The G. R. & N. Co.'s Business.

A Chicago dispatch of the 11th says: President Villard of the Oregon Railway & Navigation Company has just issued his annual report to the stockholders. It is shown in the report that the company has, during the past year, completed 250 miles of standard gauge road, and before Jan. 1st next, Mr. Villard expects fully 330 miles of new road will be completed. The report also shows that the company has constructed 1,464 feet of Howe truss and 11,268 feet of trestle, and a large bridge over Snake river, two miles below Texas Ferry, representing an aggregate length of 1,416 feet in the project of construction. All questions of right of way have been settled at a comparative small cost to the company and with scarcely any litigation. The report also shows that the company has been made under existing contracts, the railroad equipment of the company will consist of 5 locomotives, 18 passenger cars, 4 Pullman sleeping cars, 2 baggage cars, 2 combined baggage and express cars, 900 covered freight cars, 500 flat cars, 100 flat cars, 100 stock cars and 40 hand cars. There was expended during the year the following sums:

For railroad construction.....$4,247,465 14

For other constructions..... 244,354 91

For railroad equipment..... 296,558 80

For other equipments..... 116,680 74

The several lines operated by this company represent a total of 1,591 miles. The business of the company for the year is as follows:

Receipts from all sources.....$9,500,620

Total disbursements..... 8,014,390

Traffic (gross earnings)..... 8,730,245

Operating expenses, including taxes..... 2,063,383

Showing net earnings of..... 1,666,861

For 1879-1880 the corresponding results were:

Gross earnings.....$2,989,701

Operating expenses..... 1,332,241

Net earnings..... 1,657,460

Against 147,817 passengers and 379,840 tons of freight carried in 1880-1881 167,787 passengers and 623,025 tons of freight, showing an increase of 19,970 passengers and 233,181 tons of freight. The report enlarges somewhat on the consolidation recently effected with the Northern Pacific railroad and transfer of controlling power over both corporations to a third corporation, the Oregon Transcontinental Company in the other companies is the best guarantee to the latter that their power will be exercised to promote their legitimate development to the fullest extent, or, in other words, that the new company can only promote its own interest as a great holder of Oregon Railroad & Navigation and N. P. stocks by taking the best care of every other stockholder in both companies.

Saved by a Shadow.

The scout was surrounded. He took in everything at a glance and determined to cut his way through and risk the chances. But the ladies represented to him that this was certain death. They could conceal him and S— assumed. The young ladies acted promptly. One ran to the window and asked who was there, while another closed the back door—that in front being already fastened. S— was then hurried up the stairs, one of the ladies accompanying him to show him his hiding place. All had taken place in a few moments, and the Federal troops gave sudden evidence of their estimate of S—. They fired a volley through the front door and the bullets whistled by the young ladies. Then the door was burst in and the troopers swarmed into the house.

S— had been conducted to a garret bare of all furniture, but some planks lay upon the sleepers of the ceiling, and by lying down on these and directing conceal himself. S— mounted quietly and stretched himself at full length, and the young lady retired and returned to the lower floor. From his perch S— then heard all that was said in the hall beneath.

"Where is the guerrilla?" exclaimed the Federal officer commanding the detachment.

"What guerrilla?" asked one of the ladies.

"The rascal S—."

"He was here, but he has gone."

"That is untrue," the officer said, "and I am not to be trifled with. I shall search the house. But first read the orders to the men," he added, turning to a Sergeant.

The Sergeant obeyed, and S— distinctly overheard the reading of his death warrant. The paper chronicled his exploits, denounced him as a guerrilla and outlaw, and directed that he should not be taken alive; that the men were expressly ordered to kill him, not to take him prisoner. This was not reassuring to the scout concealed under the rafters above.

It was probable that he would be discovered, in which case death would follow. There was but one thing to do—to sell his life dearly. After ransacking every room on the first and second floors, the Federal troops ascended to the garret, in which S— had attempted to divert their attention from it, but one of them asked:

"What room is that up there?"

