Robt. Hartfield, formerly of the editorial staff of the Buffalo, New York, Courier, shot himself on the 24th.

Hon. Matt Carpenter, United States senator from Wisconsin, died at Washington City, Feb. 24th, of Bright's disease of the kidneys.

It is stated upon excellent authority that State Senator Wm. H. Robinson of New York will be named for collector of the port of New York, and that Chief Judge Folger accepts the secretaryship of the treasury.

The republican state convention at Lansing, Michigan, nominated Hon. Isaac Marston for judge of the supreme court, and Hon. Jas. E. Joy, of Detroit, and ex-Gov. Austin Blair, of Jackson, for regents of the state university.

The grand jury at London, Ohio, has indicted Mrs. Martha Darley and her daughter, Mrs. Rebecca Corzallius, for the murder of Armstrong, Mrs. Corzallius' late husband. The indictment was found on the confession of one Henry Whitehead, a convict, that Mrs. Darley had confided to him of having smothered Armstrong with charcoal fumes, and to cause suspicion had shot him in the head after he was dead.

In the Whitaker case martial at New York called Barnst, recently stationed in New Mexico, but who found Whitaker when he was bound, gave a public exhibition of the manner in which he was lying, having a cadet jacket, bedstead, and whole outfit in the court room. He tied himself as he claimed. Whitaker was tied, and created quite a sensation under the coaching of the judge advocate general.

The trial of Col. Cash for the murder of Col. Shannon in a duel is in progress in Washington, South Carolina. A jury was formed without much trouble, composed exclusively of whites; the defense challenging every negro called. Eye-witnesses testified to the facts of the duel substantially as heretofore published. Several swore that Cash was urged by his son just before the principals took position, to be certain to kill Shannon, and Cash replied that he would do it sure as there was a world.

A Santa Fe dispatch of the 23d says: The first of the week a shooting affray occurred in a gambling booth in a secluded spot five miles from the stage road between Fort Wingate and Bacon's Fort, near the mouth of a saloon named called for drinks. The proprietor stated that he sold no whisky, but if the men wanted to gamble they could be furnished with whisky. Four men then sat down to play cards, and after playing some time a row began, resulting in the death of all of the card players, each being shot several times. No arrests.

President Garfield sent the names of the members of his cabinet to the senate on the 15th and they were all confirmed without opposition. The following President Garfield has sent to the senate the following nominations: James G. Blaine, of Maine, secretary of state, William Windom, of Minnesota, secretary of the treasury, Wayne McVeagh, of Pennsylvania, attorney general, Thomas I. James, of New York, postmaster general, Samuel J. Kirkwood, of Iowa, secretary of the interior, Robert F. Lincoln, of Illinois, secretary of war, William H. Hunt, of Louisiana, secretary of the navy.

A Buffalo dispatch to the New York Times relates the discovery of a gold and silver quartz ledge in the town of Hamburg, nine miles from Buffalo, which appears well authenticated. The names of several prominent men of that station are given in connection with it. The ledge was discovered last August. Pieces of rock subjected to careful assay, yielded $150 to the ton. Mining operations were commenced last October under the superintendence of Charles E. Reeves, formerly of California, and excavations reveal a sunken ledge with an overhanging wall on one side. The latest assay from the lowest depth excavated, shows $200 to $300 to the ton. A company has been organized embracing Theodore S. and James Husted, John Austicks of the firm of S. O. Barnum, Son & Co., Chas. A. Rupp, a prominent builder, and L. A. B. are the most surprising and startling thing connected with this matter is that gold and silver bearing quartz should make its appearance where the geological condition of the country would seem to contradict the possibility of its existence.

