REPUBLICAN TERRITORIAL CONVENTION.

Pursuant to call the Republican Territorial Central Committee met in New Tacoma on the 9th day of June, 1880. The members present were: Francis Tarbell, Chairman; Byron Barlow, Secretary; R. D. Attridge, J. M. Welch, by P. B. Johnson, proxy; W. Byron Daniels, by F. W. Bier, proxy; Geo. D. Hill.
 By order of the Territorial Central Committee, duly assembled pursuant to notice, this 9th day of June, A. D. 1880 at New Tacoma, W. T., notice is hereby given that a Republican Convention is called to assemble at Vancouver, Clarke county, on Wednesday, the 8th day of September, 1880, at 10 o'clock, a. m., for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Delegate to Congress and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before it.

The committee has fixed the apportionment of delegates to said convention as follows: One delegate at large for every county in the Territory, and one additional delegate for every one hundred votes, and for every fraction of fifty or more votes cast in each county, at the general election of 1878, for the Republican candidate for Delegate to Congress. Upon this basis the various counties of the Territory will be entitled to representation in said convention as follows: Chehalis, 2; Clallam, 2; Clarke, 6; Columbia, 7; Cowlitz, 3; Island, 2; Jefferson, 3; King, 10; Kitsap, 4; Klickitat, 5; Lewis, 3; Mason, 1; Pacific, 3; Pierce, 5; Skamania, 1; San Juan, 2; Snohomish, 3; Stevens, 3; Spokane, 1; Thurston, 5; Wahkiakum, 1; Walla Walla, 8; Whatcom, 5; Whitman, 6; Yakima, 3; Total, 94.

The committee also recommends, subject to any change to be made by the respective county committees, that the various county conventions be held at the county seat, on Thursday, the 26th day of August, 1880, at 1 o'clock, p. m., and that the primary meetings, to elect delegates to the county conventions, be held at 1 o'clock, p. m., of Thursday the 5th day of August, 1880, at the voting places in each precinct. This recommendation is intended only for those counties which have no county central committee, or when they fail to act.

The committee also recommends that the county conventions in counties having portions of joint council and representative district, instruct their delegates to the Territorial convention, who they desire nominated for joint representatives and councilmen—the nomination to be made by the delegates from the council districts at the time of the meeting of the Territorial Convention.

RESOLVED, That the Republican Territorial Central Committee heartily endorse the nomination of Hon. James A. Garfield for President, and Hon. Chester A. Arthur for Vice President.

The attention of the committee was also called to the fact that a change had been made in the boundaries of Pacific and Wahkiakum counties whereby it was claimed that the Republican vote of the former had been decreased and the vote of the latter increased. While the convention desire to recognize the fact in making the apportionment, it was unable to do so, for the reason that it could obtain no official knowledge of the extent of the change in voters. The fact of the creation out of Stevens, of the county of Spokane, was brought up and one delegate was allowed Spokane county; but, owing to the fact that it was impossible to determine what should be the reduction of representation in Stevens county, it was given the benefit of the vote of 1878.

A vote of thanks was tendered the N. P. R. R. Company, for granting half fare rates to members of the convention.

By order of the Republican Territorial Central Committee.
 FRANCIS TARBELL, Chairman.
 BYRON BARLOW, Secretary.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C. May 28, 1880.

The Republicans treated the Democrats to another exposure of their methods while debating the Supervisors bill yesterday. This bill, by the way, was brought up by the Democrats for the purpose of getting rid of several objectionable officers. It provides that all supervisors shall be appointed for two years only, and shall not be eligible for reappointment, and that the terms of all those now in office shall expire on the 1st of July, 1880. They are to be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. Senator Edmunds made a strong speech against it, showing that if it became a law it would furnish a precedent for making any other class of citizens ineligible to hold office whenever the whim or necessity of a party majority in Congress should render such an act desirable. Senator Rollins made a speech on the measure, and Senator Cameron set forth at length the history of the tissue ballots. Senator Kirkwood detailed from personal knowledge, many of the Louisiana outrages. In fact the bill gave the Republicans a good chance to attack the Democrats, and they embraced it. Another effect of the bill, which is intended to act against the Republicans is, that those officers of elections who are thoroughly acquainted with their duties are to be kicked out, and their place supplied by new and inexperienced men right on the eve of a Presidential election. But the measure has not passed the House yet, nor has the President signed it. The sub-committee of the House committee on Mississippi levees, which, in May last, went on a tour of inspection of the Mississippi river, submitted its report to the House yesterday, which substantially endorses the report of the Mississippi commissioners and recommends that the government extend all possible aid to the general improvement of the Mississippi river. No action will be taken at this session of course, but it is believed nearly every member of the present Congress is in favor of liberal appropriations when the subject comes up.

Delegate Downey, of Wyoming, who, a short time ago, printed in the "Record" a fifteen-page poem, proposed in the House yesterday a plan to get rid of the much-grabbed-at Geneva award balance. He wanted it used to erect public buildings throughout the country. His proposal was ruled out amid great laughter on both sides of the House.

In the House yesterday Mr. Forney made a conference report on the Military Academy appropriation bill, which was agreed to.
 A statement proposed by the internal revenue bureau shows an increase for the month of April from the general sources of internal revenue over the same month of last year of $2,860,384. This is a remarkably good showing, and shows the revival of business continues.

KIND WORDS.

The following comments are taken from our exchanges relative to the immigration pamphlets:

"Northwestern Washington, its Soil, Climate, productions and General Resources," is the title of a pamphlet of 53 pages, published by the Immigration Aid Society of that section, at Port Townsend, W. T. It is full of interesting information for people whose eyes are turned toward that Territory, as we know some of our folks are. One object of the book is, "to keep away those who would always be sorry they came, and bring those who would always be glad they came." It is a border region, rich in soil, lumber, clay, and grazing, and offering good homes at little cost to industrious people.—Marin Co. (Cal.) "Journal".

"That pamphlet issued by Mr. Weir of Port Townsend, under direction of a local board of immigration, is, we contend, a very fair document and make-up, notwithstanding the disparaging criticisms of the Port Townsend "Press" and Seattle "Dispatch" to the contrary. In point of fair and truthful representation which it assumes to deal with we venture to say that it will compare with the average immigration pamphlet. Though in point of typography and make-up it is not a model work, we have no doubt it is well worth the money expended upon it; and as to the criticism on the "fly-specked map," we advise our friend Weir to talk back to them as the darkey waster did to the indignant guest who found a piece of shirt cuff in his soup. "Why," said the darkey, "you must be a damphool; did you expect to find a silk umbrella in a 15 cent plate of hash." In the pamphlet referred to we certainly did not expect a lithographic map that would cost more than the entire work, not to speak of the labor of collecting the information therein contained.—P. S. "Mail".

COMMUNICATED.

Ed Argus:—
 Time rolls its ceaseless round, and we are approaching close to the threshold of the one-hundred and fourth anniversary of our national independence—the remembrance of which ought to cause every personal, sectional and political feeling to be laid aside at least for the day, and all to unite in harmony and good cheer. The one day of all the 365 days of the year that should bind us together in one common band of brotherhood and friendship. Let all selfish and personal feelings be buried, and, like the two brothers who had long been estranged and at variance with each other when brought together over the grave of their last parent their animosity toward each other was buried with the dead, the hand of friendship was mutually extended and they were made happy—so let us all unite and pay our devotions to the goddess of Liberty.
 "Behold how good a thing it is
 And how becoming well, Together such as brethren are
 In unity to dwell."
 PAX VOBISQUE.

J. B. Huntington, of Yakima, has started for Montana with about 3,000 head of cattle. He was at the head of Long Island at last accounts.

The "Skagit Herald" is the name of a paper hailing from and dated at "Ruby creek, Whatcom county, W. T., Wednesday, May 19th, 1880," but printed and edited in Portland, Oregon. It contains glowing accounts of the richness of the Skagit mines and appears to be devoted specially to floating the stock of the Skagit Gold Mining Co., which proposes to dispose of a LIMITED number of shares of stock at 50 cents on a dollar, par value. The Portland papers warn their readers to beware of investing in the scheme, which bears upon its face the appearance of wilful deception.

