

That Soulless Corporation.

In the local columns of this paper, under the head of "A Deserved Compliment," the reader will find a brief statement of what a gentleman proposes to do towards adding a certain educational institution, and that item is the inspiration for a little plain talk about what we so constantly hear, "that soulless corporation."

It is admitted that there are two sides to every question; but it is true that many questions of public interest have three sides, and we think this one of "a soulless corporation" is not an exception. The third side is the moral one. It lies between the logic of facts and figures, and is touched and tempered thereby. Now, whatever the philosophy of it, there seems to be a disposition to apply the term "soulless" to corporations of every kind, and there are always to be found men with pseudo or constructed consciences to give the sentiment wings. These men do not attempt any exposition of reasons, but simply state the corporate conscience is always inferior to the individual conscience; that a strong, broad-shouldered company has lost all that sense of feeling which would be common to a private person; that because they are joined together in a corporation they are necessarily soulless and cold-blooded and belonging to the individual.

Now, what is true in this respect of a corporation, is quite often true of the individual who has taken good sense and judgment and enterprise into close partnership and finally amassed wealth. It is in the nature of the good man, who is not a corporation or an individual, but it is the absence of justice to both. It believes that most of this is fallacious, and too much of it is no better foundation than machinery. Here we find men crowded with the possession of liberal views and splendid business judgment, giving wings to the sentiment of soullessness applied to a gentleman, and, as results are showing every day, with no better reason than that he is a member of a corporation, or individually in the possession of wealth. That wealth or that joint position is made common game. It must be dealt out liberally for the public good. It must be the source of the bulk of the funds in the city treasury. It is attacked on every hand. All this constitutes a serious opinion among the unthinking, which has a cumulative force, and in the end strikes the capitalist, and in the rebound, the best interest of the community is injured. With a sensitive moral nature it does not lessen the keenness of all these thrusts that they are untrue or that prejudice prompts, or self-interest guides them. Men of this nature, possessing both the wealth and disposition to aid the interests of the community, are driven from it because their motives will be questioned. They will be charged with having in view some gigantic dishonesty or outrageous transaction. In the majority of these cases there is a moral broader, more liberal sentiment, and communities will be better fitted for up-building and progress, when it is current among the people.

Growth of Farming.

From 2,065,000 in 1870 to 4,000,000, or at the rate of 51 per cent, has been the increase in the number of farms in the United States. Says the census bulletin:

Compared with the increase of population, which was about 30 per cent during the same period, the agricultural development of the past ten years proves to have been rapid and extensive. The most striking increase in the number of farms has taken place in the south and the northwestern and Pacific States. The increase is shown to be 100 per cent in Alabama, 19 in Arkansas, 19 in Florida, 38 in Georgia, 20 in Louisiana, 20 in Mississippi, 68 in North Carolina, 18 in South Carolina, 69 in Virginia and 155 in Texas.

There has also been one significant and encouraging thing which the social and economical changes that have taken place in the south since the war, and shows the extent to which its huge great plantations have been cut into small farms. In Iowa there has been an increase of 69 per cent in the number of farms; in Minnesota, 92; in Nebraska, 43; in Oregon, 114; and in California, 51. The greatest multiplication has taken place in the territories, the rate of increase ranging from 78 per cent in Montana, to upward of 900 per cent in Dakota.

And not only has there been this great increase in the number of farms, but we believe that an examination will reveal the fact that the quality of farming has greatly improved. Many of our former frontiers have not only learned that slovenly agriculture does not pay in a financial sense, but that it is far from satisfactory to the natural pride everyone has or ought to have in their labor. He is rapidly learning that the best always commands a higher market, and that, that is the best kind of agriculture, where there is a diversity of crops.

It pays to raise wheat, to produce heavy butter, eggs, milk, ham, bacon, pork, beef, and to do everything needed in the household which comes from the soil. If his wheat fails, he has all these staples out of which to live without touching his bank account while he waits for another crop. We are glad to see that this kind of farming has made rapid strides in this valley, during the past few years, and shall be better pleased to say that there is no such thing as slovenly agriculture in this region.

The Coming Arcadia.

