A Judge Murdered in his Court Room

GRAHAM TEXAS, June 12.—R. Morris, county judge of Baylor county, was shot and instantly killed in the court house at Seymour yesterday by W. Taylor, a saloon keeper. Taylor escaped.

Stop that Fooling!—Leadville Aroused.

DENVER, June 11.—The Times' Leadville special says: A citizens' organization, 3000 strong, was formed this morning to protect working miners. They issued a proclamation stating that they are fully determined that work on the mines shall be resumed, there being to their certain knowledge men enough in camp willing to work for the wages offered, provided the intimidation now practiced under the auspices of the miners' union is stopped. The proclamation further states that on the first step taken by any one to interfere or intimidate miners, the leaders of the union will be held responsible with their lives.

Against St. Julien's Time.

DETROIT, June 12.—Hopful trotted against St. Julien's time yesterday, but the track was heavy and stiff with blowing, so that the conditions were not so favorable; first trial mile, 2:21; second 2:14.

Heavy Business Failure.

BOSTON, June 12.—The failure of Hand-let, Ellis & Co., iron dealers of this city, is announced. Their liabilities are estimated at $750,000. The suspension, they were caused by a decline in the value of their merchandise and the refusal of customers to carry out contracts. Five-sixths of their liabilities is to banks, and secured.

Hanged.

GALVESTON, TEXAS, June 12.—Henry Quarles, a negro, was hanged at Houston yesterday in the jail yard, for the murder of his wife.

Execution.

ST. LOUIS, June 12.—A special to the Times from Keyesville, Mo., says that Knapp, a negro, was hanged today for killing a young farmer named Noah Forest, at Forest Pine, Chantion county, last Christmas day. About 4000 people from the surrounding counties witnessed the hanging.

The Texas Style.

GALVESTON, June 12.—A report from White Ranch says that four men were hanged at the upper edge of Brown county yesterday by a mob for crookedness with cattle.

A Broken Boom.

MILWAUKEE, June 12.—The Sentinel's La Crosse special says that five million feet of logs, owned by Sprecker & Muller, of Tremont, broke away last night; loss estimated at $40,000.

One man is reported killed by yesterday's storm at Lemouille and one at Brons-dale.

A Court-feiter.

ST. LOUIS, June 12.—Charles A. Hill, a lawyer, and formerly a resident of California, was arrested at his office today with complete counterfeit outfit and arrangements for raising bills. He has been a prominent crooked speaker.

Hot Weather at Chicago.

CHICAGO, June 12.—The heat for the past three days has been very severe, the thermometer in the hot part of the day indicating 90 deg. in the shade, or a little over. It is much cooler to-night, but several cases of sunstroke are reported, of which three or four have proven fatal. A few cases are now under treatment at hospitals.

Appalling Disaster.

NEW YORK, June 12.—The steamboats Stonington and Narragansett were in collision last night on Long Island sound, near the Connecticut river. The Narragansett took fire and sunk. Most of her passengers were rescued, scattered along Long Island shore. Both steamers belonged to the same line. The Narragansett was on a regular trip from New York to Stonington, and the steamer Stonington was returning to New York. The collision occurred about 1:15 P. M. off the Connecticut river. The Narragansett took fire and sank in four fathoms of water. The passengers from both steamers were transferred to the steamer City of New York of the Fall River line. Boston and they arrived in New York at 11:15 this morning. It is impossible to ascertain at present the loss of lives. Two bodies, however, are already recovered.

The Purser's Statement.

The purser of the Narragansett stated that there were not more than 300 passengers on the boat and that the loss cannot exceed 50, as it is known that more than 200 were brought to the city and large numbers were taken back to Stonington. It is also known that a schooner which came up and sent out boats picked up several people. A passenger and a naval cadet were swimming about for over an hour before being picked up. A young man was seen to deliberately shoot himself when cries of fire and that the boat was sinking were raised. The report of a pistol was also heard in another direction. A deck hand of the Narragansett says he jumped overboard as soon as the collision took place and clung to a spar. He saw a boat lowered from the Narragansett overturned and the occupants, he thinks, were all drowned. In five minutes after the collision there were five feet of water in the hole and in ten minutes the steamer was burned to the water's edge. An old lady struggling in the water was found to have an eight months' old baby clasped in her arms, her grand-child. The shrieks and cries of terror of men and women were terrible. A raft was made and passengers crowded upon it in great numbers. Some persons fainted after getting a foothold upon it. Ropes hung from the raft were eagerly clutched and frantic efforts made to reach it, although the weight of the people sunk it six inches under the surface. It was finally taken in tow by a row boat.

The Wisconsin Flood.

CHICAGO, June 13.—A special from Eau Claire, Wisconsin, says that sixteen million feet of logs have gone down the broken portion of the dam, besides many houses being destroyed. The river rose 21 feet, reaching the highest point ever known. It began to subside at 8 P. M. yesterday. There are 150,000,000 feet at the big eddy at the Falls dam, which seems likely to break any moment. The loss in the Chippewa valley will probably reach half a million dollars, and if the immense jam moves and allows the entire 250,000,000 feet of logs to pass out it may amount to a million dollars. Many houses in the lower part of the city are flooded and there is great excitement among the inhabitants.

Storm at New York.

NEW YORK, June 13.—A tornado, with heavy rain and lightning to-night, passed over this city and vicinity. Many trees were prostrated. The thermometer fell from 85 deg. to 60 deg.

Horrible Murder.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 12.—Today the body of Jas. Williams, colored, was found in his head crushed in a shapeless mass. At his cabin, his wife was found lying on the floor, unconscious, with her skull crushed, but still alive.

Little Rock, Ark., June 13.—Wm. Binns was hung at Warren, Bradley county, on the 11th inst. for the murder of Con. Edwards in June, 1879, near Monticello.

