The Rock Island Sun, Waterville Eye and Wenatchee Graphic sleep the sleep of the departed in the Journalistic boner-yard.

The Seattle papers are still stirring up the matter of government appropriation for the Lake Washington canal.

Judging from the tone of the republican newspapers the reader would be inclined to the belief that they would formulate the policy of the next administration, but close reasons rather favor the idea that Cleveland will have a little something to say about it.

It is now obvious to the man who carries a political telescope that Hank Examiner Wilson, of Ellensburg, made a very poor bargain when he swapped the gubernatorial nomination for a paltry federal office that appears to be "of few days and full of trouble."

Now that the democrats have been successful, the republican press is exhibiting great solicitude over the danger of the paper chickens of Canada ruining the bee fruit business of the American chickens.

A New York printing house has attached the national republican central committee for a debt of $40,000. It would have attached the principal, the republican party, but when the returns were received it concluded there was no party left to attach, and that its effects, consisting of two protested bills, drawn by Mr. McKinley and Mr. Lodge, would not pay the costs of administration.

The name of "calamity howlers" was evidently inappropriately applied to the populists, for the republicans are now discounting any efforts made by the third party in this direction.

Chicago now feels the need of more hotel accommodations for World's fair visitors, and has decided upon building the biggest hotel in the world. It will cover ten acres of ground, and furnish eating and sleeping accommodations for 15,000 people.

"I FOLLOWED," said Colonel McClure, editor of the Philadelphia Times, in a recent speech, "the tall white plume of Henry Clay with all the idolatry of boyhood in his advocacy of his great American system half a century ago. I was then, have been, and am to-day, a Clay protectionist, and there is no more similarity between the Clay and McKinley theories of protection than there is between the soaring eagle and the mousing owl.

Now that the crops are harvested THE HERALD subscribers should not forget that this is the season of the year for paying the printer. It takes money to run a newspaper, and we are occasionally compelled to remind those who obtain the product of our labor that this is the case.

So EARLY is the tin industry of this country demoralized by the result of the late election that the directors of the San Jacinto tin mines, in California, which were closed down previous to the election, for political effect it is said, have decided to re-open the mines, and voted $100,000 for additional development work.

THE VICTORY IS COMPLETE.

Cleveland - Shows Harrison Under By Over 100 Electoral Votes.

"Rainbow Chasing" Proved a Winning Card - An Imperial Pyramid of Northern States Fly the Democratic Flag.

The election proved a greater landslide than was at first reported; in fact, as one poor punster remarked, it was a Cleveland slide. While it will take the official count to determine definitely which way California and Ohio went on electors, they will not do figure in the general result, for Cleveland and Stevenson have beyond all chance of quibble the greatest electoral majority ever given to a presidential ticket.

To begin a recapitulation of the results in the various states it would shorten the account to state that the democrats carried the "solid south" with pluralities varying from way up in the pictures down to three or four thousand in West Virginia.

Ohio gave McKinley 25,000 majority in 1891. In '92 no democrat had the nerve to claim it, but it almost, if not quite, gave a plurality for Cleveland.

The latest returns from California indicate that the state is democratic by a few hundred plurality.

Colorado, Idaho, Kansas, Nebraska, Nevada and Wyoming elected Weaver electors.

The only states carried by Harrison were Iowa, Maine, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Montana, New Hampshire, North Dakota, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Vermont, Washington and possibly Ohio. Nine Harrison electors were chosen in Michigan.

New Jersey and Connecticut went democratic by a larger vote than was claimed. Cleveland's plurality in Indiana will range from five to eight thousand; in Illinois from nine to fourteen thousand; Wisconsin about the same; New York, 41,000; Delaware gives the democratic electors a small plurality.

Minnesota had a narrow escape from slipping into the democratic column, as the Harrison electors carried it by only a few hundred.

So sweeping has been the victory that the democrats will have possession of both branches of congress, gaining a senator in California, Connecticut, New York and Wisconsin.

Our own state, Washington, chose Harrison electors by a greatly reduced plurality on the votes of two and four years ago, and elected McGraw by a plurality of about 3,000, although it will take the official count to determine on which side of the three thousand line his plurality will be.

A STANCH LITTLE DEMOCRAT.

Hon. H. J. Sively Receives a Nice Letter From an Olympia Maid, Secreting His Defeat

The following letter, which is self explanatory, was received by Hon. H. J. Sively on Wednesday:

OLYMPIA, November 13. Dear Mr. Sively:—I am a little girl ten years old, and I want to tell you I am very sorry you were not elected our governor. I hope you will not feel bad about it. Mamma went down and helped decorate the stage the night you spoke in Olympia. I want to hear you speak, and enjoyed it very much. My brother, Lachlan, was your page in the last legislature, and he said you were a good man. I am a good democrat, and Judge Allen's little girl, my friend, is too. Fred is a democrat. I am glad Cleveland is our president. I hope you will be elected next time. Good bye.

Your little friend, BARBARA MACLEAY.

See Lacked Him.

She—Did you kiss me then? He (in confusion)—Yes. She—Are you ashamed of yourself? He—Yes. She—Well, I don't blame you if that's the way you kiss.

Do It Without Asking.

As they sat at night in the parlor bright, Where swiftly the golden moments fled, He whispered this: "May I take a kiss? And she blushed and answered: 'Don't ask me, Ned!'"

The assessment valuation of Yakima county is $4,185,292, and it has been found necessary to raise the following amounts for county purposes: General, $15,000; support of schools, $16,000; roads and highways, $4,000; bridges, $3,000. The taxation for all purposes will be on the basis of 12 mills, which will be divided as follows: General county, 3 1/2 mills; school, 4 mills; general state purposes, 2 1/2 mills; state militia 1-1/2 mill; interest on state bonds, 1-25 mill; roads and highways, 1 mill; bridges, 1/2 mill; indigent soldiers and sailors, 1-100 mill.

There will be a meeting of the members of the Yakima club at the club rooms, Saturday afternoon, Nov. 19th, at 4 p. m., for the purpose of considering the question of winding up the affairs of the club or maintaining it in a suitable style. It is desired that all members be present on this occasion.

There will be a Thanksgiving festival at the Aftonum academy Wednesday evening, Nov. 23. Program: recitations, music, turkey. All are cordially invited.

The upper Natchez bridge has been condemned, and Surveyor Redman has been instructed to prepare plans and estimates for a new structure.

T. E. Griffith, formerly of this city, but at present located in Garfield county, is in the city.

CAMPAIGN HATS AT A BARGAIN.

A Large and Choice Assortment of Harrison Hats for Sale at Your Own Price.

Readers, do you want to buy a hat if you can get it dirt cheap? There is now an opportunity that presents itself only once in four years. The hats cannot be recommended on account of their beauty, for the Lord knows they are ugly enough, and their color is not especially attractive for this season of the year and the extreme cold weather that envelops republican chicken nests if lined with hay. They are called the "Harrison" hat, and their owners are anxious to dispose of them on account of their style having fallen into pronounced disfavor. Parties desiring to invest are requested to communicate with Col. J. H. Taggard, E. E. Butler, L. E. Sperry, Dr. W. H. Hare, Al Katz, John Reed and members of the republican central committee of Yakima county. At a great expense, THE HERALD here with presents a cut of the hat, embellished with an idea that has impressed itself on the mind of the public.