A Danville, Pa., dispatch of March 6th says: The main building of the state hospital for the insane at this place caught fire last night in an unexpected ward in the east wing, which was being repainted. The condition of roads was such that the distance from this place, a mile and a half distant, could not be rendered until the fire had gained great headway. A steam fire engine belonging to this borough was dragged through deep snow by six horses, but soon after going into service it was rendered useless by breaking some of its machinery. Assistance was telegraphed for from different towns in the vicinity, but before it could be furnished the whole wing of the main building was destroyed, a portion of the latter having been blown up for the purpose of saving the west wing. At about 4 o'clock this morning the fire was thought to be under control, but again broke out and this afternoon reached the west wing. The hospital was supplied with water from a large reservoir, but it was impossible to get a sufficient force on to be of avail. Nearly five hundred patients were in the institution, all of whom were removed without confusion or loss of life to detached buildings in the rear of the main building. At the time the fire was discovered the inmates were in the hospital chapel at evening service, and this circumstance assisted in keeping the unfortunate under control and together. Most of the inmates were distributed to other state institutions until some arrangements can be made for their care here. The building was in process of erection for eleven years, and cost the state about $400,000.

Ex Secretary of the navy, Nathan Geff, has been nominated by President Garfield as U. S. attorney for West Virginia.

Gen. Grant expresses surprise that the proposed world's fair to be held in 1883 at New York is not receiving much general attention.

In an interview, ex President Hayes said that he thought President Garfield would continue his (Hayes') policy in his appointments, and expressed himself highly pleased with the new cabinet.

A heavy snow storm accompanied by stormy winds prevailed throughout the northern states from the Missouri river to the Atlantic coast from the second to the 5th of March, blocking all the railroads and causing a general cessation of business.

The United States Cable Co. of New York has begun suit to prevent a consolidation of telegraph companies, claiming a compact in the nature of a partnership with the A. & P. Co., by which the A. & P. Co. could not honestly consolidate with any other company without the cable company's consent.

The board of trade at St. Louis, Mo., in Chicago, has adopted a resolution declaring that there is no epidemic of malignant disease among hogs, and that swine are free from disease this year than ever before, and that all reports to the contrary are unfounded. A statistical committee was appointed to inform the British minister at Washington.

The Post, a democratic organ, of Feb. 5th says: As the senate has no other executive business that will consume much time, it might very properly proceed to consider the Chinese treaty, which were laid before that body some months ago. Senators have thus far given little or no attention to anything connected with these treaties beyond inquiring as to the manner of their leaking out.

THE CHICAGO TIMES.

The Chicago Tribune says: The composition of the cabinet will afford general satisfaction. It meets all the requirements of locality; it has a high average of ability; it is composed of men of wide executive capacity and very unusual experience of public affairs and knowledge of the duties pertaining to the several offices. The Chicago Times, discussing the new cabinet, says: In the geographical distribution of the new cabinet, General Garfield has been generous to the northwest. Illinois has been recognized as the appointing power of Mr. Robert Lincoln, of Minnesota, is secretary of the treasury, in some respects the most important office in the government. Mr. Windom's chief recommendation for the place seems to have been found in the fact that the delegation of his state voted for him in the Chicago convention. Some of those who are familiar with his ancient history are inclined to doubt the sufficiency of this reason for the assignment to him of an important department. Mr. Kirkwood of Iowa was chosen; it is said, because Mr. Allison of the same state declined this office. That does not seem to be entirely conclusive, but as the reason has been mentioned, it may be the true one.

Intemperance and Immorality in London.

The idea prevails in America that the English are a virtuous nation, and London is an exemplary city. I have no hesitation in asserting that this is about the farthest statement that can be made on the other side of the Atlantic. I may refer those who doubt my proposition to the declaration published the other day by the great Dr. Pusey, of Oxford, that the inhabitants of London were all pagans; to the police court columns of the English papers, which, by the way, only published a very small portion of the crimes committed, and finally to the daily moaning upon that score of the most celebrated men of the country.

