RIVER DRIVING.

An Exciting Race Down a Slope—Both Man and Log Making for the River—Breaking a Jam—Hitched On.

Few people have any adequate idea of the dangers and discomforts attending the life of a "river driver." Four months of the year, and these during the raw and chilly Spring, when he is working from daylight till dark in the water, his clothes are often and frequently frozen for a week at a time. If he falls into the cold river in the morning, he must keep on with his work till night. Often the heat of his bed—for the riverman's etiquette teaches him that clothes are to be worn, not hung on a chair at night—is only sufficient to thaw out the garments without drying them. I talked with one of these river drivers, writes a correspondent of the Detroit Free Press. Every bit of information was given grudgingly though earnestly and with candor. He said:

"I have followed the river every Spring for twenty years, and there are nearly five streams in Michigan that I haven't gone to the bottom of.

"Dangerous business? Well, that depends on what part of the job you are working at. If you are the cook, there ain't much danger, unless the boys find pebbles in the beans or rice in the blackstrap. But if the crew are 'breaking a jam' and the old man sets you to 'hitching on,' things may be pretty lively. What are 'hitching on' and a 'roll-way'?

Ever see a high bank at a river? Well, loggers draw their logs during the winter to the highest bank of a stream they can reach, and roll them down it onto the ice below, piling them up by the thousands and tens of thousands. In the Spring these piles of logs have got to be loosened so that they will float down the river. That is what is called 'breaking a jam.' Now about 'hitching on.'

Sometimes they break a jam by prying out the logs with canthooks, and sometimes they run a rope across the river. A yoke of oxen are hitched to it and it is thrown up and a log.
The oxen are then started and 'snake out' the log. Why is that dangerous?

It often happens that one log is wedged in such a shape that it holds from fifty to a thousand others, and to save time this log must be hauled out first. Then, if the logger isn't minding his concerns when the pile starts, the whole lot is onto him in a jiffy.
If I ever meet with any accident, Yes; but the most serious accident I ever met with didn't turn out very badly. We were 'breaking a jam' at the highest roll way on the Manistee river. There were millions of logs on the bank, and it was pretty ticklish work. I hadn't had as many turns of rheumatism then as I have had since, and I called myself as limber a man as ever dodged a Norway. I was 'hitching on' and after I had been at work a while the boss, who was giving orders from across the river, sung out, 'Do you see that loose log up near the top?' I looked up.
The roll-way was about 160 feet high, and there was a big log ten or fifteen feet from the top that appeared to be loose.

"I started up over the logs with my peevy in my hands. The log was about twenty feet long, and I shoved my peevy into it to see how much work it was going to be to loosen it.
I found out I tell you. I no sooner touched her than she started like a flash of lightning down the roll-way.
There was no chance to run around the end of the log and it was too high to jump over, so the only chance I had was to turn and give her a foot-race. We were on a nearly 150 feet from the brink. The peevy was about sixty feet wide, and was pretty deep. That was in my favor, if I could only reach it. I didn't stop to calculate chances or pick nice stepping places, but I just made jumps for all I was worth, and before I'd fairly light away I'd go again, and you bet that log was right after me.
I could feel the weight from it, and it seemed every time I struck it that it was onto me. I don't believe my heart beat, or that I breathed, going down that roll-way, and I thought of every 'tear' I had ever been on, and every mean thing I had ever done. I kept ahead all right until I got within about twenty feet of the river, and then she struck me. I was in the air, and when the blow came I went like a cannon ball into the river and then to the bottom. As I came up a dozen of the boys grabbed me and brought me ashore. They had been watching me from the other bank, and when they saw me shoot out into the stream, they rushed into the water to bring out what they thought would be my corpse. But I wasn't hurt a particle though I look some time to get my belly in your own mind what the nineteenth century would be without the newspaper, and learn that every opportunity to cheer all who have anything to do with this great interest from the chief of the editorial staff down to the boy who throws in the morning and evening paper on your basement window.—[Talmage.

"Is this lady your kindred?" "Yes, yes." "A distance relative, I suppose?" "Oh, certainly; she lives about fifty miles away!"

Muskrats are, somehow, very plenty in the streets of Lyons, and so many folks are gunning for them that a man who turns a corner suddenly is quite liable to get his legs filled up with shot intended for a rat.

BREATHE THROUGH THE NOSE ALONE.

