BEYOND REACH.

She wore amid her raven hair a wreath of blossoms white. And on my cheek a vision shone like some bright ray of light. Her jewels flashed upon her arms, and on her face a gleam from her soft, hazel eyes had caused my heart's delight.

Ab, cruel maiden, thus to toy, and thus to plant a dart. In sweet sport and wantonness within a loving heart.

As well might I upon the sun, enamored, gaze. Or fall like Paphos, or dream that I could woo a star.

Pass on, bright meteor, pass on, revolve within thy sphere. And leave to me this task—the recollection dear.

Of one sweet night, when 'neath the tint of golden-studded clouds I saw, or idly dreamt I saw, the love-light in thine eyes.

Shine on! The sunlight mingles not with starlight. Shine on, bright planet, in thy sphere, and leave to me my dream.

HER DIAMOND RING.

"Miss Severn, I have lost my diamond ring."

Lily Severn glanced up from the heap of blue silk upon which she was busily sewing, and turned her dark eyes upon the speaker, a pretty in spite of the fashion.

"I am very sorry, Miss Montford," she said quietly, resuming her work calmly.

"That's all the sympathy I get," the other went on angrily, "nobody seems to care; nobody will ever trouble themselves to help me search for it. And it was a present to me, my beautiful diamond ring; only last week it was given me by my betrothed husband, Mr. Arncliffe, at least, will consider it a bad omen of our future happiness. To tell the truth, Miss Severn, it was my engagement ring."

"An very sorry," repeated Lily Severn quietly.

Then with a face which was slowly growing as white as the face of a corpse, she went on:

"Did you say—are you really engaged to Mr. Arncliffe, Miss Irene?"

"Really," replied Irene Montford, laughing; "one would think from your words, Miss Severn, that there was something very strange in my engagement."

"Not at all," returned Lily. "I only inquired for information. How will you have the undershirt to the blue silk made, Miss Montford? Deep blue and shirred front—did you decide?"

"By all means, Miss Severn." And then followed a visible explanation, to all of which Miss Severn listened patiently, quietly, but with a dull, aching pain at her heart, which was very pitiful, very hard to bear.

Poor Lily! It was indeed hard to know that he, Jack Arncliffe, was the false and changeable man which Miss Montford's words proclaimed him. For two years before when Lily had been rich, and courted, and flattered, the ball of the aristocratic circle in which she moved, Jack Arncliffe had been her most devoted cavalier, and at last he had asked her to be his wife.

She had consented, for she loved him, oh! how she loved him, and he had placed upon her finger a handsome diamond solitaire, of which he had caused a duplicate to be made, which he wore himself, thus, as he laughingly declared, doubly cementing their bonds. They had parted then, for Jack had to go to Europe; there a large estate was waiting for him to take possession; but in one year's time he had promised to return and claim his bride.

Lily was the only child, and her mother was dead; but her father gave his consent to the union, and all was settled—for once, it did seem the course of true love was going to run smooth.

But alas! ere Mr. Arncliffe had been gone six months there came a fearful crisis in the financial world; it ruined Mr. Severn, pecuniarily, and killed him, and left his child a homeless, penniless orphan.

No more letters arrived from Jack; Lily's heart was nearly broken; but she had to live, somehow, since the boon of death was denied her, and she was young and strong.

She must necessarily find some means of earning her livelihood; and at last she decided to turn to the needle, that last, most pitiful resort for starving workmanlike.

Chancing to have a slight acquaintance with a well-known fashionable modiste, Lily gathered her force of courage together, went to Madame Dupont, and asked her to instruct her in her art; that she wished to learn to become a fashionable dressmaker.

Knowing the aristocratic source whence the young lady had sprung, Madame comprehended at once the prestige which it would give her establishment to have, as her assistant, the well-known beauty, bell and heiress of a year ago.

She took Miss Lily quickly, and soon taught her to be more expert (nature had made her much more tasteful) than the great Dupont herself.

For a year, nearly, Lily had gained her honest living by the hard toil of the seamstress, her very subsistence depending on her work, and the wolf starvation kept at bay, at the shining point of the needle.

At length she had come to sew for Irene Montford, a haughty, bold woman who had been wont to meet in society, but who now, when the seamstress was introduced to her notice, had forgotten Miss Severn entirely, and chose to drop from her memory the fact that the pretty, pale, young person who passed so many weary hours with her sad, dark eyes bent upon Miss Montford'sinery, plying, ruffling, shirring, puffing day by day in her service, had once been her superior in the gilded circle of society.

