The land on which 721 17th Avenue stands is part of the Edes & Knight's addition, the first plat for the Central Area of Seattle. The plat was filed with the city in 1875 by N. B. Knight and George & Rhoda Edes, covering the area between 10th and 20th Avenues on the west and east and Union and Cherry on the north and south. Block 24 of the addition, in which 721 17th Ave. occupies lots 19 and 20, was replatted in 1890.

The Edes & Knight's addition has a number of notable and historically significant buildings still standing, including quite a few apartments. The cluster of apartment buildings on 17th between Marion and Union, for example, were all constructed in the first decade of the 20th century and designed to reflect various eclectic styles of the era. These buildings were noted in a city survey for significant buildings. 721 17th was not.

The current apartment building at 721 17th Avenue (briefly 721-23 17th Ave.) was constructed in 1907 and named the Walcott Apartments. The building is a wood frame with a brick exterior, three stories (plus basement) and included 32 apartments, "modern in all particulars."

Walcott Apartments Which Change Owners

The Walcott Apartments, at 721-25 Seventeenth Avenue, were sold last Friday by Evelyn Sullivan to Fred G. Cutler for $45,000. The building, which contains twenty-one apartments and cost $34,000, has just been finished and is only partly occupied. The new owner will change the name of the building to "Cutler Court."

Two years after construction, owner Evelyn Sullivan sold the building to Fred G. Cutler, who renamed it Cutler Court. It changed hands again in 1911 when sold to A. D. Helms of Ashland, Oregon. ## Influenza Brings Butte Man Wife; Honeymoon Here

A victim of the influenza and of Cupid, M. F. Cleary, a Butte business man, is spending his honeymoon in Seattle with his bride, who was Miss Margaret Shaughnessy, a well known nurse, for some years connected with the staff of Providence Hospital. The bridegroom is a brother of Patrolman M. J. Cleary of the Seattle Police Department.

During the outbreak of the influenza in the fall of 1918 Mr. Cleary came to Seattle on account of the illness of Patrolman Cleary's wife.

While assisting in the illness in his brother's family Mr. Cleary contracted the disease himself, and went to Columbus Sanitarium, where he met his future bride, then on duty there.

The romance which had its beginning in the hospital continued, and when the man from Butte went home he obtained a promise from Miss Shaughnessy that she would go to the Montana mining capital and join the nursing staff of the St. James Hospital. At close range Cupid closed the romance, and now the couple are spending the honeymoon here.

'WE WORKED HARDER':

Veteran Nurse Is Happy With Care

Mrs. Margaret Shaughnessy Cleary rested her snow-white head on a snow-white pillow in her room in Providence Hospital and made a few observations.

As a member of the first graduating class of the Providence Hospital School of Nursing in 1910 and now a patient, Mrs. Cleary spoke with authority, mixed with admitted bias.

"We worked harder and I think we were better looking," she said with a touch of Irish brogue and a hint of a twinkle in her blue eyes.

"They look after me very well here. But we gave our patients more personal care.

"Things have changed a lot, though, and the nurses don't have the time to spend with the patients. We worked longer hours and extra hours and thought nothing of it—it's quite different now."

Mrs. Cleary will be 83 next month. She came from Ireland when she was 19 and began her nursing training in 1907 in the old hospital at Fifth Avenue and Madison Street.

The graduating class of 12 had their ceremonies at

She was married in 1919 to Michael F. Cleary. He died last year. She now lives with a niece, Mrs. Mary Rafferty, at 721 17th Av.

After being in the hospital for a minor illness, Mrs. Cleary went home the other day.

"As good as hospitals are," she said. "I'd rather be nursing than nursed."

Providence Hospital now is the main teaching unit of Seattle University.

lived here and worked for The Boeing Co. in 1959 and 1960.

Michael died in 1963. His mass was held at the Immaculate Conception Church two blocks away (the oldest standing Catholic church in Seattle, built in 1904) and he was buried at Calvary Cemetery (the first and oldest Catholic cemetery in Seattle, founded in 1899). Margaret followed two years later in 1965 and was buried beside him.

EIDE ATADMC

For somewhere near 40 years, this Irish-American couple lived in the rooms up and over one unit from the apartment I now inhabit. Several times a week for the past few years, as I make a shortcut to the bus stop on Jefferson Street, I have walked past a reproduction of Margaret's School of Nursing portrait where it hangs in the hallway of Swedish Hospital.

It seemed important to follow the story to the end. So my husband and I drove north to Calvary with a section number and a simple map of the cemetery. We paced back and forth each row, heads down and half-bent, searching and scanning the names.

Name: CLEARY, MICHAEL F
 Burial Date: 08/10/1963
 Cemetery: Calvary Cemetery
 Section: 8
 Lot: 117
 Site: 6

Name: CLEARY, MARGARET
 Burial Date: 06/16/1965
 Cemetery: Calvary Cemetery
 Section: 8
 Lot: 117
 Site: 7

We found them near the end of a row in the shade of a tree, one headstone with two names, the immaculate heart between them.

This story is the falling-down-the-rabbit-hole result of writing a guide to researching buildings in King County for the University of Washington Libraries Special Collections. I used my address to test a number of web tools and became enamored with tracing the histories of my 109-year-old apartment building's previous tenants. After following a few broken threads from the census and city directories, I stumbled upon the Clearys.

Thank you to Lisa Oberg, Head of Public Services and History of Science & Medicine Curator for giving me the original assignment, and for your assistance over the two years I've worked on this narrative! Thank you also to Phil Stairs at the Puget Sound Regional Archives and Peter Schmid at Providence Archives.
