Grandmother's Grave.
We laid her 'neath the churchyard sod,
In the wildest of the winter weather,
We laid her 'neath the crusty snow,
Her and the snow together.

And the white, bleak hills that stood afar,
How sad they looked that day;
And the very sun seemed loth to shine;
Seemed loth to send our ray.

Oh! ye hills that stand afar,
I bid ye guard that mound,
And keep your crests forever turned
Toward the churchyard ground.

And thou, oh! leafless branch above,
Stretch o'er thy slender arm,
And warn the stranger coming near
To do the grave no harm.

[COMMUNICATED.]
The Economy and Preservation of Teeth.
The writer of this article is not a dental surgeon and claims not an acquaintance with those minutiae of pathology and manual appliances pertaining to dentistry as a practical science; yet with those more general laws and principles relating to its hygiene, structure and economy, he does profess a familiarity.

It is an established law of the human mind, that it is more disposed to notice and remedy such physical derangements as may be termed subjective, i. e., expressed through the nervous system by pain or annoyance of some kind; while those which, in contradistinction, may be called objective, i. e., obvious, but slow and progressive in their outward manifestations, are scarcely appreciated, if not entirely ignored.

Very much in this way, then, daily experience proves that the moving masses of humanity regard those important organs of the animal economy—the teeth—whether considered as instruments of practical utility or an element of personal beauty.

Indeed, it is notorious and lamentable what slight attention is paid to their healthy condition and preservation by persons generally. They are not like so many nails, implanted in the jaw-bones purely for mastatory purposes! A system of false education has too long reigned in this respect; the enlightenment of the future, let us trust, will dispense the delusion of the past.

True, like scrofula, consumption, etc., affections of the teeth "run in families," as the popular expression has it; that is, are hereditary in a greater or less degree. We not infrequently find children whose teeth disclose the same structural figure and mould as their parents possess.

Although not so intimately concerned in the salutary, harmonious and successful action of the animal machine as are other parts and functions, still they play no unimportant part in the general welfare of the body; though not so highly vitalized, and endowed with a nervous arrangement as complex as the principal organs, nevertheless they have a vitality, a nervous influence, and a range of sympathies peculiar to themselves; and while, for example, a gangrenous limb, or a necrosed joint, in its destructive march, superadds new disorders to the original, just so surely but more insidiously does a carious or decayed tooth injuriously impress contiguous parts and functions, by reason of that wide scope of sympathies it enjoys. This is well exemplified in the common cases of gum-boils, scurvy gums, swollen glands, toothache, neuralgia of face, offensive breath, deranged stomach, and manifold sensations about the mouth generally; add to these, alterations of a mechanical nature, viz: impediment to speech, indistinct articulation of voice, change in the expression of countenance, and finally, depression of spirits.

Kind parents and guardians will not take it amiss, it is hoped, when their special attention is directed to an important matter, as far as concerns the health and comfort of their children and wards; a sense of duty should compel them to concern themselves in this regard just as zealously and religiously as they would supply them with proper food or raiment, or send them to school. The period of "shedding," as mothers say, merits particular watchfulness; then it is that those regularities arise, which, if not corrected in time, tend to give a certain impress to the conformation of the jaws, and consequently more or less modify the features—a condition irremediable afterwards.

No satisfactory reason can be offered why the resources of art should not be appealed to by all who need them; scores of dollars are daily dropped by the wayside without the receipt of an equivalent; sound health must not be subjected to the gratification of the passions; an "old snuff" or a bony angle, which had tortured the poor sufferer for months, unheeded and neglected, is as powerless before the force and key of the expert, well-instructed and experienced dentist, as was the Nemean lion in the stout arms of Hercules.

In connection with this, it may be remarked, that the many popular dentifrices so invitingly displayed in the shops, more frequently gratify a silly whim or notion than subserve any real good and useful purpose. A soft brush, and water of medium temperature, form the daily essentials for cleansing the teeth.

The injurious and vulgar practice of teasing the mouth by pins, needs only to be mentioned to be condemned.

If the above hints and suggestions will be received in the spirit which prompted them, and any suffering mortal can be benefited thereby, the serious anxiety the writer has felt whilst contemplating the myriad "ills which flesh is heir to," will be amply requited.

