

It is very difficult for anyone with the lights given out from the seat of trouble in the King county coal mines to form a correct opinion of the merits of the controversy between the miners and the mine owners, and hasty judgment should not be given before the facts are fully understood; but some things connected with the armed occupancy of the mining camps by the state troops are admitted.

The Oregon Improvement company had its own armed retainers in the Sullivan head who are universally known as "rough" and lawless men. The witness met this armed detachment of the company by counter armed bands among themselves. The authorities of King county appear to be feeble and ineffectual.

Under the circumstances it was perhaps necessary to call out the militia to keep the peace; but it is nevertheless a costly and demoralizing method of preserving public order.

But the governor and all who are in control of the state military have been guilty of the gravest impropriety—to use no stronger term—in leaving at the head of the militia in the field Col. J. C. Haines, the counsel and attorney of the Oregon Improvement company, one of the factions which was a disturber of the public peace. The honorable men who compose the militia should not even seem to be partisans favoring one or the other of two law-breakers. It makes not the slightest difference as to the efficiency or inefficiency of Col. Haines as a militia officer. There are many competent and reliable officers in the state military who are above the taint of suspicion of connection with lawless associations. There was no necessity for Col. Haines taking responsible command; and had he possessed the finer traits of honor that belong to the true soldier, he would have requested relief from such a questionable position. It degrades the services of the militia when public opinion is rife with suspicion of the motives of the officer in command.

The spectacle presented in King county is a shameful one and humiliating to the good people of this commonwealth.

HOP CULTURE IN YAKIMA.

Yakima county seems destined to be the great hop producing section of the state. There are several things which justify this conclusion. The climate is admirably adapted to this crop. It is the opinion of experts that the hop house will never give trouble here on account of the unusual amount of sunshine peculiar to this climate. The hot sunshiny days seem to kill the lice. This is the opinion of those well versed in hop culture here and elsewhere, and experience and observation this year have amply justified this conclusion. The quality of the hops produced also enables the grower here to successfully compete with any hops grown. The yield is also larger than in most hop producing countries and as large as the greatest. Attention to this crop here is well worth the consideration of every farmer in this county. Every farmer here who has raised hops and not abandoned the business is either rich or well on the road to wealth, and every other farmer who will begin hop culture and intelligently and persistently pursue the business may hope for a competence. Tacoma received her first impetus from the hop business, and it has always been a good backing for both Tacoma and Seattle. This crop brings quicker returns than fruit, is less expensive to care for, is more certain in price, and the crop is less liable to injury by frost. The town and county alike are interested in the development of this industry. It should not be forgotten that the hop crop fluctuates and that there are occasional years when the price is so low that the proceeds will not pay expenses of production; but when one year with another, the price is good. The farmer who does not intend to adopt hop raising as a business or part of his harvest at least and continue through high and low prices will do himself and the country more harm than good by engaging therein.

The Olympia Tribune says that John G. Carlisle won't do as a presidential candidate, because he gets drunk at the wrong time and place. There may be something in that, but it shows his patriotism, for he is drinking the product of his own Bourbon state. There is another reason, however, why he would not be available, for down on the pine-clad mountains of the south there are still many of the old-timers who remember that after the war, on entering congress, he was the only one from the south who took the iron-clad oath, and among other things swore that he never had any sympathy for his seceding brethren in the long strife which many believed was just. He could have taken the modified oath, as did the balance of the congressmen from south of the Mason and Dixon line, but as he did not, there are many in the land of heather and balsam who look upon him with feeling akin to that held by the loyal northerner for the dejected copperhead.

FADS fly fast. The souvenir spoon craze has reached Alaska, and away up at Fort Wrangle and at Sitka the Alaskan Indians are manufacturing "souvenir" spoons. They are of solid silver, have the bank of the raven, the eye of the whale, the tail of the serpent and all the other totems, and retail for $5 apiece, with the customary discount for wholesale orders.

HENRY VILLARD, who has been in Europe for some time, maintains that the McKinley tariff is responsible for the immense export of gold.

SENATOR WAYNE C. SQUIRE expressed himself as an advocate of cremation. We thought the burning-up he got from the Tacoma Globe was enough for him.

The Ellensburg State Register doesn't mention the hose team and sprinting races which took place in this city on the 4th of July. Evidently that live journal hasn't heard the news as yet.