SMALL-POX REMOVS SCARE CITY OFFICIALS.

A Light Case of the Disease in Upper Kittitas County Was Greatly Magnified By Report.

H. K. Owens, son-in-law of Col. H. D. Cook, and chief engineer of the big Kittitas county irrigation ditch, was in the city Tuesday, and denies much of the dispatch published in the Tacoma Ledger of Monday regarding the breaking out of small-pox in his camp and the stampede of laborers. He says that his company has two hundred men employed in clearing the right-of-way for the irrigation canal, and that one of the laborers was taken down with a very mild attack of varioloid, or small-pox, and that as soon as this became known quarantine regulations were established and the sick man, who was a recent arrival from Seattle, was isolated from the rest. There was no stampede whatever; in fact Mr. Owens claims that no one quit work.

The sensational report was spread by a crew of men who had crossed the mountains in search of work. They stopped at Mr. Owens' camp, where they learned that no more laborers were required at present, and also that there was a case of smallpox there. This grew into three cases by the time they had reached the vicinity of a telegraph office, and their presence added color to the claim that a stampede had resulted. The Sound newspapers brought the report to Yakima, and after consultation with members of the council Mayor Weed concluded to order a temporary increase in the police force to watch the various roads leading to this city from the north, and to stop all travelers who could not show clean bills of health. Up in the neighborhood of Cle-Elum and Ellensburg vaccination has become very popular, but it is believed that simple precautions have been taken to prevent the spread of the disease and that there is little occasion for alarm.

LATER—As THE HERALD is about to go to press a large body of laborers from west Kittitas invaded the city, but were at once ordered to move on. They at once started for the Sunnyside country, where they will apply for work on the big ditch. Smallpox is rapidly spreading on the Sound, and has now made its appearance in Olympia. It was brought to this country from Victoria, B. C., by laborers who went to work on the Great Northern, and from there it was carried into various sections of the country.

Fred B. Reed & Co. have an excellent plan to supply dwelling houses on easy terms to those who have limited means. They have 100 lots in the northern part of the city, the choice of which they will sell to any one who will build thereon a house costing not less than $800. On these they will loan 50 per cent of the valuation, for three years, at 8 per cent interest. A little figuring will convince those desirous of building that by taking advantage of this offer the difference between the interest and the usual rentals will help very materially in paying off the mortgage.

Captain J. H. Thomas, general financial and real estate agent, will, after the fore part of next week, jointly occupy the office in the Ebelman building with J. T. Ebelman, where all his friends and those having business with him will find him comfortably installed.

The actual indebtedness of Yakima county on October 3, after deducting cash on hand and credits, was found to be $149,166.01.

Call at Lombard & Horsley's and inspect a splendid line of cane-seated rockers at $2 and $2.50.

Mrs. J. M. Hayden, of Vancouver, Wash is visiting the family of E. C. Burlingame. Take THE HERALD and keep posted.

TELLING HOW IT HAPPENED.

Harrison Attributes the Disaster to the McKinley Bill and Scores Carter.

The National Committee Disregarded the President's Advice—The Result Was No Surprise—The Force Bill Figured.

President Harrison has been talking freely to a New York Herald reporter in which he had the following to say: "The overwhelming defeat of the republican party is due mainly to the position of the party on the tariff question. We republicans forced the issue to an extent which did not meet with the approval of the people. Another important element which had much to do with the defeat of the republicans was the force bill, and it was felt at the north as well as the south. There is a popular belief that the force bill has kept the south with the old lines, but in the president's estimation it did more than that, for it brought to the support of the democrats many voters in the north. The verdict could be construed in but one way. It meant condemnation of the extreme high tariff policy of the republicans. The inevitable result of the party, to hope for a renewal of power, was a modification of this position but not renunciation altogether of the protective tariff policy, which has been the keynote of every republican argument for many years past.

President Harrison has very decided views as to the conduct of the campaign. He does not think much of Chairman Carter of the republican national committee. He consented to Mr. Carter's appointment only when it became evident that no more acceptable man could be secured. He said that the campaign had been mismanaged and that better results would have been secured but for the "rainbow chasing" schemes to which Mr. Carter gave countenance and assistance. The president is particularly chagrined at the result in his native state, and believes it largely due to the lack of good citizenship. What he wanted them to do, he said, and what he endeavored to impress upon them was the absolute necessity of keeping republican states in line and carrying New York. The president said he had realized for some time past that the drift of public sentiment was against him and his party, and it was this that led him to force this advice upon the party leaders. Disregard of this advice had much to do with the result. The president realized before any election returns came in that he was a defeated man. He hoped for success until the last hour, but admitted he had not expected it.

One reason for the president's doubt as to the election was the well known disaffection of a number of prominent leaders of his party. This is evidenced by a statement with regard to Dudley, Quay and Cameron. As to Cameron, the president believes he not only failed to support the ticket, but actually did all in his power to defeat it. Cameron's influence, like Quay's, extended far beyond the confines of Pennsylvania and the president evidently realized that both these gentlemen were in a position to do much injury to the ticket, in the heretofore doubtful states of New York and Indiana. As to Colonel Dudley, the president said he did not believe Colonel Dudley had done anything to injure the ticket, but his influence had rather been of a negative character. Practically the president admitted that Colonel Dudley's influence in Indiana had been used, if not to knife the ticket, to keep his friends from working for it.

In closing the interview the president said that while some mistakes had been made it was quite evident to any man that nothing could withstand the popular uprising of the people against the high protective policy to which the republican party stood pledged by the McKinley law.

Jefferys Lewis, in "Forget Me Not," failed to attract a very large audience to the opera house Wednesday night, but those who were there enjoyed some acting of a character that Yakima is seldom favored with. The Yakima people need not expect the better class of performances very frequently until they can show their appreciation of merit when it does appear.

A. L. Fix has been circulating a petition this week asking for his appointment as agent of the Yakima Indian reservation. Mr. Matt Bartholet is also an applicant for this office and is receiving the support of many friends.

PLEASED WITH OUR FRUIT.

Large St. Paul Fruit Dealers Declare the Flavor and Keeping Qualities Excellent.

Paul Schulze, of Tacoma, on Monday received a letter from B. Freesley & Co., the large fruit dealers in St. Paul, in which they have this to say about Yakima fruit:

"Through your kindness we received a box of Yakima apples and pears some time ago, that for size and general appearance were superior to anything we have ever seen. We were also surprised at their flavor, keeping qualities, and other points of merit. We have not been favorably impressed with fruit from Oregon and Washington heretofore on account of its very poor keeping qualities; it does not seem to stand transportation. This fruit, however, landed in excellent shape, stayed in our office a long time and was afterward consumed in our family. We unhesitatingly say that they were superior to anything ever placed before us in that manner. Mr. Hannaford was just in our office a few minutes ago and this fact was referred to in a casual manner. He says when there are apples enough out there they will give us an apple rate so we can bring your fruit here. Mr. Wallis gave us some glowing accounts of your country, and we hold ourselves in readiness to take hold of your fruit and help make it a success as soon as there is a sufficient quantity there to justify it."