Miss Montford was one of those fortunate persons possessed of a convenient memory, and remembered only that which it pleased her to recall.

And while Lily Severn sewed away at the Montford Mansion, Jack Arncliffe had returned from Europe and was devoting himself assiduously to the heiress of the house of Montford. It was a severe blow to poor Lily, but she tried to conquer the mighty love which reigned in her heart for this man, and resigned to fate.

She listened with outward quiet, while Miss Montford told of her engagement to Mr. Arncliffe, the man whose wife she, Lily Severn, had promised to be, and whose parting gift, the diamond engagement-ring, still sparkled on her pretty forefinger.

Through all her poverty and almost starvation, Lily had retained that ring.

Miss Montford stood gazing coldly into Lily's white face as she went on expatiating on the superior merits of her betrothed husband, his great wealth, and the position which she would assume in society, when once she became Mrs. Arncliffe.

"And, oh, I can tell you," she said, "I have lost my beautiful ring. He put so much faith in the foolish superstition which would pronounce it unlucky to lose an engagement ring. Great Heaven!"

The last ejaculation had burst from her lips in a gasp of astonishment; her gaze had fallen upon the diamond which sparkled on Lily Severn's finger. One bound, and Miss Montford was at her side, and had caught the girl's arm in a cruel grasp, her face white with rage, her eyes blazing.

"My ring!" she shrieked, "my diamond ring! You have found it and kept it—you—you—thief!"

Miss Severn's face was as white as a statue, but her voice was firm and full of haughty contempt as she answered calmly:

"It is my ring, Miss Montford! I have owned it for two years. Take your hand off my arm, you are hurting me!"

"You miserable, dishonest woman!" went on the wrathful Irene. "You commit a theft, and then tell a wicked falsehood to screen your sin. The idea of that ring being your property! It is mine! I can swear to it anywhere! You bold creature, to dare to wear it right before my eyes. Did you think I would not recognize it?"

Someone had tapped at the door, which stood slightly ajar. The servant had ignorantly shown Mr. Arncliffe up to the pretty morning room where Lily was wont to bring her sewing materials, and the door opened, and he pushed the door open, now, and stepped coolly into the room. One long glance at the little seamstress, and he was at her side, white and trembling.

"Lily!"

And he caught her in his arms right there before the scandalized Miss Montford.

"Oh, my darling, my darling!" he cried, rapturously, "thank God I have found you at last!"

Miss Montford stood in the center of the room, the picture of wrath and despair.

"I demand an explanation!" she began frigidly.

"And you shall have it, Miss Montford," said Jack Arncliffe, calmly. "This said Lily Severn, my betrothed wife, from whom I have been parted by a cruel fate. When I returned from Europe I found the house of Mr. Severn closed, himself dead, and no trace of Lily to be found. I have been calling upon you, Miss Montford, because I fancied that the slim figure of a girl closely veiled, whom I have seen coming to the house, resembled my darling, and I meant to discover if it were possible that it could be Lily Severn. But you denied any knowledge of her whereabouts. The ring which you claim, I never gave you, Miss Montford. You begged me to let you take it for a few days, as you wished to have one made like it. I could not refuse a lady's request, so I trusted it to you for three days. If it is lost I do not care, since it has been the means of restoring to me the one whom I was beginning to mourn as dead."

Miss Montford was pallid with rage; she flounced from the room, and soon a servant appeared with orders to show "that sewing girl" from the house.

But for all that, Miss Montford (who is Miss Montford still, and liable to remain so to the end of her days) is the most obsequious slave in all the fashionable cot, which to-day surrounds Mrs. Arncliffe, and she is never tired of referring in society to that lady as "my dear friend, Lily."

"I often cross the street to avoid meeting a man," says Mr. Beecher, "not because I have anything against him, but simply because I do not feel like speaking to him. I suppose all men are this way." Yes, nearly all men are that way, Mr. Beecher, and we are glad that you have mentioned the subject, for it gives us a chance to agree with a great man. We sometimes cross the street and climb a fence to avoid meeting a man, not because we have anything against him, but because he has something against us. A bill, Mr. Beecher.—[Arkansas Traveler.]

A factory for the manufacture of imitation seal skin is to be established at Holyoke, Mass., by men from Bradford, England. It is stated that $100,000 will be invested, and that 100 men will be employed in the business.

FASHION NOTES.