The Astorian's editorial on the 4th of July is decidedly unique. Here it is in its fullness: "To-day the eagle screams. He looks at Mexico, Canada and Cuba and his eye brightens as he looks straight at the sun and screams some more. We are in it, and all the rest of the world sits on the fence and watches the procession. There is nothing bigger on this little earth than the American nation, and the whole of creation is conjured not to let the fact escape their memory."

The great political fight is now on in Ohio. The democrats have pitted Campbell, the present incumbent, for governor against McKinley, and on a platform that demands "the reinstatement of the constitutional standard of both gold and silver, with equal right to free and unlimited coinage." Ohio is said to be all in pieces politically, and it had to prophesy the result; but if absolute fearlessness and readiness to grasp an issue entitles a party to consideration, the democrats should surely get there.

Last week THE HERALD published a paragraph regarding the appointment of Dr. W. H. Hare as receiver of the U. S. land office at this place, and erroneously credited the same to the Cle-Elum Tribune, when it should have been credited to a Big Bend paper. The following was the Tribune's comment on the appointment: "The receipt of public moneys at the North Yakima land office has been invested in Dr. W. H. Hare, of Ellensburg, vice Thomas Vance, resigned. The appointment of Dr. Hare will give general satisfaction throughout this district. His friends are numerous in both partisan ranks, and his accredited abilities eminently qualify him for the office."

Mayor Frothingham, of Spokane, hasn't followed up the Sunday closing movement. It proved so unpopular that he instructed the chief of police to disturb no Sunday law breakers except the variety theatres and concert halls.

Mrs. M. Froling, wife of a grocer in Tacoma, died July 9. She had been only four months married, was blind of an eye, lost her first husband only a few months ago, and was 72 years old. Froling, her second spouse, is only 30 years of age.

A lot of railroad spikes, which have been lying in a vacant lot near the depot at Centralia since last summer, and which belong to G. W. Hunt, are to be sold by the sheriff to satisfy a judgment for $645. The spikes are said to be worth anywhere from $30,000 to $40,000.

Articles of incorporation have been filed at Olympia by the Northwestern World's Fair Operation, Savings & Transportation company; capital stock, $100,000, divided into 1000 shares of $100 each. The trustees are J. H. McGraw, W. R. Forrest, Morris Koch, B. F. Shabert and W. L. Marshall. The object is to facilitate the transportation of people to the world's fair.

It is estimated that eastern Oregon and Washington will raise for export 22,000,000 bushels of wheat. At 69 cents per bushel, which is not an over-estimate, this means $14,980,000. Add to this the wool clip, which is extraordinarily heavy and fine, and the sale of fruits, and it is an easy matter to figure out that the farmers of eastern Oregon and Washington will be able to keep the wolf from the door for the next year without much wear or tear.

E. Meeker & Co., of Puyallup, have sent out a circular to hop growers, in which the following important statements are made: "We have thoroughly tested the different formulas for destroying hop lice and find the most effective combination is that used by the English hop growers, viz., quassa chips and whale oil soap, as follows: Seven to nine pounds quassa chips, six to eight pounds whale oil soap, 100 gallons of water; steep the quassa chips in a few gallons of cold water for about one hour, then boil five minutes and add the soap."

PUGNEY POLITICAL PARAGRAPHS.

What the Active as Well as the Deregist Politicians of the State Are Doing and Trying to Do.

Spokane Spokesman: Governor Langton is about to enter the journalistic field, and from the fastness of his mountain home in Okanogan county, beneath the shadow of his poetic cabin, he will send forth philippic after philippic to tremble as each weekly issue makes its appearance. Among the special features of the gubernatorial journal will be a new poem on "The Governor's Fiddle," by Colonel Vischer; "What I Saw Through the Keyhole," by Deputy United States Marshal Charles Chamberlin; "History and Mystery of the Langton Administration," by Private Secretary Miss Bertha Denton; "Why I Missed the Steamboat," by ex-Senator Conover; "How I Secured Russell's Pardon," by Attorney Flator; "How to Furnish a Governor's Office," and "My Nevada Friends," by the editor. There will be short sketches by ex-Governor Black, a paper on "Why the Finkerton Bill was Voted," by Detective Sullivan, and a photo-engraving of the first meeting between Ferry and Langton. A specially attractive feature will be "Experience of a Langton Presidential Boomer," by State Geologist Bethune, which will appear in one of the early numbers. There is no question that the paper will sell well and extensively, and that each number will be read with deep interest.