Much has been written, and very properly, too, about the necessity of sufficient ventilation in the bed chamber, sitting room and shop, and very little of the need of perfect nose ventilation; and yet the latter, always and persistently active, has a more marked influence on the health than the former. Man in a savage state and all the lower animals breathe through the nose in repose or sleep; in fact, some animals cannot breathe through the mouth. Civilized man, while he may rejoice that he has surpassed his savage brother in the nobler things of earth, can only find his freedom from lung and throat diseases and impaired voice and hearing, which are so often due to the vicious habit of breathing through the mouth. The nose is designed, in the economy of nature, to prepare the inspired air for the lungs as it passes through the winding nasal anal and pharynx by warming it, John had been standing at the window, and had heard it all. He turned and came toward me.
"Johnson Winters," says I, be you a man or not?"
"Dummit," says he, "yes, I be. I'll teach him to talk soft to my pardner right before me."
"Behind your back," says I, "I should say." But he'd already started.
"When you reach me," the feller went on, in a soft way, "a golden flood of sunshine will pour its radiance into this one-horse grocery, gild-ing the cans of tomatoes and boxes of pepper into an almost supernatural radiance. I own no power but this."
"You don't eh?" says John, as he grabbed him by the collar and proceeded to choke him. He was a small, delicate feller, and if he hadn't been addressin' me in such a plaguety manner (me, a married woman) I never would have stood by and seen John shake him across that grocery the way he did; but I experienced a real mean sense of delight.
John had mopped out the middle of the grocery floor with him in good shape, and then he flung him out of the door, which I opened for him.
"There," says he, "I'll teach you to make love to my wife!" and he rapped him against the lamp post. I dunno what he would have done, but a policeman came along and seized 'em both. He shook 'em like a couple of school boys in a fight, and wanted to know what the trouble was anyhow.
"A trouble," says John, "Why, that rascal called my wife a darling, and his love and told her to come out there where he was."
"I didn't," says the feller, wiping the blood from his nose.
"You did," says John, "and I can prove it. Didn't he, Philury?"
"Yes," says I, "Young man, you did; you used shameful language to me, a woman old enough to be your mother."
"Explain," says the police to the feller,
"or I'll take you both to the lockup."
"Why," says he, most cryin', "I was telephonin' my girl, that's all.
There's a private line up to the house, and I was talking to her. I forgot that anybody was round."
"It's a lie!" exclaimed John. "You called her by name—Philury."
"I didn't," says the feller. "Her name's Florrie, and I called her so—Heavens," says he, lookin' at me—
"did you think when I called her my love and my darling that I was talking to that old squaw?"
"Come, John," says I, startin' for home. "It's time we were goin'." He's changed mighty sudden from hot to cold, and I dunno what he'll call me next, and we locked arms, leavin' the police roarin' with laughter.
"Good-by," called out the grocery feller. "Call again some afternoon when business is dull."
But I pretended not to hear and so did John.—[Aunt Philura in Boston

COURTING AUNT PHILURA.

We went to the corner grocery.
There was only one fellow in, and after he'd been forward and found out we didn't want anything, he went out in the back end of the store and stood around—and we didn't pay no more attention. I was lookin' at some coconuts, and wonderin' how much they was a dozen, when I heard a bell ring somewhere, and the feller in the end of the store called out:
"My dear Flury! Hallo, darling!"
I didn't answer him, I was too astonished.

"Come down here, my darling," he went on. "I'm all alone, and shall be for half an hour at least."
I was too dumfounded to speak, though I could 'a' shook the impudent puppy.

"Never mind what they say," the feller went on. "Come right along to the one who has no solace in life but thee, my love. Until you come, life will be a cold, desolate existence."
John had been standing at the window, and had heard it all. He turned and came toward me.
"Johnson Winters," says I, be you

LEAVING ARKANSAS.

THE PUGET SOUND MAIL.

La Conner, W. T.

JAMES POWER, PROPRIETOR.

SAURDAY, JULY 7, 1883.

The Oregon Improvement Company have recently purchased from the Pacific Mail Steamship Company the steamships Costa Rica and China. It is reported that the former will be put on the Sound route.

The last spike of the Northern Pacific Railroad is of solid gold, and will be driven with a silver sledge—probably during the last week of August. Many persons have been invited to be present on the occasion. President Villard will strike the first blow. The place selected is ten miles from Helena.