In analyzing the advance thought of today, we clear our vision and look toward the table-lands of time, hopeful men say, an intellectual and moral arcadia, will dawn upon us. A writer, standing now in the darkening twilight of a long life of eminent literary activity, has said that every moment some one country more than another, represents the sentiment and future of all mankind. Ascending the scale of this thought, it is safe to say that in the midst of all conflicts and collisions of thought among men, there will always be great central truths lying clearly and securely above the abnormal

Levels of Discussion—accredited as such by the most bigoted disputants or the most liberal theorist, and to which even the sparrows of humanity, ill-fledged and shivering in the wintry air of indifference, go for crumbs of comfort.

Two of these truths find echo in the popular heart—first, that there is always progression of the good as it radiates from the Infinite and relates to mankind. Second, that if there is any one thing established beyond a doubt, it is that the Creator's management of this world is for the up-building of truth, and honor, and purity among men, and that it is only the man who builds to this spirit-level who works easily, and whose work shall stand. The love and sympathy we feel for the law of the survival of the fittest, makes every rational man reverent towards a proposition like this, which has in so many ages, in so many moods of the world's culture, exhibited the same unyielding front, influenced mankind by the same intensity of meaning and borne the same good and generous fruit.

That the majority of men are to-day feeling this new force, is one of the, perhaps the most hopeful fact in human history. Man's immediate consciousness is the most convincing, because it is the most vital of all evidence. This is the new force that is at work to-day—a consciousness that we are a large part of our lives in the interest of mankind in general—up-building, morally and intellectually. The intellectual men—men who are the guiding and molding forces of the world, are making their powers more subservient to the common every-day interests of life. They are losing a monopoly of mentalities, and the man of a lower strata, in this respect, has no longer a monopoly of the common things. The intellectual man has descended, and the man of the humbler sphere has gone up to be daily challenged for his opinion on chief questions of the hour. Men have begun to pause in their efforts to subjugate everything and drive the aggregate into one narrow flume or run-way of mere personal gain, and to question whether the end of it all is either a justification in the means, or grace. Out of this halting has come the tacitly accepted doctrine that nothing justifies a man for a life of mere personal gratification, while everything in moral and social ethics teaches him that he should widen out his sphere to take in something else beside himself. Men are learning that the genuine culture of a man is a part of the genuine culture of humanity as a whole.

Colleges in Washington Territory.

The editor of the Post-Intelligencer, taking for his inspiration an article in the Christian Advocate from the pen of Professor Van Sooy, of Willamette University, endeavors to convince the public that there is no good reason for building up colleges in this Territory, except at Seattle. That is all proper, so far as the influence of the Intelligencer goes, but unfortunately the weight of evidence is against it, and, on this side of the Cascade, there are hundreds and thousands of people who never heard of that paper, who have no earthly interest in the town of Seattle, and do want and intend to have a college or colleges here in this country. We admit that it would be a very pleasant state of affairs for Seattle and the Intelligencer if all the people of this Territory would chip in and build up there two or three more colleges and educational institutions. But it is very evident that the Intelligencer will fail of its self-imposed mission so to lead our people. Seattle is too far removed from Eastern Washington to ever become a seat of learning for the whole Territory. The argument that the capital is on that side of the mountains loses its force in view of the fact that an effort to transport it to the east was made last session of the legislature, and a stronger one will be made at the next meeting. What we want is a Territorial Agricultural College here at Walla Walla, the commercial center of the great Inland Empire. Not only this, but we want a Whitman College, a St. Paul's Seminary, a St. Vincent's Academy, and other institutions. The people will sustain and strengthen all these, but they will hardly agree to contribute money and influence to build up a college like Seattle; which is almost paramount to asking help for another State.

In fact, the outlook indicates the largest wheat crop ever raised in the United States." This conclusion is arrived at taking into the count that California will produce only half a crop and Oregon a one-fourth crop. In these estimates they have erred, as the California crop is full two-thirds and the Columbia river out-patch will not be an eighth less than the season previous.

The burglar who visited the western portion of the city Sunday morning seems to have created quite a furore. Besides the places already mentioned in another part of this paper, he called on Mr. Price, and pulled his pants from under his head. Mr. Price grabbed but could not hold him. The scuffle awakened the wife, and all the children in the neighborhood and they gave chase but the thief escaped.

