Legal advertisements of every description must be paid for before insertion. There will be no variation from this rule in any event.

The Law of Newspapers:

1—Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary are considered as wishing to continue their subscription.

2—If subscribers order their papers discontinued, publishers may continue them until all charges are paid.

3—If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the office or place to which they are sent, they are responsible until they settle the bill and give notice to discontinue them.

4—If subscribers move to other places without informing the publisher, and the paper is sent to the former direction, they are held responsible. Notice of removal should always be given.

5—The courts have decided that refusing to take a paper or periodical from the office, or removing and leaving it uncollected, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

6—The published rates of advertising govern in all cases except where special contracts have been made previous to insertion. The courts have repeatedly so decided.

7—Under the law of Congress, papers are not charged postage to the copy, in which they are published.

Labor.

Till swings the ax, and forests bow;
The seeds break out in radiant bloom;
Rich Harvest smiles behind the plow,
And cities cluster round the loom.
Where towering domes and tapering spires
Adorn the vale and crown the hill,
Round labor high in his bright dress,
His hands with smoke each forge and mill.
The monarch oaks, the woodland's pride,
Whose trunk is steepled with lightning scars,
Till hatches on the restless tide,
And there enrols the flag of stars:
The engine, with its lungs of flame,
And ribs of brass and joints of steel,
From Labor's plastic fingers came,
The nobbing valve and whirling wheel.
* Labor works the magic press,
And turns the crank in lives of steel,
And beckons angels down to bless
Industrial hands of sea and soil.
Have kin-ship with the shining spade,
Links take to lake with silver tines,
Bring thick with palaces of trade,
And temples towering to the skies.

The Picket's Ruse.

The following incident is said to have occurred near Yorktown, during its late siege by the Federal forces:
Private Joel Snapes, of a hard-working, tough-sinewed regiment of Vermont volunteers—was a good shot and a smart soldier. He hardly ever came in after a day's exercise in that branch of military industry without having a report to make to his superior officer of some new work discovered, some conversation overheard, some little chance circumstance perceived, that might be of use in gaining an advantage over the enemy.

Joel was a long, lank, yellow-haired fellow, not very soldierly in speech or bearing, but of infinitely more service than many a one of our snug, dapper, well-looking city soldiers. He was frightfully unburned, and his face, coarse-featured and demure, suggested good humor and power of endurance more than courage or discipline. But there was a twinkle about his small gray eyes, which envied them despite their scanty, characterless white lashes, and impressed the closer sort of observer with a wholesome respect for his courage and intelligence. His usual voice and drawl, his round shoulders and flat build, could not shake this so long as one kept those clear, cool, far-seeing eyes in sight; and Joel's comrades prophesied that he had only to believe in himself, and leap on in his own way, to pick a pair of quails one fine day.

He openly declared that manual labor on the earthworks was distasteful to him; and his officers, knowing his value at picket duty, evinced enough consideration for him to keep him at that service.
The position that he liked best was on the slope of a hill, opposite a similar slope, occupied by a sentinel of the Confederates. This last was quite a high bit of ground, whence one might see a good deal of what was going on about the pickets further down. Joel believed that the sentinel there stationed learned more than was good for our side. He accordingly harassed and annoyed every one that showed his head on the hill-side opposite, and left several adventurous fellows stretched out on the turf, one after another, as a reward for their tenacity.

It was nearly a quarter of a mile off, but, as I have said, the long Vermont was a good shot, and it became really dangerous for the enemy to poke its head above the ground at all near the forbidden hill side. They soon learned this lesson, and very naturally acted upon it.
Joel, sauntering carelessly down his path, one fine afternoon, heard a sharp report, and felt the wind of a rifle ball that came wonderfully near his head. Turning quickly, he saw the smoke floating up from a little pile of fresh earth on the hill opposite. The enemy had dug a pit wherein the sentinel could sit at ease and expose his head and great ear to the fire. Private Snapes hastened, with praiseworthy prudence, to get out of sight, among some cedars, and watched for some time before quite fixing the location of his foe again. Finally, discovering the fresh earth one more, and imagining that he saw a hat just above it, he took a shot in that direction. Up jumped a tall sentinel, bare-headed, and returned the fire instantly. He had only been trying the old trick of putting his hat on a ramrod.