Two terrible vices flatter over this rural and pollute with their slime the unfortunate subjects of her Majesty; their names are intemperance and immorality. They pervade every rank of society. Napoleon I. said the English were a nation of shopkeepers. Parodying his words, I may affirm they are a nation of drunkards. Everybody drinks. It is not only the men of the lower class, who, like in America, disgrace themselves sometimes, by too many libations, it is every individual, from the gaudily-dressed ostentatious, affecting nobleman, to the rough, hard-working laborer; from the highly-perfumed, drollish, brightly-featured lady to the two penny-penny market woman. The disease is a ghastly, hideous, universal one. Opportunities to drink are given everywhere. Taverns, or as they are called here, public houses, abound; you count them by thousands; there is one for every hundred yards; sometimes they hang by clusters of three or four together, like strawberries in the fields. For all that, they pay well, and very well indeed, for you enter one of these during the day, whom do you see? A number of men and women, but especially women, sitting down and talking loud, often quarreling, sipping enormous quantities of beer or tumblers of hot rum or hot gin. These females are mothers of a family, young girls of 15 or thereabouts, women with babies in their arms, teaching their offspring to gulp down whisky at the same time as they hold the breast.

Saloons are not the only places where spirits may be obtained; they are resorted to in every public corner. There is not a railroad station, not a theatre, not a music hall, not a steamboat, that is not provided with its conspicuous bar.

Killing a Tiger.

At Rangoon, in Burma, recently in one of the most populous quarters of the town, a tiger was killed in broad daylight. The brute had been hanging round Dalah, the straggling village on the other side of the river from Rangoon, for several days, and early one morning swam across the river to Rangoon. Fagged with the long mile through a swift current, and no doubt astonished at the sight of men, he came across the house, concealed himself beneath a house. The District Superintendent of Police heard of the arrival, and, armed with a Winchester repeating rifle, went down with another Englishman in the direction pointed out. Entering one of the houses on the river bank, they all of a sudden discovered the animal only a few inches below them, with nothing but the scant protection of an open bamboo floorwork between them and him. A large tiger, he was a handsome chief, and a Burman was shot through the shoulder, and died a few hours after the tiger was just under nine feet from tip to tip.

Stage-Struck.

A writer in Harper's Bazar thus takes off the theatricals: If I were a damsel talk freely with you, they will tell you that if they are not strikingly pretty, they can "make up" well; that they can shed real tears at pleasure; that they even know how to simulate a faint and call it that they have practiced the lunge between the shoulders, however, and as for their sobs, you should hear them! Meanwhile, the stage is never forgotten in their last motion. If they sit at the piano, it is with a sense of the audience down at one side—they stand, rather than sit, for freedom of dramatic movement. They emphasize their remarks with fingers touching together on the chest and their arms flung wide open with circling grace; with an upraised arm, and every finger trembling, with hands clasped over a lace handkerchief, and all a little lifted—with all the pretty line of grace, in short, that one sees in the motions of the lovely ladies who play society dramas. By and by, if circumstances have never pushed them forward, if the native impetuosity is not strong enough to give the impetus to seek a stage manager; if, modestly, after all, got the better of them; if the thing did not, on the whole, effervescence in private theatricals, or if no private theatricals came to stimulate and develop the taste, they subsided into the choice reader of a domestic Shakespeare club or the teacher of an elocutionary class, or else they fell in love and marry, and housewifely cares and children weed them of their folly, as the old king said would be the case when the enthusiasm of the Princess Uda was in question. And usually no harm has been done, and their sons will, perhaps, be the better public speakers that their mothers had a little dramatic turn. Usually no harm, we say; but occasionally a great one has been done. A peculiar vanity has been fostered that is poisonous to the system and infects the whole character, and the bloom has been brushed off the modesty of nature by the very fancy for admiration and applause; for only where it has been the real historic genius that is able to inform the dead shell with life, and infuse it with blood and spirit, is the longing for admiration and applause the support of the creative power, and not its source.

Astronomical Phenomena.

To the interested observer of the starry spheres, the latter part of the month of February and the beginning of March will afford an interesting and sublime view of the planetary bodies in their various aspects. If we turn for a moment to glance at the western sky soon after sunset, we are at once impressed with the magnitude of the scene. Within a compass of few degrees are presented before us the three most radiant members of our planetary group—Venus, Jupiter and Saturn; while a little higher up in the sodic the invisible Neptune stands guard, and lower down, just above the western horizon, the swift-winged Mercury gradually shows his twinkling countenance. So that five of the seven contemporary members of our system are all in the region of the heavens.