HERALDINGS.

L. E. Sperry leaves in the morning for a brief visit to Tacoma.

Fred R. Reed has bought Alex Sinclair's handsome chestnut-sorrel horse "King."

Mrs. Burnett, daughter of J. M. Kincaid, arrived from the Willanette valley Tuesday on a visit.

Dell Hiseock left on Tuesday for Syracuse, New York, where he will spend the holidays with his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Hiseock, of Tacoma, spent several days in Yakima during the past week, returning home Tuesday.

Mrs. J. C. Leach and child left for Minnetonka, Tuesday, on a visit to Mrs. Leach's parents. They will not return until spring.

The M. M. Club, a recently organized social club, of which George S. Vance is secretary, will give a dance at the opera house Friday evening.

Judge George Turner, of Spokane, was a Yakima visitor on Monday and Tuesday. The judge is figuring on the chances of supplanting John B. Allen in the U. S. senate, and the impression prevails that he has some reason for feeling sanguine.

Sol Smith defeated Hi Dustin for superior judge of Klickitat county. It is said Dustin, who is very popular, would have been elected, but his was the only name on the democratic ticket, and the populists, who wanted to vote for him, overlooked him like a white chip.

School facilities proving inadequate to the demands of increased population, a new room has been fitted up in the Central building, and Miss B. Mayne engaged as teacher, to commence next week. From present indications another room must soon be added, making six rooms in Central and five in Columbia.

An important sale of real estate was effected on Saturday last, through the agency of Fred R. Reed & Co., by which the Barrett ranch of 120 acres on the Moxee became the property of A. K. Hiseock, of Tacoma, and Robert McCook, of New York. The consideration was $12,000, and the entire body of land will be planted to fruit and hops.

J. R. Coe's experience with politics has been anything but fruitful of good results. He not only suffered defeat at the polls, but his left arm was dislocated at the shoulder through an accident by which he was thrown over an embankment, while driving in the dark from Parker Bottom towards home. The mishap now promises to prove of a serious nature. The arm has been repeatedly set but refuses to remain in place, and the muscles are forcing themselves into the socket. Mr. Coe expects to visit Seattle soon, accompanied by his brother, the doctor, where a medical consultation will be held and such steps taken as are necessary to save the usefulness of the arm.

R. D. Macdonald arrived from the Moxee, on Saturday, where the rotary well machine has been at work, and reported that by going down fifty feet further the volume of flowing water was doubled. This additional depth also gave evidence corroborative of Dr. W. F. Morrison's theory that the Moxee country is underlain with coal, for in going through the last strata the drill brought up a formation of shale, and when the vein of water was struck it carried with it an oily substance, said to be petroleum. The flowing water is coated with this oil for a time, and then it appears to give out, only to be renewed after an interval of ten or fifteen minutes.

Hon. Gardner G. Hubbard, of Washington, D. C., and Major Powell, director of U. S. geological surveys, will arrive in Yakima on Wednesday or Thursday of next week. Major Powell, it will be remembered, won added laurels by being one of the three who made the famous and only known journey down the 250 mile canyon of the Colorado river. There were nine of the party who started on the voyage of discovery. Four turned back owing to the difficulties that presented; two were drowned; but Major Powell and two companions braved every danger and surmounted every difficulty, and finally pulled through all right. Mr. Hubbard, as THE HERALD readers generally know, is largely interested in the Bell telephone, and is the principal stockholder of the Moxee company.

J. J. B. Short, of the firm of Thomas & Short, hop factors of London, was in the city Tuesday endeavoring to effect arrangements by which his house could handle Yakima hops. Messrs. Thomas & Short lay claim to being the first importers of Pacific coast hops, having commenced to handle these "goods" thirty years ago. Mr. Short is of the opinion that he also handled the first hop sent to London from this state, being the crop of Ezra Meeker, of Puyallup. He says he is beginning to realize the importance Yakima will cut in the hop world, and expects before long to see "Yakimas" quoted in the London market. At present all hops shipped to England from this state are quoted as Washingtons, while the California hops are known by the district in which they are grown—as the Soomans, Sacramentos and Russian Rivers. Mr. Short maintains that the Yakima hops should not be known in the markets, as the second country cannot produce such an attractive, bright, yellow hop. He says further that he believes the acreage of this county will be doubled this coming year, as he has heard many growers on the Sound express their intention of coming here with a view to investing and planting.

I. W. Dudley, superintendent of the Yakima Irrigating and Improvement company, was up from Kiona the fore part of the week and reported that work had been commenced on the dam across the Yakima river at Horn rapids, which will be required in supplying water to the Kennewick and Yakima branches of the company's irrigating system during low stages of the river. The dam will extend the width of the river bed, 600 feet, and will be of solid concrete, excepting the headgates, which will be of massive build and of the most improved pattern. The cost of the dam will be about $7,000. Mr. Dudley also said that H. S. Hudson had written him from Tacoma that the contract had been let for the company's hotel at Kiona. This structure will be 120 feet long, 60 feet deep with an L, three stories high, and will contain forty sleeping rooms. The building is to be finished in 90 days if the weather will permit, and the cost, unfurnished, will be $15,000. Mr. Dudley thinks that the lower Yakima will take great strides forward this coming year, as a vast amount of land is being cleared of sagebrush and made ready for cultivation.

A runaway accident, which fortunately terminated without serious harm, occurred to W. N. Granger and family Tuesday evening. Mr. Granger, accompanied by his wife and baby, was driving from Zillah, and coming along at a swift pace, when the forward wheels of the buggy struck a deep chuck hole and Mr. Granger was thrown out. The horses, finding a free rein, started on the dead run. Mrs. Granger, unable to gain control of the animals, with great presence of mind wrapped her baby in a wadding of robes and dropped it to the ground, and then leaped out herself. With the exception of some slight bruises sustained by Mrs. Granger none of the party were injured, and as the distance from the city was not great they suffered little inconvenience from the accident.

A scheme has been incubated for carrying a new county out of parts of Kittitas, Douglas and Okanogan counties, with Wenatchee for the county seat. It is claimed that the support of the legislative delegation of Kittitas county has been pledged to this project. As the building of the Great Northern will greatly increase property valuations in that section, Ellensburg will stoutly resist the dissection on the grounds that as the lower end of the county has been heavily taxed to maintain a police government in turbulent Wenatchee, and for the improvement of roads, it is not justice to cut off that district as soon as it gives promise of being self sustaining.

Mr. H. B. Scudder is in receipt of a letter from U. G. Wickson, of San Francisco, in whose interest Mr. Schmidt was here some time ago looking up the creamery project, in which he says that William M. Turner, the most practical creamery man who has ever visited the state, will be in Yakima in a few days with a view to the furtherance of the proposed project. Mr. Wickson writes that Mr. Turner understands the business thoroughly from the planning of the building to the marketing of the product, and that he has just completed the erection and fitting of a creamery at Eatsop.