The $5,000 appropriation for lighthouse and fog signals at Point No Point, W. T., has been stricken out by the Senate committee.

Sacking of Porto Bello.

Near by is the ruined cathedral, bearing still vestiges of its former beauty. All the gilded decorations have been destroyed, and its shrine riddled with what- ever of value it contained. But some of the antique carving yet remains—the marble pavements and the frescoed walls. Two or three bells still hang in the dilapidated tower, but the rest lie half buried at the base. From these bells the notes of warning rang when Morgan began that terrific attack that ended in the sack and ruin of the city in 1665. While the cannon thundered from fort and castle, their wild, shrill peal sounded clear and high amid the frightful tumult, announcing all for general defense. At the other extremity of the street stands the dismantled fort of Todo Hierro, half hidden by the enveloping foliage of the huge trees that have taken root in and within its walls. Here Morgan began his attack. He had long had his eye on this point, the fame of whose great wealth attracted, while the strength of its fortifications seemed to render an assault almost madness. Under the cover of night the bold buccaneer crept up to the very walls. Before the startled sentinel had time to sound the warning "alerte," he was overpowered and brought to Morgan, who wrung from him valuable information that led to the capture of the city. Then the attack began. The roar of cannon and crash of fire-arms awakened the slumbering town. From the beginning the buccaneers had the advantage. Soon the assault became conquest, and turned into slaughter. It was pitiless butchery. No quarter was given; the shrieks of women and children mutilated and tortured by the cruel soldiery rent the air. The governor's castle held out to the last, the governor himself never flinching for an instant. At length priests and nuns, torn from their cloisters, were forced to the van of the attack, bearing scaling ladders, that thus they might drown the fire of the castle. Urged onward from the rear, they were mown down by their own friends, who did not dare to listen to their cries for mercy. When the governor himself fell, covered with wounds, a panic seized his followers, and the city surrendered unconditionally. For several days riot and debauchery reigned among the buccaneers. The forts were dismantled, the cathedral and churches were stripped, the wealth of Porto Bello plundered. At length, satiated with their brutal bacchanalia, Morgan and his men set sail for Jamaica, bearing with them their spoils, and leaving a heap of ruins where once had stood a beautiful and prosperous city. Porto Bello never recovered from that terrible sacking. It revived a little in time, but no sooner had the tide of prosperity begun to set toward it than down swooped the ravagers again, and under Admiral Vernon, in 1739, gave it the finishing stroke, capturing and dismantling it. Thus this gem of the coronet of Spain, torn from its setting, and trodden under foot by the marauders, has with the decline of power in the parent country, sunk into utter ruin. Where once stretched an open, fertile country, with broad fields of vegetables and grain, with groves of coconuts and pines, where the toil and activity of man added beauty and usefulness to the gifts of nature, now, unpruned and ungarnered, her very lavishness is destruction, and her fertility, death. Decay and desolation are written everywhere. Against walls and towers that once stood in stately pride, now lean the wretched bamboo huts of the modern Porto Belliana, while the rich merchants of Castile and Leon have been superseded by a mongrel race, composed of the mingled blood of the negro, the native and the Spaniard, who lounge away their lives, amid the plenty of nature's providing, without a thought of the past or a care for the future, content to exist as mere beneficiaries of the land.—Letter to the New York Times.

A Leap Year Idea.

Young Lady—Oh, Mr. Solima, I have such good news to-day. Old Bach.—Delighted, delighted, what is it? Young Lady—Mamma is coming home from Paris. Old Bach.—Delighted, delighted. Young Lady—You know this is Leap Year, and I am going to propose. Old Bach.—Delighted, delighted. Young Lady—And I am going to propose to you. Old Bach.—Del—no; let's wait and see what sort of thing the mother-in-law is.

The little town of Olean, in New York, is stalked nightly because a great nitro-glycerine manufactory is to be established there as an addition to the industries of the place. Some fine morning neighboring villagers will hear a powerful noise, and be looking in vain for a transient of an Oleaner big enough to start funeral services with.

Love in Pa's Hat.

Mr. M. was a retired manufacturer, and possessed of considerable fortune. He also had a daughter 19 years of age, of great personal attractions. What wonder then that she should have made many a young fellow's heart beat quicker who tried to gain her virgin affections? But "papa" M. took care of his treasure as if she were the pupil of his eye, and many were the unhappy mortals who left his hospitable table never to return. "Plenty of time," said he, "when the right one comes, and I approve," etc.

But the right one had come long ago, only papa didn't know it, and he had come in the person of a young engineer, who had formerly had business transactions with papa M. The young people had seen each other, spoken to each other, looked at each other, and a kind of understanding had been come to. Yes, and the affection was deep enough to last, even when Mr. M. retired from trade and the young gallant had no further excuse for coming on business. Then there was a succession of dark days. But love is inventive, and in this instance also proved to be so.

Mr. M. was in the habit of visiting twice a week at his hair dresser's to have his beard and wig looked after; and on this fact love built his structure. One of the younger assistants was taken into confidence, and consequently, considerable attention was paid by the young man to Mr. M.'s hat, receiving it on his entering, giving it a careful brush, and handing it back on departure; and in this wise poor, dear "papa" became, unconsciously, of course, the postillon d'amour between his daughter and her swain.

Thus things continued for four or five long months; but the best silk hat—let it be ever so carefully brushed, wants an iron now and again. Mr. M.'s hat was several years old, and just about Christmas it wanted ironing badly. So Mr. M., instead of proceeding to the hair dresser's as usual, went to his hatter's and presented his hat for renovation.

Mr. Hatter says, after inspecting it, "Is this hat too large for you?" "No; why do you ask?" "Because you put paper inside." "Paper? paper? Not I; how does it get there, I wonder?" Not long did he wonder, for on carefully unfolding the paper he read: "Do not be down hearted, dear Edward, my father is good and generous of heart; let us speak openly to him of our love; he will not say no if we promise to make his old age happy. On my knees I will confess my love to him. Besides, our correspondence cannot last much longer; the continued brushing has so worn papa's hat that I fear from day to day that he will have to have it done up, etc."

Mr. M.'s hat having been refreshed, he went as usual to his hair dresser's, having previously carefully replaced the letter. In the saloon he kept a steady, though covered, lookout on the officious young assistant, and found his surmises correct. The operations finished, he gravely received his hat, handed the assistant as usual his pour baire, and departed.

Before returning home, however, he took occasion to inspect his hat, and extract and read a missive from no other than the engineer. Among other things, the young man swore that not a penny did he want of his love's father—his position, thank goodness, bringing him more than sufficient to live happy and comfortable.

"Well," said papa, "he seems to be an honestly disposed young man, and if," etc. For some time he allowed the correspondence to go on, reading regularly and watchfully the letters on both sides, unknown to them of course, until one day, when the letters had been particularly desponding and good, he put an end to it and made them happy, as may be seen by the cards sent to all whom it might concern.—Hairdresser's Chronicle.

A Forged Letter.

"I've got a letter here," said Colonel Solon yesterday, "which some one or another is tryin' to play off on me as a regular letter from Joe Kuntz," and the Colonel placed the letter on the desk. It was neatly written, and Joe's name was signed to it correctly. "Certainly, Colonel, that's Joe's letter," said we. "No, sir—see Bob, no, sir," said the Colonel, very positively, "that air letter is a forgery; coz Joe scuttles worse'n whisky flowin' outen a bottle, an' this ere letter reads as straight as a mill race." And the Colonel wouldn't be convinced that Joe didn't scutter in his writing.—Old City Derrick.

The athlete who expects to win in a hurdle race, like the slumberer whose breast is the repository of many secrets, should never talk in his sleep.

Suicidal Children.