Brutal Murder.

NEW YORK, June 14.—Mary Dean, a young colored woman residing in a tenement house on West Twenty-sixth street, who had deserted her husband, was brutally murdered last night by her paramour, Augustus Lytton, who cut her throat from ear to ear.

Indian Fight.

PORT DAVIS, June 14.—Lieut. Wells arrived yesterday from Ysleta with a detachment of Pueblo soldiers. He reports discovering a fresh Indian trail, which he followed to night and camped on Vigas pass. At daylight on the 11th his camp was attacked by hostiles and Simon, an old Pueblo guide, killed. The Indians were then hanked and routed. Lieut. Richard with a detachment of troops is now following the trail.

Later from Leadville.

DENVER, June 12.—Today's Leadville advices states that at 10 this morning all the fire bells tolled a signal for closing all places of business according to agreement of this morning. Ten companies of militia were called out, armed with Winchester rifles, forming, and this afternoon five hundred citizens, two-thirds armed, paraded the streets. Five hundred strikers were collected in front of the city office. Moorey, was today abrogated by the strikers dispersed. The wildest excitement prevailed, but there has been no bloodshed up to 4 o'clock, and the general opinion is that there will be no serious collision, but Lieut. Gov. Tabor and others express great fear.

Suicide of a Woman.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 15.—Teresa Flanagan, widow of John Flanagan, who committed suicide some months ago, suicided yesterday afternoon by taking opium. She left a note which indicates that general despondency was the cause of the act.

Murderous Assault.

Wm. Hutchings, a barber, in a fit of jealousy, last evening stabbed his wife in the breast and hand, inflicting dangerous wounds. He surrendered himself to a police officer.

Fatal Row.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 15.—Yesterday Samuel Kendall, a settler on the now notorious El Sobrante ranch, Contra Costa county, procured the aid of an Oakland negro known as Joe, with the intention of removing some cordwood cut by Kendall from a track of land on which two squatters recently settled. The squatters resisted the removal of the wood, and Kendall was cut down with a hatchet and dangerously wounded, and one of the squatters shot dead by Joe.

Contract Abrogated.

NEW YORK, June 15.—The contract which has existed for some months between the trunk railroad lines, the Tide Water pipe Company and the New Jersey Central Railroad Company, pooling receipts for the transportation of Petroleum products, was today abrogated by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and the rates of freight will probably be reduced to the old figures. Renewed talk of an impending railroad war had a rather demoralizing effect. Produce exports the past week were the largest for years.

Collision.

NEW YORK, June 15.—The steamer Anchoria and The Queen were in collision in a fog off Sandy Hook June 15th. Both were seriously damaged, and are anchored still outside waiting assistance.

Whittaker Deficient in Philosophy.

WEST POINT, June 15.—The academy's board has found Whittaker deficient in philosophy.

Quick Ra Road Time.

JENNY CITY, June 15.—A train on the Pennsylvania road to-day ran from Philadelphia to this place—90 miles—in 93 minutes, stopping four times and slowing up twice to cross bridges.

Explosion at Milwaukee.

MILWAUKEE, June 15.—Waldock & Wirtz' distillery boiler exploded this morning. Dave Hanson was instantly killed, and John Schandeln fatally hurt. The building was worth $20,000. Loss, $20,000; insurance, half.

The largest crop of cane raised in the West this spring appears to be a success. It raises and rases every thing before it in a rather hurried manner. Now is the time to go West and be blown away with the country.

Baker's Blue-Jay Varn.

"When I first began to understand jay language correctly, there was a little incident happened here. Seven years ago, the last man in this region but he moved away. There stands his house—been empty ever since; a log house with a plank roof—just one big room, and no roof; no ceiling—nothing between the rafters and the floor. Well, one Sunday morning I was sitting out here in front of my cabin with my eye, taking the sun, and looking at the blue hills, and listening to the leaves rustling so lonely in the trees, and thinking of the home away yonder in the States, that I hadn't heard from in thirteen years, when a blue-jay lit on that house with an acorn in his beak. He cocked his head to one side, shut one eye and put the other one to the hole, like a possum looking down a jug; then he glanced up with his bright eyes, gave a wink or two with his wings—which signifies gratification, you understand—and says: 'It looks like a hole, it's located like a hole—blamed if I don't believe it is a hole!'

"Then he cocked his head down and took another look; he glances up perfectly joyful this time, winks his wings and his tail both, and says: 'Oh, no, this ain't no fat thing, I reckon it is a hole in luck!—why, it's a perfectly elegant hole!'

So he flew off and fetched another acorn and dropped it in, and tried to lift his head back, when all of a sudden he was paralyzed into a listless attitude, and that smile faded gradually off of his countenance like breath off'n a razor, and the queerest look of surprise took its place. Then he says, 'Why I didn't hear it fall!' He cocked his eye at the hole again, and took a long look; raised up and took his head; stepped around to the other side of the hole and took another look from that side; shook his head again. He studied a while, then he just went into the details—walked round and round the hole and spied into it from every point of the compass. No use. Now he took a thinking attitude on the comb of the roof and scratched the back of his head with his right foot a minute, and finally says: 'Well, it's too many for me, that's certain; must be a mighty long acorn spied into it from over my head, and I reckon it's all right—chance it, anyway.'