The teachers' examination held on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week, resulted in the granting of certificates as follows: Second grade, Mrs. Douglas, J. H. B. Clark; third grade, Miss Belle Yeates, Miss Carrie Jacobs, Miss Mayne, Miss Eva Lampson, and Miss Linnie Redmon. The Misses Hood, Savage and Schaffner failed to pass. Mr. Clark immediately secured a position as teacher of the Kiona school, and Mrs. Douglas as teacher of the intermediate department of the Yakima City school.

The meeting at the club rooms on Friday evening of last week resulted in the formation of a whist club of twelve members, of which Mrs. Edward Whitson was elected presiding officer and Miss Anna Mattoon secretary. The first bi-weekly meeting was held at the residence of Mrs. Whitson, Monday evening, and the next will be at the residence of Mrs. Geo. Donald, Monday, November 28.

Sheriff Simmons and his deputies took fifteen prisoners to the United States court at Walla Walla, and the following were convicted and are awaiting sentence under charge of selling liquor to Indians: James Emery, Franklin Bradford, Samuel Hayes, Aleck Geveneaux, William Moore, John Smith, John Breese, Olive Estia, William Smith, James L. Stowe and Peter Markey.

A. B. Weed shipped a carload of hops grown by Jack Shaw and Tom Nelson, to London, on Monday. The price now quoted for hops is 30 1/2 cents, and the market is firm. Mr. Weed says the indications are that dealers will try and hold the quotations at these figures.

John A. Todd of Spokane, deputy U. S. internal revenue collector for this district, was in the city Wednesday. Mr. Todd has only a few more months in which to serve this government in an official capacity. He is on the wrong side of the fence.

O. A. Fechter is favorably mentioned as a candidate for mayor to succeed A. B. Weed, whose resignation must be forthcoming before the first of January, when he takes his seat as a member of the lower house of the state legislature.

J. D. Laman, an old and respected citizen and postmaster at Walla Walla, died at that place on Tuesday after a brief illness. Mr. Laman was one of the Fraser river pilgrims in 1858.

Mrs. Lorinda Davis, of Texas, who was here on a visit to her sister, Mrs. A. J. Tigard, of the Covychee valley, died on Wednesday morning, of consumption.

M. V. B. Stacy returned from Seattle Wednesday morning. Mr. Stacy expects to make his headquarters in Yakima this winter.

H. J. Sively's horse ran away Wednesday evening, but with the exception of a broken photon spring no harm resulted.

The wheelbarrow bet seems to be inseparable from a presidential election, and Yakima, in order to keep fully abreast of the times, had two of them, which were settled on Saturday afternoon of last week. The winners, who did the riding, were Dr. G. J. Hill and Sam Vinson; and the losers, who handled the barrows as though they had served an apprenticeship on the grade, were Fred R. Reed and John Reed. The procession formed at the depot. First came a hack drawn by four black horses, then a band consisting of a bass horn and a bass drum, next a lad with a Cleveland and Stevenson transparency and then the principals. Messrs. Hill and Vinson wore Cleveland hats and carried flags, while the Reeds wore Harrison hats draped with bousazine. The line of march was down Yakima avenue to the Hotel Yakima. The sidewalks were thronged with people, who applauded the make-up of the procession and the pathetic strains of the band as it played "Empty Is the Cradle, Benny's Gone."

Next Sunday morning, at high mass, the Rev. A. Sweeny, of the Immaculate Conception church, of Seattle, will open a mission in the Catholic church of this city. As it is the first mission that has ever been held here, the Catholics consider it a great privilege and will closely follow the exercises, the order of which is as here mentioned. Sunday, 10 a. m., opening lecture; again in the evening at 7:30; week days, 6 a. m. and 8:30 a. m.; lecture and benediction at 7:30 p. m.

S. G. Crandall, of Tacoma, who was a candidate on the democratic ticket for the legislature, spent Saturday last in the city, looking after business interests and conferring with political friends. It required the official count to determine that Mr. Crandall was not successful at the polls, but a close vote in such a strong republican county should be gratifying to him, as it shows the favor in which he is held in Pierce county.

W. H. Chapman, J. B. Pugeley and Emil Schanno started down the river in a small boat, on Saturday last, intent upon bagging enough game to supply all of their friends in town, and they very nearly accomplished their purpose. They returned by train Tuesday, bringing 74 ducks, pheasants and chickens, three geese and seven jack rabbits. They found their best hunting grounds in the vicinity of Jock Morgan's ranch.

The Girls' Guild of the Episcopal church propose giving a novel entertainment at Mason's opera house, on December 14, to be known as the Fair of Nations. The object of the entertainment is to raise funds to apply on the church debt, and there will be attractions sufficient at the fair to make the most stringent purse strings loosen.

The switchback on the Great Northern road will be finished next week, so that the track can be laid westward from this side of the mountains. It is now thought that through rail connections to the Sound will be made by January 1st, although it will take some time thereafter to get the road in condition for traffic.

Miss Rosa Stanus, whom the Yakima public will remember, is shortly to give her readings and recitations at The Dalles, and as an impersonator equal to Helen Potter, and as an elocutionist the equal of Mrs. Siddons. Rosa evidently still carries her nerve with her.

Work is being done on Wallace Atherton's place, south of the city, to prepare a suitable pool for skating. There is a dam already there, and flooding will be an easy matter when the work now under way is completed. A club is being organized and the expense will be borne by the members.

A. L. Moorehouse, an old and well known citizen of Kittitas county, has fallen heir to $23,000 through the death of a relative in California. Last week he left for his business affairs and left for the Golden state to take possession of his newly acquired riches.

A hearty laugh will cure the blues, indigestion, gout and a great many other ailments to which the human family is heir. If you are not feeling well, go and see "A Tramp's Daughter" next Thursday evening. Reserved seats are now on sale at Janek's drug store.

L. F. Pastow, who was under bonds to appear before the U. S. court at Walla Walla, on the charge of selling liquor without a license, was acquitted, notwithstanding that the evidence against him was rather strong.

There will be a meeting at the office of Jones & Newman, on Friday evening at 7 o'clock, for the purpose of organizing a debating club. All interested in such a movement are requested to be present.

Mrs. J. J. Tyler has been at the point of death this week, but is now reported much better. Her sickness is ascribed to an overdose of opiates taken to allay nervousness.

A union Thanksgiving service will be held in the Christian church next Thursday morning at 11 o'clock. Sermon by Rev. S. H. Cheside. All are invited to attend.

Prof. J. G. Lawrence has been appointed to take World's fair statistics for this county, a duty which was overlooked by the assessor this year.

F. W. Parker, representing the Chicago & Northwestern railway, was in the city on Saturday last, looking after the interests of his company.

H. J. Sively is to-day at Ellensburg engaged on the case of the state vs. Frost charged with shooting at Attorney A. L. Simmons.

A. G. Maister, special agent of the Washington Farmers' Insurance Company, is a guest of the Hotel Yakima.

WORK RESUMED ON THE BIG DITCH.

The Contract Let for the Remaining Thirty Miles—Yakima On the Top Wave of Prosperity.