Visits Among Newspaper Men.

The editor of the Minneapolis Tribune thinks that in 1886 that city will grind 75,000,000 bushels of wheat, if it can be had. He thinks the talk of this will be found in that State, the balance in this Territory and Oregon.

The Portland Standard, looking ahead, says of Chinese labor on the street work: It is a pity that the city cannot regulate this matter, as in a year or two, when railroads are completed and the drove of Chinamen now employed on them are turned loose, they will monopolize this class of work to the exclusion of those now employed in it.

George Buys, of the Colfax Democrat, says of the Sunday law:

No doubt a great effort will be made at the next session of the legislature to do away with it. Certainly it does not accomplish the end for which it was intended. It is only in the hamlets in the Territory that it is observed at all. Nearly every town of any matter, in Western Washington has utterly ignored it.

Seattle has allowed Chinese to bid for public street work, and the Herald says:

We blush for our shame, and we are convinced that the masses of our people will dig a political grave "deeper than plummet ever sounded," in which they will bury those who gave their acquiescence to this absurd law, that they never again will be in a position to enrich Chinese companies with public money.

The Seattle Herald says:

The stages through Oregon, Idaho and Washington Territories are loaded down with enormous mail matter.

Does the man Congressional Records or the Salem Statesman?

The editor of the Seattle Herald exclaims: Why is it there such a scarcity of poultry and eggs in this market?

Perhaps the chickens do not lay.

The Omaha Herald, writing up the Oregon Short Line, says:

The main line which starts at Granger, Wyoming, 576 miles west of Omaha on the Union Pacific railway, is in operation from Granger to Coleridge. It has a length of 80 miles, makes trains being run since Saturday. Passing through the canyon the railway is being built to Port Neuf station, where it joins the Utah and Northern track. The line through to Port Neuf will be opened this fall. In the meantime, construction is going on rapidly west from the Utah and Northern road toward Wood River and Boise City. On this line, about 45 miles of track has been laid, carrying it across the Snake river, where the bridge is built above American Falls, affording a magnificent view. At present the track is laid half beyond the river at the rate of a mile and a half a day. About 6,000 men are now at work on the line, and it is expected to be completed in about a month. At the junction a town has been laid out and named Shoshone Falls. The road will cross the Snake river, and is twice the size of Niagara, and next to Niagara the grandest spectacle of a cataract in America. It is expected to make Shoshone an important center for the supply of a new agricultural and stock region, besides being the point of departure for tourists to Shoshone Falls. The Wood river branch runs through a valley much of which is as rich as any of the valleys of the Rocky Mountain country, and at Bellevue and Hailey it reaches the heart of a rich mining region, while the completion of the road will afford a rail outlet to transport thousands of tons of coal that are being mined in an extensive area of its coming. During the winter it is believed that the main line of the Oregon road can be finished to Baker City within a year.

A Visit to St. Mary's Hospital.

An evening or two ago we had occasion to visit St. Mary's Hospital, and it is in a flourishing condition and one of the notable institutions in this city, what notes we made during a short stay may be of general interest enough to justify their reproduction here. The Hospital, a large three-story brick building, somewhat pretentious in its architecture, stands in the midst of very spacious grounds, on Poplar street, below Sixth. Passing under an arch, on which you read "St. Mary's Hospital," across a lawn and up a broad flight of steps, you enter a parlor to the left of the hallway, and while you wait for the appearance of Sister Oliver, Superior, you notice that the room is quiet, yet very tastefully furnished. From a frame hung between the front windows, there is a very excellent likeness of popular, genial and ever-faithful Father Duffy, and from the west wall hangs a faithful portrait of Leo III, noted for his intellectual culture and rare executive ability in management as the head of the Catholic church.

The Lady Superior greets you cordially, and for a few moments you are pleasantly entertained listening to her account of Hospital and school work, especially the last, in which, you readily discover, she has an unbounded interest. She tells you that St. Vincent's is in a very flourishing condition; indeed, there was so much of an increase of attendance during the last session, and so much of a promise for the coming term, which begins on the 14th of this month, that a new department was decided upon; a division of the classes and another teacher employed. Sister Oliver is the principal, and the subordinate teachers, so far selected, are Sister Dougherty, Sister Perpetua, Sister Morris. Other Sisters will teach the music classes, and in the new department.