Seattle Spectator: Looking at the situation with an impartial eye, the chances of Allen are not as bright as they could be. He has to fight elements within and outside of his party. Even if he carries the primary vote of the Cascades he is by no means sure that the republican legislature will be elected. If they are not he will have to prepare for retirement to private life. Squire will support Allen. At least that is the agreement. It is questionable whether his support will be of much benefit. Allen helped Squire a great deal more than Squire will ever be able to help Allen. The latter has a long personal following, the former has none. His political allies would desert him as rats do a sinking and worthless ship, if the golden magnet which attracts them should ever be lost.

Washington Independent: We can inform the curious newspapers over the state that Mr. George Hazard is doing no secret work in the interest of any party. The genial gentleman was in this city the past week and secured the names of the voters in all the counties of the state. Such gentlemen as Mr. Hazard are such thorns in the sides of political bosses that he creates a stir in the newspapers wherever he goes.

"Keyhole" Charlie Chamberlin, of Whitman, whom the Spokane Spokesman spicily refers to as the "Peeping Tom of Miss Acting Lieutenant Governor Denton's celebrated Press-Times interview," has been appointed deputy United States marshal for eastern Washington. The appointment gives general satisfaction except to the people of Pullman.

Joe Kahn claims that he is out of politics—that hereafter he will spend his days in seclusion and meditation. If true, this is indeed sad, for Joseph was one of the most picturesque figures in Washington politics, and that he should become a political recluse is sufficient to make the republican party shake with joy from center to circumference.

Young John B. Allen, son of the senator, has thrown up his clerkship under Collector Bradshaw. The clouds were getting too murky over in that direction, and by the advice of his father, it is understood, the young man cut himself adrift, much to the chagrin of Bradshaw, who accepts it as an evil omen.

It is said that Collector Bradshaw will be succeeded by Mr. Wasson, of Port Townsend. Wasson is the legislator who voted for Squire, because he wanted to be on the winning side.

Henry Landes, of Port Townsend, says: "I was a member of the first state senate; but thank God, not of the second."

AN UNFORTUNATE KISS. The Pittsburg Young Man Was Near Nighted, and Made a Night Blunder.

A Pittsburg Dispatch: There was an amusing scene at the union depot last night. Among the passengers who passed through the barriers for the eastern express was a young lady attended by a dapper young gentleman with a very lover-like air and the lady's sashel. The pair boarded the train and were soon engaged in conversation, so much so that when the signal for departure was given the young man jumped up and made for the door without saying good-bye. When he reached the vestibule he remembered his oversight and started back to remedy it.

The car was well filled and the young man was, doubtless, nervous and pleasurable near sighted, for when he reached the section, as he thought, containing his beloved, he stooped and suddenly imprinted a fervid kiss on the lips of—some other girl. There was a scream; deep fushes suffused the cheeks of the right girl, quickly followed by an indignant frown; a hurried apology from the poor fellow, and then a wild rush for the door and a tuppole off the now rapidly moving train by a very shame-faced and disgruntled young man.

The Planet Mercury.

New York Sun: At the time of a transit the astronomer has the best chance of measuring Mercury's size. There is one great difficulty even then. If you hold a spherical object between yourself and a bright light you will notice that considerably more than one half is illuminated. So the observance of Mercury during a transit tends to make the planet smaller than it really is. And if it has an atmosphere it will look still smaller, on account of the refraction of the sun's rays on the dark side.

Mercury revolves around the sun in eighty-eight days, and, like the moon, makes only one rotation in that time, consequently we never see but one side. If the planet is inhabited, they must be very hot on one side and extremely cold on the other.

Besides Mercury's smallness, it is the most exceptional of all the planets. It is the nearest to the sun; it receives the most light and heat; it has the most eccentric orbit; it has the greatest inclination to the plane of the earth's orbit; it is the densest; it has the least mass; and, finally, it is the swiftest.

It moves at the rate of about thirty miles a second, so that if the planet came to a sudden stop its inhabitants would fly off into space and become little planets by themselves.

The next transit will occur on November 10, 1894. You had best warn to get your smoked glasses ready.

IN MEMORIAM.

Died, on the Wenas, Yakima county, Tuesday, July 7, of consumption, Angeline, wife of L. N. France, aged about 37 years. Eight children survive her.