"The garret," was the reply.

"He may be there—show us the way."

"Yes, see the way," returned the young lady; "I do not wish to go up in the dust; it would soil my dress."

"You go before, then," said the trooper to a negro girl who had been made to carry about a lighted candle, for night was now on. The girl laughed and said: "There was nobody up there," but at the other went up stairs to the garret, followed by the troopers.

The decisive moment had come. S— heard the tramp feet and cocked both his pistols. The light streamed into the garret, and looking over the edge of his plank he saw the garret fill with troopers. All seemed over and his discovery certain; he was about to spring down and fire, when he saw the girl kneeling. "Hail, heroes, nothing here," and went down the stairs again. The servant girl had saved him by a ruse. She had taken her stand directly beneath the board plank upon which S— was concealed, and the deep shadow had concealed him. To this ruse he doubtless owed his life. An hour afterwards the Federal detachment left the house in extreme ill-humor, and before morning S— was miles away from the dangerous locality where he had overheard the ladies and heard the names of one of the leading clergymen in Virginia.

An English Noblewoman's Romance.

An exciting and romantic life came to a close at Damascus on the 12th of August, when the wife of the Sheikh Medjjoel, a local celebrity known to all travelers, passed away at the ripe age of seventy-five. Damascus, indeed, once wore an English coronet, and came of the famous English race of Sir Kellogg Digby, a scion of which not long ago married the daughter of Mr. Grosbeck, of Cincinnati. She was the only daughter of Admiral Sir Henry Digby, and was two years older than her brother, the present Lord Digby. When a girl of 17 she married as his second wife the second Lord Ellenborough, afterwards known in English politics as "the will elephant," who was made Earl of Ellenborough on his return from the Governor-Generalship of India in 1844. The marriage was an unhappy one from the first. One child was born to the ill-matched pair—a son—who died when but two years old, in 1839. In that same year London society was electrified by the elopement of Lady Ellenborough with Prince Felix Schwarzenberg, then a handsome and dashing young Austrian diplomat who, twenty years afterwards, proved himself to be both a soldier and a statesman, and rescued the house of Hapsburg from the revolutionary abyss of 1848. Lord Ellenborough obtained a divorce from his wife by special act of Parliament, allowing her a large income. She continued to live abroad, and a few years after her elopement with Prince Schwarzenberg she married in Bavaria the Baron Von Venningen. Him too she deserted, and then led a strange life of "between the Alps and the Mediterranean." How many times she was married in Europe is not well ascertained, but about the year 1850 she went to the east. There she traveled from Palmyra to Damascus under the escort of the Sheikh Medjjoel, who for many years has monopolized the best travelers between those spots, and started him on their arrival at Damascus with the information that she intended to marry him. The Sheikh took to flight and made for the desert, but the determined lady followed him, overtook him and married him duly according to Bedouin rites, there being no witnesses to the ceremony except his Arab companions. She purchased in his name splendid houses and gardens in Damascus, where she has ever since resided during part of the year, spending several months annually in the desert in her husband's tent. Stormy as her earlier life had been, her latter days were calm and contented. Her last and most extraordinary marriage proved a happy one. In Damascus she became the idol of the poor Mahometan residents, who found in her the kindest of friends and counsellors, and amid them she has died at last respected and beloved. Unlike her prototype, Lady Hester Stanhope, "Lady Digby"—so she called herself—never became a Mahometan but was of late years a regular attendant at the English service of the Damascus mission for the conversion of the Jews.—[Toronto Globe.

Over Two Billion Birds in One Flock.