"So he flew off and fetched another acorn and dropped it in, and tried to lift his eye to the hole quick enough to see the acorn as it fell, but he was too late. He held his eye there as much as a minute; then he raised up and sighed, and says, 'Confound it, I don't seem to understand this thing, no way; however, I'll tackle her again.' He fetched another acorn and done his level best to see that he home of it, but he couldn't. He says, 'Well, I never struck no such a hole as this, before; I'm of the opinion it's a totally new kind of a hole.' Then he began to get mad. He held in for a spell, walking up and down the comb of the roof, and scratching his head and muttering to himself; but his feelings got the upper hand of him, presently, and he broke loose and cussed himself black in the face. I never see a bird take on so about a little thing. When he levelled about a little, he levelled to the hole and looks in again for half a minute; then he says, 'Well, you're a long hole, and a deep hole, and a mighty singular hole altogether—but I've started in to fill you, and I'm d—d if I don't fill you, if it takes a hundred years.' And he shouldered his work so since you was born. He laid into his work like a nigger, and the way he hoove acorns into that hole for about two hours and a half was one of the most exciting and astonishing spectacles I ever struck. He never stopped to take a look any more—he just hoove 'em in and went for more. Well, at last, he could hardly flop his wings, he was so tuckered out. He comes a-drooping down, once more, sweating like an old pitcher, drops his acorn and says, 'Now you've got the bug on you by this time! So he bent down for a look. If you'll believe me, when his head came up again he was just pale with rage. He says, 'I've shoveled acorns enough in there to keep the family thirty years, and if I can see a sign of 'em I wish I may land in a museum with a belly full of sawdust in two minutes.' He just laid strength enough to crawl up on to the comb and lean his back against the chimney, and then he collected his impressions and began to free his mind. I see in a second that what I had mistook for profanity in the mines was only just the rudiments, as you may say. Another jay was going by, and heard him doing his devotions, and stops to inquire what was up. The sufferer told him the whole circumstance, and says, 'Now you'd better the hole, and if you don't believe me, go and look for yourself.' So this fellow went and looked, and comes back and says, 'How many did you say you put in there?' 'Not any more than I should,' says the sufferer. 'The other jay went and looked again. He couldn't seem to make it out, so he raised a yell, and three more jays come. They all examined the hole, they all made the sufferer tell it over again, then they all discussed it, and got off as many leather-headed opinions about it as an average crowd of humans could have done. They called in more jays; then more and more, till pretty soon the whole region 'peared to have a blue flush about it. There must have been five thousand of them, and such another jawing and disputing and ripping and cussing you never heard. Every jay in the whole lot put his eye to the hole and delivered a more chuckle-headed opinion about the mystery than the jay that went there before him. They examined the house all over, too. The door was standing half-open, and at last one old jay happened to go and light on the mystery galley west in a second. There lay the acorns, scattered all over the floor. He flopped his wings and raised a whoop. 'Come here!' he says, 'Come here, everybody; hang'd if this fool hasn't been trying to fill up a house with acorns.' They all came a-swooping down like a blue cloud, and as each fellow lit on the door and took a glance, the whole absurdity that that first jay had tackled hit him home, and he fell over backward suffocating with laughter, and the next jay took his place and done the same. Well, sir, they roosted around here on the house-top and the trees for an hour, and guffawed over that thing like human beings. It ain't any use to tell me a blue-jay hasn't got a sense of humor, because I know better. And memory, too. They brought jays here from all over the United States to look down that hole, every summer for three years. Other birds, too. And they could all see the point, except an owl that came from Nova Scotia to visit the Yosemite, and he took this thing in on his way back. He said he couldn't see anything funny in it. But then he was a good deal disappointed about Yosemite, too.—'A Tramp Abroad.'

Charles Lever's Boyhood.

Charles Lever at eleven years old was in manner, dress and appearance at least three years in advance of his period of life. He was a remarkably handsome lad, somewhat vain, ready of speech, with a laughing manner, and wonderfully self-possessed for a youth of his standing.

By his cousins, some of whom were his elders, he was at once admitted to the position of a senior, or rather of general director, at work or at play; and seldom had a quiet household been turned so completely up and down.

A left was fitted up as a theater, and Lever did everything. He was scene painter, prompter, played the fiddle, sang all the songs, acted all the chief parts, and dressed the performers. The favorite pieces were Bombastie Furioso, and the Warwickshire Wag, but tragedies were not neglected.

At every school at which he was placed a ready means was soon discovered by which he could be staked out of his idleness. It was only to insinuate, that wonder had been expressed that such heavy loads as Brown, Jones, or Robinson should stand above him in his class. Lever would probably reply by a joke, but, apparently without effort, Brown would be displaced, and Lever would stand where he had stood. Lever's indolence was neither the result of laziness or stupidity; half the ingenuity or study he gave to schemes of amusement, if otherwise directed, would have placed him high amongst his fellows.

With his teachers and masters, Lever led a sort of cat-and-dog life. He illustrates the matter in his own way. "Man," he said, "was naturally a wild animal; he, like the horse, required whip and spurs, as well as bit and curb, to secure subjection to the knowledge and usages of civilized life. The spirited horse would pitch his trainer over his shoulders if he could; the spirited lad would act in the same fashion. Later on, second nature, in the shape of habit, usually forced the hunter to love his rider, and the educated gentleman to love his former master." When Lever visited Instigate, in 1817, he was found to be behindhand in two important points of his education, and it was arranged that he should attend with his cousins for daily instructions in writing and figures.

The instructor was James Cotterall, schoolmaster and land surveyor, to whom Lever and Lever a warrior to the knife speedily broke out.

Previous to the introduction of Lever to the household where he was a visitor, a more docile set of pupils than Cotterall had rule over could not be imagined. In a week all was changed; there was negligence, there was rebellion, there was disturbance, and the imposing ceremony of "begging off" was laughed at as a silly farce.