Another tie is broken. One less on earth to sorrow. Another friend is taken. From cross to crown above. Our hearts now ache with sorrow. And wet our eyes with grief. Beyond the bitter weeping. And brings us glad relief. Oh, blessed, blessed morrow! Its dawn not far away. And then no night of sorrow. But bright eternal day. To-morrow—then the meeting. With those we loved so well. Beyond the bitter weeping. And there no sad farewell. MRS. M. R.

How the Chinese Emperor Looks.

The young emperor was plainly attired in a pure colored silken robe, with a golden dragon embroidered on the breast. He bore no scepter or other emblem of authority, and instead of a crown he had on his head an ordinary Chinese felt hat surmounted by a button of crimson silk. His pale face bore an air of refinement and dignity, but showed none of the force and fire of his martial ancestors. It was mild, kind and sad.

Set a Millinery Shop.

"Can I get something to eat here?" asked an eastern man of the proprietor of a Montana "hotel." The landlord eyed him suspiciously. "Tenderfoot, eh?" "I suppose so." "Eat pie with yer knife?" Irrigation by Mechanical Methods a Great Success.

The irrigation pumps sold by Crippen, Lawrence & Co. on the lower Yakima are producing some remarkably good results, as will be seen from the following letters. Quite a number of parties have made final proof on desert claims through the use of these pumps.

This is what Wm. H. Burrell, of Prosser, says: "I am now operating a little No. 3 Nye pump, which I purchased of Crippen, Lawrence & Co. last fall, on my 31 acre tract of land near Prosser. I have the entire tract under cultivation, and it is necessary for me to run my pump only two days during the week and I have all the water I can use. This is my first season, and I am confident that my pump will water 100 acres easily. The principal feature about my pump is the fact that I am always master of the situation, having all the water I want and no chance of a quarrel with any one. The entire outfit cost me $750. I operate it with sage brush. The simplicity and economy of this pump will recommend it to all, and I take pleasure in showing my pump and farm to any who are interested enough in cheap irrigation to visit me three miles above Prosser.

"Wm. H. BURRELL." Then J. C. Ross, of Prosser, says: "Last fall I purchased of Crippen, Lawrence & Co., of North Yakima, a 500 gallon Huffer pump, which I now have on my 160 acre tract of land three miles above Prosser. I take pleasure in recommending it to my friends. This pump gives me an abundant water supply for my entire 160 acre tract. This plant cost me about $600. I can operate it for twelve hours with one small hay crate full of sage brush. The sage brush I have taken off of the seventy-five acres I now have in cultivation will operate my pump for two seasons. I figure the cost of running my pump as follows:

Cost of plant $900 00
Ten per cent. interest on same $ 90 00
Man to operate pump sixty days, one-half his time 45 00
Amount of fuel used in sixty days, fifteen tons coal at $6 per ton 90 00

Entire cost to operate plant for 160 acres of land $225 00

"I do not figure on sage brush, as it is only temporary. There are a number of my neighbors who are irrigating their lands with pumping plants similar to mine, and we anticipate going to the upper Yakima, making a drive of five or six hundred cords of wood, so we will have no scarcity of fuel. I have all the water I want and when I want it. Come and see my farm if you are interested in irrigation." "JOHN C. ROSS."

CLOTH FROM WOOD.

Put Down a Tree in the Morning and Wear it in Clothes at Night.

Mitcherlich has applied the bisulphite process for reducing wood to the production of a fiber from wood which can be spun into cloth. This boards or laths, free from knots, but of any desired width, are cut into strips in a direction parallel to the grain and then boiled in a boiler containing a solution of sulphuric acid and bisulphite acid. After boiling the wood it is dried in the open air or in specially constructed drying rooms. By being thus dried, the fiber, which is originally very weak and likely to break at the slightest strain, becomes comparatively strong and does not resume its very breakable condition on the addition of water. The operations carried out in fitting this wonderful production for the spinning wheel and the loom are as follows:

The damp mass of pulp described above is dumped into the frame of the mixer on to a traveling endless cloth, which carries the pulp to a pair of rollers, which are sometimes plain and sometimes provided with corrugations in the direction of their length, the ribs or cogs of one roller being made so as to gear into the recesses of the other, whereby they effect a simultaneous strong bending and squeezing power. The cutting of the material in passing through the corrugated rollers is avoided by causing the endless cloth to pass over the lower roller, and by placing a canvas covering around the upper one.