Then you are introduced to Sister John, who has charge of the dispensary, and general supervision of the Hospital. She is assisted by Sister Robert and Sister A-Jenna, who in turn are aided in the kitchen and room work by half a dozen orphan girls, who attend school and labor at the Hospital when not at study.

Through the courtesy of Sister John, we were shown throughout the building. Off from the parlor is the dining hall, a large room, with tables set in the middle of the floor, comfortably furnished, the walls hung with appropriate pictures, table-ware at least attractive, and everything as neat and clean as household care and labor can make such a room. Across the hall on the right you are shown to Hospital chapel, so quiet and inviting that involuntarily you respect it as a sacred place. The next room is the Sister's dining hall, furnished as the other dining room. On the opposite to this is the kitchen, and here you detect any of the smells peculiar to a place of this kind, and find not a sign of what is known as kitchen dirt. Everything is bright and clean and sweet. Out in the wide halls you find stored for use in cold weather, handsome clocks telling the passing hours, and at the head of the stairs leading to the second floor you find a text framed and hanging on the wall reading:

"Live as if each day were to be your last."

On the second floor we come to the rooms and the wards. The Hospital is provided with 36 private rooms, all of them hand-somely furnished, where patients can enjoy the utmost seclusion if they so desire. To patients occupying these rooms, meals are brought. Such patients pay from $10 to $12 per week, which, as in the case of the ward patients, who pay $5 a week, includes everything except the patient's doctor's fees. And here, each patient is at liberty to employ any physician he may choose. Not only this, so far as religious matters are concerned, a patient is as free to act as though in a public hotel. At the head of the stairs, to the left, is located the main ward. Another ward, smaller in size, is located opposite, on the west side of the building. The main ward has half a dozen wide curtained beds, and they look so inviting that we imagine it would be almost a luxury to be sick, in order to live here in this quiet apartment. The ward opens out upon a wide porch or veranda, overlooking the handsome grounds lying between the Hospital and the Convent building; upon that magnificent colonnade of Lombardy poplars, so much commented upon and admired by strangers. Adjoining the main ward on the south is one of the private rooms. Another is in the front, on the other side of the hall. These rooms are nicely furnished. A patient in one of these rooms, suffering from a crippled arm, assures us that nothing could be more pleasant in location. In spite of his sufferings he looked the picture of comfort. At the other end of the hall we find a large room fitted up for smoking, reading, checker-playing and the like. Bath-rooms are provided for all the floors.

Ascending another flight of stairs we find a ward fitted up for the use of female patients; also a private room or two. As we come down stairs Sister John tells us that there are about fifteen regular patients in the Hospital; that they can accommodate forty. Most of these patients pay. Naturally, of course, now and then, one comes along, faint and weary and out of hope almost, and like Good Samaritans, these Sisters give them another fight for life and its happiness. To all, whether they pay or not, St. Mary's is a blessed resting place, where, under the care of these devoted Sisters, courage and energy renew themselves, everything in the air, food and drink is beautiful and encouraging, hope springs again, and few but live to bless the day of rest at this institution. Patients of all nations and kindred are taken, and under the treatment health makes a brave fight with disease of all kinds.

Sorting for Water.

The artisan well proposition seems to have met with very general favor here in Walla Walla, and a number of gentlemen who have the means and enterprise to push the matter to an issue, have concluded to make the preliminary arrangements to that effect.

The mechanical appliances employed in boring deep wells are not essentially different from those used in the sinking of mining shafts. The Chinese have been acquainted with artisan wells for centuries. They bore their wells by a steel head worked up and down by means of a cool suspended from a lever. Free falling tools, worked by steam power, are now employed when bore holes of large diameter have to be executed, the weight of the tool giving sufficient propulsion to pierce the hardest rock. In London all the breweries get their supply of water from these artisan wells. Among the artisan borings of this country, we have one at Louisville three inches in diameter carried down 2,088 feet. From that well between April 1857 and 1860, the supply of water was as great as any of the famous European wells. At Charleston, South Carolina, there is a well 1250 feet deep that discharges 1200 gallons of water per hour, and throws it 15 feet above the surface. The well in the Continental hotel in Philadelphia, about 230 feet deep and 8 inches in diameter, and yields 20,000 gallons a day.