The passenger pigeon is one of the most wonderful of birds. Wilson's description of their camping grounds is: "As soon as the young were fully grown, and before they had their nests, numerous parties of the inhabitants from all parts of the country came with wagons, oxen, beds, cooking utensils, many of them accompanied by the greater part of their families, and encamped for several days on the banks of the river. Several of them informed us that the noise in the woods was so great as to terrify their horses, and that it was difficult for one person to hear another speak without standing in his ear. The ground was strewn with branches, broken limbs, eggs and young squab pigeons which had been precipitated from above, and on which herds of hogs were fattening. Hawks, buzzards and eagles were sailing about in great numbers, and seizing the squabs from their nests at pleasure. While from twenty feet upward to the top of the trees the view through the trees presented a perpetual tumult of crowding and fluttering multitudes of pigeons, with the crash of falling trees. It is utterly impossible to estimate the number that congregated together. On some trees more than 300 nests were found, and the branches were continually falling, owing to the weight of the old birds. The amount consumed by a flock of these birds is wonderful. Wilson calculates that taking the breadth of a column of pigeons he saw to be only one mile, its length to be 240 miles, and to contain one billion pigeons. The square yard taking no account of the several strata of birds one above the other, and that each bird consumes half a pint of food daily, all of which assumptions are below the actual amount, the quantity of corn eaten in a day would be 17,000,000 bushels. Supposing this column to be one mile in breadth, and flying at the rate of one mile a minute for four hours, and supposing that each square yard contains three pigeons, the square yard in which the whole mass multiplied by three, would give 2,320,320,000 birds! In the Kentucky country, where they are mostly found, the appear suddenly, darkening the sky so completely that all work and labor is given up until they are dispersed. The air is literally filled with pigeons, and in some places mortars are used to bring down hundreds at one discharge. Their rapidity of flight is wonderful.

Something About Dr. Boynton.

Dr. Boynton is a man of independent fortune, his wealth being estimated at more than $400,000. For many years he has had one of the largest practices in Cleveland, his professional income having been from $15,000 upward yearly. For some years also he has filled with great acceptance the professorship of physiology in the Homeopathic Hospital College at Cleveland, one of the oldest and best medical schools of the West. He is a homeopathist of what is known as the liberal school; that is, he believes in practicing to cure his patients. For many years he has been closely associated with Dr. Schneider, of Cleveland, who for a long time has had charge of the surgery of the Lake Shore Railroad, and whose reputation as a successful practicing surgeon is excellent. Dr. Boynton is still in the prime of intellectual life, being forty-six years of age. Being, however, somewhat broken in health, he decided last spring to retire from active practice and devote himself to less engrossing pursuits. With this in mind he disposed of his practice, getting for it one of the largest sums ever paid for a clientele of this sort in the west, and started for Kansas, where he thought of embarking some of his capital in stock raising. He had scarcely reached the State, however, before he was asked by President and Mrs. Garfield to attend her in her sick illness last spring. Laying aside his business enterprises, he obeyed the call and remained with the family till the most serious stage of the illness was passed. He was called west again by the terrible railroad accident which brought upon him a crushing personal affliction, and while this blow was still fresh, the news came that his cousin, the President had been assassinated. In this connection it may be well to state the precise relationship of the doctor and the late President. Their fathers were half-brothers and married sisters. They are therefore full first cousins on their mothers' side and half cousins on their fathers' side. They were born in Orange township, Cuyahoga county, Ohio, were classmates in boyhood, and have been life-long and intimate friends.—[Washington cor. N. Y. Evening Post.

Why the Scottish Yacht Wins.

It is not time our yachtsmen should appreciate that the Madge is in perfect racing condition and that the yachts she beat were not. For instance, she is a more shell, without bulkheads, berths or anything that goes to merely contribute to the comfort of those who sail in her, and to embarrass her speed. She has lead ballast; she has no bulwarks, so that any water which comes on her deck runs off at once, as it would off a turtle's back. She has a new and perfectly fitting hull of sail spread on new racing spars; she has a captain and crew that have been in her since she was built, and are thoroughly used to her, and she is coppers. The American boats have sailed simply in cruising rig. They have cabins below, appliances for cooking and berths for sleeping. Their sails are old, and from long use don't fit well. Their ballast is scrap iron and paving stones; they have high bulwarks, and water comes aboard so that their boats have to be carried to leeward and it can gradually run off through the scuppers, and they have been sailed by men entirely new to them. Put the American boats under the same conditions as the Madge, i. e., rip everything out of them below, waving nothing but the shell of the hull; replace their scrap iron and paving stone with lead moulders to fit the frames; give them proper spars and new sails; copper them; cut off their bulwarks; put men in them that have been used to sailing them, and they'll beat the Madge six days out of seven. In the condition the American boats have been raced it is wonderful that they have done as well as they have.