Walla Walla, Dec. 11, 1861.

NOT A BAD IDEA.—A boy in a Sunday school was once asked by his teacher what economy meant. He promptly answered, "Paring potatoes thin." The answer was received with a smile but the definition was right, as far as it went. The lad had got a just idea of the matter, his rule only wanted carrying out, and applying to things generally, to be perfect.

The Weather.
WALLA WALLA, Dec. 10, 1861.

MISSISS. EDITORS.—Having been frequently asked why it is that, in this high latitude and altitude, we have such mild winters, I have concluded to give you my reasoning upon the subject—based upon several years' acquaintance in this valley, together with a careful and diligent study of the causes of this peculiar climate.

The dryness of the climate will be the first point to notice: [And I will admit that the present "spell of weather" is rather an unfavorable one to consider this subject.] Lieut. Manry in his works on Navigation, Climate, &c., says it is a fixed principle that all ranges of mountains have a wet and a dry side, governed by the direction and source of the prevailing winds which blow over the range.

Every one familiar with the country and the direction of the wind on the western side of the Cascade mountains is aware that the wind in the winter season blows from off the ocean. The result is that an immense amount of dampness is collected about the western side of said range, while the elevation of the range guards us from experiencing its unpleasant, dreary presence. Now, we can readily perceive why we have so little "falling weather"; and I will here assert, from actual measurement, that we have but a little over a one-hundredth part as much rain east of the Cascades as falls upon the western side; consequently our country must be more or less arid, or nearly so; to Snake river, near the mouth of Clearwater. Nearly all the country north and west of this range, between it and the Cascades and north to the Simcoe mountains, is low and sandy, covered in the most part, with grass. But what, say you, has this to do with the weather of this climate? It has a vast deal to do with it; for you must remember that it is over this plain that we have our prevailing winds; and I will here remark that we always have warm weather when the wind blows. This vast plain of sandy soil and sand deserts is kept warm by the almost continual presence of the sun, and the short duration of cloudy weather is not sufficient to allow the earth to become entirely chilled, and consequently when we have a breeze from over these plains it is warm and melts everything before it. Such a wind would melt, by warmth, (not by force) two feet of snow on the tops of the Blue mountains in 24 hours.—Not to say that the wind, which is the most easterly and westerly of the Simcoe with the Blue mountains, which table land is surrounded by the Columbia river at the old Fort. This ridge is nearly two thousand feet high and very steep on its face, fronting this valley and protecting it from any severe winds.

Now it is not evident to any one that the country west and north of the Blue mountains is covered with timber, or subject to much cloudy weather—the sun not having a chance to warm the earth, that this whole region would be no better off than the frozen parts of Michigan and the Canadas?

SOME LOCAL PECULIARITIES.
The Walla Walla valley is bounded on the east and south by the Blue mountains and on the south-west by a high table land, connecting the most easterly extremity of the Simcoe with the Blue mountains, which table land is surrounded by the Columbia river at the old Fort. This ridge is nearly two thousand feet high and very steep on its face, fronting this valley and protecting it from any severe winds.

Growing Old.
Did you ever consult the mirror to ascertain whether you are growing old—to detect, if you could, a pair of feet, and a crow's at that, at the corners of your eyes—to see if that gray hair somebody charged you with having yesterday, was nothing but the peculiar reflection of the light, and not much whiter than the ace of spades after all? But the mirror is nothing to go to for information; it reflects to very little purpose. If you would know what age is doing for you, look upon the face of a friend you have not seen in ten years, and the story is as plain as a pike-staff! There is something or other about him you cannot quite understand; his features are a little sharper, the expression of his eyes a little colder, of his brow a little harder, of his mouth a little firmer. To be sure his laugh hasn't gone, but then a tooth or two has. He is the same, yet not the same, but somewhat harder and rougher, and not so much of him as of old.

