some pains to please, seeing that every seat in the house had been sold by seven o'clock Wednesday evening, and that he was greeted by as intelligent an audience as he ever appeared before, ladies and gentlemen who have witnessed the acting of the best stars before the foot-lights. But no. The play was full of sins of commission and omission, and no doubt Mr. Rial thinks he did a smart thing, as he jingles the proceeds of the entertainment. It may be thought we do Rial an injustice, for he has a large company, pays his bills promptly, and has a reputation for doing good work on the stage, but he failed to please here, and it was no fault of the public. Fortunately all traveling troupes are not classed under this category, as our people know from experience, and it is not just to withdraw patronage from other entertainments because one may fail to come up to the proper standard.

There is no doubt that the county division bill has passed and Spokane county is set off to itself. The first news reached here Friday but it seemed too good to be true. Col. Morgan confirms the report. Lack of time and space prevents any particulars so we give the dispatches as received. All honor and credit is due to our representative, Dr. L. H. Whitehouse, and to the delegation that did such noble work. Those men are James N. Glover, A. M. Cannon, Col. G. H. Morgan and L. Ziegler. The following is the dispatch received by Chas. Sweeney: OLYMPIA, Nov. 1, 1883. To Chas. Sweeney:—The vote dividing Spokane county just passed. C. G. BRADSHAW.

The following dispatch was received by Col. Morgan, at Portland, from two members of the House: OLYMPIA, W. T., Nov. 1, 1883. To G. H. Morgan, Esq. and Hotel—Spokane bill passed. R. BARLOW, B. F. SHAW.

Among those who have great faith in the future of the Big Bend is J. W. Adams, who passed through our city this week on his way to Olympia, where he goes in the capacity of a representative of the settlers now in that part of Spokane county, and will lay before the legislators a petition praying for a second division of the western part of Spokane county, to be named Big Bend county, the dividing line to follow the 42° of longitude, on the east to be bounded on the north and west by the Columbia river. This leaves a section of country much larger than either one of the two remaining counties of Spokane and Sprague, should the division now asked for prevail. Mr. Adams is armed with many letters of introduction and a good petting, and should the object of his pilgrimage fail it will at least have the effect of drawing attention to a remote section that promises to be one of the most important grain producing portions of this territory. The notices that prompted this action are obvious to those acquainted with the country. The Big Bend is to a great extent isolated, with poor road leading in and out (another reason why the overgrown county of Spokane should be divided) and it works a hardship upon the people so remote to travel to and from the county seat as now existing. At present the people at the west end are almost entirely cut off from the eastern portion of the county, and are even jumping the local office has made wonderful strides, keeping pace with the development of the city. Only a short time ago a cigar box would have held the mail delivered for the falls, and the Postmaster carried the two or three epistles on a check-box, wondering at the time who was acquainted with the existence of the place beyond Hangman's creek. Now the mails coming and going keep the men jumping the local office has made wonderful strides, keeping pace with the development of the city. Only a short time ago a cigar box would have held the mail delivered for the falls, and the Postmaster carried the two or three epistles on a check-box, wondering at the time who was acquainted with the existence of the place beyond Hangman's creek. Now the mails coming and going keep the men jumping the local office has made wonderful strides, keeping pace with the development of the city. Only a short time ago a cigar box would have held the mail delivered for the falls, and the Postmaster carried the two or three epistles on a check-box, wondering at the time who was acquainted with the existence of the place beyond Hangman's creek.

It is about settled that the lower floor of the Central block will be occupied as follows: The Land office building, on the west end by J. T. Marshall, as a real estate office; E. H. Jamieson's building in the center by M. Thomson & Company, as a commission house; the Wolverson Brothers building, in the east end, by E. Kilps, who will put in a large stock of stoves, tinware, etc.

The builders of the public school building were desirous of impressing it upon the generations still unborn that the edifice is solely an educational institution, as a big lettered sign reads, "School House." Perhaps they were afraid some one would take it for an opera house or a picture show, or a bazaar, or a horse, hence the desire to spread information. If the words "This is a" had been prefixed, the danger of any mistake would have been more surely ousted.

John Glover, of the City Stables, had the misfortune to lose that valuable and handsome bay horse, he recently purchased, last Sunday. The animal was working with a wagon, Saturday, when, from some cause, down on Hangman's creek, he commenced balking. In the struggle the animal lost an eye and received internal injuries from which he died. The horse was one of the finest looking animals in the county, and the loss is considerable.

A gang of Chinamen from all quarters of the upper country collected at the Falls Monday for the purpose of organizing a secret order, and for the purpose of brotherhooding upon the advantages of such an institution. The pow-wow was held in Ziegler's Hall, and the talking was all done in the native tongue, which left the white portion of the audience in the dark regarding the object of the assembly. From the interest taken in the affair by resident Mongolians, it is evident that the order is "velly good."

Between eight and nine o'clock Sunday night those of our people who happened to be out were treated to one of those rare meteoric displays that come when least expected, and last but not least, long enough to realize their beauty. This blazing celestial messenger burst from the southeastern heavens, and sent out a glowing trail to the southeast, illuminating the earth with a brilliancy that is likened unto the radiance of an electric light. In a lighter room the glimmer on the curtain windows looked like a flash of lightning, which many supposed it was.

A great deal of complaint is heard regarding a system of extortion inaugurated by the Northern Pacific road. We are in hopes that the overcharges, in the shape of the press to speak plainly on the subject, and we hope the redress will follow more promptly than it did in the case of the railroad extortions of California.

In securing reserved seats people are very much annoyed on going to the hall to find them taken up by those not willing to pay the extra price. We observed this Wednesday night. If seats are sold to two different parties, or the seats are not marked "taken," we can find no fault with the theater-goer, but denounce the troupe that does not conduct the seating of the audience properly as unworthy of patronage. But on the other hand, if men take marked seats that do not belong to them, and forget the first instincts of manhood when the error is pointed out, a policeman ought to be present to enforce the rules of the house.

The boys think that they have a standing joke on Fightwathman Kohlhauff. It must be understood that long freight trains are always cutting off communication with the south side of the depot, and people going the way are compelled to assume a devotional attitude and crawl under the cars, providing they do not take the time to go around. Mr. Kohlhauff had occasion to go over in that direction one night this week to awaken a gentleman for the train, and as he was in a dudgeon of a hurry he got down on all-fours, when he ran against the cars in the dark, and crawled under with considerable exertion. Upon reaching the other side the guardian of the night was completely dumb-founded to find that he had crept under the last car in the train, and if he had taken the trouble to look the exertion would have been escaped by walking a few feet around. The more he thought of it the madder he got, and, feeling that he had been imposed upon, he just crawled back and walked around that car as a kind of revenge upon his thoughtless passenger.