Oro's constitution, adopted in 1850, contained this clause: "No license to traffic in intoxicating liquors shall hereafter be granted in this State, but the General Assembly may by law provide against evils resulting therefrom." It was supposed to be prohibitory, but it failed, and for thirty years Ohio has had "free trade in liquors." Every attempt made to tax the traffic has been declared illegal up to the present time, but the Supreme Court has just sustained the carefully devised statute known as the "Secret Law," which authorizes "annual assessments upon the liquor traffic. Under it each saloon will be taxed $200 yearly. The principle of taxation having been thus affirmed, future Legislatures may increase the annual assessment.

Mr. WATTERSON, finding Mr. Tilden immersed at Greystone in pigs, poultry and blooded stock, asks him if he tries to make any money out of farming, to which Mr. T. replies: "Oh, yes. I can make it much easier some other way." Very fortunate for Mr. Tilden, but a sad commentary on the recompense of the farmer's toil. Tilling the soil is an honorable occupation, much sung of by poets and commended in good books, but it's not the road by which purses are quickly filled. Young men bred within a few miles of New York leave ancestral acres and come to the city because they can "make money faster." Forest growth ten feet in height now grows on acres where corn was cultivated forty years ago within less than fifteen miles of New York.

THE PEOPLE'S RAILWAY COMPANY OF AMERICA.—A meeting of capitalists was recently held at Indianapolis in the interests of a new railroad scheme of enormous proportions, the substance of which is as follows: Two double-track narrow-gauge roads are to be built, traversing the country in opposite directions from New York to San Francisco, and from Chicago to New Orleans, or from ocean to ocean and from lake to gulf. Eight series of stock of $25,000,000 each are to be issued, and the bonded debt on the double track road, properly equipped, is to be $20,000,000 to the mile, and on a single track $12,000,000. Indiana will be allowed but 100 stockholders, and the organizers of the scheme say that 75 of these stockholders can be residents of Indianapolis. The new company is to be known as the People's Railroad Company of America. Every employee of the company is to be a stockholder, and the profits are to be divided up on this basis. It is said that California capitalists are willing to advance money to get the colossal scheme in active operation.

Coupeville Correspondence.

Edron Mail.—It is an interesting time with us farmers at present. A drought is upon us that has already cut off about a quarter of the average crop; how much more it is after remains to be seen. Last season, on the 16th, 18th, 20th and 21st of June, we had copious rains, which was a guarantee of a bountiful harvest; this month has passed, with us this month, with none. Fruit is also short. I think taking the whole country together, it will not exceed a quarter crop. Whether the drought is the cause I know not. There is springing up here a mania for horse racing. Last Friday we had a race, and now we are looking for one to come off Saturday next between William Baller's horse Primo and a mare belonging to J. Eby, from Oak Harbor. They run for $100 a race, and outside of that the betting will be spirited for this place. I am now raising chickens by artificial hatching. I think I have the cheapest and best incubator made, and the only practical brooder for this climate in existence. Having so many inquiries for information concerning my incubator and brooder, I have had a book of instructions printed, and I sell them at $3 each.

We are having no railroad boom here at present; consequently we are permitted to drink our regular allowance of milk, and sleep. How in Whatcom county do you get your road tax? Here, about three-fourths of the land is held by non-residents. The law says we shall notify by letter or verbally. How can our supervisors do so, not knowing their addresses? Is there any other way of notification provided? If not, why not? We residents are doing all the road work, and the non-residents are reaping the benefits in the enhanced value of their property. It appears as by the late law that the County Commissioners have nothing to do with the road money, unless they levy a special tax for road or bridge purposes. All moneys collected go to the supervisors, to be expended in the road districts where assessed, and all not paid to the supervisor, on proper notification, is returned delinquent, when 25 percent is added by the Auditor and charged to the sheriff for collection, the same as other delinquent taxes; then it goes to the Treasurer, from him to the supervisor, to be expended in his district. This is good so far, but now we want a provision so that we can notify where we are unable to obtain the names or addresses of property holders. Let our law-makers make this point clear, and we will have good roads. All the taxes in my road district visible thus far is but five dollars to the mile of road to be worked. Give us a plain way to collect the tax from non-residents, and that tax will be trouble. A. W. ARNOLD.

The new auxiliary steamship George S. Homer will shortly be placed on the route between San Francisco and Tacoma.

COZY KISS.

"I hate a tunnel!" the maiden said, And closer to the drummer drew. "They always make me feel afraid Of some disaster don't they you?" And then the drummer shook his mane, "You're safe enough with me," said he; "Whatever happens to the train, You always can rely on me!"

And, with ear-splitting whistle's shriek, The train plunged in the black abyss; The drummer sought her blooming cheek, And freckled it with many a kiss. Emboldened by her sweet alarm, He laid her head upon his arm, And tried a dodo on her lips.