There is a report current here that Mr. Boyer bored an artesian well in this vicinity and that it failed. The truth is, Mr. Boyer bored about 68 feet and found water, but neither started out with the artesian idea, nor completed the boring. He went down for ordinary well water and found it.

The preliminary theoretical determination of the existence of these artesian conditions is sometimes a difficult matter and must be arrived at by those acquainted with the geological disposition of this district. We are satisfied that the conditions will be found satisfactory, and that a well or wells can be bored, which will supply a large number of manufacturing establishments in this city, and to supply water for other purposes. For domestic uses we have plenty of pure water, but a large quantity for these uses and purposes will be required for the future.

The Circus.

Sherman's Circus came over from Weston Saturday forenoon and on the evening gave the first performance. When the garrison fired the signal gun, the seats under the tent were filled and on the outside at the door there were five or six hundred people who wanted to see the show but had to wait over until this afternoon or to-night. In handling so large and so mixed a crowd as usually attends a circus, there is almost certain to be more or less trouble between the people and the circus employees, and the fact that Sherman's men had no trouble of the rights of the audience, and that all were made as comfortable as was possible, is worthy of remark.

As far as the performance is concerned we think it gave very general satisfaction. The circus of the advertisements was fully and fairly on exhibition. The chief feature of the programme was the educated horses, and when we realize that it is an animal, that by the quiet command of voice, goes back or forward; that turns about; that changes his gait; that picks up a hat; that lies down on this side or that; that allows his master to be on him; that when down allows his feet to be tied; that unites pike-knots and catches the rope to his master; that two of them played at sea-saw, and that finally one horse mounts a wagon, picks up the reins and drives a pair about the ring; when we realize that it is a horse, we are ready to exclaim, it is wonderful; and we are not surprised that everybody desires to see for themselves. The other part of the programme is satisfactory. Mr. Joe Williams is certainly a daring and graceful rider, and his feats on the back of the hairless horse "Tammiak" was merited applause. Another prominent feature in Sierman's tight-rope performance. Miss Katie Cross and her horse "Danger," with his rearing or rabbit jump and high leaps, elicited the heartiest applause. What with these special features and the performance of the circus, the humor of Messrs. Burris and Mackley, and the clever extemporist, the whole is well worth the expense of time and money in seeing. Performance to-night, to-morrow afternoon and evening.

A. O. U. W.

Not only the members of the A. O. U. W. lodges here, but elsewhere in this section of the country, will be interested in reading the following important decision by the Attorney-General of Iowa as to insurance:

Last winter the Attorney-General gave an opinion which declared the Supreme Lodge in this State, was made under a misapprehension of the powers of the supreme lodge. After an examination of the documents of the supreme lodge, including the constitution, etc., he now reverses his decision and declares it is his opinion that the supreme lodge has no jurisdiction in this matter. Hence he holds that it cannot be regarded as a foreign insurance company. In regard to the refusal of the members claim, it is only a loan, then the supreme lodge cannot be regarded as an insurance company. The opinion coincides with the general statement that the supreme lodge, A. O. U. W., is not an insurable company, and hence will not be required to deposit the $100,000 which the law requires of an insurance company as a guarantee that its losses will be paid. The opinion is the reverse of the one filed July 25, which was delivered under a different understanding of the relations between the supreme lodge and the grand lodges. This last opinion corresponds to the view taken by the local members of the order, but the local lodge, as they both seem determined to maintain their present position.

And in connection with the above, it is interesting to read the financial statement of this fraternal society for the last fiscal year. The A. O. U. W. lodge has paid out on death assessments $1,563,550.80. More than $200,000 went directly to the homes of the needy and the sorrowing, and without any personal benefit to the lodge.