A Dramatic Scene in Paris.

A scene of the most dramatic character occurred last night at the Elysee, Montmartre. Charles Lullier, a returned convict, had been summoned by a revolutionary committee to defend himself against the charges of having in 1871 several occasions betrayed the cause of the commune. His chief accuser was an ex-communist named Malon, with whom it may be remembered, Lullier lately had a violent public altercation. Three thousand people, among them Lissony and many other men prominent in the insurrection of 1871, were present. Tony Revillon presided, Malon being obliged to leave last night for Switzerland, the charges were read, and Lullier, a friend of Lullier attempted to speak in his defence, but could not get a hearing. Lullier himself, pale, haggard, but defiant, then rose, and amid the furious yells and imprecations of the commune, for he never pretended to serve it. The rest of his speech was drowned in indignant shouts, which made it almost impossible to hear what was being said. At one o'clock in the morning a resolution was carried, with only one dissenting voice, branding Lullier as a traitor, and the meeting dispersed. Lullier, who for a time seemed to be in absolute bodily peril, was hustled out by the police, and surrounded by the hisses and savage threats of his erstwhile friends. The whole affair remained one of an incident in the French revolution.—[Paris, October 1, dispatch to Boston Herald.

A Duel at Night.

One of the most tragic events that mark the narrow strip between civilization and barbarism, occurred at Chama, New Mexico, recently. The parties to the affair were Charles Keiser and William Whitson (Tex.) two southern boys, who paid the forfeit imposed by duty and pride. Tex held the position of town marshal. Keiser was carrying a pistol, contrary to the notions posted around, and Tex made an effort for several minutes to do this, he proposed a duel at ten steps. Keiser accepted the challenge. It was nearly 11 o'clock P. M., but the night was clear. Telling Keiser to be ready, Tex stepped off ten paces, and turning the firing commenced. At the first fire Keiser shot Tex almost through the heart. As Tex stumbled to his knees and fell, he fired four times one ball passing through Keiser's body just above the naval. When we got to them Tex was about dead. Keiser lived half an hour. William Whitson was a native of Texas—a state that has furnished more "border heroes" than any other. Charles Keiser was from Odessa, Mo. Both were young (neither of them more than twenty-five), both warm hearted and true as steel. Duty caused Tex to lose his life, while Keiser lost his through unyielding pride. Both had many friends, and were really good friends themselves.—[Denver News.

An Affectionate Husband.—The latest exhibition of a husband's affection occurred in New York the other day, where a saloon-keeper, unable to express his disapproval of his wife in his own person, set a bloodhound on her. The beast tore her arm and neck in the most savage and cruel manner. She owns the store and supports her husband, she says, but he drinks all day, spends all her money, which "makes her mad," and comes home drunk and crazy at night. She explained a crack in the counter by saying that she must by a new one, as her husband split that with the axe. He broke the door and stripped the paper off the wall. "He costs more money than he is worth." But, in spite of his being so expensive a luxury, she pitied him and refused to appear against him. In consequence, he will soon be out of jail, with fresh debauches, a new axe and another bloodhound, will contrive that she, at least, shall not lead a dull and idle life.

PUGET SOUND MAIL,
La Conner, W. T.

JAMES POWER, PROPRIETOR.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1881.