The pressed mass falls from the first set of rollers on to another endless cloth, which conveys it to a second pair of rollers, from which, in turn, it is conveyed to a third pair, and so on until it has passed down six endless cloths and through six pairs of rollers. By continued treatment of the wood pulp with the bisulphite the fibers at length become as pliable and isolated from each other as so many strands of cotton or woolen yarn, and is said to make a strong and splendid thread for use in all textiles where a coarse filament is required.

The separation of the extractable matter is usually done after the fiber has been spun into threads or woven into cloth. Professor Wayman says that with this process it is possible for a woodman to fell a large tree in the morning and wear it as a suit of clothes or walk on it as a carpet by evening.

FIRE INSURANCE TO BE REDUCED.—An important meeting of the business men of North Yakima was held at J. B. Pugsley's office Wednesday afternoon.

Teachers employed for the North Yakima public schools for the ensuing term: Geo. H. Watt, superintendent; E. P. School opens the first Monday in September.

Two pistol shots, ringing out with awful clearness on the avenue at about 12 o'clock Saturday night, followed by the screams of the fire bell, alarmed the sleeping inhabitants and caused a wild rush to the engine house.

Five passenger trains from the east arrived to-day, the result of an accident to a freight near Spokane, in which the fireman was killed and the engineer seriously hurt last Tuesday. A fire at Mt. Vernon, Wash., Tuesday, destroyed $40,000 worth of property. The building in which our former townsmen, F. B. Lippincott, was employed was among those burned.

The N. P. R. last month shipped over twenty carloads of stock, hops and hay alone from this place, and figures up to this time indicate that the quantity will be doubled during July. Progress Lodge No. 61, I. O. O. F., installed the following officers on Tuesday last week: W. D. Walker, U. G.; A. R. Sinclair, V. G.; J. B. McKillips, secretary; J. K. Ward, treasurer.

Jesse Lovell and a little son of Tom Norton had a narrow escape from a very serious accident yesterday, by being violently thrown from a bucking causer. As it is, they are badly disfigured. Wayne Field has sold his meat market to W. H. Vessey, the well known shepman. Subsequently W. H. Kernah purchased the outfit, and is contemplating removing his shop to this stand.

Dr. Wilgus, of Fort Simcoe, says that Jack Toles, who was shot by Wm. Olney on the reservation last week, has already lost one finger and will be fortunate if the entire hand does not have to come off. The Knights of Labor and Farmers' Alliance delegates are arriving in large numbers to attend the state conventions of the organizations which are to be held on Saturday. A big crowd is looked for.

Haslett, the celebrated pilgrim printer, was in town this week. He had just come from the Big Bend country, where he said it was very light picking and was on his way to the Walla Walla country. Auditor Ellis says that recording has picked up to such an extent within the past month that he has found it necessary to employ extra help. As mortgages are very much in the minority, this rush of business is encouraging.

The pastor of the Congregational church, Rev. S. H. Cheadle, will leave with his family for the Sound next week to spend two or three weeks visiting friends. In his absence the Sunday School will be kept up in the church, but there will be no preaching service.

THE HOSE TEAM RACE.

Extracts From an Ellensburg Paper—The Failure of Southerman Emond Broke His Heart and He Cried.

Ellensburg Capital: The Ellensburg hose team left for Yakima last Friday morning, intending to put in considerable time practicing. On arriving there they were met by the Yakima boys, escorted to the hotel, and from that moment until they left, the town was theirs. They at once became the guests of their challengers and no possible opportunity to add to the pleasure of our boys was allowed to pass.

The time set for the race was 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon, but there was considerable delay in starting and it was 8 o'clock when the Yakimas stood ready to go. They got a good start, ran well, and were fortunate in making couplings. Their time was announced as 41.

The Ellensburg boys did not receive the word to go until nearly 9 o'clock. At the crack of the pistol they dashed off in magnificent style and the way they ran was a source of pride to all the Ellensburgers present and called out the admiration of the Yakimites. The plug was reached in fine time, the coupling was made in perfect style, and it seemed that victory was theirs.

The poor boy dropped everything and ran for his room, where he was found a few moments later by Foreman McFallis sobbing like a child. He felt that he was disgraced, but it was one of those unaccountable accidents which he was powerless to prevent. He has made as many as fifty couplings here in one day and never failed to do it perfectly, and this failure at the critical moment nearly broke his heart.