The contract for the remaining thirty miles of the Sunnyside irrigating canal was signed on Friday last, and on Monday Messrs. Katz & Smith moved their plant on to the works. The surveys on ten miles of the uncompleted line of canal is finished, and the engineering force is now working on the twenty miles of line beyond and terminating at Prosser. The contract also calls for about sixty miles of laterals, and it is expected that the work will be completed by April 1st, 1923. With the canal already built and that under contract, 66,000 acres of productive land will be brought under water. The headquarters of Katz & Smith will be at Zillah, where James T. Foster will have charge of the accounts. Previous to leaving for the front, Mr. Katz said he could not tell what force he would have employed at present, but if the weather would permit of effective work, and the engineers could keep in advance of the grades, he expected to have about two hundred men and teams.

Yakima, which is already the most prosperous section of the state, will be greatly benefited by the resumption of this important work, as it will not only conduce to immigration, settlement and cultivation of new lands, but a vast amount of money will be expended for supplies and in the payment of labor, which will mainly remain in this county.

Conundrum Sapper Next Tuesday.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Presbyterian church will give a conundrum supper in the Cadwell building Tuesday evening, November 22d, beginning at 6 o'clock. There will also be a musical entertainment during the evening. The following is the menu:

AT A BARGAIN.

Parties desiring to purchase property on the west side of the track will do well to call at the Little house for the next two or three days.

H. H. Lombard, Harry Coosue and H. J. Putnam returned from a trip to the Columbia river, Wednesday.

THE CITY COUNCIL IN SESSION.

An Uneventful Meeting After a Long Vacation—More Sidewalk Construction Authorized.

The council met in adjourned session Monday evening after a long struggle to secure a quorum. There were present Mayor Wood and Councilmen Carpenter, Cox, Needham, Schorn and Vaughn.

A petition for an arc light at the corner of A and First streets, signed by J. C. MacCrimmon and others, was referred to the committee on public improvements. A petition was presented signed by L. R. Freeman and other property holders, praying for a sidewalk on the west side of First street, from A to E streets. The prayer of the petitioners was granted and the clerk instructed to notify property owners. The same action was taken regarding a petition signed by George Donald and other property holders on Second street for a sidewalk from the southeast corner of block 28, along blocks 27 and 28.

A petition signed by a large number of the fire department requesting badges for the firemen was read. The committee on fire and fire limits, to whom the petition was referred, had a report ready recommending the purchase of the badges, which was adopted.

Claims were presented and referred to the finance committee as follows: C. E. Schwartz, $91.65; Jasper Mikkelson, $5.75; E. E. Card, $2.50; G. E. Parrish, $2.50; Tom Kelley, $2.50; Charles Hauser, $2.50; Curtis Greene, $2.50; O. H. Applegate, $2.50; MacCrimmon & Needham, $9.45; D. T. Myers, $4.25; Wiley, $5; J. Crane, $8; Allen Hall, $84; G. W. Williams, $46; H. Ward, $39; J. J. Mills, $8; Peter Leonard, $31.50; J. J. Baehner, $5; John F. Linder, $88; George Winter, $5; David Lyons, $5.00; Frank Lyons, $4; W. H. Redman, $17.20; Janek's Pharmacy, $7.80; Fitter Bros., $5.50; C. S. Nevitt, $80.68; Yakima Herald, $78.

Bills to the amount of $1776.63, including the monthly pay roll of $555.70 and $1,000 to Whitson & Parker and Reavis & Milroy for legal services in the R. Schmidt sewer construction case, were passed.

Reports were received from the city justice and marshal showing 33 arrests for violation of ordinances during October.

Consideration of the minority report of the committee on police in reference to charges against the marshal was deferred until the next regular meeting.

Mr. R. Strobach was heard on a request for permission to repair the building on First street formerly occupied by Mrs. L. J. May. The matter was referred to the committee on public improvements with power to act.

John Reed asked for consideration of better means of connection with the water works for fire purposes. Referred to the committee on fire and fire limits, which was also instructed to investigate whether there was any negligence on the part of the water company or employees at the time of the late fire.

After resolving itself into a board of equalization to sit from day to day, the council adjourned.

Plans for the railway have already been submitted.

A baker's dozen is thirteen, so is a publisher's or a news agent's in many parts of the world. In some sections a dozen of fish means twenty-six, and there are other anomalies of this kind. But to find a dozen indicating anything from two to fifty, it is necessary to go to the earthenware trade. Here the sizes and weights of articles decide how many make a dozen, and in jugs, bowls, plates, and so on there are two, four, six, eight or more to the dozen. A dozen composed of twelve articles is a very unusual thing in the wholesale pottery trade, and as a result there are few clerks more difficult to hold than in this line.

BREAKS ENGAGED FOR THE WORLD'S FAIR.

The New Siamese Twins—They Are Exciting the Attention of the Medical Profession.

The new Siamese twins do not come from Siam, but are natives of Orissa, India. They are two pretty little girls, three and a half years old, and have been engaged to appear at the World's fair. The peculiarity of their connection is that there is a flexible bony attachment from breast to breast, and below this there is a visceral connection. There is only one navel. If food is given to one the other is satisfied, and if medicine is administered to one the other is affected, but not to the same extent as the one to which it was given.

The most curious circumstance is that when a sentence is begun by one child the other frequently finishes it. When sleeping one child lies on her back and the other on her side, which gives an idea of the great flexibility of the connection. The children are very good friends, and seldom quarrel, but when younger their proceedings were not marked with that unanimity which they have since discovered to be essential to their circumstances. As might be expected, when their relations were strained there was considerable tension between them, but when it gradually dawned upon their infantile intelligence that when one was hurt the other had to cry out of sheer sympathy, a mutual understanding was arrived at that "rows" should be discontinued, and now balmey peace reigns supreme.

For their age the twins are particularly intelligent. They have been taught English for the last three months, and, although they do not speak more than a few simple words, they seem to understand it fairly well already. The twins have excited a great deal of interest among the medical profession in India.

TO SLEEP FOR A CENTURY.

Possibility of Outdoing Irving's Rip Van Winkle—No Waste of Age During a Nap of Years.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: "It has frequently been said that truth is stranger than fiction," remarked Dr. Henry Powderly to a little party that was discussing Washington Irving's romantic story of Rip Van Winkle in the Lindell rotunda.

"I often think that I would like to go to sleep and wake up in the full enjoyment of my faculties a century later—say about the year 2000. I believe that this will be successfully done. Cases of suspended animation for considerable periods of time frequently occur. I have myself pronounced people dead who are now in the full enjoyment of vigorous life. I have no doubt that thousands of people have been entombed alive after having been examined by reputable and careful physicians. If the life force may be so completely suspended for a day or two and then resumed, why may it not be taken up again after the lapse of a century or more? Irving makes Rip Van Winkle sleep during his 20 years' nap. That is, I think, wrong.

"Should the life force be so completely suspended that a man would not require food there would be little or no waste, and he would wake up as youthful and vigorous as when he dozed off. I believe it will yet be possible for a man, by taking century naps, to enjoy a few years of life during every century for 1,000 years or more. I can see no good reason for believing that the nineteenth century has reached the high tide of scientific achievement."

GEN. FORREST'S PETS.

THE SEVENTH TENNESSEE CAVALRY IN BATTLE AND RAID.