Lever had imported a thousand annoyances for the master, never heard of before in the country, and Cotterall fairly admitted himself to be at his wits' end. He was not above, however, taking his revenge on Lever. During the performance of Lever's tragedy of the Death of Nelson, when amidst shots and wounded into the arms of Captain Hardy in the fishing cot that did duty for H. M. S. Victory, he indulged in an explosion of laughter which completely scattered the effect which Lever had been toiling to produce.—The University Magazine.

Jenny Lind is sixty years old.

Justice S. J. Field as a Duellist.

During Mr. Field's legislative days in the California Legislature, the members were little else than walking arsenals. Two-thirds of them carried either bow-knives or pistols. Some flourished both weapons. When a member entered the House he unstrapped his revolvers and laid them on his desk. It was done with as little concern as hanging up a hat, and it excited neither surprise or comment. There was a hot debate over the proposed impeachment of Judge Turner. At the conclusion of Mr. Field's argument, B. F. Moore, of Tuolumne, arose to reply. He opened his drawer, cocked his revolver, and laid them on his desk. Then he launched himself on a sea of vituperation. Mr. Field was handled without gloves. The most offensive epithets were used, and the speaker openly declared himself responsible for his language at any time and any place. Mr. Field answered Mr. Moore's arguments, but made no allusion to his personal remarks. After the adjournment, however, he asked B. F. Moore to send a note to Mr. Moore, demanding an apology or satisfaction. Mr. Morrill refused, through fear of being disqualified for office. Mr. Richardson, another member, also declined. Happening into the Senate chamber, the jurist saw a stonemason seated at a desk, writing. He was David C. Broderick, President of the State Senate. They were bowing acquaintances. "Why, Judge, you don't look well," said Broderick. "What's the matter?"

"Well, I don't feel well," Field responded. "I don't seem to have a friend in the world."

"What worries you?" inquired the stonemason.

The jurist gave the particulars of Moore's assault upon his character, and said that, at all hazards, he was determined to call him to account.

"Well, I'll be your friend," Broderick replied. "Write your note; I will deliver it."

The jurist wrote the note at an adjoining desk, and Broderick placed it in Moore's hands. The latter gentleman crumpled it. He said that he expected to be a candidate for Congress, and that he could not accept a challenge, because that would be a disqualification. "I have no objection to a street fight, however," he added. The stonemason replied that a street fight was not exactly the thing among gentlemen, but if Moore would do no better he should be accommodated. He forthwith named time and place, and Moore promised to be on hand. Within an hour, however, he changed his mind. He informed Broderick that the Hon. Drury Baldwin would act as his friend, and deliver a reply to the note of Mr. Field.

On the next morning the stonemason tested the jurist's skill in the use of a pistol. With a navy revolver Field plumped a knot on a tree at a distance of thirty yards three times out of five. Broderick expressed his satisfaction, and urged the necessity of bringing the matter to a speedy issue. "Bring it on, an issue at once," Mr. Field responded. Broderick quickly called upon Drury Baldwin, and asked for a reply to the note. Baldwin replied that his principal had made up his mind to drop the matter. "Then," said the stonemason, "as soon as the house meets, Mr. Field will rise in his seat and repeat Moore's language as to his responsibility. He will state that respect for the dignity of the House prevented him from replying to the attack in the terms that I deserved when it was made, and, after detailing Moore's refusal to give him satisfaction, he will denounce him as a liar and a coward."

"Then," said Drury Baldwin, "Judge Field will be shot in his seat."

"In that case," rejoined Broderick, "others will be shot in their seats."

At the opening of the House, Mr. Field took his seat at his desk as usual. Broderick was seated near him, with eight or nine personal friends, all armed to a sword's point. "Bring it on, an issue at once," Mr. Field responded. Broderick quickly called upon Drury Baldwin, and asked for a reply to the note. Baldwin replied that his principal had made up his mind to drop the matter. "Then," said the stonemason, "as soon as the house meets, Mr. Field will rise in his seat and repeat Moore's language as to his responsibility. He will state that respect for the dignity of the House prevented him from replying to the attack in the terms that I deserved when it was made, and, after detailing Moore's refusal to give him satisfaction, he will denounce him as a liar and a coward."

National Democratic Convention Nominees.

GENERAL WINFIELD S. HANCOCK was nominated for President by the National Democratic Convention at Cincinnati on last Thursday. He was nominated on the second ballot with considerable unanimity, receiving 591 votes. General Hancock is a native of Pennsylvania, a graduate of West Point, and is one of the three Major-Generals in the Regular Army. Though of undoubted respectability we cannot regard him as a formidable candidate for this high office. Having in youth graduated for life into the military service and ever since held aloof from the rank and file of the people of the United States he is not well calculated to inspire any party with the political enthusiasm requisite in a Presidential candidate. True, he was nominated with considerable unanimity, but this was not owing to any special ability, but rather to the meagre chances of electing any Democrat while so able and prominent a statesman as Gen. Garfield was the Republican candidate. The leading statesmen of the Democracy, such as Bayard, Thurman, Hendricks, Seymour, or even Tilden, could not, in view of the present comparatively demoralized condition of that party, afford to risk their political reputation in a tilt with the present Republican nominee. And hence we conclude that though General Hancock is an eminently respectable and worthy soldier he has never had an opportunity of displaying any statesmanship, and we doubt whether the people of the United States are disposed to consider that there is any special emergency or occasion for disturbing him in his exalted military position and calling him to the Chief Magistracy of the nation. They will choose the volunteer soldier, General Garfield, who has distinguished himself alike in the civic and military counsels of the nation.

Governor English, of Connecticut, is the Democratic nominee for Vice President. This gentleman is a sort of "dark horse" and we know little or nothing about him at the present writing.

The Proposition to Establish a Mail Route between Whatcom and New Westminster Rejected by Canadian Gov't.