The Ellensburg fire boys, in a card, wherein they acknowledge with thanks the "hospitality and courteous treatment of the fire laddies of North Yakima," throwing down the gauntlet, and while admitting their defeat, "maintain that they are the chief," and are willing to demonstrate the fact at any time or place.

G. M. McKinney, the popular agent of Crippen, Lawrence & Co., keeps the road warm between North Yakima and the lower part of the county, where he has sold a number of his irrigation pumps, which are in successful operation. Mr. McKinney is enthusiastic over the success of the pumps, and thinks the question of water for irrigation is thoroughly settled.

Work has been commenced on the Congressional academy, located on the 120 acre of land near the Abnauum church, which was donated for this purpose by Penn B. Woodcock. The trustees have decided to begin the work in a modest way, and only carry out such portions of the original plans as are required by present circumstances.

The well boring in Moxee goes on, but just how deep the hole is now THE HERALD cannot report. One thing is certain, the parties in this enterprise are going to get artesian water, and they are entitled to the gratitude of the people of Yakima for their push and energy, both for the conception and the thorough manner of carrying on the work.

Manuel Cato, a thrifty farmer, who has sold his farm on the Natchees to Peter Eschbach, left on Wednesday for Portugal, his native land, where he expects to permanently reside. He came here with nothing and goes away with considerable money, which is another evidence that Yakima is the best country on earth.

There is a lively prospect of a great hop growing company being formed to operate in Yakima county. The projectors are not residents of this place, but are foreign capitalists, who are investigating the advantages offered by Yakima, and looking up virgin land suitable for this purpose.

Lois Wolfe, a jeweler and assayer of Dayton, was drowned Friday while bathing in Medical lake. The body was discovered one hour and forty minutes after it sank. Heretofore it has been maintained that a drowning could not occur in this body of water, as sinking was an impossibility.

The county auditor is having a new plat book made of all the townships in the county. This was found necessary, as the original plats have been handled so much as to endanger their future usefulness, and the new book will obviate the danger of loss or mutilation of the originals.

To all old-time Yakimites it should be whispered that Copenhagen and all kissing games are barred out. Staid Pennsylvania has set the pace, and the man who attended a church picnic and tried the oculatory business got six months in jail; and the girl was willing, too.

TIPS TO PROSPECTORS.

Scientific Points on Silver—Where the White Metal is Most Likely to be Found.

A reflective man will not advance an opinion on every piece of rock he may find, for many times it requires a thorough analysis to tell what a mineral is, as the compounds of the ore are so varied; and Taylor D. MacLeod states, for the benefit of the prospector, that silver is never found, and does not exist as an oxide, carbonate, sulphate or phosphate, but, in its binary and ternary compounds, it is found in the state of a sulphide, antimonide, selenide, telluride, sulpho-arsenite and sulpho-antimonite.

Silver will absorb oxygen when heated or in a molten state, but upon cooling will expel the oxygen, and that is why after being melted it always presents an uneven or spouting surface. The oxides of lead, in ternary combination with carbon, make carbonates of lead, and as all lead sulphides carry more or less silver, the silver remains as a sulphide, while the sulphide of lead becomes an oxide, and then a carbonate, virtually making the ore a carbonate; but the silver, by analysis, will be found to remain unaltered. Carbon dioxide is given out by limestone, when heated, consequently in most, if not all, cases where carbonate ores are found, carbon dioxide is in close proximity. Sulphuret and carbonate are often found together, but if sulphur and carbon are brought together as a mineral, you destroy both elements.

The most of the valuable mines worked in the United States are sulphuret ores. The great wealth of the Comstock was a black, brittle silver known as stephanite, and contained sulphur 15, antimony 15 and silver 67 per cent. Silver ores occur in rock of all ages, in trap, porphyry, sandstone, limestone or shale, in each geological period, as late as the tertiary.

Porphyry is an essential constituent, either as a wall rock or forming a dyke in connection with almost, if not all, large bullion-producing mines. The great Comstock, of Nevada, which has contributed more silver to commerce than any group of mines in the world, is mostly of a metamorphic porphyritic nature. The great income from which $20,000,000 was mined in the year 1873, was located in a wall of green stone porphyry, called porphyry, and it has been observed that when this porphyry runs out or ceases to exist, the mineral becomes low grade, and scarcely worth taking out. Silver ore, as a general thing, where it is not associated with the porphyries and kindred rock, is combined, to a greater extent, with lead, arsenic and other bases.