Supposing it did cost the surviving members of the Order $15 or $20 each per year to contribute to this grand result? Who can truly appreciate the pleasure it has cost? The lodge that has attended his lodge regularly, or has had the privilege of visiting a single home, but has been brightened by his benevolence, but has been more than repaid for all he has expended. And yet some of the members of the lodge, who have a very exalted opinion of those who would blot out of existence any agency that is relieving distress, having died, or retiring the widow and educating the orphan.

The average membership of the A. O. U. W. for the year 1881-2, of New York, was 15,253; California, 12,547; Pennsylvania, 12,523; Illinois, 12,312. In Ohio the death rate for the year was 18.25; Indiana, 14.27; Georgia, 12.67; Kentucky, 12.19. The total membership of New York was 16,294; California, 15,943; Pennsylvania, 12,835.

IMPORTANT TO SETTLERS.—Recently a new order has issued from the Interior Department, of general interest to settlers.

We give it here: "Registers and Receivers are not required by law or instruction to make out applications for pre-emption and homestead claimants." In issuing this instruction the commissioner of the General Land Office said: "There is no objection to reasonable facilities and information shall be given to enable patrons to properly present their claims for your official action. But you are expressly instructed that such must be given absolutely without charge; and, further, that if you see fit, in the intervals of the public service or for the accommodation of just protection of claimants, to make out for them the necessary preliminary papers which they are required to present to you officially, you are not entitled nor permitted to demand or receive, directly or indirectly, any compensation whatever for such service." The same instruction informs the local officers that they are not entitled to charge for copies of maps or transcripts of entries furnished applicants, nor are they required to furnish them. They are to furnish them, but they are to be removed for receiving illegal fees.

CUTTING APPRAIS.—John Wesley is in jail awaiting the result of his using a knife on the person of Zachariah Reed, who is lying at St. Mary's Hospital in a somewhat critical condition. These men, who live out of town, went to the Pony Saloon, on Alder street, kept by Sam Howell, about 1 o'clock Sunday morning, and while there got into a quarrel with the bar-keeper. Wesley drew his knife and made an attempt to cut Reed, and as the result show, took the blows himself, six of them. Reed was taken to the hospital and Wesley was arrested by Officer Cook and locked in jail. The examination has been postponed until there is a change for the better or worse in Reed's condition.

PLAINVILLE.—This is the name of the new townsite just located by Gen. Taunton, of the Oregon Improvement Company. It is on one of the finest locations of Union Flat, about three miles west of Colfax, and at the intersection of county roads from Colfax, Relief Flat, Almo and Penewa. It presents many better advantages for a large place than Colfax, and is likely to be a successful rival of that city.

FUNERAL.—The funeral of the wife of Henry Lee, son of Thomas Lee, one of our most prominent valley citizens, occurred yesterday, from the Methodist church, corner of Poplar and Second streets. Rev. Mr. Iron preached the sermon, which was listened to with marked attention by the large audience. A large number of carriages conveyed the friends to the grave.

DRINK.—The coming week it will be all rail between Walla Walla and Dixie. A Mr. Smith, of Watsburg, is locating there with a stock of goods and building a warehouse in which to receive grain from the surrounding country. Mr. Holmes has almost daily applications for town lots, and the prospect for a thriving village there next season is good.

INDIANS SHOT.—We are informed that early yesterday three Indians were shot and one of them very dangerously wounded, on Cow Creek, about three miles above Milton. They were caught stealing from a header and were fired upon by men at work on John Sergeant's place. One of them got a bullet in the stomach.

The editor of the Coos Bay News was eloquent in picturing the horrible fate that would overtake the Coos Bayites if his paper were to be Chicago.

A Chicago paper thinks that if the Thirteen Club, of New York City, really wishes to show that Friday is not an unlucky day, let one of its members get his daughter to marry on it.

In Russia only one saloon is allowed in a village, and the dealer, who is appointed by the government, is liable to dismissal, fine and imprisonment if he allows any one to become drunk.

There is some idea that the corporation of the city of London will buy Covent Garden Market from the Duke of Bedford. The object of the city people is to maintain their monopoly north of the Thames.

Five Obedient Husbands.

There were five of them together, and it was late. They had been drinking. Finally one of them looked at the clock and said: "What will our wives say when we get home?"