It will be extremely interesting to observe the varying motions of their bodies. During the winter months of last year, Jupiter and Saturn were our evening stars, but were high over head at this time in the evening. In January last, they were to be seen slowly sinking to the west, while Venus at the same time was just coming into view. These three planets then presented a straight line, with Jupiter in the center. The motion of Venus is so much more rapid than that of either of the other two, that she soon overtakes them and passes above, and on February 20th, the three planets will form a perfect equilateral triangle, whose sides are 5 degrees in length. After this, the triangle is gradually altered as Venus moves eastward, until, on March 1st it presents the form of a right-angled one, with Saturn occupying the position of the right angle.

This group is just below the head of Aries, and in the direction of a line drawn through the two principal stars of that constellation.

Venus is constantly growing more magnificent, and soon leaves Jupiter and Saturn far behind. Their brightness is slowly fading, and ere another month has passed they will have disappeared in the rays of the approaching sun. Venus, however, continues to illumine our sky until May 3d, when she, too, is lost to view. Thus are the beautiful combinations broken up to make room for others, for endless variety is the most sublime charm of the grand science of astronomy.

Mercury reaches his greatest distance east of the sun on February 23d, and becomes evening star. On that day he sets at 7:30 p. m., an hour and a half after the sun. So that while observing this beautiful triangle of Venus, Jupiter and Saturn above, we can cast our eyes toward the horizon and also steal a glimpse of the god of light.

To add to the charming scene, the young moon modestly places her slender crescent among the group. On March 3d she passes very near Venus, and north of 40 degrees north will occult that planet. This will be a beautiful phenomenon, as Venus suddenly disappears on the dark edge of the moon. In the latitude of Chicago, the planet touches the lower border of the moon as they are setting, at 9:15 p. m.

Bret Hart's Saug Herbs.

Speaking of literary people, authors, and the rest of that kind, a friend, with whom I dined on Sunday, tells me he met Bret Hart in London a few weeks back. He says that California story-tellers have changed very much since he went abroad. There is about as much of the American about him now, according to my friend, as there is about the Prince of Wales. Hart frequents all the crack clubs of London, and tells his American acquaintances about his "dinner last night with Lawd So-and-so, 'dash boy," and his engagement to marry to "yep with the 'Prince, ye know."

"He is, says my informant, who is an old New York Journalist, 'the most prominent cookery in the whole of England. I don't believe he remembers that there is any such place at all as San Francisco. Why, he actually told me, with an immense amount of patronage about it, too, that he dined on an average six times a week with the nobility. And he further declared that 'fifty thousand pun,' as he called it, had been subscribed to start a magazine for him over there. 'What he wanted, he said, was to have all the really great writers in the world write for him, and he looked suggestively at me when he said it. But I didn't take, and I haven't heard anything about the magazine. Oh! you wouldn't know Hart at all, and I'm quite sure he wouldn't know you.'—London Letter.

During the hearing of a charge against William Barnes in the Melbourne City Police Court, of robbery from the Government House, the prisoner handed a medal to Detective Brown, on which was inscribed in rather artistic style—"Presented to Detective J. Brown, from W. Barnes for overexertion, October 26, 1880."

"Yes, sah," said the old colored man, "de first yeah when I giv $50 to de church, dey call me Mistal Richard Johnson, Esquial; de second yeah time was had an I couldn't giv no more than $25 and dey call me Brnddsh Johnson; an next yeah I couldn't giv nuffin an dey call me old nigger Johnson.

PUGET SOUND MAIL.

SATURDAY, MARCH 19, 1881.