The following letter, addressed by the Department at Washington to Delegate Brents, gives the substance of the reply of the Canadian Government to our proposition to establish a mail route between Whatcom and New Westminster; by which it will be seen that our neighbors over the border refuse to accede thereto:

POSTOFFICE DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF FOREIGN MAILS,
Washington, D. C., June 5, 1880.

Sir:—Referring to your letter of the 6th April last, and the accompanying joint resolution of the Legislative Assembly of Washington Territory, relative to mail service between Whatcom in said Territory and New Westminster in British Columbia, I have the honor to inform you that, in compliance with your request, the Canada office was communicated with by this Department upon the subject of the proposed service, and that the Postmaster General is this morning in receipt of the reply of that office, stating "that the establishment of a mail route between the two places referred to, which are about twenty (20) miles apart and connected by a wagon-road, would expedite the exchange of correspondence between the mainland of British Columbia and places in Washington Territory north of Port Townsend; but that it would not give as early a delivery at New Westminster of Canadian or Eastern United States mails as the route via Victoria.

"I am to add that, as far as Canadian interests are concerned, the Postmaster General is not of opinion that the advantages to be gained by the establishment of the proposed route would be sufficient to justify the expense that would be involved, estimated at from $300 to $500 per annum."

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
JOSEPH H. BLACKFAN,
Supt. of Foreign Mails.

HON. THOMAS H. BRENTS,
House of Representatives.

IRVING BALLARD, Esq., our worthy Prosecuting Attorney, assures the Seattle Dispatch that he is not a candidate for Delegate to Congress or any other office than that which he now holds; but would not decline a nomination for Delegate if urged upon him.

The Republican Platform.

We have only room for the following extracts from the platform adopted by the National Republican Convention. After reciting the principal achievements of Republicanism it arraigns the Democracy with remarkable severity:

ACHIEVEMENTS OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

Republican rule has restored upon a solid basis payment in coin for all the national obligations, and has given us a currency absolutely good and legal, and in every part of our extended country. It has lifted the credit of the nation from the point where six per cent bonds sold at 85, to that where four per cent bonds are eagerly sought at a premium. Under its administration railways have increased from 31,000 miles in 1861 to more than 82,000 miles in 1879. Our foreign trade has increased from $700,000,000 to $1,150,000,000 in the same time, and our exports which were $20,000,000 less than our imports in 1861, were $264,000,000 more than our imports in 1879. Without resorting to loans it has, since the war closed, defrayed the ordinary expenses of the Government besides the accruing interest on the public debt, and conserved more than $30,000,000 for soldiers' pensions. It has paid $880,000,000 of the public debt, and by refunding the balance at lower rates has reduced the annual interest charge from nearly $150,000,000 to less than $80,000,000. All the industries of the country have revived; labor is in demand; wages have increased, and throughout the entire country there is evidence of a coming prosperity greater than we have ever enjoyed. Upon this record the Republican party asks for the continued support of the people.

ARRAIGNMENT OF THE DEMOCRACY.

We charge upon the democratic party the habitual sacrifice of patriotism and justice to the supreme and unsuitable lust for office and patronage; that to obtain possession of the National and State governments and of the control of place and position, they have obstructed all the efforts to preserve the party and conserve the purity of suffrage, have devised fraudulent certificates and returns; have labored to unseat lawfully elected members of Congress; to secure at all hazards the vote of a majority in the States in the House of Representatives; have endeavored to occupy by force and fraud places of trust given to others by the people of Maine, and rescued by the courage and action of Maine's patriotic sons; have by methods vicious in principle and tyrannical in practice attempted to attach partisan legislation to appropriation bills; have crushed the rights of individuals, and vindicated the principles and sought the favor of rebellion against the nation; and have endeavored to obliterate the sacred memories of the war, and its inestimable government results; have by individual equality. We affirm it to be the duty and purpose of the republican party to use all the legitimate means of this Union to secure the perfect harmony which may be practicable, and we submit to the practical, sensible people of United States to say whether it would not be dangerous to the best interests of our country at this time to surrender the administration of the national government to a party which seeks to overthrow the existing policy under which we are so prosperous, and thus bring destruction and confusion where there is now order, confidence and hope.

Congress adjourned on the 16th inst. not to meet again until the first Monday in December. During the session which has just terminated 1197 bills and joint resolutions were introduced in the Senate and 4288 bills and joint resolutions in the House. The number introduced during the first or extra session were respectively 773 and 2526, making a grand total 8784 bills introduced thus far during the present Congress. At the House adjournment, besides the great number of measures not reported from the committees, there yet remained about 800 bills and joint resolutions on the Senate calendar, and about 1400 bills and joint resolutions on the House calendar. The present Congress will expire on the 4th of next March, and doubtless hundreds of these measures will expire with it.

GARFIELD.—The name of Garfield means "very much" in German, and the German voters in this country are "very much" pleased with Garfield's nomination for the Presidency.

LOCAL NEWS AND COMMENTS.

The Fourth.—There was a public meeting at La Conner last Monday evening to make arrangements for a celebration of the Fourth of July. It was decided to celebrate with an oration and reading the Declaration of Independence and a free ball in the evening. Monday, the 5th, is the "day we celebrate." Committees were appointed to make arrangements and a general announcement of the celebration will be found elsewhere in this paper.

There will be a grand celebration of the Fourth of July at Mount Vernon on the Skagit. It is reported that W. H. White, Esq., of Seattle, will be orator of the day.

Mr. B. L. MARTIN, formerly a merchant of this town but during the past three or four years in charge of the Puget Mill Company's store at Utsalady, is sojourning a few days with us preparatory to his departure for Yakima to engage in the stock business. Finding store-keeping rather too confining for his health, he has resigned his position with the P. M. Co. to avail himself of the invigorating breezes of the Yakima plains. Mr. M. has many friends here who regret to part with him, and with them we unite in wishing him all possible health and prosperity in his future walks of life.