But the strangest of all is his hand. That has grown old faster than his face. How soft and smooth it used to be, you remember, and plump as a partridge. There was a tracery of blue veins upon the back of it, and you and he used to read each other's fortunes, and life-journeys, in the meandering currents that flowed on so quietly just under the surface. But it is more like a claw now, as if he used it in digging; then it is brown as October; the full rounded muscle has shrunk away from the veins, and they stand out like ridges in a fallow. Veins indeed!—they look like a handful of whipcord. There is a knotty look and a knotty feel about the joints, as if you were grasping a handful of walnuts. Then, again, his hair has grown wiry, or bristly, or gray or thin, or something that it was not, for the truth is, it is growing upon an old head. You think as you look at him, "Is it possible!" and he keeps you company with his wonder "How it can be," and in that look, you have seen yourself—as he sees you—as they all see you—as you are.—B. Taylor.

Why Not Speak Plain English?
A person having upon one occasion got Sir Philip Francis into a corner, and innocently mistaking his agitations and gestures for the extreme interest in the narrative which he was administering to his patient, was somewhat confounded, when the latter, seizing him by the collar, exclaimed, with an oath, that "human nature could endure no more." In all this, there was a consistency and uniformity that was extremely rare and amusing. He is not now present to cry out—"What does that mean, sir? What would you be at? No gibberish!" and therefore it may be observed that there was something exceedingly piquant in his character. Sir Philip was wont to say that he had nearly survived the good, many words of assent and denial, the yes and no of our ancestors, and could now hear nothing but "unquestionably," or "by no means," and "I rather think not,"—forms of speech which he gave the most odious and contemptuous names, as effeminate and emaculated, and would turn into ridicule by caricaturing the pronunciation of the words. Thus he would draw out "unquestionably," in a faint, childish tone, and then say—"Gracious God! does he mean yes? Then why not say so at once, like a man?" As for the slip-slop of some fluent talkers, in society, who exclaim that they are "so delighted," or "so shocked," and speak of things being pleasing and hateful "to a degree," he would bear down upon them without mercy, and roar out: "To what degree? Your words mean anything, and everything, and nothing."

NOT TOO MUCH FAMILIARITY.—There are human beings whom, if you are wise, you would not wish to know too well. We mean the human being (if such there should be) who thinks very highly of you; who imagines you very clever and amiable. Keep out of the way of such! Let them see as little of you as possible. For when they come to know you well, they are quite sure to be disappointed. The enthusiastic ideal which young people form of any one they admire, is smashed by the rude presence of facts. We have got somewhat beyond the stage of feeling enthusiastic admiration, yet there are two or three living men whom we should be sorry to see. We know we should never admire them so much any more. We never saw Mr. Dickens; we don't want to see him. Let us leave Yarrow unvisited; our sweet ideal is fairer than the fairest fact. No hero is a hero to his valet; and it may be questioned whether any clergyman is a saint to his headle. Yet the hero may be a true hero, and the clergyman a very excellent man; but no human being can bear too close inspection. We remember hearing a clever and enthusiastic young lady complain of what she suffered on meeting a certain great Bishop at dinner. No doubt he was dignified, pleasant, clever; but the mysterious halo was no longer round his head. He is a sad circumstance in the lot of a very great man; we mean such a man as Mr. Tennyson or professor Longfellow. As an elephant walks through a field, crushing the crop at every step, so do these men advance through life, smashing every time they die out, the enthusiastic fancies of several romantic young people.

BREVET is a commission which gives an officer title and rank in the army above his pay, but if he exercises a command according to his brevet he receives the pay attached to his brevet rank.

It is not the multitude of applauses, but the good sense of the applauders, which gives value to the reputation.

Hope paves the way to golden bliss, and cheerfulness is the lamp that lights the beautiful walk.

A Woman of Good Taste.
The following very happy and equally true sketch is from the London Quarterly Review:

You see this lady turning a cold eye to the assurances of shopmen and the recommendation of milliners. She cares not how original a pattern may be, if it be awkward. Whatever laws of fashion dictates, she follows a law of her own, and is never behind it. She wears very beautiful things which people generally suppose to be fetched from Paris, or, at least made by a French milliner, but which as often are bought at the nearest town and made up by her own maid. Not that her costume is either rich or new; on the contrary, she wears many a cheap dress, but it is always pretty, and many an old one, but it is always good. She deals in no gaudy confusion of colors, nor does she affect a studied sobriety; but she either refreshes you with a spirited contrast, or composes you with a jollesome harmony.