Pink and pale brown make a pretty combination. Feather trimmings of cooks' plumes and of marabout feathers will be much used.

Silicienna and Irish poplin are coming into fashion along with other repped goods.

Leather lace with leaves of leather on twine flossie lace is a novelty for trimming bonnets.

Princ rose, the new pink, is a faded shade calculated to please the esthetic soul, and is predicted as among coming colors.

Slate-color, an ugly and unbecoming color to either blonde or brunette, for some reason unknown, has come into fashion once again.

Turkish and India embroideries of soft, dull, yet rich coloring, will trim the self-colored cashmere and cloth dresses worn later in the season.

New wool goods have ball-figures three inches wide, of a shade so nearly like that of the stuff that the whole fabric appears to be plain at the first glance.

The stylish wraps for the first cool days will be braided cloth jackets for plain toilets, and flossie-colored cloth mantles trimmed with lace and pompons of the same shade for dressy toilets.

Feathers are the trimming of the season. Ostrich feathers come first, of course, but they are rarely used alone, a great bird, or a fancy breast, or the feathers of a Spanish cock being added.

The pelisse to be worn next winter is precisely like the long, plain redingotes worn two years ago. It is made of cloth and trimmed with broad down the front and back, but not around the skirt.

Silk metelasse, now returned to favor, will be a fabric greatly in use for either polonaises, redingotes or habit basques, over handsome underskirts of rich, plain materials, such as satin, velvet or silk.

Gros grain ribbons have naturally come back into prime favor with the restoration of gros grain silks. The cords in these are larger than heretofore however, and strongly suggest the old fashioned rope.

Terra cotta is to be the leading shade of the season. The darker shades of this are becoming; they are hazardous, very few complexion being clear enough to bear the ordeal of a color which mingles red, brown and yellow in one trying conglomeration. [As for the new "crushed strawberry" let no woman order it by mail.]

Some of the new gimps have silk chenille tufts interwoven into them, and are very soft and pretty effect, and another novelty in trimmings is a plush broadcated galloon of silk, with bits of silver or gold showing in the raised designs. These last trimmings come in fashionable shades of plum, marine blue, bronze brown, olive, dark green, dark garnet, and black.

Upon some of the latest walking dresses the drapery consists wholly of soft flowing folds and puffs, which fall from the belt to the foot of the skirt. These loose sagging puffs are caught up here and there by silk cords, ornate bows and ends of ribbons, and upon very elegant costumes of silk or satin, with ornaments in the shape of Greek medallions, clasps, or buckles in silver filigree.

Braiding will be plentifully used this season as a trimming for costumes of cloth, vigogne, cashmere and the like, fine braids forming arabesques, the edges merely sewn so as to cause them to stand upright like a cord. A narrow band sewn on flat sometimes follows the design, and gives a more elaborate look to the pattern. The braiding covers the chest and diminishes toward the waist. The sleeves have a rounded cuff, not too large, also braided. The corsage is fastened either by a row of small passementerie buttons, or by brandebourgs, with cords covering the centers.—[N. Y. Post.]

FIFTY LIVING CHILDREN.

Mr. Basingame, a prominent merchant from Social Circle, reports a remarkable case of vitality, which he says is well known to the people of his county. Near Social Circle resides a colored man named Harry Lackey, who has probably more descendants than any living man. He has been in the county so long that his own testimony on this question is corroborated by his neighbors.

Harry is 90 years old hale and hearty, one of the most industrious and highly respected negroes in the county. The other day he took unto himself a third wife, Susan Phillips, aged 61. He already has fifty children with him by various terms of filial affection. Several of his children have died.

In the presence of some gentlemen the other day he named over more than 300 of his grandchildren, and said there were others whom he could not then remember. One of his sons has thirty living children. Several of his sons count up more than a dozen children each. The old man is proud of his record, and talks freely about it whenever questioned. He says he don't think his work is finished yet, and he has no idea of suspending business soon.—[Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution.]

There was a $10,000 fire at Freeport, Ill., and the editor of one of the local papers, all trembling with the excitement of so much news, wrote that "Flame's fiery finger was insolently shaken in the very face of the Fire Department." The other editor was satisfied with saying, "Gone to blaze."

SHOT UP IN A FRENCH MAD HOUSE.

A strange story comes from Marcellus, the substance of which is that the son of a wealthy merchant, with a fortune of two and a half millions sterling, has for the last forty years been shut up in a mad house, though he is, and always has been, perfectly sane. Whether he is really sane or not remains, of course, to be proved.

