- Featured Project Profile: Tackling Money Matters at New York Public Library
  - The New York Public Library (NYPL) introduced Money Matters, a project to educate library staff on the core concepts of personal finance and related reference sources. The program also made the staff more open to the idea of hosting presentations by experts who provided personal finance training that was needed most by their neighborhood communities. NYPL also made the project training materials freely available.
- April Director's Message: A National Partnership Supporting Financial Literacy at the Library
  - I was delighted to be part of a Money Smart Week (April 5-12) event last week at the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, where Richard Cordray, Director of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB) announced a partnership with public libraries to help make financial information and educational resources available to library-going public.

- Featured Project Profile: Using History to Transform a Community: Peralta Hacienda Historical Park
  - Peralta Hacienda Historical Park strengthened its relationship with its surrounding community by involving local residents as exhibit developers, tour leaders, oral history subjects, audience, and staff. The project empowered community members to lead historical tours using their own stories.
- March Director's Message: Digital Badging: An Opportunity for Libraries and Museums
  - From that scouting badge to a high school diploma to a certificate for continuing education credits, most of us have been collecting physical artifacts that recognize our achievements throughout our lives. As more and more learning is offered online or with an online component, there is a growing movement to recognize skills-based achievements with digital badges.