"That's never do," rejoined Joel. "That case has got to have a berth over yander. I'll just have to run round him out."
The sentinel's death-warrant was in some sort signed from that moment. The crafty Vermont's brain was at work on the problem of dislodging this man thenceforth.
So long as Joel kept quiet, so long hid his antagonist; but it was presumable that he could see the batteries in process of construction, without exposing his head, for the earth taxen from the hill was piled up on the side towards Joel. From a thicket at the foot of the two hills, however, a shot could be thrown, longwise of the trench, and behind his trifling breastwork. To gain that thicket, then, without being too visible on the barren slope, was Joel's idea.

The next day, private Snapes took with him a long piece of stout twine and a loaded revolver, when he went out on picket duty. It was not yet daylight, but the gray and indistinct light of dawn was begun to talk in the East.
The sentinel, as soon as the guard passed along, hastened to drive a smooth stake into the ground, and to set his musket over a fork in a cedar bush in front of the stake, the muzzle of the weapon pointing in the direction of the pit on the farther slope.

He then cocked the piece, and having fastened one end of his cord to the trigger, began stealthily crawling down hill on his hands and knees, paying out the line as he went. It was a hazardous experiment, for the thicket, when he gained it, was very sparse, and so near to the pit that the Confederate sentry, had he suspected Joel's presence there, could have hardly failed to hit him.
Lying down, however, the Vermont soldier awaited sunrise, and as the shadows faded away into the mists of morning, he saw the light gleam upon a bayonet, peering from the trench on the hill side. "Now for the work," said Joel to himself.

He pulled the string, carefully, at first, till it was drawn tight, and then a slight extra tug flung the musket from among the cedars above. He had not calculated wrongly. As soon as the rifleman in the pit had this martial salutation from his enemy over opposite, as he supposed, he raised himself up to return the fire, and brought his head and shoulders plainly into sight. "Come straight through the side of his head," said Joel to himself.

"The damned fool!" said Snapes, "didn't he know a fellow might shoot off a gun without having a hold onto it?"
The Confederate pickets decided, thereafter, that this position was too exposed to be profitably occupied.

Speech of Hon. Edgar Cowan,

On the Confiscation of Rebel Property.

The special order of the day, which was Senate bill No. 151, to confiscate the property and free the slaves of rebels, being before the Senate—
Mr. Cowan said—Mr. President: I agree with the honorable Senator from California, and look upon the bill now under consideration as the most important, by far, upon our calendar, involving the gravest questions and most momentous issues. If it passes, I think it will be the great historic event of the times—times which are as fruitful of events as any the world has ever witnessed. Upon the disposition we may make of it, perhaps the fate of the American Republic may depend; and no one surely can overrate the magnitude of anything which may be attended with such consequences.

We are standing now squarely face to face with questions of most pregnant significance. Shall we stand or fall by the Constitution, or shall we leave it and adventure ourselves upon the wild sea of revolution? Shall we attempt to liberate the slaves of the people of the rebellious States, or shall we leave them to regulate their domestic institutions the same as before the rebellion? Shall we go back to the doctrine of forfeitures which marked the middle ages, and introduce funds which intervening centuries have not yet sufficed to quiet? These are great questions, and they are in this bill, every one of them.

If, for one moment, we can suppose the scheme consummated which it contemplates, we shall have the following results:
I suppose it is reasonable and moderate to estimate the number of people engaged in the rebellion to be equal to one-half of the whole white population of the Confederate States—say four millions. If so, this bill proposed, at a single stroke, to strip all this vast number of people of all their property, real, personal, and mixed, of every kind whatsoever, and reduce them at once to absolute poverty; and that, too, at a time when we are at war with them, when they have arms in their hands, with four hundred thousand of them in the field opposing us desperately.

Now, sir, it does seem to me that if there was anything in the world calculated to make that who rose in rebellion and, at the same time, four thousand soldiers in the field now and forever hostile to us and our Government, it would be the promulgation of a law such as this. Will they yield to us sooner in view of such a result to them? What would we be likely to do if they were to threaten us with a similar law? Would we ever, under any circumstances, yield on terms like these? I need hardly ask that question of men descended from sires who refused to pay the tax on tea, and from grandfathers who rose in rebellion and, at the same time, four thousand soldiers in the field now and forever hostile to us and our Government, it would be the promulgation of a law such as this. Will they yield to us sooner in view of such a result to them? What would we be likely to do if they were to threaten us with a similar law? Would we ever, under any circumstances, yield on terms like these? The Farmer's Corner.