"Ah, me!" the maiden sweetly smiled, As she arranged her tumbled hair; And once again the sunbeams fled In at the window where they sat: "Ah, me!" for once that horrid peep, Was robbed of every startling fear, I thank you for your interest, Excuse me, sir; I get of here!"

And so she left him drowned in sighs, And on the sea of soft dreams tossed, Of her sweet lips and pure bright eyes, So quickly and so blithely lost. To dream but, ah, at last to wake And learn that in the tunnel's din, She'd seized upon her chosen mate His watch and chain and diamond pin!

THE OLD SPYGLASS.

Uncle Silas had a rickety, old-fashioned spyglass that he kept in a sail loft on the end of a decaying wharf, where he stored the spars and sails of his boats in winter-time. The loft was warmed by a rusty, tin-shed, sheet-iron stove. There were no chairs in it, only one or two benches. Uncle generally sat on the floor when he was patching the sails. For a tumbler he used what sailors call a palm, which is a leather band with a central piece of steel punctured like a tumbler. With this he pressed the large spike like needle through the heavy canvas.

There was always a number of old sea-captains or fishermen or sea-going lads whiling away the time in Uncle Silas' sail loft, telling their experience or listening to stories of the sea. Or they would talk about their favorite ships, or look out of a small square-shaped window, shaped like a port-hole, at the vessels gliding into the harbor.

They often used the old rickety spyglass, which threatened to fall to pieces every time it was taken up, and the glasses were of such a quality that they could see the masts of the ships in the distance. Uncle generally sat on the floor when he was patching the sails. For a tumbler he used what sailors call a palm, which is a leather band with a central piece of steel punctured like a tumbler. With this he pressed the large spike like needle through the heavy canvas.

A MALARIAL VICTIM.

To the Editor.

The following circumstances, drawn from my personal experience, are so important and really remarkable that I have felt called upon to make them public. Their truth can be amply verified.

In 1875, I moved from Canton, St. Lawrence county, N. Y., to Florida, which State I intended to make my future residence. I purchased a home on the banks of the St. John's river, and settled down, as I thought, for life. The summer following the first winter I was conscious of most peculiar sensations which seemed to be the accompaniment of a change of climate. I felt a sinking at the pit of the stomach, accompanied by occasional dizziness and nausea. My head ached. My limbs pained me and I had an oppressive sense of weariness. I had a thirst for acids, and my appetite was weak and uncertain. My digestion was impaired and my food did not assimilate. At first I imagined it was the effort of nature to become acclimated, and so I thought little of it. But my troubles increased until I became restless and feverish, and the physicians informed me I was suffering from malarial fever. This continued in spite of all the best physicians could do, and I kept growing steadily worse. In the year 1880 my physicians informed me a change of climate was absolutely necessary—that I could not survive another summer in the South. I determined to return North, but not to the extreme portion, and so took up my residence at Upper Sandusky in Central Ohio. The change did not work the desired cure and I again consulted physicians. I found they were unable to effect a permanent well and wholesome recovery. Warm weather of summer came on and I grew so much worse that I gave up all hope. At that time I was suffering terribly. How badly, only those can appreciate who have contracted malarial disease in tropical regions. It seemed as if death would be a relief greater than any other blessing. But notwithstanding all this, I am happy to state that I am today a perfectly well and healthy man. How I came to recover so remarkably can be understood from the following card voluntarily published by me in the Sandusky, O. Republican, entitled:

HONOR TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE.

EDITORS REPUBLICAN: During my recent visit to Upper Sandusky, so many inquiries were made relative to what medicine or course of treatment had brought such a marked change in my system, I feel it to be due to the proprietors and to the public to state that Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure accomplished for me what other medicines and physicians had failed to do. The malarial poison which had worked its way so thoroughly through my system during my five years' residence in Florida had brought me to the verge of the grave, and physicians had pronounced my case incurable; but that is not to be wondered at, as it was undoubtedly one of the worst on record. Though the waters of your city, called my attention to the medicine referred to, and induced me to try a few bottles. So marked was the change after four weeks' trial that I continued its use, and now, after three months, the cure is complete. This is not written for the benefit of Warner & Co., but for the public, and especially for any person troubled with malarial or bilious attacks.

Such is the statement I made, without solicitation, after my recovery, and such I stand by at the present moment. I am convinced that Warner's Safe Cure is all it is claimed to be, and as such deserve the great favor it has received. A remedy which can cure the severest case of tropical malaria of five years' standing certainly cannot fail to cure those minor malarial troubles which are so prevalent in our country.