Not a scrap of tinsel or trumpery appears upon her. She puts no faith in velvet bands or gilt buttons or twisted cording. She is quite aware, however, that all the gaudish is as important as the dress; all her inner borders and beadings are delicate and fresh; and should anything creep out which is not intended to be seen, it is quite as much so as that which is. After all there is no great art in her fashion or her materials. The secret simply consist in her knowing the three grand unities of her dress—her own station, her own age and her own points. And no woman can dress well who does not. After this we need not say that whoever is attracted by the costume will not be disappointed in the wearer. She may not be handsome nor accomplished, but we will answer for her being even tempered, well-informed, thoroughly sensible and a complete lady.

WASHINGTON AND THE CORPORALS.—Some of our volunteer officers show their unfitness to command by keeping aloof from their men, instead of setting them the example of manliness in toil and endurance. The following incident is in point:

During the American Revolution, it is said, the commander of a little squad was giving orders to those under him, relative to a log of timber which they were endeavoring to raise up to the top of some military works they were repairing. The timber went up with difficulty, and on this account the voice of the little man was often heard, in regular voliterations of "Heave away, there she goes, heave ho." An officer, not in military costume, was passing, and asked the commander why he did not take hold and render a little assistance. The latter, astonished, turning round with all the pomp and splendor of an Emperor, said: "Sir, I am a corporal!" "You are, are you?" replied the officer; "I was not aware of that;" and taking off his hat and bowing, the officer said, "I ask your pardon, Mr. Corporal," and then dismounted and lifted till the sweat stood in drops on his forehead.

When the work was finished, turning to the commander he said, "Mr. Corporal, when you have another such job, and have not men enough, send for your Commander-in-Chief, and I will come and help you a second time." The Corporal was thunderstruck. It was General Washington who thus addressed him.

A FROZEN SHIP.—A whaling vessel which sailed from London in 1840, found on the Polar Sea, a ship embedded in the ice, with sails furled and no signs of life on board. The Captain and some of the crew descended into the cabin and found coiled upon the floor a Newfoundland dog, apparently asleep, but when they touched it, they found the animal was dead and frozen as hard as a stone. In the cabin was a young lady seated at a table, her eyes open as if gazing at the intruders in that desolate place. She was a corpse! and had been frozen in an apparently resigned and religious attitude. Beside her was a young man, who it appeared was commander of the brig, and brother to the lady. He was sitting at the table, dead, and before him was a sheet of paper on which was written: "Our cook has endeavored since yesterday morning to strike a light, but in vain—all is now over." In another part of the cabin stood the cook with the flint and tinder in hand, frozen, in the vain endeavor to strike the fire that could alone save them. The terrors of the seamen led the Captain from the spot, who took with him the log-book, as the solemn memento of the ill-fated ship. It appears that she also was from London, and had been in this place over fourteen years.

A CHALLENGE AND A REPLY.—George D. Prentice, Esq., the editor of the Louisville Journal, having been challenged by Roger W. Hanson, for an editorial published in his paper, sent the following reply:

LOUISVILLE, Sept. 15, 1861.
Roger W. Hanson—Sir: You sought "red" articles you complain of, and if you "dress," you may get it; in other way you can and place "for me" two steps to me; you, I think, ready, as upon the 15th.

It is not the multitude of applauses, but the good sense of the applauders, which gives value to the reputation.

Hope paves the way to golden bliss, and cheerfulness is the lamp that lights the beautiful walk.

Our Advertisers.

The business men of Walla Walla have extended to us a most liberal patronage in the line of advertising, thereby attesting their appreciation of the press in their midst, and giving evidence that as business men they are desirous of the prosperity of the town as well as of their individual success.

As at present Walla Walla will continue to be a place of much importance to the upper country. A large proportion of the supplies for the mining districts—and the coming season they will be vastly augmented by the demand which will be created by the influx of population—must be furnished by houses here, and go forward from this place.

It will be seen also by reference to our advertising columns, that many of the business men of Portland have caught the spirit of up-country enterprise, and are not behind the times in seeking to share in the general activity springing up through the medium of the mines.

Our advertising list is too extended to render a notice of each one at this time admissible, but we shall not fail to do them justice as opportunity affords.

MILL CREEK BRIDGE.—Inasmuch as the honorable board of commissioners of this county will shortly convene for the transaction of special business, we suggest that one important matter deserving their attention is the building of a bridge across Mill Creek.