Our Hungarian cotemporaries report a peculiarly painful case of double suicide committed by two shepherd boys, respectfully aged ten and twelve, near Karlsburg. These lads were in charge of a flock of sheep turned out to graze on some grass land abutting upon the Karlsburg-Arad Railway, and had been several times reproved by the watchman stationed near their pasturage ground for allowing the sheep to stray on the line. On the 6th inst., just as the Arad express came in sight, several sheep had wandered down the embankment and were in imminent danger of being crushed by the train, from which, however, they were rescued by the timely intervention of the watchman in question, who, as soon as the train had passed, called up the boys and told them that he would have them severely punished for neglecting their duty and his repeated warnings. The terrified lads held a consultation together as to how they might escape the threatened penalty, and speedily came to the conclusion that the best way of getting rid of their scrape would be to drown themselves. One of them had just had a new hat, adorned with a gay peacock's feather, given to him, which he sold for thirteen kreutzers to a little pheasant girl, who had been at play with the boys when the dreadful menace of punishment was imparted to them. With the price of this hat he purchased some small loaves, and the three children sat down by the Maros to hold their "Pamona," or death-feast, and this being terminated the boys climbed the parapet of the Maros bridge, their tiny playmate counted aloud "one, two, three," and at the word "three," they sprang, hand-in-hand, into the river, sinking immediately under the broken ice with which the surface of the rapid stream was partially covered.—London Telegraph.

"Raising" Setter Dogs.

A good story is told of a Rockville sporting man. Having a fine litter of setter pups—pedigreed stock—he was taking special pains to give them a good start in the world, and to this end it was his custom to rise from his bed at short intervals to feed them. It became rather tedious business for him to "crawl out" during the cold Winter nights to attend to their wants, so he tried a new plan. Setting a pan of milk in a warm corner behind the stove, he went to bed, and in the small hours the young canines, called for food. Thinking to make one job of it, he arose in the darkness and carried the pan carefully to the wood house, when seizing each pup by the nape of the neck he thrust its nose into the pan, and when all had "got to their work," returned to his bed. The next morning he was roused by his wife, who wanted to know what in the world he had done with her bread pan. Investigation followed; his wife had wet up a batch of bread and set it behind the stove to rise. This pan our "shot" had carried to the pups, and they, after gorging themselves with dough, waddled back to their warm nest. The yeast was good, and the puppies rose, looking like so many muffs, with the head of the animal used for trimming, while their tails and legs resembled warts on an early rose potato. The sportsman says he would have made a pie of them, only the crust would have been inside instead of out.—New Haven Palladium.

Why an Arkansas Boy Was Named "Judus Iscarut."

A colored brother gives the following reason for naming his tenth son: "Judus Iscarut," says he; "Do's de boy's name. Judas has been slighted. Nobody has eber had immoral courage ter name a chile after dat man. But dat ain't de main reason why I named him Judus, I'se got de Bible ter stand me in gibbin' de chile dat name. "How does the Bible sustain you in desiring to perpetuate that name?" asked the magistrate. "Hits dis fact, Chris' in remarkin' ob Judus said dat it would hab bin better fer dat man if he hadn't bin 'bern." "Well!" "An' considerin' how many moufs is opened at the doo' when I goes home wid a side ob meat, it would hab bin better fer, dat boy of mine of he had neber seed daylight. I take de scriptur' frum de references. In de futur ef I finds dat de boy has made improvement on hisself, I'll change his name to Jim." The great "three," the world renowned, star banded spanner, the "lyn" medicine man of the Missisichogonites will soon be in town. "Hoopla! big Ingin' me!" An intoxicated Providence man asked a railroad ticket agent for a ticket to Hades and was given one for Troy. He's back now, and will let the agent know that he didn't want anything worse than he asked for.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF JEFFERSON CO

THURSDAY, JUNE 17, 1880.

PRESIDENTIAL PROSPECTS.

The republican party performed its work at Chicago carefully and well. The enthusiastic ratification meetings all over the land prove that the ticket has at once united all disaffected factions in the party. For this reason it is perhaps stronger than if Grant, Blaine or Sherman had been nominated. With Garfield as our standard bearer, Ohio is sure to go strongly republican, and, with Arthur on the ticket, the latter with Conkling will attend to New York in good style. In fact, with the nominations made, we have obviated the necessity of antagonizing the German vote that would have opposed Grant; we have steered clear of the disaffection in New York, that would have existed with Blaine as a leader; and, with the fine record of which Gen. Garfield can boast, we will harmonize and unite the whole party. Indiana is claimed positively for the republicans; the recent result in Oregon leaves no doubt that her three electoral votes will go republican; Nevada's three will, from recent indications, go the same way, while in California, as an exchange remark, it will require a miracle to give the electoral vote to the democrats. The blunders of the brigadiers in Congress, reviving war issues, together with repeated Southern outrages upon the liberties of a people who ought to be as free as their acknowledged rights demand, have given the republicans such an advantage that since the last presidential election they have reversed New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, and strengthened their party by thousands of votes in Maine, Indiana, Oregon and elsewhere. In short, as has been truthfully said, a solid north in November next will be far less a surprise than would be a solid south—which the democracy must have, besides twelve electoral votes in the north outside of New York, if they succeed. It is quite true that much depends upon the result of the democratic convention. Whoever the coming man may be, however, it is certain that the republicans have a most hopeful outlook, and that the democratic situation has simmered down merely to a chance of polling a larger vote with some of their candidates than with others.

Gen. Garfield, at the age of 16 was a common day laborer, or canal boy. We need not follow him through tedious details of his early struggles to gain an education, up to his time of graduating, or dwell upon his career as president of Hiram college, or his eventful career in the war, where he attained the rank of Major General and left a record as good as that of any of the Union Generals who had not received a West Point education. We need not refer to his brilliant career in the lower House of Congress where he has, since 1877 been the acknowledged leader of the republicans. It all speaks for itself. It tells of a self made man whose whole life has been that of a student. It stamps him as an orator and a statesman of no mean caliber. His election to the U. S. Senate last winter is but the natural result of an upward course as resistless as indomitable energy, and pre eminent ability can render the life of any public man. His triumphant entry upon duties of President next March will be another and appropriate link in his life history.

Hon. Alexander H. Stephens is reported to have recently said in Philadelphia that the present Congress will go down to posterity as the do-nothing Congress; perhaps the most indolent and listless in the history of the government." Mr. Stevens thus expresses a decidedly scathing comment on his party as a national organization.

In the course of our visit up the Sound last week, we visited the Seattle barrel factory, and were very favorably impressed with the business prospects there. Probably no one manufactory in the Territory will do as much, for general prosperity as will this institution. Although it is not yet fairly started, about 80 men and boys are already employed on the grounds; besides, several camps are kept employed by the company at different points on the Sound, in getting out bolts. In a few months, or after the enterprise is fairly under way, it is estimated that about 150 hands will be employed in the factory, and that at least $200,000 in money will be invested there, exclusive of that in outside property. The factory, drying house ware rooms, wharf, etc., at present occupy a five acre plot. A fine one-hundred-horse power engine drives the machinery, and another smaller engine is nearly ready to be put in operation. One hundred complete barrels are made each day, and the material is cut for fourteen hundred more. The completed barrels are filled with the loose heads and the staves and hoop are packed in bundles for shipment to San Francisco where they are put together. Cottonwood is used principally, for making staves and heads, while spruce will probably be used almost entirely for hoops. The capitalists embarking in this industry deserve great credit, and such enterprise ought certainly to be encouraged by all.

THE recent election in Oregon is conceded to have been the most sweeping republican victory in that state since the war. Majorities range from 1,650 to 2,000. This will relieve democratic representative Whitacre from the perils of crossing the continent in lightning express trains, after his present term expires; it will relieve democratic Governor Thayer of his present official honors; it bids the three democratic supreme judges of that state to step down and out, and, as both Houses of the new legislature are strongly republican, a successor for democratic Senator Slater will doubtless be provided for from the republican ranks. We expect to see ex Senator Mitchell returned with the ringing, acclamation vote he so richly deserves.