ALFRED DAY.

Woodstock, O., May 10, 1883.

A man is never so fortunate or so unfortunate as he thinks.

ONE NEVER TO RETURN.

GARDNER, ME.—Mr. Daniel Gray, a prominent lumber merchant, writes that his wife had severe rheumatic pains; so severe as to render her unable to sleep. From the first application of the famous German Remedy, relief, and in two hours the pain had entirely gone.

"If you feel angry, beware lest you become revengeful."

"One man's meat is another man's poison." Kidney-Wort expels the poisonous humors, cleanses the blood, and restores to clean blood. For internal cleansing and renovating, no other medicine is equal to Kidney-Wort. In either dry or liquid form it cures headache, bilious attacks, constipation, and deranged kidneys.

SCIENCE AND INVENTION.

Archil, the new dyestuff, is now put in the market in the form of paste, and is employed in wood and silk in an acid bath by means of sulphuric acid and sulphate of soda. The shades obtained differ very little from those had by means of archil, but are slightly yellower. With equal prices, the substitute is said to be richer in color than archil, and also faster.

Several Belgian firms are now making what is known as satin paper. There is little doubt that the process consists in coating ordinary paper with a glue solution and then shaking colored asbestos over the mass. The asbestos takes all colors readily. This is thought to be especially valuable for wall papers, as the silk imitation has a very rich effect.

A convention bill for the use of merchants and others has been patented by Mr. P. J. Wicks of Sutterville, N. J. The book is divided, and one portion is provided with a spring which prevents the bills from getting disengaged from the book without a pressure against the spring, when the bill required may be withdrawn without disturbing the other bills.

There has been a striking example of man's ingenuity in England. Several years ago salt deposits were found near Middlesborough, at a depth of 1,200 feet, all efforts to make it an industrial success failed until recently, when wells were sunk, and in them two tubes are placed, one within the other, so that a circular space is left between them. Into this circular space water is poured, which dissolves the salt, and the brine thus formed and subsequently pumped out fields about 150 tons of salt a week when evaporated.

Dynamite is one of the many products or combinations of nitro-glycerine, and is about thirteen times as powerful as gunpowder. It consists of a combination of nitro-glycerine with a substance of great absorbent power, such for instance as fuller's earth or rotten stone. By this composition the explosiveness of the nitro-glycerine is controlled, as it were, and the compound is capable of withstanding all the ordinary dangers of transportation, while at the same time its explosive power is not lessened. The process of manufacture is very simple. You take a certain proportion of nitric and sulphuric acid and mix them with certain other proportions of glycerine, which is the essence of that, to make the nitro-glycerine. To make dynamite you only need to mix nitro-glycerine with some absorbent material—fuller's earth is the best—to have dynamite.

Agriculturists claim the sunflower to be the best egg producing food known for poultry, keeping them in a thriving condition and largely increasing the production of eggs. Every poultry raiser who tries it will find that this seed is the best food known for glossing the plumage of fowls, and is almost indispensable to those who want to fit their birds for exhibition to the best advantage. The Russian sunflower is easily raised, requires very little care, can be grown in fence corners, or other places difficult to cultivate. Its production of seed is immense, yielding often at the rate of one hundred bushels to the acre. It should be planted in hills four feet apart, any time from the 10th of May to the 1st of July. Three quarts of seed will plant an acre.

Mr. Rowland Berry, of Gosforth, Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, has obtained a patent for an accordion based upon the principle that any animal scale is so related to another whose keynote is three full tones distant from the keynote of the former that the first six natural notes of the former scale are identical with the five accidentals of the latter, together with the seventh natural note of the latter scale. The instrument has two sets of keys, one set being connected with reeds which give the first six natural tones of the diatonic scale in each octave, and the other set connected with reeds which give the accidentals and the seventh natural note of the scale.

COZY KISS.

"I hate a tunnel!" the maiden said, And closer to the drummer drew. "They always make me feel afraid Of some disaster don't they you?" And then the drummer shook his mane, "You're safe enough with me," said he; "Whatever happens to the train, You always can rely on me!"

And, with ear-splitting whistle's shriek, The train plunged in the black abyss; The drummer sought her blooming cheek, And freckled it with many a kiss. Emboldened by her sweet alarm, He laid her head upon his arm, And tried a dodo on her lips.