There are many reasons that might be advanced to show that, for permanent mining, the older the rocks are the better the prospect for deep and lasting workings. It was the opinion of the late Sir William Logan that the granite of the Laurentian system was the oldest in the world, and every member of that ancient family refers us back to times so remote that time is too short a word to express our conception of duration.

No true vein approximating to east and west in those Laurentian granites, or their equivalents, the crystalline states, will ever run out in depth. Those fractures extend downward to depths which our engineering skill can never reach, and the result is that such veins may be profitably worked until water, or some other unavoidable cause, make it too expensive.

A SLAVE'S REVENGE.

A Method of Vengeance as Peculiar as It Was Bold.

In Hayti and Martinique the venom of the terrible serpent indigenous to those islands, the formidable for de lazar, has been often employed by the negroes in disposing of their enemies. A horrible but well authenticated instance of negro ingenuity and malevolence is told in Martinique. A huge negro, recently imported from the Guinea coast, had been whipped by the order of his master, one of the great planter princes of the island while it was under French rule. The victim made no complaint, but meditated revenge.

By long search he found the lair of a pair of serpents in the garden adjacent to the house. Watching his opportunity, he killed one and dragged its body to the house through a window that was always open, and into the bedroom of the beautiful daughter of the planter. He dragged it to the bed, lifted the coverings and coiled the reptile on the sheet. When this was done he carried the dead snake away and cast it into an adjacent stream.

As night approached the serpent's mate followed the trail, crept through the open window and to the bed of the planter's daughter. The latter, half awake, made a rustling to knock away the intruder. Instantly the fangs were buried in her neck, and in a few hours she was a corpse.

OF A SURVEY.

Regarding the State Geologist of Washington.

Bethune! You have heard of the name. He is the person, says the Contra City News, upon whom was bestowed the position of state geologist. Some $50,000 of the state money is at his disposal to carry on the work for which he thinks himself especially adapted. His mode of procedure is not always that which is laid out in scientific works for a geological survey. For instance, last week, accompanied by a lady (?) in a buggy, and feeling rather in a jubilant mood, they suddenly took a tumble. More stars than spars the firmament were brought before their vision. The honorable gentleman, when sufficiently recovered from the shock, "surveyed" the horse that was attached to the vehicle, and disappearing in the distance the buggy struck. His complexion was so badly shattered that it took several days to get her on her pins again.

A Comedy in a Sleeping Car.

Mr. and Mrs. Whiffin were on their way to the Hot Springs, where he intended to get relief from his rheumatism in the baths. At a way station a drunken traveling man boarded the train and was put to bed in the berth next to Mr. and Mrs. W. by the porter. Shortly after Mr. W. woke up with a dreadful stitch in his side. Like a good dutiful wife Mrs. W. arose and went to the lavatory to make a strong, extra strong mustard plaster with which to relieve the pain of her liege lord.

On her return she pulled the wrong curtain aside and placed the plaster upon the stomach of the senseless, drunken drummer. Then she went to the lavatory, washed her hands and returned to her berth, getting into the right section and finding Mr. W. asleep.

Finally a loud groan was heard, then these words, "Oh, my stomach, I'm dead!" The exclamation was topped off by the wailing plaintive being thrown out on the slab of the car. The porter then grabbed the drummer and shook him until awake. During the first stages of sensibility he muttered: "Oh, my stomach is gone, gone!"

By this time heads were peeping out from behind curtains and the porter was on his way to the traveling man's berth. Of a sudden out came the bed clothes from the T. M.'s berth, and a cry of "Oh, my, there is my stomach! I'm dead!" The exclamation was topped off by the mustard plaster being thrown out on the slab of the car. The porter then grabbed the drummer and shook him until awake. During the first stages of sensibility he muttered: "Oh, my stomach is gone, gone!"

A Few Fashion Notes.

Eight ounce gloves are still in vogue among artists. Undressed kids are often seen in the poorer quarters.

The summer girl will be much worn in August and September.

The summer young man will wear mittens in the fall.

Dogs are beginning to come out with their summer pants.

Federal court judges will wear Mother Hubbard gowns of the lawn order.