INTEREST in the coming democratic presidential nominating convention is increasing as the time appointed for it to meet draws near. The votes counted for the respective candidates so far give Tilden upwards of ninety, with Thurman, Bayard, Hancock, Field and others ranging from twenty-five to thirty each. Tilden, like Grant, is the strongest man before the convention. Whether he will succeed or not, depends very much upon the tactics of his opposers. The indications now are that some "dark horse" will be the victor, as was Garfield at Chicago.

AN appalling disaster occurred on Long Island Sound, N. Y., on the night of the 11th inst. The steamers Narragansett and Stonington collided, and the former took fire and sunk. Many of the passengers were lost. The loss of property is estimated at $300,000.

WE notice by recent telegraphic reports that Dr. T. T. Minor, of this city, represents Washington Territory as a member of the National Republican Committee. Mr. D. C. Ireland, editor of the "Astorian," represents Oregon on the same committee.

TITUSVILLE, Penn., has had a fearful conflagration from the burning of an immense oil tank where coal oil was kept for supply. The loss is supposed to be not less than $500,000 in property—besides many lives.

GEN. Hatch has been severely censured by the people of Arizona.

THE Chicago Drover's Journal recently published a table giving the average price of wool in the New York market for 53 years, from 1825 to 1877, both included. The highest price—70 cents per pound—was paid in 1866, and again in 1872 and in 1873. The lowest price—19 cents per pound—was paid in 1843. The average price for the 53 years was 40 cents per pound. At present wool has a downward tendency.

PAINFUL ACCIDENT.—On Tuesday afternoon when Mr. Frank Hastings, of this place, was attempting to spring over a fence, one of his feet slipped and his ankle turned in such a way as to either break it or sprain it very severely. Dr. Gassaway was summoned immediately, but the ankle was so swollen that it was impossible to ascertain the extent of the injuries. Mr. Hastings will probably be detained indoors for several weeks.

CUT HER THROAT.—Mrs. Clarke, one of the prisoners in our county jail, awaiting trial on a charge of the murder of Michael Padden a few months ago in Whatcom county, made an apparent attempt to take her life on Saturday last by cutting her throat. Her little boy, who is a prisoner on the same charge, gave the alarm and the fire bell was rung by some excited individuals who could think of no better way of calling people's attention. Dr. Willison was summoned in hot haste, but ascertained upon arrival at the jail, that the injuries were comparatively slight. The wound was found to be merely a slight superficial gash. The woman is recovering rapidly.

THE national greenback labor party convention at Chicago, nominated Gen. James B. Weaver, of Iowa, for President, and B. J. Chambers of Texas, for vice president. They favor full issue of greenbacks for currency as legal tender, speedy payment of bonds, no national banks, unlimited gold and silver coinage, eight hour labor law and protection of labor, abrogation of the Burlingame treaty with China, forfeiture of unfulfilled railroad grants, denounce monopolies, favor legislative control of transportation, graduated income tax and just taxation and no restriction of suffrage. The Pomeroy ring of the party, nominated in March, also met in Chicago and did not act with the others.

THE latest fish story is that a mermaid has been washed ashore in the county Clare, Ireland. It was found dead when it came on the beach, and in a slight state of putrefaction. It is described as being about the size of an ordinary six year old boy, and to the waist or middle of the body resembled a boy in every particular. Its face, head, neck, arms and bust, as well as hair, were as perfect in appearance as those of a human being. There were no fingers on the hands, but a coarse, mopy hair, like the frizzled end of a whalebone, supplied their place. The lower portion of the body, or waist downward, resembled that of a shark, the tail being covered with a hairy substance similar to that of the haud.

THE present year is a peculiar one for weather. While the cool, backward spring on the Pacific coast is exciting general remarks, the whole east is uncomfortable under excessive heat, and sunstrokes there are quite common.

EX-SENATOR Jas. A. Bayard, of Delaware, is dead.

The platform of the republican party in its plank on the Chinese question bears the impress of the efforts of the Pacific coast members. It will not suit, nor was it framed to suit the views of the rabble which congregates on the Sand lots at San Francisco and howl applause to the words of Denis Kearney. The real working men of the country are not in that crowd at all; they stand aloof and separate from all such conspirators not only against the peace and good order of the country, but against those very industries and that business life and activity out of which workmen derive their living and their prosperity. The republicans know that the only way which the evils of excessive Chinese immigration to this coast is to be checked or avoided is by the action of Congress and this action is urged upon the congress of the United States by the highest authority in the party. The anti-Chinese plank is the strongest that could have been made, consistent with reason, and the party appeals to reasonable men only. On the action of congress depends the hope of a remedy which all men of intelligence on the Pacific coast have admitted to be required by the exigencies of the case. The platform wisely submits the question to the powers which alone, under the constitution, and the laws of nations, is authorized to act.—"Oregonian."

A STRIKE among the miners of Leadville, Colorado, has assumed such gigantic proportions that Gov. Pitkin has declared the city under martial law, and troops are being called out to preserve and vindicate the law.

WE learn that the fare for the round trip from Victoria to this place on the Fifth has been fixed at the low price of $3.

THE Port Townsend celebration this year bids fair to far excel anything of the kind on the Sound.

MR. Korter has made a nice improvement in his barber shop. We venture to say that he has a shop as neatly fitted up as any on the Sound. He has also fitted up a bathroom for salt and fresh water baths. He has done his best to have one of the finest shops, and is master of his profession.

The Oregon Kidney Tea!

Read the following testimonials, net from persons 3,000 miles away, whom no one knows, but from well-known and trustworthy citizens of Oregon, whose names, written in their own hands, can be seen at our office—
Pendleton, Oregon, January 13, 1880.

Having suffered with my kidneys, I was induced to try the Oregon Kidney Tea, which relieved me in a short time. I take pleasure in recommending it to the public as a safe remedy for kidney difficulties.
GEO. W. BAILEY, County Judge of Umatilla.

Salem, Oregon, January 20, 1880.
Some time ago I bought a package of Oregon Kidney Tea, and after using it felt better than I had for years, and bought two boxes more, being unwilling to be without so valuable a medicine. My wife pronounces it the best kidney preparation in use.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF PORT TOWNSEND.

BRIEF LOCAL ITEMS.

1776. 1880. READ the city election notice. THE steamer Fanny Lake called at this port on Monday. THE fire company was out for drill on Tuesday evening. THE season for soda water, ice cream and small fruits is close at hand. THE public school in this place closed last Friday for summer vacation. MAJ. J. R. Hayden, Collector of Internal Revenue at Olympia, is in town. MR. C. F. Clapp, of Dungeness, came to this place on one of his flying visits this week. FRESH California cherries, green peas, etc., etc., may be obtained at O. H. Holcomb's. THE frisky small boys in town are to have an opportunity this evening to attend a genuine circus. IT is expected that the Presbyterian church of this city will soon be supplied with a pastor. MESSRS. Waterman & Katz are about to build an extensive addition to their wharf and warehouse. THE mother and a brother of our townman, sheriff Miller, arrived in this city on Tuesday on the Idaho. MR. C. B. Bagley, editor of the Olympia "Courier," made Port Townsend a flying visit this week. WE learn that an excursion party will leave this place to-morrow for Dungeness, on the steamer Virginia. LAST Sunday morning all the churches in town were unoccupied for a wonder, all the pastors in town being absent. REV. E. Davis, of the Episcopal church of this place, returned on Tuesday from Portland, having been absent from home about a month. MR. Bartlett has moved the Rothschild stock of goods, from the old stand to his variety store on the corner of Union and Water streets. IT is stated for a fact that the iron mine company at the head of Port Townsend bay will soon resume operations. We certainly hope so. A NEW and substantial awning is being put up in front of Mr. Holcomb's restaurant and variety store. It will improve the place very much. JUDGE A. Briggs, of this place, is among the very first to turn out luscious strawberries this year. He's been to see us—the Judge has—and—well—NEXT! THE literary society of this place, will make a success of its proposed lecture bureau. Partial arrangements have already been made. Full particulars hereafter. NO matter how "spooney" your girl may be these days, there is no special cause for thinking she's "clean gone" on you. Ten to one she's just skinning for strawberries and cream. THIS is the last day of grace allowed by Mr. C. C. Bartlett on those old accounts that he wants settled. Read his notice on our first page, and then see if it does not apply to some of your unpaid bills. EDITORS all unite in asking Edison to invent a style of newspaper columns that will enable each separate advertiser to have a place next to the reading matter at the top of the column. There's millions in it. MR. Watlins, of Sequim, has removed to Port Townsend and is going into business here by way of starting a repairing establishment for musical instruments and other means of torture. Call on him—corner of Adams and Water street. A BEAUTIFUL tribute to the memory of the late Prof. A. R. Hoffman will be given by the school children of this city, formerly under his charge. It will be a handsome marble monument to be placed over his grave. Miss Kate Morgan, and others of the Professor's former pupils, we understand, have taken the initial step in the matter and have raised quite a sum of money already. WE heartily endorse the sentiments expressed by a local correspondent whose communication may be found on our first page. It has been frequently and sneeringly remarked that nothing in the nature of a public celebration could ever be successfully consummated in Port Townsend because petty jealousies and sectional strife were always allowed to creep in and mar the best efforts of those engaging in such a movement. We hope that in the coming celebration in this city, union and harmony of sentiment will be prominent. The Fourth of July is by all means the people's day, and for the name of the thing it for nothing else, let all petty spite-work be forgotten. If quarrelling were the rule for every other day in the year, for the sake of decency let us say that such things shall be put away on this occasion at least.