Garden Work for Autumn.

If you desire to get all the pleasure you can from your garden and yard next year, you must commence your labors now.

This month is the best time to plant all kinds of hardy bulbous, such as lilies, hyacinths, crocus, etc., in many varieties and colors.

Trans-plant hardy shrubs and hardy plants of all kinds, and you will save yourself much vexation, besides having many things done which, if you wait until spring, you will not do, and thereby lose one year of pleasure and profit.

If you cannot afford this year to purchase all you want, we will suggest a plan. Unite with your neighbors and all buy something.

Young man, gladden your sister's heart by a present of something that she can cherish and enjoy.

PASTURING HORSES.—Few of the writers who have discoursed upon the management of horses have said anything about the summer grazing of these animals.

MUTTON AS AN ARTICLE OF FOOD.—The American Agriculturalist says, "We mean to repeat a thousand times, or at least till what we say shall have some effect upon our countrymen, that a pound of lean juicy mutton can be produced for half the cost of the same quantity of pork."

BRANDY STONE.—A correspondent of the N. E. Farmer says: Upon about two acres of my farm there were quite a number of large stones, partly above ground, that were very uncomfortable to work around with the plow and drag.

PUMPKIN PIE.—Cut each pumpkin or squash into halves, and remove the seed and soft, stringy pulp. Then set them, open side up, into a moderately heated oven.

REMARKABLE CURE OF LOCKWAVE.—The N. Y. Observer says that a young lady from a rustic inn in her foot, recently, the injury produced lockjaw of such a malignant character that her physicians pronounced her recovery hopeless.

Felt Cloth and Shoddy Cloth.

We notice a paragraph, occasionally, in some of our exchanges, alluding to the cheating practiced upon the government in furnishing shoddy, "felt" or cotton goods for the use of the army and navy.

The felt goods here spoken of are made upon the principle of spinning and weaving by crossing the wool in thin layers at right angles, thus giving the fabric equal strength each way.

MULBERRY TREES.—In Japan the mulberry is cultivated in great abundance, both for the purpose of rearing silk worms, and the manufacture of paper.

COMMISSIONER'S COURT, February Term, 1862.—Feb. 4th—ORDERED by the Court, that the Auditor's notice to be published in the "Puguet Sound Herald" to the effect that all claims against the estate of the late J. J. Czapka, deceased, be presented to the Auditor of the County of San Francisco, at the office of the Auditor, at the County Court House, in San Francisco, on or before the 10th day of March, 1862.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT. Scorbatic Eruptions, as Sore Heads and Scrofulous Swellings.

In this powerful Ointment, the most efficacious ingredients are combined, and it is applied to the parts affected, all skin diseases will be speedily overcome.

Diarrhea, Ulcerated Sore Throat and Quinsy. The above complaints have for twenty years been treated with Holloway's Ointment and Pills with perfect success.

THE KIDNEYS, STONE AND GRAVEL. In these complaints, the Ointment acts like a diuretic, and it is very efficacious in rubbing over the kidneys, which it will penetrate and give almost immediate relief.

Bad Legs, Bad Breasts, Scrofulous Sores and Glandular Swellings. In such cases the Ointment operates slowly and with a regularity that is scarcely to be expected.

THE ACTION OF THE HEART, Dropsy. This last named disease is commonly preceded by irregular action of the heart, and difficult respiration, which symptoms are always severe, and ever go from bad to worse, unless proper means are resorted to in Holloway's Ointment.

Gout and Rheumatism. May be cured with the greatest certainty if large quantities of the Ointment be well worked into the complaining parts, and this preventively done for some time.

Induration of Testis. Some ulcers, and swellings, can with certainty be cured if the Ointment be thoroughly rubbed all around the complaining parts twice or thrice a day.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases: Bad Legs, Ulcers, Sore Throat, Quinsy, Glandular Swellings, etc.

I sought medical assistance, and expended large amounts, but without the least beneficial result.

I was daily drawing closer to the tomb; my physicians held out no hope of recovery, my strength had waned, and I was in a state of almost utter prostration.

For the purpose of procuring the most efficacious medicine, I was informed by my physicians that they could do nothing more for me, unless I would resort to the use of the "Pain Expeller," which I had never heard of before.