The Troopers Were Comparatively Amateurs When Forrest Adopted Them Into His Band, but They Soon Outrivalled His Crack Soldiers at Their Own Game.

AVALLRY fight between the Seventh Tennessee Cavalry and the Union forces was inaugurated at a late stage in the war. It was near the close of 1863 when Gen. Forrest was created major general and placed at the head of an army of mounted men. Up to that date there had been numerous raids and some important horseback charges, but the thundering tread of iron hoofs and whirring rush of mighty cavalries were almost unknown.

Like most regiments of Confederate cavalry, the Seventh had grown up out of separate companies of mounted rangers that rushed to arms in 1861 to guard some post or town. These separate companies in time joined forces in order to swell their importance and named and raised as battalions until it suited them to unite and form regiments. Logwood's battalion, comprising four companies from Memphis, in time joined forces in order to swell their importance and named and raised as battalions until it suited them to unite and form regiments.

It was a special train filling the gap between the moving divisions of the army and guarded by a battalion of regulars. The Confederates waited for the train to pull out of the station, then called the men to arms and demanded surrender. Gen. Sherman answered "No!" and ordered the train back to the station. The station house was of brick and was located about 300 yards away from the station. The regulars, with some volunteers guarding the place, took their stand in the station and fort, and the railroad was not to be used by the Confederate leader, Gen. Chalmers, with great deliberation formed his men for a clean sweep.

The Seventh was placed abreast of the station and fort, and the sound of the bugle dashed gallantly up, setting the whole train. The supporting columns all failed to do anything, and the guards and garrison rallied to concentrate their strength upon the station and fort, and the railroad was not to be used by the Confederate leader, Gen. Chalmers, with great deliberation formed his men for a clean sweep.

Forrest's first exploit when he got his newly fledged cavalry corps well in hand was to suffer an excessive number of Union troops from Memphis to the fertile border of Mississippi. It was in February, 1864. The Union troops were led by Gen. Sooy Smith. Forrest set to work to harass Smith's march and delay the column until a favorable opportunity offered to smite it.

At the first stand young Forrest was mostly successful. He kept the Union troops from Memphis to the fertile border of Mississippi. It was in February, 1864. The Union troops were led by Gen. Sooy Smith. Forrest set to work to harass Smith's march and delay the column until a favorable opportunity offered to smite it.

A less animated soldier than Forrest was not to be expected. He was a line before him without bringing up help or resting his men, but he had just come from the side of his dying brother, who was an especial favorite, and seemed bent on vengeance. He took the Seventh regiment in hand, sending its colonel off to replace the fallen brigade leader, and dismissed it to disperse war. As it advanced the Union cavalry trotted down the hillside.

DEMANDED SURRENDER. also bent on a charge. The Tennesseeans quickly dropped into a depression and allowed their opponents to ride close up to their line. It took but a couple of volleys to empty scores of saddles and send the horsemen back up the hill.

The instant the tide turned Gen. Forrest shouted the command "Charge them!" and the regiment arose with a yell and dashed after the fleeing cavalry, not stopping until the line was broken and a battery captured and turned upon its friends. The enemy was completely routed, and the Seventh kept up the chase for hours, outstripping the rest of Forrest's command. That night Forrest bivouached with the regiment and pressed the fighting qualities of the men so openly that the troopers were named "Forrest's Pets," an honor previously monopolized by his own old regiment. After the fight Forrest remained in the vicinity some days, and an enthusiastic lady of Aberdeen, inspired by the general admiration of the Tennesseeans, presented them with a bottling made from her own wedding dress. This incident had a sequel.

One month later Forrest made another of his numerous incursions across west Tennessee. The important post of Union City lay in the path, and Col. Duckworth, of the Seventh, was ordered to attack it with his own regiment and a couple of companies in support. Col. Duckworth led the charge, and coming to close quarters the cover of darkness was by the light of a lamp which he placed within a few feet of his horse's head, and then, having put his neck into a trap, so to speak, he was in a tight place. Forrest's orders were imperative, and his plans elsewhere called for the fall of Union City.

Col. Duckworth and his men knew the ground thoroughly, having camped there in 1861, so it was decided to adopt a ruse of war to even up the odds somewhat. They hadn't a single cannon along, but they rigged up a substitute out of a log and a section of wagon rear, which, if it wouldn't go off, would scatter to the best, and that was all that was needed. The troopers dismounted and marched in front of the works, sending the horses with holders to the rear. At the proper time the horse holders sounded the bugle and led the horses back again to the line on a thundering gallop to simulate cavalry reinforcements. Then Col. Duckworth rode up to the fort and demanded surrender in the name of Gen. Forrest.

The Union commander, who was a colonel, answered the demand by asking to see Gen. Forrest at the flag of truce to arrange terms. Col. Duckworth promptly signed Forrest's name, with full rank, to a note stating that a major general was not expected to parley with an enemy of his rank, and that Col. Duckworth, of the Seventh Tennessee cavalry, would arrange the details. It so happened that the garrison was composed of the Seventh Tennessee Union cavalry, and whether the nervousness over that Quaker gun, which the telegraph operator in town magnified into two cannon, clinched the raider's argument, has never been explained, but at that rate the perturbed colonel promptly hoisted the white flag. Thus after an absence of two years the old rangers again owned the town of Union City.

It was while taking an enemy of his rank that Forrest stormed Fort Pillow, but the Seventh had no share in that glorious exploit. Then the whole corps galloped once more to central Mississippi to meet the Union raiding expedition under Gen. Sturgis. A finishing fight took place at Brice's Crossroads, June 10.

Private Soldiers of the Seventh. A month later another Union column under the experienced and met Forrest at Tupelo. After some minor fighting the Union troops picked their ground and awaited battle. Forrest dismounted his men and led them recklessly toward the breastworks across open ground swept with canister and musketry fire. The slaughter was enormous, but the persistent fighter put in his last reserves, which in Tennessee are called "red legs," and the soldiers were suffering with fatigue and thirst, but they struggled on across that field of death to within seventy yards of the breastworks. The rest of them were shot down, and the host prostrated those spared by the bullets so that the line melted from view and Forrest's last hope was gone.

Although victorious at Tupelo the Union column marched home to Memphis, and Forrest once more set out to carry the war into Africa by stirring things up in west Tennessee. In the route that followed the Seventh picked up to fighting strength again—Tupelo had about finished it and a captain was in command, which for those days was about 800. In one of these expeditions an incident occurred which showed that the Tennesseeans were not unwilling converts, but were the gray from choice.

Forrest was caught north of the Tennessee river with but 2,000 men to cope with 12,000. He hastened to the river near Pulaski and began to ferry his troops and guns across on two old barges. Finally all had crossed, but the rear guard, which was the Seventh Tennessee, the lanks above and below and the country behind were all enemies, and the rear guard was to be the last to cross. The word was passed along for each man to go it on his own hook—the strong swimmers to take to the water and those not up in the stroke to lie low and sneak off through the Union lines to the open country. As if by magic the rear guard vanished, and the enemy dashed to the river brink, only to see heels and dust where they looked for Forrest's cavalry. The adventures of the rear guard while getting away were thrilling, but eventually every man turned up at the rendezvous.