"Ah, me!" the maiden sweetly smiled, As she arranged her tumbled hair; And once again the sunbeams fled In at the window where they sat: "Ah, me!" for once that horrid peep, Was robbed of every startling fear, I thank you for your interest, Excuse me, sir; I get of here!"

And so she left him drowned in sighs, And on the sea of soft dreams tossed, Of her sweet lips and pure bright eyes, So quickly and so blithely lost. To dream but, ah, at last to wake And learn that in the tunnel's din, She'd seized upon her chosen mate His watch and chain and diamond pin!

THE OLD SPYGLASS.

Uncle Silas had a rickety, old-fashioned spyglass that he kept in a sail loft on the end of a decaying wharf, where he stored the spars and sails of his boats in winter-time. The loft was warmed by a rusty, tin-shed, sheet-iron stove. There were no chairs in it, only one or two benches. Uncle generally sat on the floor when he was patching the sails. For a tumbler he used what sailors call a palm, which is a leather band with a central piece of steel punctured like a tumbler. With this he pressed the large spike like needle through the heavy canvas.

There was always a number of old sea-captains or fishermen or sea-going lads whiling away the time in Uncle Silas' sail loft, telling their experience or listening to stories of the sea. Or they would talk about their favorite ships, or look out of a small square-shaped window, shaped like a port-hole, at the vessels gliding into the harbor.

They often used the old rickety spyglass, which threatened to fall to pieces every time it was taken up, and the glasses were of such a quality that they could see the masts of the ships in the distance. Uncle generally sat on the floor when he was patching the sails. For a tumbler he used what sailors call a palm, which is a leather band with a central piece of steel punctured like a tumbler. With this he pressed the large spike like needle through the heavy canvas.

A MALARIAL VICTIM.

To the Editor.

The following circumstances, drawn from my personal experience, are so important and really remarkable that I have felt called upon to make them public. Their truth can be amply verified.

In 1875, I moved from Canton, St. Lawrence county, N. Y., to Florida, which State I intended to make my future residence. I purchased a home on the banks of the St. John's river, and settled down, as I thought, for life. The summer following the first winter I was conscious of most peculiar sensations which seemed to be the accompaniment of a change of climate. I felt a sinking at the pit of the stomach, accompanied by occasional dizziness and nausea. My head ached. My limbs pained me and I had an oppressive sense of weariness. I had a thirst for acids, and my appetite was weak and uncertain. My digestion was impaired and my food did not assimilate. At first I imagined it was the effort of nature to become acclimated, and so I thought little of it. But my troubles increased until I became restless and feverish, and the physicians informed me I was suffering from malarial fever. This continued in spite of all the best physicians could do, and I kept growing steadily worse. In the year 1880 my physicians informed me a change of climate was absolutely necessary—that I could not survive another summer in the South. I determined to return North, but not to the extreme portion, and so took up my residence at Upper Sandusky in Central Ohio. The change did not work the desired cure and I again consulted physicians. I found they were unable to effect a permanent well and wholesome recovery. Warm weather of summer came on and I grew so much worse that I gave up all hope. At that time I was suffering terribly. How badly, only those can appreciate who have contracted malarial disease in tropical regions. It seemed as if death would be a relief greater than any other blessing. But notwithstanding all this, I am happy to state that I am today a perfectly well and healthy man. How I came to recover so remarkably can be understood from the following card voluntarily published by me in the Sandusky, O. Republican, entitled:

HONOR TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE.

EDITORS REPUBLICAN: During my recent visit to Upper Sandusky, so many inquiries were made relative to what medicine or course of treatment had brought such a marked change in my system, I feel it to be due to the proprietors and to the public to state that Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure accomplished for me what other medicines and physicians had failed to do. The malarial poison which had worked its way so thoroughly through my system during my five years' residence in Florida had brought me to the verge of the grave, and physicians had pronounced my case incurable; but that is not to be wondered at, as it was undoubtedly one of the worst on record. Though the waters of your city, called my attention to the medicine referred to, and induced me to try a few bottles. So marked was the change after four weeks' trial that I continued its use, and now, after three months, the cure is complete. This is not written for the benefit of Warner & Co., but for the public, and especially for any person troubled with malarial or bilious attacks.

Such is the statement I made, without solicitation, after my recovery, and such I stand by at the present moment. I am convinced that Warner's Safe Cure is all it is claimed to be, and as such deserve the great favor it has received. A remedy which can cure the severest case of tropical malaria of five years' standing certainly cannot fail to cure those minor malarial troubles which are so prevalent in our country.