DELEGATE BRENTS, we observe from the Record of Feb. 24th, made a noble effort in Congress to obtain an appropriation for the construction of a government telegraph line from Port Townsend to Cape Flattery, and would have succeeded but for a very blunt member by the name of Blount who persistently opposed the proposition. At the close of a prolonged debate, in which Mr. Brents acquitted himself very creditably indeed, the measure was declared carried by a vote of 54 to 51 when this persistent Blount called for tellers, and managed to defeat it by one majority, the vote finally standing 77 to 78. Blount is a member from Georgia, and we hope he will sometime take a notion to visit Puget Sound and be knocked about for a week or so in a storm in the vicinity of Cape Flattery, and no tug in sight to render assistance. Then he would appreciate the necessity of a signal station to telegraph the distress of his vessel. Let us tender Blount an invitation to visit Puget Sound and then have him "shang-highed" by a skipper bound on whaling expedition to the polar sea. During his absence our Delegate may be able to obtain this appropriation from Congress.

IT LOOKS NOW as if the alleged conflict of interest between the Northern Pacific Railroad Company and Oregon Railway and Navigation Company, brought about by the attempt and failure of Villard to obtain control of the former concern, will redound to the advancement of Seattle. Villard having failed to influence the Northern Pacific to refrain from building the Cascade division so as to throw the business of Eastern Washington into the lap of Portland, may now improve the opportunity to complete the Seattle & Walla Walla Railroad to compete with the Northern Pacific and thus get even with that company for refusing to combine with the Oregon company to control the carrying trade of the Northwest. So let the people of Seattle take heart and put their trust in Villard, for the more the trouble brews between the Northern Pacific and the Oregon companies the sooner will the Seattle & Walla Walla Railroad be built. Of course Villard would prefer to subservise the interests of Portland to that of Seattle, but if he finds that he cannot checkmate the N. P. R. R. with the Oregon company he will undertake the next best thing by building an opposition line to Seattle. When corporations fall out or disagree the people get their honest dues. So let the good work of hostility go on.

MONTGOMERY BLAIR has written a letter to a Missouri friend in which he states facts which seriously reflect on the motives and fair fame of General Robert E. Lee. He says: "Lee told my father in the room in which I write this note, when my father, at Lincoln's request, offered him the command of our army, that he was utterly opposed to secession—regarded it as anarchy—and said if he owned every slave in the country he would freely surrender them rather than see the Union dissolved, and yet took up arms for the cause he himself had pronounced illegal and ruinous because his relatives and friends were involved in it." That statement will make Virginia howl; and, doubtless, there will be scores of denials, and unstinted denunciations of the ex-Postmaster General.

A GREAT anti-monopoly meeting was held in Cooper Institute, New York, on the evening of the 21st ultimo, under the auspices of the Anti-Monopoly League. Judge J. S. Black, of Pennsylvania, addressed the meeting at length, and declared that unless "Legislatures should step in and aid an oppressed people, the whole machinery of government would be thrown into the hands of monopolists." A letter was read from Senator Windom, at present Secretary of the Treasury, which pointed out the danger of a single man controlling the educational power of the press by the ownership of the telegraphs.

It is estimated that at least 7,500 miles of new railroad will be built in the United States during this year. This with the renewal of the old roads will require over 1,500,000 tons of rail. The manufacturing of this amount of rail should keep the mills busy and insure a good price for pig iron during this year.

Construction of the Railroad to Puget Sound Assured.

Puget Sound has reason to be proud of the Tacoma Ledger for the very clever advocacy of our interests and the exposure of Villard's designs to obtain control of the Northern Pacific Railroad in the interest of Portland. The "Ledger" appears to be the only paper in this Territory capable of holding the imperious "Oregonian" level. Here is a specimen of the missiles which the Ledger shies at the Vallard organ:

There is not an intelligent man in Oregon or Washington Territory who believes that the Cascade division would be built in the event of Villard's friends obtaining control of the Northern Pacific Railroad. The crafty editor of the Oregonian said that that division would doubtless be built. We denied it, and showed that the crafty editor of the Oregonian was deceiving the people, and he has since been scrupulously silent on the subject. Mark the words he has been scrupulously silent on the subject. The failure of the Cascade division means the continued bondage of Washington Territory to Oregon, Portland and the O. R. & N. Co. The Oregonian confesses by its silence. But if the reasons given why the Cascade division would not in such an event be constructed are not sufficient to be adjudged conclusive, we have a fact to add: Villard has for a year past besought and plead with the Northern Pacific company not to build west of Astoria, for while, at least. His attempts proving vain, he uttered a terrible threat, went into the street, made a big noise and got the bohemians to blow their horns for him, induced Mr. Endicott of Boston to help him buy some stock but nothing approaching a majority, and then marched into headquarters, at 23 Fifth avenue thinking that all hands were much scared, and announced that matters could be arranged satisfactorily if the N. P. management would agree not to build the Cascade division. His bluff game did not work, and he has thrown his cards into the deck. He was politely told that it was the business of the Northern Pacific railroad to go over the Cascade range to tide-water on Puget Sound, and now we have the pleasure of calling the attention of the editor of the Oregonian to an advertisement elsewhere in this issue for 2000 laborers, carpenters and bridge builders for work on the Cascade and Pen d'Oreille divisions, with an order subjoined for him to copy the same for two weeks in the Oregonian, for which service, if performed, he will be duly required. Villard has not acquired control of the Northern Pacific railroad. The Cascade division will be built, and that speedily. Washington Territory will be emancipated.

The following is the call for two thousand laborers: WANTED.—Two thousand white laborers and two hundred carpenters and bridge builders to work on the Cascade and Pen d'Oreille divisions of the Northern Pacific railroad. These two divisions of the Northern Pacific railroad traverse the famous wheat region of Eastern Washington, and in which there is yet much unoccupied government and railroad land, and the employment here offered would afford a good opportunity for those of small means to examine the country at leisure and to earn for themselves a good home. The wages of laborers will be from $1.75 to $2 per day, and for carpenters and bridge builders from $3 to $3.50 per day, according to skill. Fare from San Francisco to New Tacoma and Portland, and the steamer is $20 in the cabin and $10 in the steerage. For further information apply to H. W. Fairweather, Supt. Pen d'Oreille division, Astoria, W. T., or to J. W. Sprague, General Superintendent, New Tacoma, W. T. (S. F. Chronicle and Oregonian copy two weeks.)

The Oregon farmers are moving to devise some means to put a stop to the decline in the price of wheat, and a convention is to be held at Salem soon to effect a combination to benefit farming interests, particularly wheat producers. The leaders of the movement propose that the farmers shall hold their grain till better prices rule, and say all the money needed to carry out the plan can be obtained.

A PHILADELPHIA paper says: It will interest ship owners everywhere to know that, on the instance of the captain of a large clipper ship loading at New York with railroad iron and locomotives for New Tacoma, the Pacific coast seaport of the Northern Pacific road, a telegram was sent there to the railroad company's general superintendent, asking: "What depth water Tacoma wharf?" The reply came: "Twenty-five feet low tide; forty-five feet high tide. Very soft bottom." That ship was ordered to be loaded to twenty-three feet. Had she cleared for Portland, she would have been loaded twenty-one feet.

The Philadelphia New Northwest, for February, is authority for the statement that most of the land on the Pen d'Oreille division of the Northern Pacific railroad has been advanced from $2.60 to $5 an acre. It says that the effect of the low price of $2.60 per acre was found by experience to throw large blocks of choice land into the hands of speculators, to the detriment of actual settlers and the business of the road.

It is estimated that at least 7,500 miles of new railroad will be built in the United States during this year. This with the renewal of the old roads will require over 1,500,000 tons of rail. The manufacturing of this amount of rail should keep the mills busy and insure a good price for pig iron during this year.

TERRITORIAL FINANCES.—The subjoined statement, made up on the 1st, shows the finances of Washington Territory to be in a healthy condition:

Table with 2 columns: Description and Amount. Includes Balance to the credit of general fund, Outstanding warrants at close of last quarter, etc.

The land sales of the Northern Pacific grant on the Pen d'Oreille division are summarized as follows: Total sales to January 1st, 1881, $640,403.35; cash received, $494,230; bonds received in payment for lands, $85,563.88; deferred payments, $60,484.01.