The regiment clung to the west to the end, brigaded with his own old regiment. It was in the famous raid on the gunboats at Johnsonville, at the front in Hood's dash; foray on Nashville, and rear guard in the retreat. It fought Wilson's campaign on the great cavalry roundup through Alabama in the spring of 1865 and kept the field a month after Appomattox. The day before the surrender the regiment gathered for the last time around their historic flag, and in taking leave of it each man clipped off a shred. In the morning the colors received only a single man, a trophy, every vestige of the wedding suit having disappeared under the jackets of the men whose blood had laved the consecrated banner in many a charge and whose valor had saved it on many a daring raid.

Cherish the home with infinite tenderness. You cannot love it too much nor give it too much time and thought. Remember, life has nothing better to offer you; it is the climax and crown of God's gifts. Make every day of life its rich and sweet. It will not last long. See to it that you plan no neglect of bitter memory that there be no regrets and no harshness to haunt you in after years.—Detroit Free Press.

Two Careful Women. A careful woman dwells in Canterbury, N. H. She has had a lamp chimney in constant use for twenty years, and it still without a flaw. Another careful woman has her home in Port Richmond, S. I. She was married thirteen years ago, and began her married life with two rows of pins. She has thirty-seven of them yet, and would be perfectly happy if she could find the three missing pins.—Yankee Blade.

Gifts of Two Women. The late Mrs. W. T. Sherman and Miss Mary Gwendolen Caldwell have given more money to the Catholic church than any other women in America. Miss Caldwell has given the money through her private purse; Mrs. Sherman through subscriptions raised among her friends. Both women have received from the pope special gold medals.—New York Sun.

THE POLITICAL VOYAGERS.

A Defeated Candidate Writes up the Departure for Salt River.

A Gloomy Crowd, Who Have Only a Deck of Cards and a Small Vial to Consume Them on Their Long Journey.

CITY OF DISAPPOINTMENT, COUNTY OF BRIGHTENED HOPES, November 11, 1892.

E. M. Reed, Esq., editor Yakima Herald: I now write you an account of our departure for this "Land of giant men, Whose deeds are linked with every glen."

The ship Despair left North Yakima harbor November 9, 1892, with T. M. Vance, captain; F. D. Eshelman, second officer; W. A. Cox, purser, and Joseph Stephenson cook.

The writer, as he stood and looked into tearful eyes, was reflecting upon the frailty of human votes, the certainty of republican tickets and the cruelty of ballot boxes.

Poor Cox sat in a corner adding up the other fellow's majorities, while the wife supporting him had just taken an account of stock in his large store.

The last act in the drama of parting was the presentation of "How to Cure the Scalp" by Cameron to poor Weston.

With the cards given us by George, and our bottle by our side, we have been taught how to play draw poker, and Foster and Cox are now traveling as "professionals" in this land of defunct political tricksters.

As for us, we are "reading Blackstone" and hope soon to be able to fleece some clients to make up for the losses of the campaign.

The "Star Route Yakima County Regular Election Ticket" and the committee did the work for us. Cox and I have one of these framed in gilt. As we look upon it we do not exclaim vidi, vici, with the old Roman, but with the living tongue shout "Neika wake slah memelosee."

Yours until 1894, F. D. ESHELMAN, Late democratic candidate for county auditor, who failed for want of votes. Selah!

CHRISTMAS WILL SOON BE HERE.

Homemade Remembrances For That Happy Occasion—Some Trifling Tokens of Friendship.

"Christmas cards and holiday books and booklets are only for careless people who don't want to think about what to give for holiday remembrance."

We made: "Christmas cards and holiday books and booklets are only for careless people who don't want to think about what to give for holiday remembrance."

Another large square envelope can be marked "Loving Thoughts for Christmas," and may contain single pieces of thick paper to fit, each with a suitable quotation written or printed.

This idea may be carried out by twelve inclosed papers, forming a monthly calendar. As it is a considerable trouble to mark the days, secure a nice calendar, separate the twelve leaves, and tie each one on the heavy paper back with embroidery silk or very narrow ribbon, putting a quotation in fancy letters on the remaining space; a silken string is fastened to each, so that one by one they may be taken out and hung up during the proper month.

A very dainty and acceptable sort of calendar can be made by any one who writes a delicate hand, not necessarily beautiful, but so that the effect is neat and fine lined. Prepare sheets of fine cream or white paper, all cut exactly the same size. This can be done on the big cutting machine at THE HERALD office.

If you are not afraid of writing have one sheet for each day in the year, a quotation to be put on each one in ink, though not with fancy lettering. Thirty-one sheets, one for each day in a month, will make a convenient calendar of quotations; or twelve, one for every month in the year, each with the name above.

When all the quotations are written pile the sheets of paper in the proper order and tie a ribbon around them near the left side. Two similar sheets, one for the back and one for the front, are, of course, included. The front may be decorated if desired, though the ribbon and any suitable words done in gold will be sufficient.

Envelope sachets are exquisite little mementos of the season. Put inside a square octavo envelope a pad made of wadding, cut to fit. Sprinkle sachet powder inside the wadding, seal the envelope, and have the front decorated with flowers to match the perfume—violets, lilacs, roses or heliotrope. Tie the whole with narrow ribbon the hue of the flower, putting it on as you would tie a square package, only crossing it at one side instead of in the center.

After all one hates to let Christmas cards entirely alone. They are so very pretty. Why not mount them on water color paper or a satin ribbon? In the latter way, if the ribbon is fringed, nice book marks can be made.

Readers of THE YAKIMA HERALD are familiar not only with the sprightly writings of Marion Harland, but also with her sound common sense upon matters of every day life and action. Her name, indeed, is a household word, and is equally well known in parlor and kitchen.

Her celebrated cook book, "Common Sense in the Household," is without a peer and shows that she has made a careful study of how to prepare good, wholesome food, in the best manner by the best materials.

BOLD SONS OF MAINE.

HEROIC AND BANGUINARY CHARGES OF THE SIXTH REGIMENT.

Sealed the Stone-wall and Earth Redoubts at Marye's Heights and Planted the First Flag Upon the Crest—A Stirring Line Charge at Rappahannock Redoubts

UNDAY, May 3, 1863, was a matchless day on the northern neck of Virginia, where the Rappahannock flows, and twenty odd thousand of us arose from our bivouacs and shook the dust from our uniforms to put on a holiday shine, although, the Sabbath having found us in the presence of the enemy just where we had passed several miles of the line, the chances were many to one that we would fight before we prayed or slept again.

Our corps d'armee under Gen. Sedgwick lay on the southern or Confederate side of the river in the shelter of the ravines that thread the plain below Fredericksburg midway between the river's bank and the base of the range of hills made famous by the bloody struggles of two campaigns.

Sedgwick had stolen a march on the Confederates by leading us across under their very noses one misty, foggy morning, and the enemy had less cause to concern himself about what we would do after pouncing so close to our game than we had to concern ourselves about how he should be dislodged from his hillside rifle pits and the cannon crowned crests above them.