For the case will shortly be tried; but the generally admitted facts seem to be these: Jean Mistral, when twenty-three years of age, fell in love with the daughter of a Polish exile, and married her against her father's will.

The father was not to be moved by the entreaties of the young couple, and left them to beg their bread. As the marriage had been celebrated in Poland, he contrived to have it declared null and void; and then, after several violent scenes with his son, his doctor signed a certificate of the latter's insanity. The young man was shut up in the departmental asylum; and, though his father bequeathed him the whole of his fortune, there he has remained ever since. During that time his fortune has been administered by his family; one of his nephews being the well-known French poet. Thus far there is no difference of opinion but his doctor signed a certificate of the latter's insanity. It is generally harder to kill superstition than even to discover its origin. Nobody pretends to know why it is that people generally, especially if they live in the country, lay claim to great weather wisdom and believe that there is always a change of weather when the moon changes, but the fact is that it was proved long ago in a more certain way than that which Sir William Thomson has recently employed to the same end and the notion has no basis in truth. Accurate tables of the weather were kept through several years for the purpose of finding out whether the weather changed with the changed moon, and it was discovered that it did not change a greater number of times when the moon changed than when it did not change—both were about alike. Sir William Thomson told the British Association at its late meeting that "careful observation with the barometer, thermometer and anemometer, at the time of new moon, full moon and half moon, has failed to establish any relation whatever between the phases of the moon and the weather," and that "if there is any dependence of the weather on the phases of the moon, it is so ordinary as to be unperceptible to ordinary observation." It is therefore true that observation has shown that, as a matter of fact, the moon has no influence upon and no coincidence with the changes of the weather, and that there is no reason why it should have any influence. Yet farmers and the weatherwise will go on believing the old adage till the millennium happily cuts them short and teaches them what is what.—Ex.

When General Wolsley started out to tackle Colonel Arabi he told his friends in England that he would fulfill the commission entrusted to him and be back to England to dine on the 15th of September. This sounded like bragadoon, but in fact it was not. Wolsley was a trifle to previous in his ideas, but only a trifle so. He expedited the purposes of the British Government after a manner that should endorse him as one of the foremost Generals of the age. But isn't it odd that England's chiefs, the two men who have won victory in her last war, are both Irishmen? Wolsley the General and Seymour the Admiral. And, barring the Scotchmen, the Royal Irish bore the brunt of the conclusive and concluding charges.

On September 8th thirteen marriage benefit associations were incorporated in Tennessee. The name of one is "Springfield Marriage Endowment and Birthday Mutual Society," of another "Memphis Daily Nuptial Association," another "Daily Sunrise Marriage Association," "Enterprise Marriage Association," "Imperial Matrimonial," and "Imperial Daily Aid Association." The object of these associations is to promote matrimony and to secure comforts to the contracting parties upon the insurance plan.

The Marquis de Lorne, in reply to the address of welcome at the Victoria Fair, announced that the route adopted for the Canadian Pacific Railway through the Rocky Mountains is by the Kicking Horse Pass, and that an easy pass over the Selkirk Range has been discovered. The manager hopes to be within 250 miles of Kamloops by this time next year, and expect to have the whole line from Montreal to the Pacific Ocean open by January 1st, 1887.

The Rev. Talmage says there are four ways of getting money—only four—"by inheritance, by earning it, by begging it, by stealing it." Did the brother never hear of finding money, having it given or gambling for it in Wall street?

In Dakota, in view of the alarming decrease of forests, the Legislature has enacted that every five acres of land with forty trees upon it and $1000 worth of improvement shall be exempt from taxation.

NOTICE OF SHERIFF'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE.

By virtue of an Execution, Decree and Order of Sale issued by the District Court of Washington Territory holding terms at La Conner, in the suit of W. P. Jones vs. George T. Stevens, duly attested the 16th day of August, A. D., 1882, I have duly levied upon all the certain piece or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the County of Whatcom, Washington Territory, particularly bounded and described as follows: to-wit: All of Lots 4 and 5 of Section No. 28, in Township No. 33 North, Range No. 5 East, containing 66 10-100th acres, together with the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereto belonging.

Notice is hereby given that on TUESDAY, the 17th day of OCTOBER, A. D. 1882, at 2 o'clock p. m., in front of the Court House door, in the town of La Conner, in said Whatcom County, I will sell all the right, title and interest of the said George T. Stevens in and to all the above described premises to the highest bidder in cash, gold coin of the United States.