THE Portland "Standard" is howling fearfully over the republican victory in that state.

THE fare between Seattle and Sauk, the head of navigation on the Skagit, has been reduced to $8.

IT is thought that $50,000 will be paid this year for gathering the hop-crop of the Puyallup valley.

P. B. JOHNSON, Esq., editor of the Walla Walla "Union," has been making a tour through Western Washington.

PROFESSOR Jordan, of the U. S. Fish Commission, has been at Victoria, Neah Bay, Port Townsend and other points on the lower Sound, and has gathered and shipped East two tons of fish.

THE city council of Seattle unanimously passed an ordinance, over the veto of Mayor Jacobs, for the appropriation of $250 city funds, to be used in the coming Fourth-of-July celebration at that place.

FOR the information of his interested friends, and the public, on Lopez Island, Capt. Barlow requests us to state that the amount of wool sold by him is between 1,100 and 1,200 lbs., and that he has more for sale.

THURSDAY of last week was the day appointed for all the lumber mills on Puget Sound to work full time—from 6 in the morning to 6 at night. A good time may therefore be anticipated by the loggers, whose business has been very dull recently.

THE election in Oregon last week was a grand republican victory, the majority running from one to two thousand. M. C. George, the Congressional candidate, probably has the lowest majority, while Odell, the state printer, has the largest, scooping Tom Merry by thousands.

THE "Post" learns the following concerning the cheese factory run by Long & Birmingham on White river. They are using the milk from 200 cows, which is one-third the number for which they have capacity. They are now turning out from 350 to 400 pounds of cheese daily. It takes about one gallon of milk to a pound of cheese.

CAPT. M. B. Clark, recently of this city, who removed with his family to Golden-dale, Klickitat Co., writes back that they are delighted with the country over there. He says that business is booming, plenty of building going on and enterprise is apparent in all directions. We are glad our friends are so well satisfied, and hope they may prosper.

COL. Enoch May, of Orcas Island, has our thanks for a box full of the finest strawberries we have yet noticed into our capacious maw this season. They were seedlings—some of the Colonel's own raising. If called upon for an opinion, we should say that they are decidedly equal in point of flavor, size, etc., to the very best select varieties in the market.

DUNGENESS will celebrate the coming Fourth-of-July in her usual rousing style, as will be seen by a glance at our advertising columns. The leading spirits down there know how to take hold of such matters with a vim that insures success. The passenger arrangements from Port Discovery down and return will doubtless prove an inducement to the residents of that place, while the ball will attract many. A jolly time is anticipated.

BY reference to our Fourth-of-July "ad" this week, it will be observed that the steamer Geo. E. Starr has been chartered for an excursion trip from Victoria to this place. The price of tickets for the round trip is so reasonable that we can hardly fail of having a large crowd. The Port Gamble base ball club has accepted the challenge from our boys to play—so that the game will doubtless be one of the exciting features of the day. The Starr will return on Tuesday Morning, giving all a chance to attend the ball.

THE dramatic entertainment given at Good Templars' Hall last Thursday evening was pronounced a grand success. It is seldom that a troupe containing as much talent and ability visits Port Townsend. The success they met with, and the good feeling generally expressed by those who had the pleasure of witnessing the performance, would be sufficient to guarantee them a full house if they should ever come to this place again. The house was repeatedly brought down in rapturous applause, and intense interest was manifested throughout the play. In the audience were some of the ablest critics in the city, and they unite in bestowing terms of praise upon the actors.

A. L. Francis, professional tuner and regulator of pianos and organs, and agent for the leading musical instruments, will shortly visit Port Townsend to attend to work in his line. Prof. Francis was formerly regular tuner for M. Gray, and is at present tuning for Albert Barsch, C. C. Morse & Co., D. W. Prentice & Co., and others in Portland. After ten years experience, during which time he has given satisfaction to leading artists and musicians, Prof. Francis feels assured that he can guarantee first class work.

THE whole to conclude with a GRAND BALL, at Fowler's Hall.

EXCURSION; The steamer GEO. E. STARR has been chartered, and will leave VICTORIA on MONDAY, July 5th at about 4. A. M.; returning, will leave PORT TOWNSEND on Tuesday morning after the ball.

May's face.

At last Mr. Webb assisted his niece to alight, in response to her impatient remark "that he was going to keep her there all day." She was a slender, delicate girl of about eighteen Summers, with a soft pearly complexion, and great laughing brown eyes; her hair fell in ringlets about her shoulders, and looked like a shower of gold as the setting sun lit up the darker shadows of her nutbrown hair. She was the orphan niece of Mr. Webb, and had been brought up entirely at a fashionable boarding school;
on the completion of her education she came to her uncle's home, situated in the quiet county of S., in accordance with the wish of her mother, who desired her to live with her uncle after leaving school. Now our heroine did not like the idea of living in a "dull, stupid country place," as she described it, and longed passionately for the gay life of the city.

She was speedily made welcome by her aunt and cousins, who had collected around the garden gate, all impatience
to see the new cousin.

Mrs. Webb was a gentle, placid lady, with a kind motherly manner very comforting to the stranger. Her Cousin Bertha was a very pretty girl, with dreamy gray eyes and a sweet smile;
her hair was fastened into a careless knot behind that became her wonderfully. Edwin came next, and it did not take May many minutes to learn that he was the most incorrigible tease she had ever met; he was a good looking fellow, with a tall, well-knit figure; a world of fun lurked in his large blue eyes, and a mischievous smile hovered over his lips.

They led her across the smooth lawn to the piazza, which surrounded the house on all sides. From the south a view of the blue sea could be seen, as it dashed furiously against the rocks; and from the west the green meadows stretched as far as the eye could reach,
while a few lazy cows were dotted here and there over the landscape. It was such a lovely, peaceful scene that May's face brightened involuntarily as she thought, "I cannot help enjoying myself here with such a tempting scene before me."

"Well, May, I suppose your mind is filled with rapture at the thought of spending your future days in this country place," said Edwin, looking with a very teasing smile at his cousin, who was leaning against one of the columns covered with ivy that supported the pizzazza.

A shadow fell over her bright face as she replied, warmly:
"I should think not, indeed!"
Edwin laughed slightly, and then went on to say, in the same light vein:
"Did you know you would like to be a farmer's wife; you would make a capital one,
with those dainty white hands."

May said, emphatically, with a pout:
"That I never will be! To have a great, clumsy fellow treading on your train constantly—I could not bear it!"

"What are you talking about," exclaimed another voice; and Bertha came slowly toward them, swinging her broad hat in her hands, for it was an intensely warm day in July.