"Let them say what they want to. Mine will tell me to go to the mischief," responded No. 2.

"I'll tell you what we will do. Let us meet here again in the morning and tell our experiences. Let the one that has refused to do what his wife told him to do when he got home pay for the night's entertainment." That's a good idea. We all agreed to that." So the party broke up and went to their respective homes. Next morning they met at the appointed place and began to tell their experiences.

Said No. 1:

"When I opened the door my wife was awake. She said, 'a pretty time of night for you to come home! You had better get out and sleep in the pig-pen, for that's what you will come to sooner or later.' Rather than pay for what we had drunk last night I did what she told me to. That let's me out."

"Next?"

No. 2 cleared his throat and said:

"When I got home I stumbled over a chair, and my wife called out: 'There you are again you drunken brute! You had better wake up the children and stagger about for awhile, so they can see what a drunken brute of a father they are afflicted with.' So I woke up the children and staggered around until my wife hunted to me to stop. She used a chair in conveying the fact—that let's me out."

"Next?"

No. 3 stooped up and said:

"I happened to stumble in a pan of dough, and my wife said: 'Drunk again! Haven't you better sit down in that dough? So I sat down in it, and that let's me out.'

"Next?"

No. 4 said:

"I was humming a tune and my wife called out: 'There you are again! Haven't you better give us a concert? I don't think you really mean it.' 'You look to tired,' she pleaded, 'wouldn't you like to rest your head on my shoulder? No one will notice. Just lay your head right down and I'll tell you a story.'

"No—no, thanks! I won't to-day! I'm very comfortable, thank you! and the poor drummer looked helples.

"Your scarf pin is coming out. Let me fix it. There!" and she arranged it deftly. "At the next station I'll get you a cup of tea, and when we arrive at our destination you'll let me call on you!" and she smiled an anxious prayer right up into his pallid countenance.

"I think I'll go away and smoke," said the drummer; and handing down his grip-sack, he made for the door, knee-deep in the grim showered around him by his fellow-passengers.

"Strange!" murmured the girl to the lady in front of her, "I only did with him just what he was making ready to do with me, and, big and strong as he is, he could not stand it. I really think women have stronger stomachs than men, and, besides that, there isn't any smoking car for them to fly to for refuge. I didn't understand this thing."

"But she settled back contentedly all the same; and at a convention of drummers, held in the smoker that morning, it was unanimously resolved that her seat was engaged, so far as they were concerned, for the balance of the season.

Thrice Branded.

New York Sun.

During a discussion in the House of Representatives on Thursday last, Secor Robeson, referred with a sneer to the deafness of W. E. Robinson, Representative of the Second District of New York. Mr. Robinson was absent from the House at the time. The next morning Mr. Robinson rose to a personal explanation, and said:

"I acknowledge, Mr. Speaker, that Providence has seen fit to afflict me, not exactly with deafness, but with hardness of hearing. I know of only one gentleman more to be pried than I, and that is a certain gentleman who has had fastened on his head the charges of a liar, thief and perjurer, and was the only member who did not hear them."

This terrible story, which stamped infamy on the forehead of the man against whom it was directed, and which was repeated for the third time within a few weeks, produced no visible effect on Secor Robeson.

What must be the moral and the political condition of a party who accepts and honors as a leader a man who, before the civilized world, and in presence of his associates, has been publicly denounced three times as a common felon by respectable and responsible members of the House?

There was a time in the life of the republican party when great and humane principles inspired its action. If a foul reproach like this had been fastened on a republican leader, he would have been tried by a drumhead court martial without delay, and whipped out of camp at the tail of a cart.

Not so now. This man, publicly denounced as a "thief, liar, and perjurer," is tolerated by the party because it is known that he owns the Speaker, and treats him as a personal chattel; because he controls appropriations; because he is still powerful in the navy; because he is part of the machine; because he disposes of patronage; because he boasts of being a loyal and a radical republican; and because he is rich with ill-gotten gains.