WASHINGTON COLONY.—A colony of 260 men, women and children, with horses, wagons, &c., are on their way from Kansas to this Territory to settle among us. Their advance agent will be on the Sound in a few days. It is hoped they will come here and settle upon and reclaim the so-called Olympia Marsh near La Conner. Here those colonists can find some twenty thousand acres of land in a body which they can reclaim at comparatively little expense. Our citizens should be on the look out for the agents of this colony and call attention to the great advantages here offered a colony in search of a large body of land.

We have been informed that the usual examination and exhibition of the Tulalip Indian schools will be held on next Tuesday, the 23rd, of this month. We understand that it is the intention of the Sisters in charge to make of this exhibition one of the best ever held since they undertook the management of these schools—some ten or twelve years ago; and from what we have been able to ascertain about the coming exhibition, we have no doubt but that it will prove highly satisfactory to all those who may have an opportunity to be present.

THE CANDIDATES for County offices are somewhat active. There are no less than a half dozen men aspiring to the office of Sheriff and about half that number for Treasurer. As to the Auditorship, we hear of only two prominent candidates, and they are on the Democratic side of the house. Two or three are spoken of for School Superintendent, while the present worthy incumbent of the office of Probate Judge will probably have no opposition.

The Whatcom County Republican Central Committee was called to meet at Whatcom on last Tuesday, but as only two, Messrs. Eldridge and Tennant, put in an appearance there was no quorum; so the convention has not yet been called. There will probably be a full meeting next Monday, as Messrs. Barkhouse and Maddox (the latter by proxy) intend being present.

Mr. C. DONOVAN, who during the past three and half years so very acceptably has discharged the duties of Treasurer of this County, is this week visiting his constituents in this southern locality. This gentleman has closely collected the revenue without once resorting to the extreme measure of distraint, and thus deserves well of the people.

The fine new steamer Daisy (Capt. J. G. Parker) of nearly one hundred tons capacity, fitted up and arranged in the finest style, is announced to make three trips a week between Seattle and La Conner, on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

The reply of the Canadian Post-office Department to our proposition to establish a mail route between Whatcom and New Westminster will be found on the second page of this paper.

DIED.—Near Skagit City, Charles McClure, a native of Maine, in about the 60th year of his age. We are informed that deceased was a relative of Senator Hamlin and other prominent families of Maine.

The steamer Nellie called at La Conner on Wednesday, on route for Ruby Creek. She had a large freight list for the Skagit River stores.

IN FOURTH OF JULY committees will communicate with us we will gladly publish an account of their celebrations.

TERRITORIAL UNIVERSITY.—From the Seattle papers we learn that the examination and commencement exercises at the Territorial University proved interesting and satisfactory beyond all expectation. President Anderson in his report says: "The year just closing has been prosperous beyond precedent in the history of the Territorial University. The number of students has been greater, and the work of instruction has been carried on through the sophomore year of the Classical course and the third year of the Scientific course, and one student has completed the Commercial course and three the Normal course." The forthcoming catalogue will give the names of one hundred and sixty different students for the year. The graduating class consisted of Miss Clara E. Lombard, Miss Luella J. Whittenmeyer, Miss Ada George and Mr. J. W. Colcott. The Pumphrey prize of a Webster's Unabridged Dictionary to the student who attained the highest standard for the year was awarded to Miss Leilla Shovey, the presentation speech being made by Judge Burke. The Commencement Address was delivered by Rev. S. A. Baker, D. D. On Thursday evening Judge Jacobs delivered a very interesting lecture before the literary societies of the University, the subject being sketches of character of noted public men whom he had known in Congress.

FATHER BOULET, Catholic missionary at the Tulalip Indian agency, gave us a pleasant call this week while sojourning in this town. This worthy clergyman is quite a good type and has a little outfit of printing material at the agency with which he prints little books and circulars in his missionary work.

In Favor of Sheriff Allen.

EDITOR MAIL.—As the friends of the different candidates for local office are lauding their men, I beg to offer a few words in behalf of a good officer who has during the past six years well and faithfully served the people of Whatcom County. I refer of course to Sheriff Allen, who though elected as a Democrat is rather neutral in politics—in fact, a people's man. La Conner precinct being his home, we ought to take just pride in his popularity and success. I am aware, Mr. Editor, that yourself and some others are opposed to Mr. Allen but I think you should modify your unfavorable opinion of him, for in opposing him you work against the interests of our town and precinct. You should consider that he has chiefly made this town instead of the county seat his headquarters, thus making, as far as lay in his power, the whole county tributary to our prosperity. Last month he held his ten days' levy at La Conner for the reception of the detailed lists of taxpayers, though probably the Legislature had in view the county seat as the proper place for this business. He has always been partial to La Conner and has appointed good Republicans as well as Democrats as his deputies. He is also liberal in the matter of assessments, his valuations being so low that no one can reasonably complain. La Conner has always stood by Mr. Allen and I hope it will continue so.

The Wells Road Matter.

EDITOR MAIL.—In your last issue you observe that attention has been called to a case in which the County Commissioners refused to establish a road owing to certain objections raised by a party through whose land the same was located by the viewers, thus depriving a whole community of an outlet, and that such was the feeling in regard to the matter that certain taxpayers desire the damages to the objector appraised and the county pay the same rather than refuse to establish said road, &c. You did not precisely designate the road nor the persons discussing it, but if you have reference to that known as the "Wells Road" I wish to subjoin a few facts concerning it, so that the points in controversy may be more fully understood. The objection was not merely on account of the road running through the objector's land, but was and is made to the serpentine and ruinous course some of the viewers wished to locate it upon. The said objector has always expressed a willingness to give one-half of said road along the line up to a certain slough and then angle across the corner of said land, cutting off ten or fifteen acres therefrom. This is all that should be reasonably expected of said objector, and is of opinion that impartial judges will agree thereto. Even the community of settlers referred to I believe agreed to this, with one exception—and in fact he pretended to agree to it. Now if this route will not suffice or serve the public interests, there is still another feasible route for the location of said road, which cannot materially injure any individual, and if "the heavy taxpayers" referred to will call on me I will take the time and trouble to show it to them. I think individual rights should be respected, and when this can be done and the public interest equally as well served it should be the prevailing rule in the establishment of roads.