The above extract is worthy only the pen and heart of a libelous scoundrel, whose particular forte is "sharp practice," even to cheating his printers out of their pay for services rendered.

Some idea may be formed of the amount of business done in this city from the fact that between forty and fifty thousand dollars worth of goods have been sold to the Salmon river trade alone since Friday last.

Mr. Mossman has exhibited to us some specimens of coarse gold and gold quartz, which were obtained on Salmon river, about fifty miles from the mouth of Slate Creek.

Gen. W. W. Miller, appointed Quartermaster. The appointment is a man of talents, and is a great day for the country.

Passengers who came up yesterday from the late freshet extended to Corvallis, and that considerable damage was done there by high waters.

Latest Mining Intelligence.

Mr. I. V. Mossman, of Mossman & Miller's express, gives us the following intelligence from Salmon river:

Regarding the killing of James Harman by M. Bledsoe, Mr. Mossman has placed in our hands the proceedings of a meeting held by the citizens at the mouth of Slate creek, Dec. 8th, and also the evidence of witnesses taken upon the occasion, which in justice to the parties we withhold until after due examination of the case by the proper authorities.

Mr. Mossman brought down thirty pounds of gold dust, and could have had much more if he had been able to bring it. From Slate creek to the diggings, the snow is on an average six inches deep, save on the summit of the mountain, where it is about six feet.

FROM FLORENCE CITY.—We extract the following from a letter written by Mr. J. W. Davis to a gentleman in this city.

The diggings are located on the divide between Clearwater and Salmon river, distance from Salmon river at the nearest point eight miles, and about thirty miles from Clearwater. I think the elevation is greater than that of Oro Fino.

A MAW-WORM.—A correspondent at the Dalles writes to the Portland Christian Advocate: "I am to inform you that God is with us in this part of the world."

The above extract is worthy only the pen and heart of a libelous scoundrel, whose particular forte is "sharp practice," even to cheating his printers out of their pay for services rendered.

Estimate of the Loss at Oregon City by the Flood.

The following is the estimate of the committee appointed to report the amount of damage caused by the flood at Oregon City, as published in the Argus:

Table listing property damage estimates for various owners in Oregon City, including items like houses, farms, and businesses, with values ranging from $500 to $50,000.

Total, $164,700. This estimate does not include the loss sustained in removing goods, &c. The total loss in property lost, damaged, &c., will probably reach $170,000.

LOSS AT ALBANY.—The Democrat gives the following: The loss of property has been very considerable, and we much fear lives have been lost.

FROM THE OREGON STATESMAN.—The bridge over the North Umpqua, at Winchester, is carried away.

At Corvallis, six persons are reported drowned, four of them children of Mr. Abel George, living on the island.

At Lancaster, all but two houses are reported gone, and those about to go.

At Harrisburg, no houses were swept off, but considerable damage occurred.

At Brownsville, the Calpaepa came around the houses. The apron of the bridge was carried away, and two mills above there are destroyed.

FROM THE UPPER WILLAMETTE.—We copy the following from the Corvallis Union: "The country between Irwin's Butte and Eugene City, a distance of thirty or forty miles, up and down the river, has been one vast ocean of water, except here and there where a knoll, Oregon Items.

Owing to the detention of the mails between this place and the Dalles, we have not received our regular list of exchanges for the past two weeks; consequently our stock of news from the Willamette is rather meager.

Nature.
The leaf-tongues of the forest, and the flower-lips of the sea,
The happy birds that hymn their raptures in the ear of God,
The summer wind that bringeth music over land and sea,
Have each a voice that singeth this sweet song of love to me;
"This world is full of beauty, as other worlds above;
And if we did our duty, it might be full of love."

Varieties.
INSTEAD of idly waiting for something to turn up, go to work and turn up something.

THOMAS HOOD says nothing spoils a holiday like a Sunday coat or a pair of new shoes.

SOME one says that the music of the Chinese is deliciously horrible—"like cats trying to sing base with sore throats."

An Irish editor in speaking of the miseries of his country, says: "Her cup of misery has been for ages overflowing, and is not yet full."