SHALL WE MEET AGAIN?—The following is one of the most brilliant paragraphs ever written by the late lamented George D. Prentice: "The fat of death is inexorable. There is no appeal for relief from the great law which dooms from dust. We flourish and fade as the leaves of the forest and the flowers that bloom, wither and fade in a day, have no firmer hold upon life than the mightiest monarch that ever shook the earth with his footsteps. Generations of men will appear and disappear as the grass, and the multitude that throngs the world to-day will disappear as footsteps on the shore. Men seldom think of the great event of death until the shadow falls across their pathway, hiding from their eyes the faces of loved ones whose loving smile was the sunlight of their existence. Death is the antagonist of life and the thought of the tomb is the skeleton of all feasts. We do not want to go through the dark valley, although the dark passage may lead to Paradise; we do not want to go down into deep graves, even with princes for bed-fellows. In the beautiful drama of "Ion" the hope of immortality, so eloquently uttered by the death-devoted Greek, finds deep response in every thoughtful mind. When about to yield his life a sacrifice to fate, his "Clemanthe" asks if they should meet again, to which he responds: "I have asked that dreadful question of the hills that look eternal—of the clear streams that flow forever—of the stars among whose field of azure my raised spirits have walked in glory. All are dumb. But as I gaze upon thy living face I feel that there is something in love that mingles through its beauty that cannot wholly perish. We shall meet again, 'Clemanthe'."

HENRY VAN NORTWICK, of Toledo, Ohio, says: A friend prevailed upon me to try an "Only Lung Pad," and I obtained immediate relief from a racking cough. I saw the Pad helped me. See advertisement.

The Mule and the Bees.

I was visiting a gentleman who lived in the vicinity of Los Angeles. The morning was beautiful. The plash of little cascades about the grounds, the buzz of bees and the gentle moving of the foliage of the pepper trees in the scarcely perceptible ocean breeze made up a picture which I thought was complete. It was not a mule wandered on the scene. The scene, I thought, could have got along without him. He took a different view.

air, he would look like he was flying, and I would think for a moment he was about to become an angel. Only for a moment. There are no mule angels.

When he had got up to the tops of the pepper trees I was called to breakfast. I told them I didn't want my breakfast. The mule continued to be lousy.

Marie Vanandt relates this roll incident from Germany to France: "Running the gauntlet at the Custom-house, I had in my arms two enormous boquets presented to me by some American friends, and composed of our national colors, which, you know are the same as the French, and do you believe those old Custom-house officers insisted on my paying duty? For they hate the French you see, and meant to take revenge on my poor flowers, which bore the hated hues; but this stirred my American blood, and mildly but firmly, I refused their extortionate demand, and declared I would not, should not, would not give them up. The argument was getting quite serious, when, thinking that an explanation of how I came by them might be soothing, and having exhausted my German, I tossed my head back and gave them a little trill, then imitated applause, and threw the boquets up and caught them again. The gruff old fellow grunted and smiled, and motioned for me to pass on. The idea had penetrated."

Everybody that has tried Ammon's Cough Syrup, continues its use; besides they tell their neighbors of it. We were in a drug store the other day and a customer asked for a bottle of Ammon's Cough Syrup, saying he did not know anything about it myself, but my neighbor advised me to buy it for my cold, and told me that the use of three bottles has entirely cured his cough of two weeks standing; in fact, saying it is the best medicine for the world for coughs, colds and lung complaint, and that a one-dollar bottle did him more good than all the prescriptions he had from the doctor.

From a running brook, the giant Goliath, and millions of noble men since that time have died from the same cause. The safe Kidney and Liver Cure would have dissolved and carried away.

MIDDLE-AGED MEN. There are many at the age of thirty to sixty who are troubled with too frequent evacuations of the bladder, often accompanied by a slight smarting or burning sensation, and a feeling of the system in a manner the patient cannot account for. An examination of the urine will show a deposit of uric acid, and sometimes small particles of albumen will appear, or the color will be a milky hue, again changing to a dark and ropy appearance. There are many men who die of this difficulty, ignorant of the cause, which is the second stage of Genital Weakness. It will continue a perfect cure in all such cases, and a healthy restoration of the genital organs.