THE 4TH OF JULY! AT LA CONNER On Monday, July 6th.

Reading Declaration Independence, By R. E. WHITNEY, Esq. ORATION, By W. R. ANDREWS, Esq. A SELECT POEM WILL BE READ By A. W. ENGLE, Esq.

The ceremonies of the occasion will take place at the Town Hall at 11 A. M., after which the people will repair to the Picnic Grounds to observe and participate in the Sports of the Day.

FREE BALL.

With good music and management, IN THE EVENING. AMUSEMENTS.—Hoops, boat, canoe, foot, and "go-as-you-please" racing; the prizes to be announced on the ground.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

TO SETTLERS WHO WANT TO MAKE MONEY.

3,750 Acres of most fertile and easily cultivated land to lease in quantities to suit for a term of years without rental.

These valuable lands are situated on Fraser River, a few miles north of the boundary line. They are similar in formation to the Swainish Flats, far more extensive, less cut up with water, and not so much subject to overflow. The land is nearly all wild grass prairie with subsoil of the best quality. The water is sufficient for domestic purposes. The water is excellent. The land is most advantageously situated, as steamboats run regularly and frequently past it, carrying freight at extremely low rates to the growing markets of New Westminster, Burrard Inlet, Nanaimo, Victoria and Esquimalt—all progressive places, the most important being Victoria, now a city with ten thousand inhabitants and growing very rapidly. The Dominion tariff of 10 cents per bushel on oats and potatoes, and 15 cents on barley and wheat, &c., affords substantial protection to the farmer of British Columbia against those of Oregon and Washington Territory and is equal to an extra profit for British Columbia farmers of about $6 per acre. This is an additional inducement for farmers looking out for the most profitable locations to go into British Columbia and settle on the fertile and easily reclaimed lands on the delta of the Fraser. Farmers located there now sell readily for cash what they can raise at much higher price than can be obtained in any part of Oregon or Washington Territory; the demand must continue greater than the supply and rapidly increase for many years to come in consequence of the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway. A contract for over nine millions of dollars has been let by the Dominion Government and the contract is now on the ground preparing to put 4000 men at work upon it, commencing on Fraser River. The undersigned have a few hundred acres diked which will be let upon favorable terms, the greater portion of the 3,750 acres requires a dike about 24 feet high to protect it from high water in exceptional years. No part is subject to overflow by salt water. This land is offered free for 6 years in consideration of those leasing, diking, fencing, improving and cultivating and leaving a certain portion of it seeded in timothy at the termination of the lease. This is a chance for live, industrious men to make money rapidly. Capt. Lloyd, of the schooner General Harney, has kindly allowed us to refer any parties inquiring on the Sound to him, and for any further particulars apply to W. & J. WILSON, Victoria, B. C.

TOO HANDSOME TO BE HONEST.

"Blue is the flower called the forget-me-not; wear it upon your breast and think of me—flowers and lips may die, but love will live with you."

Major Renshawe was gallant and handsome, and looked every inch a soldier, notwithstanding the fact that he sang softly this little German love song to a very pretty girl.

Lottie Fay shook her curly head doubtfully, and turned away that he might not see the tears in her eyes.

Everybody had warned her against the dashing young officer, who had been in town for a few weeks drumming up recruits for the army.

"Ah! and do you think the years of waiting were not more dreary because I did not know if you cared for me?"

"Forgive me, dear," he said. "In trying to be unselfish I committed the very fault which I endeavored to avoid. But why did Aunt Hannah doubt me?"

"She said," faltered Lottie, "that you were too handsome to be true."

"Yes, he looked very handsome and a trifle pale as he hummed the quaint little song, but that might have been the effect of the moonlight, and so Lottie tried to steel herself against him when he lifted her slim fingers to his lips."

"Well, little one," he said, "this will not do for me. I might stand here forever, but I must not. Good-by, good-by! If the gray coats spare me, I shall see you again some day."

With that he smiled half sadly at her downcast face, and went striding away in the moonlight.

Once he paused to look back, kissing his hand to the girl who stood watching him. He caught the flutter of a white handkerchief, and then went on, while Lottie sped up the path to her home.

Wearily, weary months waited Lottie; a year—two years.

One July day, when all the air was fragrant with new mown hay, Lottie was sitting out in the porch picking over raspberries for tea.

Up the walk came Aunt Hannah presently. She had been making calls in the village. She sat down in the doorway to rest, and fanned herself vigorously with her handkerchief.

"Well, Charlotte," she said, "it does beat all how things come to pass."

"Why, auntie, what has come to pass now?" queried Lottie rather absently, as she dislodged a worm from a particularly fine berry.

"Why, you know," proceeded Aunt Hannah, with a slightly malicious emphasis, "I allus told you that that air Major—what's his name—Hensaw—"

"Renshawe," corrected Lottie, rather faintly, as she bent lower over her dish of raspberries.

"Well, Renshawe, I allus said he was too handsome to be honest, and I ain't no faith in his mooning around after you."

"I wasn't likely that a gay, dashing chap of such style would remember a country girl two hours after she was out of sight."