"May was expressing her delight at the prospect of settling down as a farmer's wife."

Bertha looked at them both and then said:
"O, I know you have been teasing her already. Really, it is too bad; but it is no use to quarrel with him, for he is incorrigible."

May found that the time passed very quickly even in the country, and did not regret her city home. What with her drives, boating, walks, croquet parties, etc., her time was so fully occupied that she did not find an opportunity to do so.

Shortly after her arrival at the hall,
she made the acquaintance of a wealthy young farmer, who owned a large farm and country seat a few miles away. He was not handsome, but possessed a frank, ingenious countenance that was very attractive. His manner was a trifle awkward and constrained, and May made him the butt for her constant ridicule. He bore all this with undiminished good humor, and was her constant companion. From the first, her lovely, bewitching face had made him her devoted admirer.

It was a pleasant day in September,
and early in the morning young Oakland drove up in his pretty phaeton and stopped before Mrs. Webb's door. He jumped down and darted through the flower beds, regardless of the damage they sustained, to the lawn, where he had seen a little figure in white muslin vanish. At last he found her demurely sitting on a log, and looking as dainty and fresh as a rose.

"Miss May, will you come with me and take a ride?"

"What! at this hour? Why, surely not, Mr. Oakland!"

"Never mind the early hour—the roads are so good, and this air will revive you—do come, please!" pleaded he,
eagerly.

She looked mischievously into his face, saying:
"Why are you so anxious? Go and find Bertha and take her with you; she will be delighted, I'm sure."

Oakland turned away at last, wounded by her refusal, and in a moment she was beside him, a rosy flush mantling her bright cheeks, and a gay smile on her red lips.

"I did not think you would desert me
so soon," she began.

He looked at her searchingly, but she bore his scrutiny with unflinching eyes, upon which his face lost its gloomy expression, and a happy smile played over his features. He helped May to a seat beside him, and they started off at a brisk trot. They did not return until near noon, and when they arrived Edwin came out to the front gate to meet them.

"Well, that was very fine of you to go off in that fashion, without letting anyone know of it. I began to think that Mr. Oakland had eloped with you, but mamma thought otherwise, and she insisted upon my dragging the pond."

May's face flushed slightly, and in order to cover up her confusion, she leaned over and pulled her cousin's hair, saying:

"You are very impertinent, even for a cousin."

"Come, May, jump!" he said, impatiently.

Oakland leaped out of the carriage,
and stood by in readiness to lift her out.
May looked from one to the other, and finally allowed her cousin the privilege of helping her. Oakland looked on with an angry face, and drove off without deigning to say a word.

May remained at the gate, gazing at his fast retreating figure. In her heart she regretted her coquetry, but it was too late to remedy that now.

Edwin began to laugh softly to himself, and May, annoyed by it, asked what amused him.

"I was thinking how my prophecy was being fulfilled."

"What do you mean?" inquired his cousin.

"I always said you would be a farmer's wife."

May flushed scarlet, as she said, angrily:

"That is not true, for I would never marry Gerald Oakland! He is too awkward and simple."

Edwin's face became very thoughtful,
and she began to fear further mischief;
but he turned away and said no more.

CHAPTER II.

Several days later, Oakland called at the Hall, and was taken into the parlor where the family were assembled. They all welcomed him gladly, for it was a dull, wet day, and they did not expect any callers. Bertha sat at the piano talking to Gerald from time to time, and finally coaxed him into giving them a song. He had a clear, melodious voice, and he sang with great taste; but he was so very shy of his accomplishments that May did not know that he possessed so fine a voice, and complimented him so highly that he begged her to desist with blushing face.

Edwin at last seated himself beside Gerald Oakland, and after some desul-tory conversation, said in an audible tone:

"Do you wish to know what my cousin said about you the other day?"

May turned around at this, and said
quickly and imperatively:

"Edwin, do not repeat what I said to you!"

He looked at her with a provokingly
innocent face, and went on heedlessly,

"Well, she told me privately that she would never marry a farmer, and that you were too awkward and simple for her refined taste."

Gerald glanced at May's downcast countenance, and asked quietly—

"Is that true, Miss May?"

She shot a withering glance at Edwin and replied "yes," in a low tone.

Gerald's face changed color, and he rose abruptly and bade them all goodnight. He kept his eyes studiously averted from May as he came to her side; then he went hastily from the room.

After he had gone, May went upstairs to her room, too sad and mortified to remain with the family. A moment after he had spoken, Edwin regretted what he had said, for he was very kind-hearted with all his faults, and quickly repented what his mischievous nature led him to do. May's heart was full of sorrow as she thought of the possible consequences of her own rash words—for that she loved the farmer she could no longer conceal from herself, and the future would be indeed blank if she lost him; even his awkward manner was dear to her, and she did not wish him changed in any particular.

Oakland did not come to the Hall for some time after that; but he treated May with a marked coolness that pained her excessively, although she, true to her womanly instincts, retained her gay, coquettish manner still.

The months passed swiftly on, till,
before anyone realized it, Winter had come in with keen, frosty breath. Then came the liveliest time for the young people, and May soon learned to be as skillful on ice as she was in waltzing, and almost every day her slight, graceful figure could be seen flitting as lightly
as a bird over the ice.

It was a clear, cold day in January,
and May, accompanied by her cousins, set out for Glenwood Brook, which was situated about two miles from their home. They had not gone far before they were overtaken by Oakland, who came along whistling, with his skates slung over his shoulder.

"Ah, Oakland, just the fellow we wanted! You help May along and I'll take care of Bertha," exclaimed Edwin, who good naturedly wished to bring the estranged couple together.

Thus addressed, Gerald could not do otherwise than offer his services to May,
who accepted them nonchalantly enough although her heart was beating loudly at the same time.

The pond was a large one, and soon
May and Gerald found themselves quite separated from the rest of the party.
She started along fearlessly, and was making for the opposite bank, when Gerald called out anxiously—

"Do not go too near that bank, for there is a swift current underneath, and the ice is thin."

May did not pause in her course, and sent a clear, silvery peal of laughter
after her.

"Ah, I am not afraid, and I am determined on reaching that bank."

The words were barely uttered when the ice gave an ominous, creaking sound, and in a moment she sank under it. She gave one quick scream, and then remained silent, holding on to the ice with fast-be numbing fingers.

"Oh, I hope he will soon come!" she moaned.

Gerald was soon beside her, and, bracing himself against a tree, he took her little cold hands in his, and, after considerable exertion, succeeded in drawing her out of the water. He held her half unconscious form in his arms and murmured softly:

"Thank God, I was not too late! My darling, what should I have done had I lost you?"

She opened her eyes, wet with thankful tears, and whispered:

"Would you have cared, Gerald?"

"Cared? Life would have been worthless to me had you gone!" he exclaimed, passionately.

His face was very pale with suppressed emotion, and his eyes shone with such a clear light that they fairly dazzled her.

At this interesting point they were interrupted by the appearance of Edwin Webb, who could hardly conceal his laughter at the turn affairs had taken.

"Well, Cousin May, have you forgiven me yet? Had it not been for me you would never have appreciated each other so much. What do you say, Gerald, do you not owe me many thanks?"

Gerald looked down at May's blushing face, and replied, warmly:

"Yes, Edwin, I do owe you many thanks, for we should never have known the depth of our affection for each other had it not been for our quarrel."

"My advice to you is to get her home
as soon as possible to change her wet clothing," said Edwin, who was of a practical turn of mind.

His advice was so good that they accepted it without question, and they started for the hall, two hearts filled to overflowing with happiness.

A New York Orphan.

One of the little lambs picked up in the streets of New York by Whitelaw Reid and sent West to find a home was adopted by a Detroit family about two months ago, and ere this is published Mr. Reid has received a big postal card announcing that his dear lamb has gone West to fight the Indians, and that he needn't mind about sending on another to take his place.