ANOTHER CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION is called for by a memorial to Congress by the present Legislature. This memorial, it is said, has passed both branches of the Legislature with so much unanimity that there appears to be no mistaking the fact that there is no little dissatisfaction among the representatives of the people with the work of the convention of nearly four years ago. The principal objection is of a political nature—i. e., that it would be unjust to the eastern portion of the Territory to be admitted on the legislative apportionment, of that date. It is claimed by the people of Eastern Washington and admitted on this side that they have outgrown us in population, but we may reasonably deny that the difference is material—certainly not worth the expense and delay of holding another constitutional convention. There may be some other objections to the present constitution, but they are of no special gravity, and hence not worthy of consideration at this important juncture—just as we knock at the doors of Congress for admission into the Union. In view of this state of facts, it appears incredible to us that there should be any such ado as formally memorializing Congress for another enabling act made about the matter. This memorial should be recalled. We would caution our east of the mountain friends to "go slow." The time is not far distant when the population which the manufacturers and commerce of Puget Sound will call into action will overwhelm and outvote them two to one. We would not threaten retaliation, and yet this is what they may reasonably expect if they persist in now throwing these obstructions in the onward progress of this enterprising and ambitious young commonwealth. We counsel mutual forbearance and harmony between the two great divisions of our Territory both now and hereafter. We see no occasion whatever for contention, except the matter of United States Senators, the election of which will devolve upon the first State Legislature, before any change can be effected in the apportionment. But there certainly must be mutual concession on that point. Eastern Washington should have one and Puget Sound the other. Our present very worthy Delegate, for various reasons should, and doubtless will, be the choice of his section for this distinguished honor; while there will yet remain a Representative to toss up for. We have so many able statesmen on the Sound that we shall refrain from indicating our Senator, and the possible contingency of the Representative, whose selection will devolve on the people at large. So let us all unite on the question of admission, secure the same at the earliest practicable moment, and then set about amending the constitution in any particular that the people in their wisdom may deem essential.

THE GUILTY TRIAL progresses slowly but probably as fast as could reasonably be expected. The evidence for the prosecution is about closed, but it is difficult to tell how long it will take to hear that of the defense, as witnesses are summoned in his behalf from all parts of the country. The evidence for the prosecution was mainly a recital of the scene at the depot the morning of the shooting, pretty full accounts of which were published in the papers at the time. The evidence for the defense will be confined chiefly to proving Giteau's insanity, and malpractice of Garfield's physicians. They admit the shooting but not the killing. Giteau was shot at as he was being driven from the court to jail last Saturday, but was only slightly hurt in the wrig or arm, which he insists is conclusive evidence that he is under the special protection of the Almighty. In fact he has insisted right along that his attempted assassination of Garfield was inspired by Divine Providence, and that He will protect him from all harm.

CHESAPEAKE Bay and its tributaries annually supply over 3,000,000,000 oysters to the markets of this country. That is over eighty oysters to every inhabitant of the United States.

THE winnings of American horses in England and France this year have been about £30,000.

The Olympia Standard takes on at a great rate a new certain appointments by the Governor, notably that of Auditor, Treasurer and Librarian; neither does it look with favor nor approval upon appropriations for certain legislative expenses, such as additional clerk hire. In brief, if we may judge from the Standard, matters official and legislative are going on in a rather unsatisfactory manner at the Territorial capital. For instance, the Standard charges the Territorial Auditor aforesaid with having issued an illegal warrant on the Territorial Treasury for a considerable amount, but does not specifically set forth the alleged illegality or irregularity. It aggravatingly states, however, that it can and will do so, if the official or officials concerned desire it or are prepared to justify the proceeding. Of course the Territorial Auditor is prepared to justify his official acts—if he is not, he should be; so the Standard should not stop upon the order to ventilate this alleged irregularity in the Territorial finances, but proceed to incontinently ventilate at once, though the continued suspension of the planetary system at the present safe altitude should be contingent upon such clarifying process. We doubt, however, the gravity of the situation in this respect; but we feel really alarmed at the specification against the Legislature of allowing $10 per day for "shouting message from the House or Council," or for "winding up the two clocks." We are indeed loth to believe that these services are so arduous as to deserve the compensation referred to, and in all probability the charge is a gross exaggeration. And now we come to the matter of Librarian. The Standard arraigns the Governor for appointing his accomplished daughter Librarian "with the advice and consent of the Council," an appointment claimed to be illegal, the Council coming in for its share of criticism for unanimously confirming the same in view of its refusal to concur in the House bill conferring the right of suffrage upon the ladies. The Standard cites the antiquated law of '66 as to the illegality. Well, suppose the appointment is contrary to the letter of the law, what of it? There is no question about the fair appointee's qualifications to acceptably perform the duties, which is the primary and chief object of that and similar laws. Besides this, there are precedents for such appointments. A lady has for some years past been a member of our Board of Immigration, and one was appointed the other day to serve on the Board of Education; and it may be further noted that there has probably not been a Legislature since the organization of the Territory but has appointed ladies to clerkships in their service; and of all this our editorial friend of the Standard has been fully cognizant, and yet this is the first objection to such appointments from any quarter, which is rather ungalant on the part of the Standard, hitherto recognized as the advocate of the political rights of the fair sex; and particularly so as that otherwise excellent journal announced in the same issue that it had just reached its majority by rounding the twenty-first year of its existence.