And here he is back in town stopping at the tavern with his wife, for I was in Ruth Henderson's sitting-room and seen them with my own eyes out on the piazza, walking arm in arm, her dress trailing a yard behind her, and she smiling at him the sweetest."

"Ruth said she came last night. You see, now, how well I knew him."

In the evening, Lottie, walking idly up the road, heard the click of a horse's hoofs behind her. She stepped aside, as she recognized the rider—Major Frank Renshawe!

Poor Lottie clasped her hands and watched him eagerly, unconscious that he had seen and recognized her.

He reigned his horse and dismounting, walked directly toward her.

"Well, Lottie, how do you do?" This was the most commonplace of greetings, and Lottie stared rather incoherently.

"I—I—thought you did not see me!" He laughed.

"Well, I had an impression that you were close by. Come, haven't you something to say to me after these long years? Do you not remember the old days, sweethearts?"

Lottie moved on in a very dignified way for so small a person.

Renshawe kept by her side, looking at her with a comical mixture of astonishment and dismay.

"I remember nothing that it is a weakness to remember," she said, in the coldest of voices.

But his quick glance had caught the quiver of the sweetest mouth in the world, and so after a moment's silence, he said, with great care and aside, as "Oh, then you have decided to live a life of single blessedness, like Aunt Hannah, because of the sinfulness of man?"

"For her life Lottie could not have repressed that little laugh, for Renshawe's drawl was inimitable.

"For shame, little one," he said, facing her suddenly, and forcing her to look at him. "What do you mean by treating your own true love in this fashion?"

He was laughing at her. His bonny blue eyes were full of reproachful fun. He caught her hand in his, and she could not free it.

"For shame yourself, Major Renshawe!" she flashed out at length, half crying. "What right have you to talk so to me?"

"The best of all rights, my dear; I love you."

He dropped his horse's bridle, and let the animal wander away to nibble at the grass, while he drew Lottie close to his heart.

"I have no wife, Lottie; but I have dreamed many times in the past two years of a little girl whom I would like for a wife, if she can forget that she remembers nothing that it is a weakness to remember."

"And if any one has told her that the lady at the hotel is my wife, that person has made a grand mistake, for the lady is my sister."

"You were a little goose," he said later, when Lottie told him how Aunt Hannah had cautioned and surmised.

"You were a little goose not to know that I loved you to distraction before I went away; but I did not like asking you to pledge yourself to me then, for, as a soldier, my fate was uncertain, and there would be years of dreary waiting."

"Ah! and do you think the years of waiting were not more dreary because I did not know if you cared for me?"

"Forgive me, dear," he said. "In trying to be unselfish I committed the very fault which I endeavored to avoid. But why did Aunt Hannah doubt me?"

How Bismarck Did Resign in 1877.

It will be remembered that about the end of March, 1877, a report was current that Prince Bismarck had resigned and that his resignation had been accepted by the Emperor William.

In M. Hansen's "Couilles de la Diplomatie" the following account is given of the event: The Emperor William spent the evening of Thursday, the 27th of March, in the house of Prince Anton Radzwill, who is distantly related to the royal family, and there met the Count N., who is also an intimate friend of the Radzwill family.

"Well, Count," said the Emperor, "are you going to dine of the Easter lamb with Prince Ferdinand on Easter Sunday?" "Certainly, your Majesty," replied the Count, "unless Herr Falk confiscates the lamb."

"In that case," replied the Emperor, "you need not be under any apprehension for your dinner." "I am, however, not quite certain," replied the Count; "for how can your subjects feel safe when even Her Majesty, the Empress, has to hide her charitable acts to avoid being annoyed?"

"How so, Count?" asked the Emperor. "Why, sire," replied the Count, "the Empress gave officially 200 marks (about £10) to the Ursuline Nuns who had been expelled from Berlin; but secretly she gave 1000 marks."

"But the Emperor," said the Count, "is not a man of other petty vexatious acts of Herr Falk, acting according to the orders of Prince Bismarck. The Emperor, evidently much annoyed, left early, and next day he sent for Prince Bismarck, who pleaded ill health. A second messenger ordered the Prince immediately to appear at the Castle, where he was so ill as to have to keep his bed, in which case the Emperor would call upon him. Prince Bismarck had to obey, and was closeted for more than an hour with the Emperor. On returning home, he at once sent in his resignation. — Pall Mall Gazette.

NO. 11 KEARNEY ST. San Francisco, Cal. Treats all Chronic and Special Diseases.

YOUNG MEN WHO MAY BE SUFFERING FROM

The effects of youthful follies or indiscretions, who do not know how to avail themselves of the greatest boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity, DR. SPINNEY will guarantee to forfeit $200 for every case of Seminal Weakness or private disease of any kind or character which he does not cure and fully restore.

MIDDLE-AGED MEN. There are many men at the age of thirty to thirty-five who are troubled with too frequent evacuations of the bladder, often accompanied by a slight smarting or burning sensation and a weakening of the system. In many cases the patient cannot account for it. On examining the urinary deposits aropy sediment will often be found, and sometimes small particles of albumen will appear, or the color will be of a thin milky hue, again changing to a dark and turbid appearance. There are many men who die of this difficulty, ignorant of the cause, and who sometimes avail themselves of medical aid, which is the second cause of their weakness. Dr. S. will guarantee a perfect cure in all such cases, and a healthy restoration of the genitourinary organs.

Office Hours—10 to 4 and 6 to 8. Sundays from 10 to 11 A. M. Consultation free. Thorough examination and advice, $5.

DR. SPINNEY & CO. No. 11 Kearney street, San Francisco.

P. S.—For private diseases of short standing a full course of medicine, sufficient to cure, with necessary instructions, will be sent to any address on receipt of ten dollars.