This New York lamb was 13 years old. He said so at the depot on his arrival, and half an hour later he reiterated the statement at the house, and added:

"And if you don't believe it, then call me a liar! That's the sort of a spring gun I am, and don't you forget it."

They didn't forget it. He gave them no chance to. He ate with his fingers, wiped his mouth on his sleeve, and gave the family to understand before supper was over that he didn't come West to have his hair combed or his face washed as a regular business. On his first evening he slipped out, had three fights and stole a dog, and when hunted up he was about to take his beer in a saloon.

The family expected to wrestle with the boy for awhile, and they didn't sit down on him until it became a painful necessity. During his first week he stole $3 in money, a gold chain, a revolver, and a pair of earrings, and he got drunk twice. When reasoned with and asked to do better, he took a fresh chew of plug tobacco and replied:

"Oh! you Michigan folks are too soft! If a feller can't have a good time, what's the use of being an orphan?"

On Monday of the second week he sold the family dog to a stranger for a quarter, threw the saw and the ax into the alley, and when looked up in a closet he tore a Sunday coat to pieces. It was thought best to have a policeman talk to him, and was called in. He put on his fiercest look, and lectured the lamb for fifteen minutes, but as soon as he stopped for breath the young sinner replied:

"Now see here, old buttons, you are wasting time! I know my little gait, I do, and if you think I've come to a village like this to be buffed by anybody, you've missed your train!"

He was taken to Sunday school by the hand. He hadn't been there half an hour when he was taken out by the collar. He seemed anxious to punch the head of every good little boy within half a mile of him, and he told the teacher of his class that when she could stuff Moses in the bulrushes down him it would be after she had bleached out her freckles. They gave him a Sunday school book to fit his case, but he fitted it to a crack in the sidewalk on his way home.

When moral suasion had no effect on the wicked youth, his guardian tried the rod. He was bigger than the boy, and he walloped him, but within three hours two of the nuts were taken off his buggy and thrown away. There was a second seizure in the woodshed, and before dark a window glass worth eight dollars was broken.

That orphan was faithfully and duly and persistently wrestled with. He was coaxed and flattered. He was licked and reasoned with. Ambition, gratitude, fear and avarice were alike appealed to in turn, but as he was the first day so he was the last. A few days ago he was told that he would be sent to the reform school at Lansing, if there was any further trouble with him. That night he stole $5 of the cook, a butcher-knife from the pantry, a pie from the sideboard, and departed from the house, leaving on his bed a note reading as follows:

"This thorn ar' no place for a N. York orphan. I'm goin' out on the planes to fite Injuns. It will be useless to foller me, fur I can't be look Alive!" —Detroit Free Press.

Surplus of Sympathy.

Sympathy is valuable when it is adequate to the occasion. A poor tenant went to his landlord on rent day and told him that one of his best cows had been choked to death. She tried to swallow a turnip, but the obstinate vegetable stuck fast and the cow died. The interested landlord demanded the details and wanted to know whether the tenant was sure that it was a turnip that killed her. "Yes," was the reply, "we cut her open and found it fast in her throat." "Well, sir," said the landlord, "I am glad you got your turnip back. Now, how about the rent?" —N. Y. Herald.

"Do you play euchre?" asked the sad passenger of the man from Whitehall. "No," replied the man, "I only know two cards in the deck, the jack of queens and the spade of diamonds." They didn't play.

No New York newspaper office is now complete without a puzzle editor. And he has to have his brain half-soled once a day. With fair treatment and prompt attention to repairs a good puzzle editor will last a week.

Czar Nicholas and His Doctor.

On the 2d of March, 1855, when it was known that the Czar Nicholas had died, a wild excitement, increasing from day to day, burst forth against his favorite physician, Dr. Mandt, the more readily suspected because he was a German. Busy calumniators spread the news abroad in all circles that the guilt of the Emperor's death lay at the door of his Prussian doctor. Mandt's family, who were then at Frankfort, were in the greatest terror, when their fear was removed by a dispatch from St. Petersburg, stating that the present Czar Alexander had taken up the defense of the calumniated man, having called him into his presence, thanked him before the court for his care of his father, and presented him with a magnificent gold snuff box, richly set with diamonds.

The doctor, it appears, has left behind him a detailed account of the last days and hours of his Imperial patient. Almost his only friends at court besides the Czar himself were the heir to the throne and the Grand Duchess Helena. He was an object of violent dislike to her husband, the Grand Duke Michael. When the Czar was taken ill Mandt's meanness was whispered about that he would poison their master. The Grand Duchess Helena warned him of the plots against his reputation and person. Her husband called him into a private room. "I found him in the highest excitement," says Dr. Mandt. "I thought he would seize me by the collar, but my coolness seemed to make some impression upon him, and he contented himself with shaking his fist in my face and exclaiming 'Traitor!' An excited conversation passed between them, and the Prince ended by saying: 'On the day upon which the precious health of the Czar is endangered by your treatment, your learned head shall hang upon your head by the thinness of a single thread.'"

Nicholas, himself, was worked up into a temporary suspicion of the fidelity of his doctor. One day, upon feeling himself better, the Czar said: "Mandt, do you know that I believed yesterday that you were bent upon poisoning me?" "I knew it, sire," replied the doctor. "Then do not forge," observed the Emperor, "that you have enemies here, and many of them." On the night of the 2d of March Mandt had to tell the Czar the news that his recovery was impossible. Nicholas received his information with great calmness. He ordered the sacrament to be brought, took leave of the Empress, his children and his grandchildren, kissed them and blessed each by name with a firm, clear voice. To the Empress he said: "I shall send for thee when the last moment draws nigh."

How to be Miserable.

Sit by the window and look over the way at your neighbor's excellent mansion which he has recently built and paid for and fitted out, saying: O, that I was a rich man!

Get angry at your neighbor, and think you have not a friend in the world. Shed a tear or two, and take a walk in the burial ground, continually saying to yourself: When shall I be buried here?

Sign a note for a friend, and never forget your kindness, and every hour in the day whisper to yourself: I wonder if he will ever pay that note!

Think everybody means to cheat you. Closely examine every bill you take, and doubt its being genuine until you have put the owner to a great deal of trouble. Put confidence in nobody, and believe everyone you trade with to be a rogue.

Never accommodate if you can possibly help it. Never visit the sick or afflicted, and never give a farthing to assist the poor.

Buy as cheap as you can, and screw down to the lowest cent. Grind the faces and hearts of the unfortunates.

Brood over your misfortunes, your lack of talents, and believe that at no distant day you will come to want; let the work-house be ever in your mind, with all the horrors of distress and of poverty.

Follow these receipts strictly, and you will be miserable to your heart's content—if we may so speak—sick at heart and at variance with the world. Nothing will cheer or encourage you—nothing to throw a gleam of sunshine or a ray of warmth into your heart.

The whippoorwill has come to the Spring nights, and whippoorwill poetry is being printed in the newspapers. If the lone bird only had a little break in his wail he might be entertaining, but he is as big a nuisance as two Congressmen trying to talk the same time.—New York Herald.

A panther escaped from a circus in Connecticut, ran half a mile, got sight of a woman's feet as she climbed a fence, and at once returned to his cage and laid down and died.

H. H. WARNER & Co., Rochester, N. Y.—GENTLEMEN: About five years since I was taken with an affection of the liver, which gradually developed itself into chronic liver complaint. I tried numerous remedies without receiving any benefit, and I gave up all hope of ever being restored to sound health, when a friend recommended me to try Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. I procured it, and, strange to relate after using two bottles, felt my system undergoing a great change, which ended in a complete cure, and I have had no return of the disease since. Very respectfully yours,

Wm. E. Clarke, of Providence, R. I., has issued a pamphlet which he sends free to any address, setting forth the results of his experience with reference to Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. M. Clarke adduces the most incontestable evidence that this malady yields to the proper remedy. The only medicine used by Mr. Clarke is HUNT'S REMEDY, the Great Kidney and Liver Medicine, and with it he performs cures that are really very remarkable. Sold by all druggists. Trial size, 75 cents.