A MUSICIAN in giving notice of a concert at Cleveland, Ohio, said, "a variety of songs may be expected, too tedious to mention."

LORD Bacon beautifully said—"If a man be gracious to a stranger, it shows he is a citizen of the world, and that his heart is no island cut off from other lands, but a continent that joins them."

An English lady who went to make purchases in Jamaica, accompanied by her black maid, was frequently addressed by the negro shopman as "Massa," whereupon her sable follower exclaimed with a look of infinite contempt, "Why for you speak such bad grammar, Sabby? Why for you call my missus massa? Stupid fellow—him's a she!"

A CHAP who was told that the best cure for palpitation of the heart was to quit hugging and kissing the girls, said: "If that is the only remedy, I for one, say let 'er palpitate."

A RECENT French writer observes that "book-keeping is a very proper occupation for women." We don't know how proper it may be; but it is certainly very common. We know a woman who has a great talent in the art of book-keeping. She keeps—all she can borrow.

A WIDOW lady who had just lost her husband, was weeping bitterly for the dear departed. A friend tried to console her—"No, no," said the fair mourner, "I don't have my cry out; after that I want think anything about it."

A MAN who won't take a newspaper because he can borrow one, has invented a machine with which he can cook his dinner by the smoke of his neighbor's chimney.

A YOUNG lady—a sensible girl—gives the following catalogue of different kinds of love: "The sweetest—a mother's love; the longest, a brother's love; the strongest, a woman's love; the dearest, a man's love, and the sweetest, longest, strongest, and dearest love, a love of a bonnet."

A number of women in Erie county, N. Y., have called a convention, the object of which is stated to be "to gain a new knowledge of the nature and attributes of man." An exchange very patiently asks, "why don't they get married?"

A young lady recently remarked, with much simplicity, that she could not understand what her brother George Henry said in the girls that he liked so well, and that for her part, she would not give the company of one young man for that of twenty girls.

Among the prisoners taken at the battle of Waterloo was a Highland piper. Napoleon, struck with his mountain dress and sinewy limbs, asked him to play on his instrument, which is said to sound delightful in the glens and mountains of Scotland. "Play a pibroch," said Napoleon. The Highlander played it. "Play a march," it was done. "Play a retreat." "Na, na," said the Highlander, "I never learned to play a retreat."

We remember once seeing a specimen of a sailor's love, which ran as follows: Dear Jack—I want you to send me some pig-tail tobacco, a taupeulin hat, and a pair of duck trousers. You must be sure and send the pig-tail. If you forget everything else, don't forget the pig-tail. Send me lots of pig-tail. Be sure and send slappings of pig-tail. Your friend, Tom. N. B. Be sure to remember the pig-tail. P. S. Don't forget the pig-tail.

The International Telegraph.
This great enterprise is seriously contemplated. Col. Romanoff of the Imperial Russian Engineers, is now in New York, forming plans for the execution of this project. He says the Russian government is rapidly pushing the lines to the mouth of the Amoor river. From the mouth of the Amoor river, it is the design to continue the line, via the Aleutian Archipelago, to the Russian American settlements; thence to Vancouver Island, and thence to San Francisco. Mr. Collins of the New York Chamber of Commerce, with whom Col. Romanoff has been in consultation, recommended that the line be carried from the Amoor river along the shores of Siberia to Behring's Straits, and from thence adopting the line of Col. Romanoff to San Francisco. Mr. Collins announced that he had received a letter from Mr. Sibley, Secretary of the Union Telegraph Company, in which the utmost confidence was expressed in the feasibility of extending the line to Behring's Straits, so as to extend with the Russian line; and believed that point we would be ready to connect with it. Mr. Sibley contends that this route is the only feasible one to connect Europe with America. The proposed line will unite all the telegraphs in the world, without crossing the Atlantic ocean, so that the great "cable" enterprise need not be resuscitated. The cost is set down for two wires at $3,000,000. To maintain this line 1000 men at $300 each per annum, [average] would be necessary, making a total of $300,000. To this it is proposed to add 100 stations, at $1,000 per week; two supply vessels, at $46,150; interest on capital at 7-1/2 per annum, $210,000; contingencies, $100,000. Total, $750,000. It is calculated that 300,000 messages at $5 each, would be received, making a total of $1,500,000 revenue.