Dated La Conner, W. T. Sept. 15, 1882. JAMES O'LOUGHLIN, Sheriff of Whatcom County, W. T. Sept. 16-82.

Administrator's Notice. In the Probate Court of Whatcom County, in the matter of the Estate of DAYTON SKRIBING, deceased—Notice to Creditors, &c.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Administrator of the estate of David Sterling, deceased, to the creditors of and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers within one year after the first publication of this notice, in the matter of the Estate of DAYTON SKRIBING, deceased—Notice to Creditors, &c.

THE MAIL AND CHRONICLE.

THE MAIL has entered into arrangements with the Chronicle...

The last Legislature reduced the compensation of County Commissioners from five to four dollars per day during the session of the Board.

GRAND BALL.—A Grand Ball will be given by Carlson & Morrison in their new building at La Conner on Friday evening, October 20th next.

LETTER LIST.—Letters for the following named persons remain uncollected for at the La Conner post-office.

The Golden Rule Bazaar at Seattle fills what may be termed a "long-felt want," for the reason that it carries a complete stock of novel and fancy articles.

A MISTAKE of a week was made in the bills announcing a political meeting at Nookack Crossing and the public is hereby notified that there will be public speaking at that place on Tuesday, Oct. 17th, and at other places on the days advertised.

We have nothing new to note in the grain market. Local rates rule from $25 to $26 per ton.

F. W. Walsh, of the Anacortes Enterprise, sojourned a few days in town this week on route to Seattle.

MARRIED.—At Whatcom, October 10th, by Justice of the Peace A. C. Marston, Mr. J. W. Cade to Miss A. E. Sterns.

WHATCOM NOTES. Ed. Mail: Mr. S. Leckie, of Nookack, is in town en route to Seattle and Olympia.

Messrs. John Forst and Aubrey Hobson, of Edison, made Whatcom a visit on Saturday. They returned home Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Geo. Hughes has returned from La Conner, where he has been the last month.

Quite a heavy rain fell last night, which continued to fall at intervals to-day making the roads very disagreeable.

Messrs. McPherson and Sterns took a tramp up the Nookack. While absent they visited the logging camp at Lynden which they report to be in a flourishing condition.

Work on the mill is progressing rapidly under the direction of Mr. Frank, whose ability as a superintendent of that class of work is fully demonstrated.

Our burg is completely overrun with people coming into the country to find homes. One family has just arrived from Wisconsin, and like everybody else who came here express themselves high pleased with the country.

Mr. Wm. M. Hamilton, of Lyman, on the Skagit, was in town this week and reports prosperous times along the river. The outlook for the Lyman district is specially gratifying, resulting not only from the logging interest but from the progress in the development of the coal and iron recently discovered thereabout.

Tax Levy.—The following are the amounts levied in this (Whatcom) County for the several funds herein set forth:

GOLDEN RULE BAZAAR.

Having received and added to our already immense stock large invoices of new goods, we are now ready to supply our customers with a full line of the latest goods in the market, consisting of:

- SHIRTS, UNDERWEAR, HATS, TRUNKS, VALISES, ETC., Ladies' and Misses' Gents' and Boys' Gossamer Coats, Ties, Hoisery, Purse, Satchels, Albums, Accorions, Turnaphones, Organium Harmonettes, Cutlery, Fluted Ware, Crockery, Glassware, Magnolia Ware, Stationery, and Fancy Goods, Notions, Soap, Perfumery, and Cologne, Bay Rugs, Brushes, Brackets, Baskets and Willowware, Toys in immense quantity, Blankets, Quilts, Towels, Crash, Playing Cards, Household Tools, Baby Carriages, etc.

Agency of the celebrated Home and Sigwalt Sewing Machine, agents for California Surf Co., 327 Sansone Street.

The advantage of a one price system, and why the Golden Rule Bazaar succeeds, are as follows: We don't keep trash; we don't do clapnet advertising in order to catch customers and then skin them; we do advertise to let people know we are a live house, and where we are to be found.

We have the best facilities for getting goods direct from the manufacturers, and have enormous shipments of goods on the way, and will give our customers the benefit of it.

Country orders, whether large or small, receive prompt attention, and, if the goods are not satisfactory, can be returned. All goods marked in plain figures and shown with pleasure. Intending purchasers should call and examine our stock.

We rely on our extremely low prices from the beginning, and we also rely on the principle on which we are doing business.

We rely on the good judgement of a fair-minded public.