We had been there before on the same errand, and had seen 13,000 of our comrades follow the same line like sheep to the slaughter, and we were called—who who numbered but 34,000. True, we were not entirely alone. Five other corps, constituting five sixths of the then magnificent Army of the Potomac and numbering nearly 100,000 men, lay but eight miles distant, beyond those heights and beyond the Confederate camps on the same elevated plane, and our days of wearing inactivity in these narrow and cramped ravines had been at times enlivened by the thought that the Sixth corps had crossed the river merely to lie low and gobble up the men in gray whom the other corps would drive down in the valley on their march across the hills to meet us.

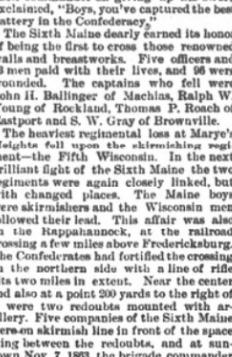

But, no, the order came from army headquarters at Chancellorsville about midnight on Saturday that the Sixth corps should climb the heights and drive the enemy out and push him on into the trap alleged to be awaiting him at the other end of the line.

Steadily, once more our columns marched and counter-marched up and down the ravines and over the plains, as we had done every night for a week, and at daylight on Sunday the Sixth corps alarm the enemy might have taken from our movements. We covered a little more ground and hugged the foot of the hills a little closer, that was all that showed on the surface. But the programme for the day showed something more. Every regiment and every battery in the line was to crowd and harass the enemy in its front, while a picked steering column should make a forlorn attempt to scale Marye's Heights, the stronghold of all that range of embattled hills—Marye's Heights with their stone wall breastworks and earth redoubts, their reputation as a slaughter pen and their machinery for butchery in prime working order.

The highest point of honor fell by meretricious accident to the Sixth Maine regiment, a body of stalwart lumbermen from the banks of the Penobscot. The storming party consisted of a line of battle, deployed parallel to the heights, with heavy coils of muskets massed to form the wings. The line of battle was led by Col. Hiram Burnham, of the Sixth Maine, his own regiment on the right flanking the plank road, which ascended and crossed Marye's hill. Three regiments were on the left of the Maine men, and one—the Fifth Wisconsin—was skirmishing in front of the whole line.

COL. HARRIS Laid HIS HAND UPON THE CANNON.

broken between the Maine boys and the right column, and also between them and the regiment on their left. Thus they dashed on alone and well ahead and up to and over the stone wall were the musketry fire was hottest, and on to the rifle pits and redoubts above. It was so quickly done that the enemy's reserves hadn't time to rally at the wall.

Major Joel Haycock fell while cheering his men in the first dash and in front of the rifle pits. As they were about to mount their sword in hand four young captains were cut down at the head of their companies by musket balls fired from the pits. The fatal volley also carried down scores of the men, but the survivors were only maddened by the disaster, and rubbed upon the defenders of the pit with bayonets and clubbed muskets. The attack on the redoubts was led to the very mouths of the guns. The commanding officer, Lieut. Col. Harris, next a discharge of cannon and the next moment laid his hand upon the cannon.

The color bearer, Sergt. Gray, was so close to the muzzle of the gun that the force of the discharge knocked him down. Another sergeant, Hill, of Company C, seized the staff and planted the flag, which had been riddled with canister, upon the earth embankment. The Confederates returned to the spot to look back the assailants, and then the Maine boys set the banner without stint. One of them bayoneted two muskets and held them with the butt of his gun. Hand to hand affairs are always short lived, and this one was over in a few minutes and Col. Burnham's line in possession of the heights, the guns and hundreds of prisoners. The artillery cannon belonged to the famous Washington battalion of New Orleans, and their commander giving up his sword exclaimed, "Boys, you've captured the best battery in the Confederacy."

The Sixth Maine dearly earned its honor of being the first to cross those renowned walls and breastworks. Five officers and 33 men paid with their lives, and 96 were wounded. The captains who fell were John H. Ballinger of Machias, Ralph W. Young of Rockland, Thomas F. Roach of Eastport and S. W. Gray of Brownville.

The heaviest regimental loss at Marye's Heights fell upon the skirmishing regiment—the Fifth Wisconsin. In the next brilliant fight of the Sixth Maine the two regiments were again closely linked, but with changed places. The Maine boys were skirmishers and the Wisconsin men followed their lead. This affair was also on the Rappahannock, at the railroad crossing a few miles above Fredericksburg. The Confederates had fortified the crossing on the northern side with a line of rifle pits two miles in extent. Near the center and also at a point 300 yards to the right of it were two redoubts mounted with artillery. Five companies of the Sixth Maine were in skirmish line in front of the space lying between the redoubts, and at sundown Nov. 7, 1863, the brigade commander ordered the skirmishers to be doubled and pushed forward to the enemy's works.

The remaining five companies of the Sixth regiment were then deployed and marched to the front, forming two ranks of white of face with no speck of yolk in it. The Fifth Wisconsin formed at some distance in the rear to support the attack. The Maine boys moved out with their muskets and giving their enemy's skirmishers before their men, countered an unforeseen obstacle. Across the pathway lay a ditch twelve to fourteen feet wide and about six feet deep, with mud and water at the bottom. Scrambling

How to Hang Pictures. In hanging pictures it is to be remembered that although pictures look better hung in the usual way, with a sloping line from the top to the wall at the bottom,

AN AID TO SLEEP.

I should like to give the young mother struggling with a cross baby, wearing away her strength in hopeless walking or rocking, which does little or no good, a simple receipt which is well worth trying.

Children under two years of age are very subject to indigestion in various degrees, caused by the existence of unfermented food in the stomach and bowels, and are more often fretful from this than any other cause. By injecting with a fountain syringe a moderate quantity of lukewarm water just before bedtime, and thus cleaning the bowels of any undigested matter, in nine cases out of ten the child will fall into healthful sleep. This may be repeated two or even three times a day with equally beneficial results. If some tired mother will try this experiment, I feel sure she will wake in the morning with a baby exhibiting that peace and calm of mind which can only result from a sound and refreshing sleep.—Constance B. White in Babyhood.

Cleaning That Requires Great Skill. The covers of albums and other drawing room books soon become worn and faded if much used, but if the bindings are of leather they can easily be revived by the following process: Wash the leather as lightly as possible with water in which the smallest morsel of soda has been dissolved, in order to free it from grease. Then wash with clean water to remove the soda and let it dry. Now dissolve a bit of gum arabic about half the size of the little finger nail in a teaspoonful of water, and beat this up with about the same quantity of white of egg with no speck of yolk in it. With a bit of sponge wash the leather lightly over with this glair and let it dry. Should the glair, however, froth up on the leather, as it will very likely do if there is much too much work on the book, dab it with the palm of the hand or with the sponge squeezed as dry as possible till removed.—Chicago Tribune.

Mahogany Sewing. Mahogany of the first grain and marking is sawed up into veneer of half a dozen sawmills in this town. Mahogany sawing is a very pretty business, and a mahogany sawyer is a well paid man of great skill and long experience. He must know whether a log is suitable for veneer or alab; must be able to guess whether its heart runs straight or "dips," must see far enough into a log to decide whether it shall be cut transversely before being sawed lengthwise and whether it shall be quartered as oak is quartered or saved straight through with the grain from end to end.—New York Sun.