It will astonish many to be told that the number of miles of railroad, built thus far this year is 2,503, against only 1,018 reported at the corresponding date last year, 1,264 miles in 1880, 493 miles in 1879 and 312 in 1878. For some time past, new railroad bonds have been placed with such difficulty, and the financial markets have not been in the least degree encouraging to new enterprises.

In His Own Coin.

"Is this seat engaged?" he asked of the prettiest girl in the car; and finding that it wasn't, he put his sample-box in the rack and braced himself for solid enjoyment.

"Pleasant day," said the girl, coming far him before he could get his tongue unknicked. "Most bewitching day, isn't it?"

"Ye-es, miss," stammered the drummer. He wasn't in the habit of playing pithier in this kind of match, and the position of catcher didn't fit him as tightly as his pantaloons.

"Nice weather for traveling," continued the girl, "much nicer than when it was cold. Are you perfectly comfortable?"

"Oh, y-s; thank's!" murmured the drummer.

"Glad of it," resumed the girl, cheerfully. "You don't look so. Let me put my shawl under your head, won't you? Haven't you rather sit next to the window, and have me describe the landscape to you?"

"No, please," he muttered. "I'm doing well enough."

"Can't I buy you some peanuts, or a beak? Let me do something to make the trip happy! Suppose I slip my arm around your waist! Just hush forward a trifle so I can!"

"You'll—you'll have to excuse me!" gasped the wretched drummer. "I—I don't think you really mean it!"

"You look to tired," she pleaded, "wouldn't you like to rest your head on my shoulder? No one will notice. Just lay your head right down and I'll tell you a story."

"No—no, thanks! I won't to-day! I'm very comfortable, thank you! and the poor drummer looked helples.

"Your scarf pin is coming out. Let me fix it. There!" and she arranged it deftly. "At the next station I'll get you a cup of tea, and when we arrive at our destination you'll let me call on you!" and she smiled an anxious prayer right up into his pallid countenance.

"I think I'll go away and smoke," said the drummer; and handing down his grip-sack, he made for the door, knee-deep in the grim showered around him by his fellow-passengers.

"But she settled back contentedly all the same; and at a convention of drummers, held in the smoker that morning, it was unanimously resolved that her seat was engaged, so far as they were concerned, for the balance of the season.

A Precious Stone found in Georgia.

Near Norcross there resides an old German geologist who loves to live among the peculiar specimens of mineral and vegetable matter which he has un-artificially and housed. He is an elderly gentleman of little sociality, but of great mental acquirements. His physical endurance is simply astonishing. For days at a time he wanders over the hills and through the dales near his home, collecting rocks and stones, limbs and roots, the properties and qualities of which are unknown to all but himself.

The room in which his collections are stored is wonderful. In one receptacle are arranged a number of stones whose bright rays remind the observer of diamonds. In the center of this long room there rests a stone half the size of a hen's egg, which was picked up by the owner months and months ago. It was found by his owner one rainy afternoon. For nearly a week he had been on a tramp through the hills and dales near his home, and weary with his ceaseless toil, he was wending his way home when his eyes fell upon something from which the rays of the sun were scattered in a thousand directions.

With little thought of what he was doing, the geologist stooped down and picked up the object. It was nearly half the size of a hen's egg, and of an irregular shape. It was covered in many places with thick, heavy clay, which was removed with great care.

It was found to be exceedingly hard, and when struck with a hard substance gave forth but a little sound. It was almost colorless with hue and then a tinge of green. It form was that of an octahedron, but some of the faces or sides were inclined to be convex, while the edges were curved.

It was subjected to acids and alkalies without experiencing any perceptible change.

Some friends induced him to place it on the market, and only a day or two ago he received a letter from a diamond dealer in New York offering him $46,000 for it.

Hubbald.

The N. Y. Herald has rendered the community a very valuable service in bringing to light a book entitled "The History of the Hubbells," a genealogical work, giving an account of the family to which belongs Jay Ab-1 Hubbell, who is now so well known as an assessor of office-holders, a practice into which, he swag-gishly says, he is driven by the present deplorable condition of society in the Southern States. It appears from this volume that the family is from Bodouin origin,

And there was something in this case, and the explanation reads: "Born to the wife of H. E. Holmes, a daughter, Walla Walla, Aug. 4, 1882."