It costs 63 shillings, says the Astorian, to take a ton of wheat from San Francisco to Liverpool. It costs from 85 to 92 shillings to take a ton of wheat from the Columbia to the same port. There's an article on "The Columbia Bar" that, though short, is full of meaning.

In the northwest of Canada 400,000 acres of land have been secured for a French colony.

Fifty thousand three cent stamps were stolen from the Kalamazo, Michigan, postoffice Monday.

The Irish people pay $90,000,000 to the landlords every year. It is computed that $75,000,000 of this amount goes out of the country to be spent in London, Paris and the gambling dens of Germany.

Last year the letters received by mail and distributed in New York City numbered more than 260,000,000, being an average of 700,000,000 in addition to this is the postal cards which average more than one million a week, and also city letters, which average a million and a half a week.

The recent small-pox cases at Newcastle cost King County $2,990.

The New Law Defining the Property Rights of Married Persons.

We have received from Olympia a copy of an important act recently passed by the Legislature...

Sec. 1 provides that every married person shall hereafter have the same right and liberty to acquire, hold, enjoy and dispose of every species of property...

Sec. 2 provides that in case the good faith of any transaction between husband and wife, directly or by intervention of a third party...

Sec. 3 repeals all existing civil disabilities as to the wife, except the right to vote or hold office.

Sec. 4 makes the rights and responsibilities of the parents, in the absence of misconduct, equal before the law...

Sec. 5 secures to the wife control of all property and pecuniary rights acquired either before or after marriage...

Sec. 6 gives either the husband or wife the right to maintain action for recovery of any property of the one in possession of the other.

Sec. 7 makes a married woman solely responsible for damages resulting from her acts.

Sec. 8 gives either the husband or wife power to constitute the other his or her attorney in fact to manage or dispose of property...

Sec. 9 gives the wife right to receive or sue for the wages of her personal labor, and otherwise maintain her rights as if unmarried.

Sec. 10 provides that neither the husband nor wife is liable for the debts incurred by the other before marriage...

Sec. 11 gives the wife right to make contracts and incur liabilities, and the same may be enforced by or against her as if unmarried.

Sec. 12. Expenses of the family and education of the children are chargeable upon the property of both husband and wife...

Sec. 13 provides that the property and pecuniary rights acquired by the husband before marriage, or afterwards by gift or descent...

Sec. 14. Property not acquired as prescribed in sections 5 and 13, but acquired after marriage by either husband or wife or both...

Sec. 15 gives the husband the management and control of the community real property, but he shall not sell or encumber the same unless the wife join in the deed...

such agreement shall not derogate from the rights of creditors, or preclude the district courts from setting the same aside for fraud or other equitable reason...

Sec. 22 establishes this act as the law of the Territory respecting the subject to which it relates...

Sec. 23 provides that this act shall not be retrospective, and any rights which have already accrued shall be governed by the law in force at the date of perfecting the same.