I have tested the Oregon Blood Purifier, the original botanical remedy, first introduced by Wm. Pfunder, of Portland, Oregon, and can state with confidence that as a Tonic and Purgative, together with diuretic properties, it is really superior to any other preparation and worthy of the confidence of the medical faculty and public.

A contemporary contains a long article entitled "Effect of Smoking on Boys." It is not right to smoke on boys. It imparts a disagreeable odor to their clothes, and when they go home they arouse suspicions in the minds of their mothers which are difficult to eradicate. The effect of smoking on some boys would be a rock hurled at the head of the smoker.

PUGET SOUND ARGUS.

BOOMED.

One of the keenest observers of human affairs has said, "There is an irresistible law of our modern civilization which has decreed that the system that cannot bear discussion is 'downed.' If he is right, and no one will question it, then the drink business must eventually go to the wall. It sneaks away from discussion. Who ever heard of the raucous holding a meeting for a public discussion of their side of the case? There are tens of thousands of temperance meetings being held in our State every year. Why don't our opponents hold meetings, refute our position, and present their side of the case? Simply because their side is indefensible and they have got nothing to say. They don't dare show their heads in public discussion, for they well understand the weakness and wickedness of their position, and have a proper foreboding of the tremendous thumping they would catch, if they exhibited their craniums.

The people, taken all in all, are neither fools nor knaves. The constant discussion is educating the public mind and arousing public indignation. The public mind moves slowly oftentimes, but public indignation, when it comes, will crush the wrong with giant power.

GOOD TEMPLAR BREVITIES.

KENTUCKY.—C. E. Swift, G. W. S. and Treas., announces that fourteen lodges were instituted and re-organized in that State during the month of February, with a charter membership of 400; in March eight lodges were instituted and five re-organized, with a charter membership of about 300. Nearly fifty lodges have been instituted and re-organized in Kentucky since the session of the Grand Lodge, October last.

A lodge must stand squarely on its merits as a secret temperance organization, or it must go to destruction. Instead of letting itself down to the level of a low public sentiment which surrounds it, it must lift public sentiment up to the plane which the Order at large occupies. It is a slow and tedious process, but good meetings and sincere work will accomplish it. Public meetings we need; the more good ones the better, but they must be public meetings under the auspices of the lodge rather than public meetings of the lodge. Half and half lodges have never thriven for any length of time. Let people take our obligation and pay their share towards the support of the Order, if they want to know how we look in a lodge room.

A census of Sitka, Alaska, taken April 25th, 1880, shows the population to be 450. Americans by birth—69 men, 11 women 31 children; citizens by naturalization—83 men, 14 women; by treaty—123 men, 133 women and children. Following are the nationalities of the foreign born: Ireland 31, Scotland 3, Germany 15, Austria 6, Canada 4, England 12, Turkey 1, Finland 1, France 1, Norway 2, Switzerland 1, Newfoundland 1, Sweden 1.

The Board of Health of New York city thinks that the people of that city are defrauded by the sale of skimmed and watered milk to the extent of $10,000 a day, while the loss consequent on disease among 130,000 children under five years of age thus defrauded of their proper nourishment, cannot be estimated.

Among the delegates to Chicago was Norton of Texas, whose long gray locks testify that he has kept his pledge not to cut his hair till Clay is President.

THE GOOD TEMPLAR GRAND LODGE.

On Tuesday, the 8th inst, the Grand Lodge of Good Templars, for W. T. & B. C., convened in Olympia, W. T., and held its eleventh annual session. The attendance was rather small, as a number of the subordinate lodges, though in good standing, were not represented. The entire session, however, was quite harmonious and the legislation recorded will doubtless be satisfactory to the whole jurisdiction. Twenty-four lodges were reported in good standing, and the total active membership in the jurisdiction is 700, exclusive of Juvenile Templars. On the evening of Thursday, the 11th, the following named G. L. officers, elected for the ensuing year, were installed:

- Allen Weir..... G. W. C. T.
- Thos. N. Innes..... " Comd.
- Mrs. L. C. Calvert..... " V. T.
- Jos. Chibberg..... " Sec.
- N. S. Porter..... " As Sec.
- W. H. Roberts..... " Treas.
- N. D. Hill..... P. G. W. C. T.
- E. Calvert..... " Mar.
- Miss Addie Dobbins..... Dep.
- Rev. J. R. Thompson..... G. W. Chap.
- W. A. Wilson..... " Mess.
- Miss Anna Pattison..... " Guard
- N. Pattison..... " Sen.
- M. D. Hill..... Delegate to R. W. G. L.
- N. Shakespeare Alternate to " " "
- J. V. Crawford, Allen Weir, W. H. Roberts and J. N. Gale, Fraternal delegates to Grand Lodge of Oregon.

Victoria, B. C., was chosen as the place of holding the next annual session, and third Friday in May, 1881, was selected as the time of meeting.

The G. W. Chief Templar was made EX OFFICIO Gen. Supt. of Juvenile Templars.

After the installation ceremonies, the degree of Fidelity was conferred upon two members of the sub. lodge in Olympia, and, at the close of that ceremony, the Grand Lodge adjourned. The remainder of the of the evening was occupied until a late hour at night by a fraternal meeting with members of the sub. lodge. A rare collation, consisting of the most tempting table delicacies, was spread, and the meeting was a thorough, social love-feast. Altogether, the last session of the Grand Lodge will be regarded as one of the pleasantest in the history of the Order in this jurisdiction.

The grand lodge being out of debt with a small balance in the treasury, resolutions were adopted embodying in substance as follows: requiring the G. W. C. T. to visit as many sub. lodges as convenient during the year; authorizing him to travel for the purpose of meeting sub. lodges, exemplifying the unwritten work of the Order, lecturing, organizing, etc., to the extent of four months during the year; authorizing him to take collections wherever in his judgment such a course would be best; calling the particular attention of sub. lodges to the necessity of assisting in defraying the expenses of such visitation; pledging the G. L. to make up the deficit in any reasonable expense account for such visiting and lecture work; authorizing the executive committee to employ a G. L. lecturer during the interim, should they deem such a course best. A resolution was adopted declaring it to be the sense of the Grand Lodge that it is a violation of Art. II of the Constitution for members of the Order to visit drinking saloons for the purpose of taking part in games of chance, either for a consideration or otherwise, and that it is the duty of sub. lodges to bring to trial and punish all such offenders. A resolution was adopted, allowing sub. lodges to hold their meetings for business in which ever degree they choose, and to arrange the degree qualifications for office as they may deem best; also, a resolution exonerating Allen Weir, past Grand Secretary, for all blame in the matter of an adverse report of the Finance Committee of last year, in reference to his change for postage and printing.

The legislation of the session was such as will indicate an upward tendency, especially in regard to elevating the standard of conduct required of Good Templars.

The Dalles Inland Empire says the wood clip this season in eastern Oregon will surpass that of any previous year. Every day cars arrive at the Dalles, from above, loaded with a superior article, and the boats are delayed beyond the usual hour of departure every morning, it being impossible to load them by five o'clock, at which time they should leave for Portland, though every available man is put on the night gang.

On the Missouri of the Northern Pacific Railroad 7,000 feet of track were laid on the 10th of May, 6,000 feet on the 11th, and 5,000 feet on the 12th. About fifty cars loaded with material cross the Missouri river at Bismarck daily.

THE BEST REMEDY FOR Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy, and no other so eminently merits the confidence of the public. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, to insure the greatest possible efficiency and uniformity of results, which enables physicians as well as invalids to use it with confidence. It is the most reliable remedy for diseases of the throat and lungs that science has produced. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt and certain relief, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it without difficulty. In the treatment of ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household, for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

The marvellous cures which AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has effected all over the world are a sufficient guaranty that it will continue to produce the best results. An impartial trial will convince the most sceptical of its wonderful curative powers, as well as of its superiority over all other preparations for pulmonary complaints.

Eminent physicians in all parts of the country, knowing its composition, recommend AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL to invalids, and prescribe it in their practice. The test of half a century has proved its absolute certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.
